Live Stock for Sound Prosperity

THE basis of agricultural prosperity in California lies in its flocks and herds.

Always a great producer of cattle and sheep since the days of the Dons, California is still one of the greatest livestock producing States in the Union.

For sound and lasting prosperity, however, more cattle, hogs and sheep are needed on the smaller farms and ranches. There is now an actual, ready, cash market for all of the livestock the State can produce, whether it comes from the man with thousands of acres or the man with his few acres, as the result of the establishment of the great central livestock market at the Los Angeles Union Stock Yards.

A few head of livestock on every ranch is a good slogan for Californians, for it will bring in to the smaller rancher ready cash when he needs it, will add to the fertility of the soil, and will keep within the State the millions of dollars now being paid for livestock, especially hogs, coming from other States.

CALIFORNIA COUNTIES' WEALTH

(CLARENCE M. HUNT.)

THE GRAND TOTAL VALUE OF ALL property in California's fifty-eight counties for the year 1928, according to State Controller Ray L. Riley, is $8,123,208,593, an increase of $476,182,985 over the 1927 total of $7,647,025,607. The total indebtedness of the counties increased $5,423,242.76, being $141,387,239.03 in 1928 and $135,963,996.27 in 1927. The number of acres of land assessed increased to 51,913,932 in 1928 from 51,190,649 in 1927.

While the value of real estate increased $280,625,937, the value of the improvements thereon decreased $7,408,056. These are the two main sources whence taxes come. Money and solvent credits increased $50,422,536, but the value of personal property decreased $8,766,669. Also, the value of railroads decreased $872,925. Here are the various groups of assessment totals for the years 1928 and 1927:

Value of real estate—$3,791,316,468 (1928), $3,510,690,531 (1927).

Value of improvements on real estate—$1,955,864,996 (1928), $1,963,273,052 (1927).

Value of personal property—$933,272,697 (1928), $942,039,366 (1927).

Money and solvent credits—$98,709,370 (1928), $48,286,834 (1927).

Value of non-operative property (which includes all the above)—$6,779,163,531 (1928), $6,464,289,783 (1927).

Value of property assessed on operative roll—$1,016,107,903 (1928), $853,925,740 (1927).

Total value of property as returned by county auditors (which is a total of the non-operative and operative property values)—$7,795,271,434 (1928), $7,318,215,523 (1927).

Value of railroads as assessed by State Board of Equalization—$327,937,159 (1928), $328,810,084 (1927).

From the 1928 report these facts are garnered: San Francisco has the least, 29,760, and Kern the most, 3,793,455, acres of land assessed. San Francisco has the highest, $3.96, and Los Angeles the lowest, $1.168 inside $1.368 outside, tax rate. San Francisco has the greatest, $87,463,600, debt, and the following counties are free of debt: Amador, Calaveras, Humboldt, Inyo, Madera, Mariposa, Mono, Monterey, Nevada, Placer, Sbastia, Sierra, Siskiyou, Trinity, Tuolumne, Yuba.

Los Angeles is the state's wealthiest county. Its 1928 grand total of $3,655,062,294 is $318,122,279 greater than that of 1927, $3,336,940,015. The assessment increase in this one county is approximately 67 percent of the gain ($476,182,985) for the whole state. Los Angeles has 1,275,115 acres of land assessed, and its total indebtedness is $10,007,465.

San Francisco, the only city-and-county subdivision, is the state's next richest county. Its 1928 grand total of $1,055,867,698, is $30,548,753 greater than that of 1927, $1,025,317,945.

These two counties are the only ones in California in the billion-dollar (ten-figure) wealth-class. Counties in the nine-figure class include, in the order of their assessed wealth: Alameda, Kern, Fresno, Orange, Sacramento, San Diego, Santa Clara, San Joaquin, San Bernardino, Contra Costa. Following are the 1928 and 1927 grand totals for each of California's fifty-eight counties:

and wounded after battle, varying types of objections were raised. One objection to Dunant's plan for protecting the wounded after a battle was that it was preferable to abolish war rather than make it less horrible. Others dismissed the proposal as visionary and Utopian, based on sentimentality.

The preliminary meeting of 1863, at which fourteen European nations were represented, brought forth ideas which were later incorporated with the Treaty of Geneva. Prince Demidoff of Russia advanced the plan of organizing bureaus of prisoners of war, based on his activities during the Crimean War of 1854, at which time he himself had organized a center of correspondence by which the captured men had been able to communicate with their families.

In his efforts to bring about the permanent organization and the putting into practice of his ideas, Dunant enjoyed the co-operation of Florence Nightingale as well as of the leading philanthropists of the day. He also received the approval and promise of co-operation of many reigning monarchs and princes of Europe, most of whom he personally visited to secure these promises.

When the Swiss government addressed an invitation to twenty-five sovereign states to send diplomatic representatives to the historic conference of 1864, at which Dunant's dreams were realized, the United States sent two observers or informal representatives—George C. Fogg, American Minister to Switzerland, and Charles S. P. Bowles, European agent of the United States Sanitary Commission, an organization of volunteers for the care of wounded in the Civil War, which organization performed acts of mercy without discriminating between the men of North or South.

Fresh from the battlefields of the United States, and bringing with him photographs of the commission's workers in the field, Bowles was deeply impressed with the purpose and activity of the conference and succeeded, in turn, in making a deep impression on the other conferees. In his official report he wrote:

"These life pictures, hooks and practical proofs produced an effect as great as it was valuable. To many of them, earnest men seeking the light with their whole hearts in the interest of a long-suffering humanity, it was like the sight of the promised land. They had been working in the dark, and this was the opening of a window, letting in a flood of light and putting an end to all darkness and doubt."

Animated by a united desire and working in sympathy and harmony toward the same end, the delegates drew up the Treaty of Geneva and, in compliment to Switzerland, adopted its flag, with colors reversed, as the international insignia of the neutrality of the wounded. In recognition of the services performed by the United

RED CROSS WORTHY INSTITUTION

"YOU HAVE LAUNCHED THE greatest work of the century. Europe will probably have only too much need of it." These words, at once appreciative and prophetic, were uttered by Renan, the great French humanist, to Henri Dunant, the man chiefly responsible for founding the Red Cross, a few months before the Geneva Conference in 1864, at which the international organization became a living reality.

The year 1928 is the centenary of Dunant's birth, and it is fitting that this year should see the Red Cross an active humanitarian institution, its undertakings broadened to include relieving every form of suffering throughout the world. And it is fitting that in observing the hundredth anniversary of Dunant's birth, the American people acknowledge with gratitude the unpayable debt to the man who is justly recognized as the pioneer whose vision gave the world the Red Cross. For, in giving to the world the Red Cross, he gave to America that organization which is ever on the alert for the distressed victims of disaster, no matter where they be.

Jean Henri Dunant was born in Geneva, May 8, 1828, the offspring of one of the oldest families of that town. He was 31 years old when, traveling as a tourist in Lombardy, he saw the horrors of the battlefield of Solferino and was moved to compassion and pity for the sufferers. It was here he earned the name "The Samaritan of Solferino." And as a direct result of his experiences, the thought of organization of the Red Cross came to him.

There was nothing startlingly new in Dunant's idea, which included treating the wounded of war as neutrals. History records many instances of this or kindred merciful spirits. Moreover, the preceding hundred years had seen the introduction of many humane movements. Neutrality of the wounded already had been preached, but notwithstanding the new attitude, it remained for Dunant to stir the embers of the world's mercy to flame, and with a definite plan in view and striving with an earnestness that carried all before it, to organize the forces for victory.

In Geneva, Dunant had the warm support of Gustave Moynier, chairman of a local welfare society, who did much to interest the Swiss government in the movement. It was Moynier's organization that sent out the invitations for a preliminary conference which was held in Geneva in 1863 for the purpose of considering the neutralization of the medical service in war and the question of volunteer aid. In his invitation, Moynier said that the meeting had its inspiration in the idea expressed by Dunant in his book, "Souvenir de Solferino," the motive of the conference being to "carry the ideas of Dunant from the domain of theory to that of practice."

Although nations at war often had tacit understandings not to shell each other's hospitals, and arranged truces for gathering up the dead

THE MENACE OF FOREST FIRES

Ernest McGaffey

MORE THAN FOUR MILLION ACRES of forests were burned in the State of California by forest fires in six years. In that time more than fifteen thousand fires had been started, eighty percent of which were man-caused fires. The total area of national forest land in the state is approximately twenty-four million acres. If the present ratio of destruction is kept up, it will not be so very long before there will be no more forest land in California. Fire! Fire! Fire! The people of the United States are notoriously the world leaders in the criminal waste they have been indulging in, and peratively necessary to the production of cheap water power.

They mean, in addition, the preservation of beautiful forest areas which will attract millions of visitors from outside states, and provide camping places and recreation grounds for other millions of the state's residents using these areas for vacation purposes.

From every standpoint, then, the saving of the forests is of paramount importance in the present and the future of every state in the union. Each year, during the drier portion of the season, hundreds of fires are started throughout the United States by reason of sheer that purpose. If a gasoline stove is used, the stove should be set in a depression made in the center of this space. The space should be cleared of every particle of undergrowth, brush and all inflammable material, clear down to the bare earth itself.

Never leave a camp fire untended, as a sudden breeze might spring up and send a spark into the adjoining brush. To those who have never experienced the sudden and the appalling rapidity with which a brush fire or a forest fire is launched, it would seem impossible that whole acres of woodland could be apparently ignited instantaneously. This is especially true when a high wind is blowing. The flames seem literally to leap in mighty bounds, and, once started, to stop such a fire is absolutely impossible. The only recourse is to get ahead of it, if possible, and construct a "fire break," in order that when the flames reach that point they may be halted.

Brush fires and grass fires are peculiarly devastating in this respect, the larger timber burning more slowly. When breaking camp, a camp fire should be thoroughly extinguished with water, and then covered with fresh earth.

The practice of smoking in the woods, so common with hunters and anglers, is one which is peculiarly prolific in starting forest fires. In fact, the custom is absolutely deadly. It might be supposed, in the case of the average cutting of a hunter or a fisherman of the state, that a really high-class sportsman could practice a little self-denial in this respect and leave off smoking for the two or three days or possibly a week during his trip, but this, apparently, would be asking too much of the average man who goes into the woods with rod or gun. But at least it can be pointed out that, unless such a man does not care what happens, he can limit his smoking until he is back at the evening camp fire, and even then he should refrain, if there is any wind stirring.

To go through brush and timber where the ground is littered with highly inflammable material, smoking a pipe, cigar or cigarettes, is simply inviting forest fires.

The season for deer shooting finds the forests in many states peculiarly susceptible to fires, and the woods during the fishing seasons hold potent dangers in the fall months. A veritable tinder-like condition is present in millions of acres of timber and brush-covered areas, when anglers and hunters are pursuing their favorite sports, and hundreds of fires could be prevented if the smokers would exhibit enough prudence and patriotism to desist from smoking in the woods during the months when the dangers are still indulging in so far as their natural resources are concerned. The citizens of California are in the very front rank of such offenders when it comes to their forests. There is no escaping this responsibility on their part and there is no excuse for it. Fifty-four percent of all forest fires come from the carelessness of smokers and campers. In this year of 1928 there have already [August 15] been 171 man-caused forest fires in California, and 6,500 acres of inside area have been burned over during that period. No greater indictment could be laid and proved against a citizenry than criminal neglect in regard to forest fires. It seems almost incredible that those who go into the woods and through the brush should use so little care as regards smoking and the building of camp fires; and the necessary care which is vital in looking after such fires when once built, and the rigid precautions necessary in extinguishing them.

No picture of desolation is so terrible as that presented by a mountain side or forest slope which has been scalped, denuded and reduced practically to cinders and blackened tree trunks by reason of a forest fire. To those who have seen such areas in their former original beauty and glory, and who have then noted them when the fires have swept through, it is a tragedy which can never be expressed in words. Perhaps only the contrast afforded by photographers before and after such a conflagration can even faintly suggest the extent of such a catastrophe. Not only has the timber and the surrounding undergrowth been ruined, but the very soil itself, in many instances fibrous rooted and comparatively shallow lined, has been destroyed. When this occurs, many years are necessary to restore the soil to its original condition, and in numerous instances the injury is irreparable.

The destruction of forest areas brings with it, in its track, a host of calamities. To begin with, it means the obliteration of the watersheds, blotting out that wise provision of nature which checks the snowfall, so that it descends gradually to the streams, thereby obviating floods, preserving the natural flow of the streams and aiding vitally in the preservation of the fish which inhabit those streams.

The preservation of forest cover and brushy areas means the protection of deer, grouse, quail, squirrels and rabbits. Without this protection, they are lost. Forest fires often absolutely ruin splendid game areas.

Great forests mean the maintenance of a steady water supply which makes for the production and distribution of electricity, so im-negligence on the part of people using the forests, and in spite of the extraordinary efforts made by state, county and city authorities, despite the vigorous measures taken to prevent fires, the destruction goes on.

In building camp fires, a space in the timber should be cleared at least twenty feet square, and the fire built in its center in a hole dug for

CALIFORNIA HAPPENINGS OF FIFTY YEARS AGO

Thomas R. Jones

(COMPILED EXPRESSLY FOR THE GRIZZLY BEAR.)

THANKSGIVING DAY, NOVEMBER 27, 1878, was clear and very cold in California. The temperature dropped to 28 degrees that night, the precursor of the coldest month on record to date.

The day was religiously, sportively and gastronomically observed, according to the desire of the individual. In San Francisco, with boat and bicycle races, baseball games, pigeon shooting and numerous other sporting events, it was conspicuously a day of pleasure. Turkeys retailed dressed at 20c a pound, chickens were 50c each, ducks 50c a brace; potatoes, carrots, beets, turnips and cabbage each sold at 1c a pound; fresh butter was 30c and Boston firkin 14c a pound; eggs were scarce, at 40c a dozen. Everybody was happy and had plenty of the good things of the season, except the mining stock investors, who were downcast and had to content themselves with corned beef and cabbage.

The mining stock market was the month's absorbing object of interest. At the beginning, speculators were optimistic and were paying $200 a share for Sierra Nevada, and other stocks were at buoyant prices. November 10, like a thunder clap from a clear sky, came disquieting reports from the Comstock Lode, and speculators along California street, San Francisco, began selling, causing a 25 percent decline in the market. By November 20 the uneasiness had developed into a panic that caused Sierra Nevada to drop to $40 a share, and the whole list went down in proportion. The decline made investors $20,000,000 poorer, the losses in Sierra Nevada alone since November 1 amounting to $14,000,000. Thousands were bankrupted and a canopy of gloom was cast over the entire state, for the mining men were liberal spenders.

The New State Constitution Convention, in session at Sacramento, had numerous strenuous debates this month, the creation of a board of railroad commissioners and the regulation of corporations being subjects of diversified views. The convention lost three delegates during the month: One went insane, and was committed to Stockton State Asylum; Colonel James M. Storey from Mariposa died November 16, and Bernard F. Kenney from San Francisco died the 21st.

Dr. F. A. McDougall, mayor of Los Angeles, after addressing a political gathering November 16, was stricken with apoplexy and soon died.

ENGLISH AND IRISH MIX.

Dennis Kearney was heard from this month in more ways than one. The eve of election day in Boston he addressed a large assemblage and proposed this resolution, which was unanimously adopted: "Resolved, We, the Workingmen, are in the majority and will install our candidates though the streets run with blood and hell itself boils over." The defeat of General Ben F. Butler for governor of Massachusetts was attributed to Dennis' bloody speech.

Affairs in the Workingmen's party in San Francisco were going awry. Wellock, left in charge by Kearney, proving a poor leader. At a meeting November 3 of Irish citizens to protest against Colonel Bee, in Washington, exhorting the Irish and extolling the Chinese, Wellock attempted to speak but was restrained by Colonel Baines, an Irish exile, who objected to any Englishman speaking at an Irishman's meeting. The next day Wellock denounced Baines as a Fenian traitor, and the colonel demanded he either apologize or fight, but he chose to do neither. Wellock had also arrogated to himself the post of treasurer, but rendered account of funds to himself only. So, the opposition wired Kearney to come home, and he replied "Send me $400." This was done. He arrived November 20, and was met by a large concourse of his followers and the Workingmen's military companies.

R. T. Brown, Pioneer of 1849 and a businessman for many years, died at Sacramento November 20. He was a survivor of the wrecked steamer "Central America," which sunk in the Gulf of Mexico in the '50s.

In excavating a grave in the Mission San Gabriel cemetery November 10, a large cache of ancient gold coins was unearthed.

Ruins of an old castle six miles from Santa Cruz City upon the Rancho Locke were described this month. They consisted of a number of stone pillars upon a bleak hillside; of concentric layers of stone, perforated in the middle, they were about ten feet high. Several had fallen, and their stones were strewn around.

When and by whom the castle was built, no one knew.

The completion of the Great Cajon ditch was celebrated at Anaheim, Orange County, November 17 with a picnic and barbecue attended by several thousand. The ditch was twenty-two miles long, and was designed to irrigate 15,000 acres of land.

W. W. Brown, a woodchopper of Auburn, Placer County, was arrested for counterfeiting dollars and half-dollars. An outfit and a half-ton of composition for the coining were found in his cabin.

NIMRODS HAVE GOOD MONTH.

Dresbach & Co., grain shippers of San Francisco, made a disastrous failure November 5, causing heavy losses to interior grainmen. This was followed by the failure, November 24, of Ten Borch & Co. for over $100,000. They had seven vessels in San Francisco Bay chartered to load grain, which they now could not obtain.

A brilliant meteor passed over California North the night of November 23. It sped from east to west, apparently over Marysville, Yuba County, which was made as light as day, and burst into a shower of green and red lights. Another meteor, almost as brilliant, was observed the night of the 26th.

Fall River, Shasta County, Indians had declared war against the Hat Creek tribe, and a battle in which the former were victorious was fought this month. The Fall Rivers captured four doctors, one squaw and three fighting bucks, all of whom were promptly hanged. Another battle was expected soon.

A scholar named Edward Stanton was admitted into the Lincoln grammar-school, San Francisco, November 1. Acting peculiarly and not participating in the boys' games, investigation a

HISTORIC LANDMARKS MECCAS OF NATIVES

SAWYERS BAR (SISKIYOU COUNTY)—The Native Sons and the Native Daughters of this old-time California mining town on the North Fork of the Salmon River marked with a plaque, October 7, a local historic landmark, the Catholic church, construction of which was commenced in 1855 and completed two years later. The plaque bears the following inscription: "Built in 1855. Dedicated to the memory of Father Florian and to the Pioneers of Sawyers Bar, October 7, 1928, by Liberty Parlor, No. 192, N.S.G.W., and Mt. Dawn Parlor, No. 120, N.D.G.W."

The program consisted of vocal numbers, and addresses by Dr. Louise C. Heilbron, Grand President N.D.G.W.; Father McEnaney, who commended the Orders for their homeless children work and other good deeds; Laurence E. Buchner, district deputy N.S.G.W.; Sadie Winn-Brainard, Grand Trustee N.D.G.W.; Mina Kane-Horn, Grand Organist N.D.G.W., and Mrs. Lettie Lewis, past president Mountain Dawn Parlor N.D.G.W. and chairman of the day. In the course of her remarks, Mrs. Lewis presented the following interesting history of the church:

"One of the principles of the Order of Native Daughters of the Golden West is veneration of the Pioneers, and one of the objects of the combined Orders of Native Sons and Native Daughters of the Golden West is to mark, preserve and restore the historic landmarks of California. That is why we are here today—to dedicate this old landmark to the Pioneers of California and to pledge ourselves, as Native Sons and Native Daughters of the Golden West, to carry on as far as lies within our power. This church was built in 1855. It stands as a monument to the Pioneers of Sawyers Bar and the good priest, Father Florian, who is so lovingly associated with the early life of this community.

"The lumber in this church was all whip-sawed, and it is said Father Florian was the most diligent man with the saw. Besides the memory of his many good deeds, Father Florian has left behind, to serve as a reminder of his life in this community, the headboards in this little cemetery which he carved with only his pocketknife as an implement. The work was wonderfully done. The beautiful painting of the crucifixion, which hangs over the altar in the church, he carried to Sawyers Bar in a roll upon his back and presented to the church. The frame for this picture was donated by Jack Rand and John Coughlin who, at that time, were owners of the famous Black Bear mine. The moulding from which the frame is made cost one dollar per foot.

"T. B. O'Connor, an artist of renown, read about this painting in an Eastern paper and, at his first opportunity, about two years ago came here to study the picture and had this to say of it: 'The exquisite coloring and mainly the strict attention to facial details of this picture indicate the touch of a feminine hand, presumably a nun of South Austria or Northern Italy of the eighteenth century. With the exception of the arm and hand of Mary Magdalene and the hands of Saint Ann indicated above the mother of Jesus, the figures are drawn to perfect scale. The picture is priceless and should be preserved.'

"The lure of gold, that first brought the Pioneers to Sawyers Bar, years later caused the ground around the church to be mined up to the limit of the cemetery. This ground proved to be very rich, and it is estimated the little cemetery contains $40,000 in gold. An offer of $8,000, made by the Salmon River Hydraulic Mining Co. for this small lot, was promptly refused, the congregation adding that 'the sacred ground could not be bought at any price.'

At the conclusion of the dedication those assembled were guests of the Sawyers Bar Natives at a chicken dinner. Among the speakers around the festive board were Mrs. Essie Skillen, president Mountain Dawn Parlor N.D.G.W.; Ray Vincent, president Liberty Parlor N.S.G.W.; Mrs. Margaret Weston, district deputy N.D.G.W.; Mrs. Frank Horn, president Eschscholtzia Parlor N.D.G.W. (Etna); Christopher Barry, a Pioneer, who told of his trip from New York, and Mrs. Caroline Horn, also a Pioneer, who told of the hardships of the early days and of the sufferings of the soldiers in the Modoc Indian War.

HISTORIC SAN MIGUEL MISSION

RETURNS TO FOUNDERS' CARE.

San Miguel (San Luis Obispo County)—San Miguel, founded in 1797 as one of the chain of twenty-one California missions, formally returned to the ranks of the missions served by the Franciscan friars at a largely attended celebration September 30 arranged by local Native Sons and Native Daughters. Details were in the hands of the following committee of San Miguel Parlor No. 150 N.S.G.W.: Supervisor Henry Twisselman, George Sonnenberg, Alfred Sanchez and August Wolf.

Father Louis Shoen was the chief speaker of the occasion. He sketched plans for restoring the landmark to its original appearance and arrangement, and recounted some of the history relating thereto:

"Father Lasuen led the expedition that built the mission and was later presidente of the unit. In 1818 the first church was built, to replace the one previously used. The outline of the first little church still can be seen in the rain-beaten ruins of its adobe foundation.

"But in 1830 the Mexican government, then holding dominion over California, passed a law which amounted to confiscation of the mission and grounds, which were very prosperous. The law went into effect in 1836, but it was in 1841 that the last Franciscan padre left the cloisters and the mission fell into secular hands.

"A few years later the mission and property were bought by two men, Reid and Rios, who opened a hotel and established a saloon on the premises. This continued until Reid and his family were murdered in their quarters in the mission, by bandits hunting their gold. For sixty years after these events the mission was again taken care of by secular priests. It was just last August 1, 1928, that the Franciscans returned to the unit they established one hundred thirty-one years ago."

TABLET NOW MARKS ONE OF MOST IMPORTANT HISTORIC LANDMARKS.

Fort Ross (Sonoma County)—In memory of the Russian settlement founded here in 1812, the Order of Native Sons of the Golden West, through the Grand Parlor Historic Landmarks Committee, dedicated September 23 a plaque marking the chapel, which was a part of the settlement. Among the many in attendance at the ceremonies were delegations from all the Sonoma County Parlor of Native Sons and Native Daughters. The tablet is inscribed:

"This Chapel was a part of the settlement

week later revealed the fact that Edward was a 13-year-old girl who had run away from her Missouri home and was employed evenings in a candy store.

November, being clear and cold, was a good month for nimrods. George Stout of Courtland, Sacramento County, killed 208 ducks in one day. November 10 four Placerville, El Dorado County, hunters killed 200 quail along Hangtown Creek, and one afternoon a Marysville, Yuba County, hunter bagged 82 quail along the Yuba's banks. In Lake County, Mrs. Daniel Hansen killed a grizzly bear that dressed 400 pounds, and Miss Emma Wallenford, a Napa City school-teacher, dispatched at a distance of 200 yards in Pope Valley, a buck that dressed 150 pounds.

George Wood found a deposit of grasshopper eggs, acres in extent, four miles from Sierraville, Sierra County. The eggs, impervious to fire, water and frost, were of the size of a grain of wheat and were attached to strings that held together a dozen or more. They were deposited in the soil from two to six inches in depth, and hogs were rooting for and feasting upon them.

A great spasm of indignation passed over the state because of the publication in an Eastern magazine of a picture showing a Chinaman treading grapes and making wine in a California vineyard. Wine makers claimed their grapes were crushed in wine presses and were not foot mashed.

CHAMPIONSHIP BASEBALL ATTRACTS.

Los Angeles citizens had extensively advertised the advantages of California South as a winter resort, hoping thereby to attract people desiring a milder climate. They did. November 1 thirty-five "Weary Willies" arrived aboard a freight train, and railroad conductors reported an army of tramps were enroute to Los Angeles. Then the citizens began organizing to rout their invited guests.

Peter Sproul of Merced County grew a potato of the Oxheart variety that weighed 10 pounds and 9 ounces, was 33 inches long and 26 inches in circumference.

The Chinese Theater Company of San Francisco imported from the homeland a noted Chinese actor, who was to be paid $7,000 annually for two years and to be provided with elegant founded by the Russians in 1812 and known as Fort Ross. The Fort was in the form of a quadrangle, about 300 feet square, inclosed by a redwood wall, with two block-houses at opposite corners. Fort Ross contained fifty-nine buildings, nine of which, including this Chapel, were within the inclosure. The Russians withdrew in 1844, selling their improvements and stock to John A. Sutter of Sutter's Fort. Property acquired by the State of California in 1906."

William Borha of Sebastopol Parlor No. 143 N.S.G.W. was chairman of the day, and the speakers included Past Grand President Joseph R. Knowland, chairman historic landmarks committee, Grand President James A. Wilson, Past Grand President Lewis F. Byington and State Senator Herbert F. Slater. Other grand officers present were Grand Secretary John T. Regan, Grand Trustees Richard M. Hamb, J. Hartley Russell and Charles A. Koenig, and Grand Inside Sentinel Arthur J. Cleu. At the conclusion of the ceremonies a picnic lunch upon the beach was enjoyed.

Fort Ross is one of the most important landmarks in California. It was founded in 1812 by Russians who had previously settled in Alaska and went as far south as San Francisco Bay in search of other skins. The people of California were prohibited by the Spanish government from trading with foreigners, a fact which made it difficult for the Russians to replenish their stores on the Pacific Coast.

This situation was one of the causes which brought about the settlement of Ross, although it is the general belief that Russia planned to extend its sovereignty as far south as possible and did not recognize Spain's authority north of San Francisco. That opposition to the settlement was anticipated, is indicated by the thoroughness with which the place was fortified.

This expectation was amply justified, for the Spanish authorities, considering them in the light of intruders, repeatedly ordered them to evacuate the place. The Russians, securely entrenched as they were, paid no attention to those orders. They remained until 1844, when they withdrew, after selling their improvements and stock to General John A. Sutter.

Race meets were staged at Oakland, Alameda County, November 9 and 10, and at Chico, Butte County, the 23rd.

About 10,000 people witnessed the final championship game between the Athletic and the California baseball clubs in San Francisco November 10. The former won by a score of 9 to 7.

Major Ramon Pico undertook, at Sacramento November 27, to ride twenty-five miles in one hour, using six horses. He lost by four minutes and twenty-six seconds.

The baseball fever having taken a good hold in the interior of the state, the Intrepids of Marysville, Yuba County, were sent to San Francisco to play a club there November 18. The visitors were defeated by a 20-to-6 score.

Jerry Glenn and Guadalupe Estrada had a feud. Upon horseback they met in Tehachapi, Kern County, November 11 and shot each other dead.

Near San Jose, Santa Clara County, November 10 two 15-year-old lads, Elton Moody and Harry Younger, got into an argument which resulted in the former killing the latter.

Alone in her home near Lone Mountain, San Francisco, November 9, Mrs. Richard Barry was attacked and brutally murdered. Dan Sullivan, an ex-convict and a former inmate of an insane asylum, was arrested for the crime.

John McDaniel of Marysville, Yuba County, was stabbed to death November 29 by a Chinaman found robbing his home. Mrs. McDaniel, who had hastily come upon the scene, captured the intruder and, tying his hands and feet, called the police.

At Red Bluff, Tehama County, November 14, J. F. Kindelberger and S. A. Saffel had a dispute which resulted in the latter killing the former.

W. J. Meriforth of Smartsville, Yuba County, was accidentally killed November 9 while preparing to go hunting.

"THAT'S HER, YOU BET!"

August Guido and his fiancée, Clarinda Rattonze, prominent in the San Francisco Italian colony, went for a sail upon the bay November 13 and falling to return were thought lost. About ten days later an intimate friend received word from Guido that the couple were being held captive at a resort in Niles Canyon and asking for a sum of money to secure their release. The friend, with several companions,

A BIT O' FARMING

PREPARED EXPRESSLY FOR THE GRIZZLY BEAR BY M. H. ELLIS

TWO BLADES OF GRASS ARE GROWING in many places where one grew before; but with the increased production has come the problem of the profitable disposition of the extra blade. Colleges of agriculture have conducted research for years to improve production, and still are doing so. But, generally speaking, not a great deal has been done for the economics side of farming.

However, a change is coming. Through the donation of a million and a half dollars by A. P. Giannini, the University of California College of Agriculture is about to tackle the business problems of the farmer: his marketing difficulties, overproduction, stimulating of markets, and the hundred things that have arisen in this complicated age to make farming more than a matter of planting and harvesting, as it once was.

In charge of the investigations to be made under this foundation is C. B. Hutchison, known to many farmers of California through his two years as director of the branch of the College of Agriculture. Leaders of farmers' organizations throughout the state endorsed him for the position; and he has arrived from Europe, where he headed the agricultural work for the International Education Board, to take up his task here. A man who is well trained, who has had experience in the Middle West, the East and Europe as well as in California, he undertakes the most difficult job that ever has confronted a man in the agricultural industry of this state.

CHRISTMAS LIVESTOCK WEEK.

The eyes of the livestock world are now centered on Los Angeles, where the third annual Christmas Livestock Week will be held at the Los Angeles Union Stock Yards, December 3 to 8. This event promises to be the greatest exhibition of prize beef cattle, hogs and sheep ever held in the West.

The finest herds and flocks in California will offer their most select and highly finished animals in competition with the best from adjoining states. The result will be a display of choice fat livestock worth going many miles to witness.

Management of the show lies with an executive committee composed of some of the best-known men in California. It is headed by J. A. McNaughton, vice-president and general manager of the Los Angeles Union Stock Yards.

While such an exhibition of course means that producers of strictly good livestock will receive some premium for their efforts, and, further than that, the show means that every lover of good livestock will enjoy inspecting these choice animals, the big object, according to McNaughton, is to develop the quality of meat foods in California to a still higher level, thus increasing consumption of meats through providing the public with better quality products.

In addition to the splendid display of fat livestock, which will be exhibited and then sold at auction to Los Angeles packers, jobbers, hotels and railway dining-car systems, there will be a display of the pure-bred breeding herds from which these choice animals are produced. Entries of fat stock to date assure the management of the Christmas Livestock Week that they will be able to invite the public to the greatest display of choice meat-food animals ever seen west of Chicago.

All interested in good livestock and better-quality meats will find much of interest at the event. In addition to the showing of livestock, there will be many other attractions, both of an educational and entertainment nature.

STORING BUTTER FOR WINTER.

Farm butter to be stored for winter use should be churned at a fairly low temperature from sweet pasteurized cream, washed thoroughly and worked only enough to dissolve the salt. Wrap the rolls of butter in parchment paper and pack them well in a large stone crock or jar. A strong brine should cover the butter and the jar should be stored in a cool place. On most farms it is not possible to store butter under refrigeration, but this method will be found an excellent substitute for very low temperatures; and the product will be entirely edible.

CARE IN SPRAYING CELERY.

In spraying celery to control insect pests, care should be used not to make the spray solutions too strong and to spray far enough in advance of harvest that there will be no danger of rejection of the crop. Bordeaux should be used at least four weeks before harvest, otherwise the consumer is endangered. About a hundred gallons per acre is the proper amount of spray to use and it should not be stronger than 4-4-50. A small nozzle should be used in applying the spray. Carelessness in this regard hurts the celery market and may hit back on the grower by the condemnation of his product.

GET READY FOR RAINS.

If the law of averages works this year, California is likely to have a wet winter. And if the rainfall is but normal, or even below, the orchardist should be looking about right now to see that he is ready for wet weather. Winter injury is directly traceable to soggy, undrained lands, and the prevention is easier and cheaper than the cure, by far. Open up the old ditches and clean them of weeds and trash. Lay tile if there has been trouble in the past. Hillsides do not always drain and the orchardist can be sure only when he really knows the condition of the soil. This can be determined only by digging, and the soil auger is a handy tool in winter as well as in summer. Poorly drained soil is one of the prime causes of agricultural suicide.

GET BULBS INTO THE GROUND.

There is still time to plant bulbs; in fact, in most parts of the state flowers from bulbs will do well planted early in November. But because the job has been postponed this long is no reason for further procrastination. Tulips, narcissus, daffodils, gladiola, all should be planted during the month of October or the first weeks of November.

This is about the last call for planting sweet-peas, too. No other flower makes better returns than sweetpeas, and no other flower better repays a bit of care in the matter of soil fertility.

WATCH PEAR BLISTER MITE.

Some time between the middle of this month and the middle of December, the pear grower should get busy on the blister mite, if it is in his orchard. During this period, whether or not the leaves still remain upon the trees, it will be good practice to go over the orchard with a one-to-ten solution of lime-sulphur. The blister mite makes his appearance in the spring, and is first noticed upon the leaves, where light green blisters occur. These turn red, then brown as they dry. The fruit is apt to be scarred, too. No other spray will take the place of this fall treatment in the control of blister mite.

CLEAN UP BOARDER COWS.

There never was a more opportune time to get rid of poor producers in the dairy herd than right now. Sold for beef, the dairyman suffers little loss; as a matter of fact, he suffers no loss, for a boarder cow is a liability in any herd. Cow testing is the only true way of finding whether a cow is earning her feed or not. If she is not, get her to the block while prices are good and fill her place in the milking barn with an animal that will produce enough to add to the profit side of the ledger.

TURKEYS SHOULD BE PRIME.

Prime turkeys bring the highest prices, and if the Thanksgiving bird has been brought along right, it will need little finishing. They should have been getting a little whole grain for the past week or two, and the proportion of this in the diet should be increased gradually until, for the last week or ten days, they should have all they will eat. To find the condition of the birds, they will have to be handled. In feeding corn, be sure to use last season's, for new corn, not well cured, may bring difficulties.

PULLETS NEED ATTENTION.

Before they start into the winter's lay, pullets should be in good flesh, but not too fat. The laying pullet that has a body reserve will draw on that and produce eggs with her feed. If she has no such reserve, the feed goes to keep her warm, and only the surplus goes to eggs. Feed mash in the hopper, and supplement it with grain during November and early December. Give the pullet a chance, and if she has the proper breeding she will produce eggs. The best breeding in the world will not make a profitable producer without proper feeding; but the best feeding won't make a good producer of a scrub. Breeding, feeding and housing are all important in egg production.

TRY A SOLAR HEATER.

Even in the winter time, the solar heater will save money in California. There are cloudy days, and then of course fuel will have to be used; but whenever the sun appears the solar heater will do its work without charge for the fuel used from the sun's rays. A square foot of solar box is required for a gallon of water, so if fifty gallons of hot water are used daily, the box should be five by ten. Three-quarter-inch iron pipe is all that is necessary, with closed bends. If the lower half of the pipe is imbedded in cement, painted black, the efficiency will be increased. There should be about an inch of insulation at the bottom of the box, covered with a wood floor. If concrete is not used, at least paint the floor black. Glass covers the box, which should be air tight.

PLANT ALFALFA NOW.

Unless the district in which the alfalfa is to be planted is subject to severe frosts, now is the time to plant. If there is danger of freezing out of the young plants, then of course the seeding should be delayed until spring. Oftentimes, especially in the regions where the weather is likely to be hot and dry early in the year, a cereal crop for shade will be found useful. To renovate an old alfalfa field, a spring tooth harrow is about the best implement. A disk is likely to cut the crowns, although the disk with notches does a pretty good job. If the solid disk is the only implement available, don't give it too much of an angle. Alfalfa is a hardy plant, but it will yield to abuse.

PEACH RUST CONTROL.

Peach rust was not prevalent this season, but there is not the least assurance that it will not be back next year. Hence the forehanded orchardist will get busy with a fall spray to head off this pest. If by any chance the rust was severe this year, the application of lime-sulphur, six gallons to one hundred gallons of spray, should be made at once. If it was not bad during the season just ending, the spray may be held up until the latter part of the month, with fifteen pounds of dry lime-sulphur to one hundred gallons, or 5-5-50 Bordeaux. There should be complete coverage in these sprays, especially upon the new growth. The pressure used ought to be between 300 and 400 pounds. Only one spray is necessary for peach rust, and the same spray will help in keeping down peach blight and curl leaf.

DIPPING FOR SHEEP LICE.

Dipping is the only sure method to control sucking or biting lice upon sheep. Spraying or the use of dusting powders sometimes help, but not often enough to be relied on. Arsenical sprays, coal-tar creosote or nicotine dips are the surest methods of ridding sheep of lice. There should be two treatments, the second in about ten days to get any second brood that may have developed from eggs laid before the first was applied.

GEESE AND DUCKS.

Geese pair, but drakes will mate with several females. Ducks seldom become broody, but geese are apt to display a tendency to motherhood after laying their first lot of eggs. Geese naturally are grazing fowls, and must have range; but ducks will get along on a limited amount of green feed. Artificial rearing of geese is not a success, but ducks may be hatched in an incubator and raised in a brooder. Geese must not be confined, but ducks may.

GUARD AGAINST REACTORS.

In purchasing cattle, the buyer will do well these days to watch for the "T" upon the left jaw, placed there under the state law to show that the cow has tuberculosis. Every reactor must be so branded, and if the cattle offered are represented as clean, they should be tested. If they have been tested, the records are available. There is a strong movement on foot in the state to wipe out the diseased cattle, and the dairyman who is in the market for stock cannot afford to load up with reactors. It is true that there do not seem to be enough clean animals in the state to supply the demand, but breeders in other states have plenty of clean cattle; and it will not be long before more of the California breeders will clean up and seize the opportunity offered along this line.

ARTIFICIAL MANURE FOR COLD FRAMES.

If barnyard manure is not available, artificial manure may be manufactured that will in a measure replace it for cold frames and similar purposes. Garden trash, cheap alfalfa straw or any organic waste may be utilized by composting it in piles, with alternating layers of ground lime and ammonium sulphate. Keep it sprinkled so that it is moist. In using it, the addition of a little commercial fertilizer will be of benefit.

GIVE THE DOG A BONE.

Soft foods for dogs, to the exclusion of harder ones, will often result in pyorrhea, and this is a disease hard to handle. Indeed, the veterinarian must be called, and it is a good job for him. But if the dog is given bones to chew, there will be no such trouble. The action of the teeth in chewing bones prevents pyorrhea by promoting circulation. Nothing can replace the bone, either, for the dog gets from it the minerals that build its teeth hard and solid. If the dog, he it household pet or farm dog, doesn't get bones, he will chew upon other substances and swallow them, sometimes causing death. House dogs, however, should not be given chicken bones. These splinter and are apt to pierce the intestines. Heavy bones will cause no damage, even when large pieces are swallowed.

MUD PUDDLES UNDESIRABLE.

Mud is not desirable around the farm. In the winter, of course, when the rains come, there is no avoiding it, save by walks and pavements. But the dripping drinking fountain in the poultry yard encourages round worms and trouble. The mud hog wallow is neither sanitary nor pleasing to the sense of smell. The watering troughs for the stock should be regulated so there will be no mud. Proper care of the source and of the overflow, easily prevents trouble that may easily arise.

HEADING YOUNG TREES.

In heading young deciduous fruit trees this winter, the cut should be made low, about two or two and a half feet from the ground. Less sunburn, less breakage and easier picking will result. The primary scaffold branches should be three or not more than four, as equally spaced about the trunk as possible, and six to ten inches apart up and down. There should be five to seven well-spaced secondary laterals about four or five feet from the ground. Avoid narrow angles at the crotch; wider angles will not split as easily. The low-headed tree will give better yields, and be far more economical in management than the tree headed high.

RHODES GRASS FOR ALKALI LAND.

If alkali has worked its way up in the soil, Rhodes grass is more likely to flourish than almost anything else. Once established it makes an excellent perennial pasture. The drawback is in getting the stand. The seed are fine and must be planted very close to the surface. Sowing on top and irrigating in, has been fairly successful; and others claim the best method is seeding in the mud.

APPLYING WHITWASH.

If buildings are to be whitewashed, the surface should first of all be cleaned of dirt and any old whitewash that may be scaling off. A stiff brush does the job in good shape. The surface should be wet, so that the whitewash coat will dry gradually. If applied to a dry surface it will likely scale quickly and rub off. Care taken in preparing the surface will be repaid amply.

PLANT WINDBREAKS THIS WINTER.

Winds do a tremendous amount of damage to crops in California, particularly to fruit. This can, in great measure, be avoided through the use of windbreaks. What to plant varies with the locality, but the farm advisor or horticultural commission has the information. There are quick growing, beautiful trees adapted to every district in California, and they will far more than repay the output required in planting them.

Annual Exposition—The 1928 California Orange and Olive Exposition is billed for Oroville, Butte County, November 27 to December 1.

PREPARED ESPECIALLY FOR THE GRIZZLY BEAR BY ANNA STOERMER

ACCESSORIES WORN BY SMART WOMEN for luncheon reveal more novelty than ever before, including footwear, handbags and costume jewelry. In footwear, combinations of leather are in high favor. Black suede with kid, and brown kid with suede are especially good. Navy blue, green and even rose are some of the footwear colors either in suede or a satiny finished kid. Natural lizard and black lizard comprise the favored range of exotic leathers. Buckles are a frequent ornamentation, an effective style being a high-cut shoe of brown kid, finished with a gilt buckle having prongs which are slipped through a wide tab of the leather; below the buckle there is a slit, which reveals the sun-burnt hose.

Strappings of lizard trim a one-strap style of brown suede, and a scalloped quarter of black kid joins a vamp of suede in another one-strap style.

The majority of women wear pearls in one, two and three-strand versions, and sometimes with ropes arranged in choker fashion with a long strand hanging to the waistline. Aside from pearls, chokers of genuine semi-precious stones are sponsored, completed by a front brooch motif. The newest have very large ornaments of amethyst and jade.

Foh pins, either genuine or novelty, are very popular, and silver jewelry is significant.

A very chic woman, lunching at the country club, wore three bracelets, about an inch in width, which alternated slender silver and gold bars. Her earrings were large gold balls hung from a short chain. Her companion had a necklace of antique silver composed of motifs of flowers and leaves.

Both back and top strap handbags are proper. They invariably harmonize with the costumes. Curved frames have simulated jade and gilt metal trim. Several antelope pochettes and a number of natural lizard hags match footwear. Pochettes of black antelope have ornaments of marcasite. Another set consists of small purse and cigarette box of gingham patterned leather in blue. A metal brocade bag for formal afternoon or evening use is mounted in enamel marcasite, and a pastel velvet evening bag is mounted in a sterling frame, gilded and set with heads.

The shops find many novel ways to exploit handbags. If women were to take to pockets in a serious way, the shops would lose a valued friend and ally, namely the handbag.

The mesh bag, which is expected to stage a comeback, is being shown now. One is of gold mesh with top depicting a Japanese scene in colored enamel. The bag is about seven inches in width.

Women feel and realize the importance of hags for street use and shopping. Afternoon and evening hags match the hat and shoes and harmonize with the costumes in general.

Gift giving, synonymous of the Christmas season, provides the gift shops, the department stores and the smallest specialty shops every opportunity for promoting the slogan "Do your Christmas shopping early," and avoid the congestion later. No woman is immune to the lure of "little things." There is never a time when she is the proud possessor of all the handkerchiefs, hosiery and gloves that she requires.

There are endless accessories and charming ornaments of every variety which make the ideal gift. We find clever sports togs, scarfs, handbags and jewelry of every description. Innumerable little articles for the smoker or the motorist, and most clever hits to make the houndoir as attractive as possible.

The richness of fabric and trimming, which is the season's characteristic of handbags, makes them specially adaptable for gift purposes. Personal gifts, large or small, are touched with the new modernism. The houndoir box, made of wood painted soft green and decorated with pastel flowers, is large in size and divided into compartments. These are very useful to take care of small articles. The bathroom bottle is one of various sets, each bottle being labeled with the name of its contents.

For a gentleman, a set consists of cigarette case and lighter, a flask in black enamel with heveled silver edges and a silver spot for the monogram. The top of the flask is a collapsible cup.

A double compact, introducing confetti shades of enamel upon a background of silver, has a mirror, rouge and loose powder partition.

From the footwear shops come alluring new huckles, sparkling heels and gaily decorated houndoir slippers. The mules, always acceptable gifts, are with us again, with marahou trim in two-tone effects. For instance, pink and green upon black satin, red leather and black patent model with gold piping, and a two-tone Nile green kid with braid trimming of silver and green applique decoration upon the vamp.

There is an optimistic outlook for the acceptance of the silk and wool hose as a detail of the street tweed ensemble for fall, based not only on the demand for color harmony but also on the fact that woollens, whether they be in dresses, coats, bags or shoes, are recognized with significance for the new season.

But women, no matter in what economic position, have become so accustomed to the luxury of the all-silk stocking that I believe they will not take up the silk and wool idea now offered. The fall socks for the younger set are neatly tailored.

Lingerie asserts itself in luxurious holiday novelties. A dance set is of vanilla crepe. The baudouin is covered with princess lace, and the pantie has a yoke top, a center section of pleats and two panels of lace on the sides.

The nightgown ensemble is another attractive gift, and is made of one's favorite color of crepe or satin and trimmed with lace. The gown and the three-quarter coat, lace trimmed, open at the sides.

The richest of fabrics are chosen for gracious negligees, pajamas, nighties and undies. Pink rosebuds and green leaves add much to the finished decorations.

Many lovely articles are made of the gorgeous ribbons now offered.

Make your Christmas selections early!

RED CROSS

States Sanitary Commission in furthering this great work for humanity, President Moynier, at the banquet concluding the convention's labors, took from the central table decorations a small flag displaying a red cross upon a white background and presented it to Bowles.

In 1882 the United States acceded to the Treaty of Geneva and while there was an intervening interim, the American Red Cross, as successor to the United States Sanitary Commission, feels a direct relationship to Henri Dunant because of the influence of the American example in 1864.

Dunant lived to see the Red Cross active in both war and peace and himself took an important part in Red Cross work in the Franco-Prussian War. He was also instrumental in bringing about evacuation of women and children from dangerous areas during this war.

When misfortune befell him, he retired to private life in Heiden, Switzerland, in which retreat he was living when he, conjointly with Frederick Passy, in 1901 was awarded the first Nobel peace prize with a gold medal. He died in his sleep at Heiden, October 30, 1910.

No more fitting way of expressing the gratitude of the American public to Dunant for his great humanitarian service in being instrumental in founding the Red Cross can be shown than by joining that organization when the Twelfth Annual Roll Call of the American Red Cross is held this year. The beginning day of the Roll Call is Armistice Day, November 11, and the concluding day is Thanksgiving Day, November 29. The organization has set a membership goal of 5,000,000 persons.

CALIFORNIA'S UNIQUE VOLCANO

NOT DEAD, BUT DYING.

Although Mount Lassen volcano has reached a period of old age, it is still capable of producing another eruption, according to Howell Williams of the University of California at Berkeley, who recently returned from a three months' survey of the Lassen Peak area.

Williams made a complete geological map of the park area, covering some 200 square miles. He estimates that there are about twelve well-defined volcanic cones within the park and a number of others which have blown to pieces or otherwise broken down.

He also brought word of recent studies on the old lava flow of Cinder Cone in Lassen Park, revealing that the first lava eruption from that peak probably took place about 500 A.D., and the last about 1851, with three others intervening. Former estimates have placed the number of eruptions at two, and the date of the last at 1770.

Lassen Park is unique among world volcanic exhibits, Williams says, because of the great number of protrusions of solid lava which have taken place. During the recent eruption of 1915 a plug of lava was shoved up through the walls of Mount Lassen, and at various times in the past entire mountains have been formed in the immediate vicinity of Lassen Peak by this same means. Steam pressure in place of molten lava pressure has played the most important part in recent activity of the region.

In spite of its old age, Lassen showed considerable energy during its last eruption, sending out a blast of steam and rock that blew trees flat four miles from the crater.

CARELESS NIGHT PARKING CAUSE OF MANY ACCIDENTS.

Many serious accidents in California are the result of careless parking upon the side of the road in the night time, says a safety first bulletin just issued by the National Automobile Club. In most cases cars are parked not quite off the highway paving and thus are a danger to other cars coming up from behind.

The usual result of such careless parking is an accident, of which there already are far too many in California due to carelessness on the part of one or both of the drivers involved. In every case when a car is to be parked the driver should see to it that it is parked in such manner that it will under no conceivable circumstances interfere with traffic.

Parking or stopping at night to make repairs without seeing that the car is well off the paving is a practice that is dangerous in the extreme. It is a prolific source of danger. Drivers of such parked cars should realize that a collision with a halted car is just as apt to result in death and serious injury as when two cars crash head-on.

In addition to parking well off the paving drivers should remember that it is equally as important not to park just beyond the brow of a hill where the driver from the rear has no chance to see the halted car. Also, it must always be remembered that parking just around a blind curve or partly blind curve is a dangerous thing to do.

If you must park, therefore, park on a level straight-away, well off the highway paving, and see that the rear and the front lights are functioning properly.

MUFFLER CUT OUT SOON UNLAWFUL IN CALIFORNIA.

The attention of motorists throughout California is called by the State Division of Motor Vehicles to a section of the Motor Vehicle Act prohibiting the use of any motor vehicle upon the public highways, equipped with a muffler cut-out, after January 1, 1929. This section not only prohibits the use of a muffler cut-out after that time on any except fire and police department vehicles, but also prohibits any person from driving a car equipped with a muffler cut-out that can be used.

In stating the policy of the division, officials say motorists will not actually be required to remove the cut-outs where any considerable expense is involved, but will be required to disconnect them so that it will not be possible to use them under any condition. Authority for the ruling, it is said, is contained in section 96 of the act.

Practically all of the later models of automobiles are equipped without the muffler cut-out, but many of the older models still in use upon the highways have them. The State Legislature of 1925 banned their use after 1929, on the ground that they are noisy and serve no useful purpose.

CUTTING OUT CONGESTED AREAS.

Rerouting of California's highway system around congested centers, wherever new work or necessary reconstruction permits such action, is a basic policy in California's state highway building program. The day of small cities and towns clustering to the edge of the main traveled motor routes is passing with the rapid realization that main business thoroughfares are not the proper places for through traffic. Neither the motorist nor the local resident are benefited. Through traffic thus bottled brings greater hazards, increases congestion and causes delays; locally it causes increased street maintenance policing costs.

LOS ANGELES, California*AUTO FUEL DEVELOPED TO REDUCE KNOCKING IN ENGINES.

Continued British efforts toward developing alcohol as a motor fuel have resulted in the development of a dry alcohol claimed by the producing company to form with gasoline an ideal anti-knock mixture, according to reports reaching the Federal Commerce Department. It is claimed that experiments have shown that alcohol is twice as efficient as benzol in preventing knocking in an internal combustion engine.

One of the principal results in this connection has been the production of a dry alcohol, and it is now stated that the producing company has found that the 7 percent by weight of water contained in alcohol, as ordinarily produced, can be removed at a very small cost, so that over 99 percent absolute alcohol can be obtained which can be mixed with gasoline in any proportion.

Worn engine bearings can be detected by a drop in the oil gauge.

PUBLIC SAFETY PROMOTED BY UNIFORM TRAFFIC REGULATIONS.

Traffic regulations in California's three largest metropolitan centers now conform to a uniform standard. Motorists and pedestrians are using the streets of Los Angeles, San Francisco and Oakland, as well as those of sixty-three other principal cities of the state, guided and protected by provisions of the uniform traffic ordinance for California cities.

The recent addition of Oakland to the group of cities enlisted under the banner of traffic uniformity is considered a big step forward in the movement sponsored by the two large motoring organizations of the state to standardize traffic regulations in California communities—the California State Automobile Association and the Automobile Club of Southern California.

Los Angeles was the first large city of the state to make effective the principle of uniformity, as incorporated in this code. San Francisco's new traffic ordinance placed that city in the rapidly-growing group of communities with uniform rules and regulations for motorists and pedestrians, and now Oakland has adopted a complete new traffic code, based on the provisions of the uniform traffic ordinance.

Thus the motorist visiting in these cities is freed from the annoyance and confusion of new and strange regulations. Instead of a variety of different laws, one standard code prevails, facilitating traffic and promoting public safety.

"SILENT FRIENDS" OF GREAT VALUE TO TRAVELING PUBLIC.

Although no celebration attended the ceremony, an important milestone in the history of the Automobile Club of Southern California was passed October 1, when the 200,000-mark was reached in club signs standing in California South. These "silent friends of the motorist" include direction, danger warnings, boulevard stops, parking time limits, railroad crossings, detours and other information important for drivers to have.

In this network of guides for travelers, the club co-operates with the state, the counties and the municipalities to the fullest extent. This gives uniformity throughout the southern counties and keeps the signs standardized throughout. The towns, counties and state are not required to bear any portion of the expense entailed in signing the highways and streets. The entire cost is borne by the club, contrary to statements occasionally made relative to this service to the traveling public.

WAR ON PEST CONTINUES.

Relentless war is being continued on the puncture vine that has been reported in various sections of California South and especially in the San Fernando Valley. In this latter area an appropriation of $10,000 has been authorized to destroy the pest, which is a menace not only to motorists but to grazing stock. The weed has many short needle-like spurs, which are easily picked up by auto tires with disastrous results. Cattle also are victims of the vine.

STATE CONTROL OFFICERS APPROVED.

Central control by the state of traffic officers was approved in principle by the executive committee of the Motor Vehicle Conference following a meeting of the committee in Los Angeles last month to consider some sixty proposed amendments to the California Vehicle Act.

Gas Tax Sustained—The constitutionality of California's gasoline tax, for the purpose of highway development, has been sustained by the United States Circuit Court of Appeals.

BIG INFLUX WINTER VISITORS

PREDICTED BY AUTO CLUB.

Motor-tourist travel coming into California South this winter will be greater than ever before, it is indicated in a chart recently compiled by the Automobile Club of Southern California.

Since 1923 incoming travel has increased on an average of 1,000 cars per month over the same month of the preceding year on the routes entering through Yuma, Arizona. These routes, the old Spanish trail, U. S. Route No. 90, and Bankhead highway, U. S. Route No. 80, carry the heavy winter travel as well as much of the traffic the year round.

November and December have always been the peak months for travel counted through the Yuma entrance, the total reaching over 7,500 cars last December. It is expected to reach 8,500 cars during the coming December.

AUTOMATIC DEVICE LOCKS

LICENSE PLATE TO PREVENT THEFT.

An automatic device considered to be effective in cases of daylight automobile thefts is reported to have been invented and patented by a German, according to an announcement of the Federal Commerce Department. It is a simple mechanical arrangement by which the rear or front license number plate, or both, upon automobiles may be set in a vertical position after the car is parked.

The mechanism of the invention is a kind of safety lock consisting of two parts, one of which is fastened to the automobile, while the other operates like a screw on the stationary part. The number part is kept in the horizontal or vertical position by means of a spring, after having been turned by hand accordingly, while a special key is required to release the mechanism which locks automatically. The lock has the form of a box slightly conically tapered at both ends and is made of white metal or aluminum. About twenty seconds are required to shift the positions.

WESTERN AUTO CLUBS JOIN

FORCES FOR DEVELOPMENT.

The entire West has joined in the promotion of highway development and tourist travel through a newly-organized Western Motor Clubs Association, composed of sixteen of the leading clubs in the Western states, as well as Canada and Hawaii. The combined membership is more than 300,000 motor-vehicle owners.

It is expected that the new organization, in addition to furthering good roads and tourist travel, will standardize and improve the service to members. Through affiliation with each other, these clubs eventually will bring about uniform service throughout the eleven Western states.

BE CONSTANTLY ON ALERT.

Oily pavements, wet weather and set brakes comprise an ideal combination for skidding and possible accidents. The first rains of the season are the most dangerous, and emphasize the need for cautious driving to prevent accidents.

Because of heavy traffic during the spring and summer, highways and streets have become saturated with oil and, therefore, become as smooth as glass when wet. The careless motorist, who sets his brakes and expects to stop, more likely will skid and may cause a serious mishap. Drive slowly, be constantly on the alert and apply brakes gently.

EQUAL RESPONSIBILITY.

Motorists and pedestrians share about equal responsibility for traffic accidents resulting in fatalities, according to results of recent nationwide surveys. Throughout the United States last year 11,765 deaths in highway accidents were charged to carelessness of motorists, while 11,367 were the result of acts on the part of pedestrians. Some 3,486 persons lost their lives as a result of physical conditions affecting traffic.

Shattering Records—Automobile production in the United States during August broke all monthly records with 458,429 cars. The auto accessory industry is being equally stimulated, and production and shipments of tires are breaking all previous records.

For All Tastes and Purses—There are now being offered by manufacturers, at prices ranging from less than $400 to more than $12,000, 765 types of motor vehicles.

Progress Indicated—Motor vehicle registrations in California indicate the state's progress—1909, 28,600; 1914, 123,516; 1919, 505,180; 1927, 1,736,767.

"Joy" Silent HYDRAULIC PUSH RODS

FOR OVERHEAD VALVE MOTOR

HOW IT WORKS: Oil in chamber C flows around plunger D, automatically maintaining a column of oil to take the blow from the cam; a shock absorber for the valve.

A revolutionary invention based on an old, established principle! Absolutely eliminates valve noise in the most efficient type of motor ever designed! Your motor need never be "NOISY!"

The JOY HYDRAULIC PUSH RODS eliminate the necessity of outside push rod clearance. So simple in construction and operation they outlast the life of a car. To install, simply remove the regular push rods—replace with JOY HYDRAULICS—just a few moments' job—and the trick is done! Then a SILENT MOTOR FOR EVER!

FIFTY YEARS AGO

hastened to the spot, but, greatly to their surprise, they found the "captives" seated in an arbor partaking of a square meal. Guido sped away so fast that a bullet, sent after him by the friend, could not overtake him. It developed that he had good cause for disappearing as, while posing among the San Francisco Italian maidens as a single man, he had in Italy a wife and three children.

Captain Louis H. Child, a pioneer miner of Alleghany, Sierra County, died from the effects of a cave-in in his claim on Kanaka Creek.

"Uncle Dan," an old-timer living alone in a cabin near Garberville, Humboldt County, in some manner set fire to his long whiskers the night of November 15 and was burned to death.

A bucolic resident of Yolo County was visiting with his wife a Sacramento citizen, and at the latter's place of business was shown the workings of the wonderful new invention, the telephone. Doubting it was all that was claimed for it, it was arranged for the visitor to talk to his wife at the host's home. She was summoned to the phone, but before she could reply to a question a lightning flash struck the wire and the husband was knocked out by the electric shock. Recovering consciousness, he emphatically remarked to the bystanders: "That's her, you bet!"

W. H. Rulofson, San Francisco's leading photographer and author of "The Dance of Death," which created a furore at the time of its appearance a few years before, fell through the skylight of his studio November 12 and was fatally injured.

The schooner "Laura Pike," crossing the Humboldt Bay bar November 23, was capsized and the entire crew were drowned.

Harry W. Larkin, one of the founders of the Sacramento "Union," died at San Francisco, November 10. He arrived in Sacramento in 1850, became one of the "Union" publishers two years later and so continued until 1875. He retired with a half-million, but died a comparatively poor man, mismanagement and bad investments eating up his competency.

George Laying of San Francisco, on his first trip as engineer of the steamboat "Express," November 1 fell and was struck by the crank descending. His body was so tightly wedged in the machinery, the engine stopped until it could be extricated.

CALIFORNIA BIRDS NAMED FOR WEST'S HISTORICAL FIGURES.

California has the second largest list of recognized bird species in the United States, according to the "Condor." The list includes 605 species and sub-species in regular standing, 30 fossil species and 80 hypothetical species resting on unconfirmed evidence.

One interesting thing about these California birds is the large proportion named for people, many of them famous figures in the history of the West. About 200 of the species are named for men and women, totaling about 180 individuals.

Among these names are such figures as Lewis and Clark, leaders of the famous expedition across the continent in 1804-6, represented by Lewis' woodpecker and Clark's nutcracker; Rear Admiral F. W. Beechey of the British navy, who captained the ship "Blossom" on its trip to California in 1828, recalled by the scientific names of the California ground squirrel.

Soil Tillers to Meet—California's fruit-growers and farmers will have a three-day convention at Riverside City, starting November 19.

CALIFORNIA'S LARGEST CITIES
SHOW ENCOURAGING GROWTH.
 The Federal Department of Commerce's census bureau issued October 2 estimates of the population, July 1, 1928, of cities of the United States which had a population of 30,000 or more when the last federal census was taken.
 "These estimates are based, in most cases," says the accompanying statement, "on the assumption that the annual increase of population since the census of 1920 has been the same as the average annual increase between 1910 and 1920." California cities listed in the report, together with their 1920 and 1928 population-figures, include:

City.	1920 Census.	1928 Estimate.
Berkeley	57,295	71,000
Fresno	45,086	64,000
Oakland	216,261	274,100
Pasadena	45,354	62,100
Sacramento	65,908	75,700
San Diego	74,683	119,700
San Francisco	506,676	585,300
San Jose	39,642	45,500
Stockton	40,296	51,000

No estimates were made for Los Angeles or Long Beach, credited in the 1920 census with respective population-figures of 576,673 and 55-593. Regarding these omissions the report says: "In a few cases, however, where there is reason to believe that owing to exceptional conditions of growth the figures thus obtained are far from correct, no estimates have been made."

 "Editor Grizzly Bear: I wonder if you could about an old grizzly bear that the people called old clubfoot. As a child I have seen his track many times. Also, would like to know where I can get information about grizzly bears in general.

"I thought may be some of your old pioneer contributors might be able to tell me where,

EARLY-DAY TRIPLE HANGING
IN TUOLUMNE COUNTY RECALLED.
 "A letter received from R. K. Colcord of Carson City, Nevada, who was a Pioneer of Tu-olumne County in the early days and later became Governor of Nevada, and is now retired at the capital of the Sagebrush State, being over 90 years of age, recalls an event in pioneer history of Sonora which, it is pretty safe to say, ex-Governor Colcord is perhaps the only living witness today," says the "Union Democrat" of Sonora, Tuolumne County.

"Single hangings were very common in the days of the Vigilantes in San Francisco, and occasionally double executions occurred, but in the case related by ex-Governor Colcord there were three men hung simultaneously from one platform at Sonora in 1857, which is about the same time that the Vigilantes were organized in San Francisco.

"The names of the victims were Lyons, Poor and McCauley, all of whom had been convicted of murder. The gallows was erected at the lower end of the town, and the execution was open to the public and was witnessed by about 3,000 people.

"The writer states he was living at Gold Springs and, like everybody else, went to the show. The prisoners had evidently been dosed with liquor and all were unsteady while Sheriff Dan Patterson adjusted the ropes. Lyons was silent, but the other two made brief talks: Poor said he was not guilty, but spoiled his statement of innocence by saying he cleaned up a few Chinamen on the river, but never killed a White man. McCauley admitted that he jabbed a knife into his victim and then gave it a twist, illustrating the action with his hand."

LUNCHEON AND FAREWELL.

Mrs. Gussie Meyers of Linda Rosa Parlor No. 170 N.D.G.W. entertained twenty-five members of the Parlor at a picnic luncheon October 7 at her home in Burlingame, San Mateo County. Assisting her were Mms. Emily Taylor, Mae Cochran and Marie Daly, and Miss Gertrude Rogerman. The table decorations were carried out in daffodil-yellow shading to orange and orchid. After luncheon games and outdoor sports were indulged in.

October 10 members of the Parlor were guests of Annie L. Prior at a farewell party. Mrs. Prior is leaving for an extended trip to the Orient, and will make a short stop in Honolulu. The guests tendered her a delightful surprise miscellaneous shower, and she was the recipient of many beautiful gifts.

LONG SERVING OFFICERS REMEMBERED.

Members of Twin Peaks Parlor No. 185 N.D.G.W. enjoyed a dinner and entertainment given in honor of Helen Beck, who served the Parlor for twelve years as financial secretary. Harriet D. Cate was in charge, and Louisa Re cooked the wonderful ravioli and chicken dinner. Halloween colors were used for favors and decorations. Presentations of silver were made to the honor guest and also to Sarah Dougherty, the charter treasurer, who still holds that office. Entertainment numbers were supplied by Margaret Rodsworth, Viola Paone, Betty Christen, Messrs. Roland and O'Larte.

The Parlor's drill team has had a busy time completing the fund for new uniforms. A luncheon was served at the home of Mrs. Mitchell, and a very successful whist party was given at the residence of Mrs. Julia Hearne.

CALIFORNIA LITERATURE PICTURE.

The picture furnished by California literature of the development of the state from a pioneer to a civilized community is the subject of a course in California literature being given by Professor George R. Stewart of the department of English, University of California, for the University Extension Division in San Francisco.

Professor Stewart, a close student of Bret Harte's life and character, recently published a widely-quoted article on Harte. He is regarded as an authority on the writings of Californians and others about the state. The lecture course particularly stresses the period 1849 to 1860. Among the topics are:

The Mexican and Spanish background; Dana's "Two Years Before the Mast"; the early American period, life of the miners, the Shibley letters; early San Francisco, Derby's "Phoenixiana"; Bret Harte, his picture of mining life and his general significance; Mark Twain's "Roughing It" and "The Jumping Frog"; Stevenson's picture of California in his writings; later writers, including Norris and London, and a survey of modern conditions.

RECORD YEAR ROUNDED OUT.

Maintaining the pace of California's forward progress as the leading motoring state in the union, the California State Automobile Association October 20 rounded out a record year in the twenty-one years of its history. The 80,000 automobile owners who constitute the association were given an accounting of the activities and accomplishments of their organization for the fiscal year ended September 30 at the annual membership meeting and election.

The parallel between California's position as the pre-eminent motoring state, with the largest motor vehicle registration in proportion to population, and the association's position as the largest of the 1,075 affiliated motor clubs in the American Automobile Association's nation-wide chain, was drawn in the annual report of President H. J. Brunnier. He emphasized the association's continued membership growth by pointing out a net increase of 6,975 during the past twelve months.

BUSINESSMAN PAYS.

The Commonwealth Club of San Francisco now has a sub-section on radio. At its initial meeting, Dr. Albert Lyser said, quoting from "The Commonwealth": "At the present time radio is operated primarily for the interests of the so-called artists, near artists and impossible artists, most of whom could not draw a ten-cent house if admission was charged.

"It is obvious that certain people will rush to this new medium in their own interests. Radio has four uses: commercial advertising, entertainment, instruction, inspiration. The Federal Commission should prevent the grabbing of the air by any one corporation.

"After all, the businessman pays for the radio, not the flapper. Yet the flapper is today probably considered more than the businessman, considering the type of entertainment now on the air. It would seem that an intelligent group of men making recommendations should be of real service in this question of radio broadcasting."

Historic Trail—In California North, a movement is under way to create a "Bret Harte Trail," which would link up Marysville, Oroville, Camptonville, Downieville, La Porte, Nevada City, Grass Valley, Auburn, Placerville, and other places of historic interest.

Italian Culture Chair—The Italians of California have endowed at the University of California, Berkeley, a chair of Italian culture, said to be the only separate and autonomous department of Italian in any American university.

Armistice Day—Armistice Day falling on Sunday, November 11, the following day will be a holiday. Celebrations in observance of the day will be held in several California cities.

JACKSON—OVER 200 MEMBERS OF THE Order attended the joint meeting of the Amador County Parlors—Ursula No. 1 (Jackson), Chispa No. 40 (Ione), Amapola No. 80 (Sutter Creek), Forrest No. 86 (Plymouth), California No. 161 (Amador City)—when Grand President Dr. Louise C. Heilbron paid her official visit September 25. Included in the large number were Founder Lily O. Reichling-Dyer, Past Grand Presidents Ema Gett and Dr. Eva R. Rasmussen. Parlors represented among the visitors included Sutter, Laura Loma, San Diego, Buena Vista, La Estrella, Liberty and Marguerite. With President Bertha O. Griesbach of Ursula presiding, a team made up of members of the Amador Parlors exemplified the ritual.

Dr. Heilbron made an excellent address, expressing delight for the opportunity to visit the Parlors in the heart of the Mother Lode; she went into detail regarding the objects and accomplishments of the Order, and expressed ambition to accomplish certain plans she has in mind during her year as head of the Order. Founder Dyer interestingly related the history of the Order; in addition to herself, eleven of the charter members of Ursula, the mother-parlor, are still living: Nellie E. Fontenrose, Emma B. Wright, Henrietta O'Neill, Flora Po-desta, Rose Carley, Alice Jones, Past Grand President Ella E. Caminetti, Mary Folger-Sloan-Bowers, Mollie Peek, Agnes Leonard and Annie Fullen Magee. For the five hostess Parlors, Solena Marre presented a gift of silver to the Grand President, and the Founder was the recipient of a remembrance from Ursula, presented by Supervising Deputy Emma B. Wright. The meeting-hall was adorned with flowers and little brown bears.

The official meeting concluded with a feast. The banquet-room was aglow with decorations of fruits, flowers and potted plants, each Parlor of the county providing a basket of beautiful blossoms. As guests and members were being ushered in Mrs. Leah Peters, accompanied by Miss Frances Schacht, sang several California songs, and during the banquet Miss Christina Marelia presided at the piano. Committees in charge of the successful gathering included: Banquet—Mms. B. Griesbach (chairman), Winnifred Lucot, Lena Glavenich, Lena Podesta, Ella Mercer, Henrietta O'Neill, Carrie Calvin, E. Garbarini, Mildred Boro, A. Raggio, R. Turner and L. Zuccone. Decorations—Mms. Jennie Hewitt, Lucy Lorenson, Gladys Oneto, Miss Jessie Hill. Service—Mms. Rose Turner, Thelma Calvin, Evelyn Garbarini, Josephine Oneto, Miss Betty Read.

October 6 Lugonia entertained the San Bernardino Society of California Pioneers in their log cabin. Addresses were made by President Lily May Tompkins of the Parlor and Past President Jack Gregory of Arrowhead No. 110 N.S.G.W. The Native Daughters' hospitality was greatly enjoyed by a large number of Pioneers. A rummage sale October 10 was followed, in the evening, by a card party at which the Native Sons were guests.

Mountain Scenery Delights.

Etna—Eschscholtzia No. 112 and Mountain Dawn No. 120 (Sawyers Bar) had a joint meeting October 6 to receive Grand President Dr. Louise C. Heilbron, who was accompanied by Grand Trustee Sadie Winn-Brainard. Prior to the meeting the visitors, Grand Organist Mina Kane-Horn and D.D.G.P. Margaret Weston were guests of Margaret Holzhauser at a chicken dinner.

The meeting-hall, where fifty members were assembled, resembled a flower garden with baskets and vases of blooms artistically arranged by Evelyn Tanono. An excellent corps of officers exemplified the ritual. Dr. Heilbron in a very interesting talk complimented the Parlors on their good work and the members on their interest, and explained the loyalty pledge for the Native Daughter Home. Grand Trustee Brainard expressed herself as delighted with the mountain scenery, and Grand Organist Horn, who produced the harmonious strains which accompanied the evening's work, made a few pleasing remarks. Concluding the business session, all assembled in the banquet-room where, under the supervision of a most capable committee, a delicious banquet was served. The attractive table decorations were by Mildred Young. Thus ended a very satisfactory meeting.

Novel Hallowe'en Jinks.

Oroville—Radio fans of Gold of Ophir No. 190 and Argonaut No. 8 N.S.G.W. had the pleasure of hearing the opening program from station BUNK October 17. No sooner were they seated when lights went out, windows flew open, and bats, mice and cats swarmed in. Order being restored, old Mother Witch was seen with her pet cat and wise owl; she said she had appeared a little ahead of schedule, Hallowe'en.

Frank Boyle was the announcer and those contributing numbers were: Madame Lotta Screech (Alta Baldwin), Professor Edouard Napoleon (Ed Nathan), Senorita Taka Enchillada (Alta Hengry), Hortense DeSnooty (Addle Roderick), Ford Chrysler Buick (C. B. Smith), Golly Molphy (Florence Boyle). "Mary Had a Swarm of Bees" was the grand finale. Spanish beans and haked apples were served by the refreshments committee—Jessie Cress, Norma Leveult, Ruby Mekellos, Alta Baldwin, Ruth Brown, Edith Simons. Florence Boyle and Alta Hengry had charge of the entertainment.

In honor of her eightieth birthday anniversary, a surprise party was tendered Mrs. Laura Gordon Chappelle, Butte County Pioneer of 1853, September 28. She has been a great help to Annie K. Bidwell Parlor in the collection of pioneer relics and the compilation of early-day history. Frank Cory has presented the relic collection a derring brought to California in 1851. No. 190 is making elaborate arrangements for the reception of Grand President Dr. Louise C. Heilbron November 7; at that time a class of candidates will be initiated.

Indoor Picnic.

Oakland—Piedmont No. 87 was hostess to Piedmont No. 120 N.S.G.W. at an indoor basket picnic September 27. The members of each Parlor were given corresponding numbers, as a means of choosing partners for the basket lunch. Games were played and dancing concluded the evening. Betty Meinert was chairman for the occasion.

October 11 was high-jinks night, a district school being the theme. Lillian Murden was the schoolmarm and had as her pupils twenty-five members of the Parlor. Greta Murden, chairman of the evening, prepared a tasty repast, done up in paper bags to represent school

Annual Get-Together

Asilomar—This was the scene October 13 of a very happy gathering of representatives of the Santa Cruz, Monterey and San Benito Counties Parlors for the annual get-together and overnight party. After dinner a class of candidates were initiated, the following officers officiating: Blanche Talx, junior past president; Matilda Bergschicker, past president; Mildred Hinrichs, president; Rose Rhyner, first vice-president; Evelyn Smith, second vice-president; Anna Tarp, third vice-president; Clara Zanetta, organist; Charlotte Bates, marshal; Rose Evelyn Rhyner, recording secretary; Mayme Avilla, treasurer; Josephine Winn, financial secretary; Leona Dyer, inside sentinel; Else Sayre, outside sentinel; Dorothy Slaven, Alberta McCormick, Else Schou, trustees.

At the conclusion of these ceremonies entertainment numbers were given by Mayme Avilla, Josefa Hubbard and Evelyn Smith, and D.D.G.P. Bernice Carroll delivered an inspiring address. Aleli No. 102 (Salinas) presented a "Big Week Pageant," with miniature floats, grand marshal, drum corps and all the other necessary features of a parade. Copa de Oro No. 105 (Hollister) stressed the beauty spots and products of San Benito County in two skits, both in costume. "Stewed Prunes" and "The Diversions of Bolado Park," which were well received. Refreshments were served and a midnight frolic was enjoyed. The following day pleasant hours were spent along the beach, the merrymakers departing in the late afternoon.

Membership Contest Under Way.

San Bernardino—At the suggestion of D.D.G.P. Lois A. Johnson, what promises to be a real live membership contest was started by Lugonia No. 241 and Santa Ana No. 235 July 23 and will continue through the year. The losing Parlor will entertain the winning one, and prizes have lunches. Elsie Wann, a recent bride and honor guest, was presented with a beautiful gift.

For the benefit of the veterans at the Livermore Hospital a jelly and jam shower was also held, and Edna Healey, who was in charge, reported over 300 glasses donated. Past Grand President Addle L. Mosher reported many articles donated for the homeless children cause.

Welfare Projects Being Worked Out.

San Diego—The winter social activities of San Diego No. 208 were launched September 25, when the September birthday committee—Carrie Chambers (chairman), Adele Busch, Elsie Case, Juanita Case, Emma Robinson, Lenora Guatelli—sponsored an entertainment and provided delicious refreshments. The sale of cakes and a "white elephant" netted a neat sum for the welfare committee. D.D.G.P. Martha Klindt and Virginia Jackson gave detailed accounts of their vacation trip to Washington, D. C., and New York City. Ann Wood, Rosina M. Hertzbrun, Elsie Case and Irma Heilbron were appointed a loyalty pledge committee for the Native Daughter Home.

The October birthday committee—Marion Stough (chairman), Isabel Young, Gladys Chandler, Nellie Hamilton, Maude Tichenor, Ruth Latham—had many Halloween surprises for the October 30 sociable. Numerous projects for the Parlor's welfare are being worked out.

70-Year-Old Solano Native Affiliates.

Alturas—Grand President Dr. Louise C. Heilbron paid an official visit to Alturas No. 159 October 4. Also present were Grand Trustees Sadie Winn-Brainard and Irma Laird, D.D.G.P. Mary Wycliffe and Past Grand President Catherine E. Gloster. At 6:30 p. m. guests and members gathered around the banquet table, made festive with autumn fruits and flowers. The lodge-room, too, was attractively decorated.

Dr. Heilbron complimented the Parlor and the district deputy on the ritual exemplification and the floor work; an interesting feature in connection with the ceremony was that the candidate, Mrs. Martha McDaniel-McCully, aged 70, is the first White child born in Solano County. Gifts were presented all guests of honor. Members of the Parlor were delighted with the Grand President's visit and expressed themselves as heartily in sympathy with the message she brought.

Grand Trustee Irma Laird was invited to represent the Order at the golden jubilee celebration of Alturas Lodge No. 248 F. & A. M. October 10, and the congratulations she conveyed from Alturas Parlor were given concrete expression in the presentation of an immense birthday cake aglow with fifty candles. The cake was accepted and cut by W. E. Armstrong, a Pioneer of Modoc County and of the local Masonic Lodge; its presentation was declared the most unique feature of the evening's program.

Will Be in Armistice Parade.

Stockton—In accordance with the letter sent all Subordinate Parlors by Grand President Dr. Louise C. Heilbron, Joaquin No. 5 has appointed a committee to formulate plans for securing and handling the members' pledges for the Native Daughter Home. Banks which, when filled, hold five dollars were distributed. Some members are earning the money, while others are resolved to save a fixed sum weekly. Nellie Atwood gave her quota outright, and heads the list.

October 9 the committee in charge of Armistice Day arrangements reported the officers will appear in the parade in decorated autos. Joaquin is to have a whist party November 27, a portion of the proceeds from which will go to the homeless children. Many valuable and beautiful prizes will be awarded high scores.

Visitors Charmed.

Weaverville—Eltapome No. 55 was hostess October 8 at a most enjoyable meeting to Grand President Dr. Louise C. Heilbron, who complimented the officers for their efficiency following the ritual exemplification. Other visitors were Grand Secretary Sallie R. Thaler and her mother, Mrs. Sarah Rutherford. Grand Trustee Sadie Winn-Brainard and Mms. Carmelita and Minnie Luhr of Oakland. At the meeting's close refreshments were served at tables prettily decorated with vari-colored nasturtiums.

The visitors were charmed with the picturesque little town of Weaverville, Trinity County, with all its historic interests, and attractive flowers and trees. They were inspired also with the beauties of the Scenic highway and expressed the wish that Eltapome would sponsor the planting of sweet "memory gardens" of old-fashioned flowers in conspicuous places in honor of California's loved Pioneers.

The Parlor's fund for the building of a swimming pool at the Calaveras-San Joaquin Preventorium at Murphy, Calaveras County, has now reached $600. October 22 a whist party for the benefit of the homeless children was held. The committee in charge consisted of Ray Dorsey (chairman), Joel V. Beck Jr., A. J. Carey, R. E. ## Old Timers Come Into Their Own.

Saint Helena—The "old timers" came into their own October 1, when members of Saint Helena No. 53 honored them at an "old timers' night." The affair was held in N.S.G.W. Hall and was the first of a series of social events planned by the Parlor for the fall and winter months. The meeting was one of the largest attended of the year, and brought out many who had not been in Parlor for a number of years. The chairs were filled by the old timers, who conducted the entire meeting and proceedings; not only did they display their ability at conducting the meeting, but showed they had not forgotten the training received while filling the various offices.

After the opening ceremonies, with Acting President Perry Blake in the chair, the meeting was turned over to the old timers, with the following holding the various offices: Past president, Walter Metzner; president, Dr. L. A. Stern; first vice-president, Julius Goodman; second vice-president, Gus Jursch; third vice-president, Charles Palmer; marshal, Joseph Galewsky; inside sentinel, Charles Davis; outside sentinel, J. L. Goodman; recording secretary, E. L. Bonhote; financial secretary, George Herdle; treasurer, C. Mills; trustees, Will Milenz, Joseph Tosetti, Arnold Metzner. During the meeting the charity box was greatly enriched by fines levied by President Stern, who saw fit to assess the members when they became a bit too persistent and unruly.

The meeting was reminiscent, and good-fellowship prevailed. Twenty-one past presidents were in attendance, in addition to a delegation from Calistoga No. 86 and many of the younger members of the Order. Following the repartee under good of the order, the meeting adjourned to the banquet-hall, where the committee in charge—Perry Blake, Walt and Ray Corbella—served refreshments. The next social event on the calendar of No. 53 is the "get-together meeting" with La Junta No. 203 N.D.G.W., to be held during the fore part of November.

The already proud throng were stirred to greater elation by appreciative speeches and good music. At the conclusion of the program all were invited to the banquet-room.

Grand Trustee to Visit.

San Bernardino—During the month of November, Grand Trustee Ben Harrison will officially visit the following Subordinate Parlors in his district: Los Angeles No. 45, the 8th; San Diego No. 108, the 12th; Ramona No. 109 (Los Angeles), the 16th; Santa Ana No. 265, the 19th; Vaquero No. 262 (Los Angeles), the 21st; Cahuenga No. 268 (Van Nuys), the 26th; Long Beach No. 239, the 28th.

Ritual Contest.

San Rafael—Mount Tamalpais No. 64 is still enjoying a steady increase in membership. The "big five" committee has the splendid co-operation of the newly-organized drum corps, whose activities appeal to many desirable young men. The corps' benefit dance was very successful, a tidy sum being realized for the uniform fund. The boys are taking steps to organize a basketball team, which will further increase enthusiasm, and appeared in the Columbus Day parade, one of the most colorful ever witnessed in San Rafael.

Mount Tamalpais is preparing for a ritual contest with Sea Point No. 158 at Sausalito during November. As the officers of both Parlor are talented young men, near-faultless work is anticipated. November 5, No. 64 will have initiation and among the candidates will be the son of an old alcalde of Marysville, Yuba County, who has a fund of historical reminiscences of the romantic past.

Minstrel Show a Possibility.

Ferndale—Ferndale No. 93 initiated three candidates October 15. The Parlor plans to start winter social activities with a social November 5. E. H. Lanini, Richard Bryant and C. H. Rasmussen comprise the arrangements committee. A committee has been appointed to investigate the possibility of putting on a big minstrel show in the near future.

Old Parlor To Be Revived.

Suisun—At a recent meeting of Solano No. 39, organized in 1884, it was positively determined to rehabilitate the Parlor and to make it one of the going branches of the Order. President John W. Kinlock presided, and his suggestion for a membership campaign was heartily seconded, and every member pledged support to the revival.

Grand officers in attendance included Grand President James A. Wilson, Grand First Vice-president Charles L. Dodge, Grand Secretary John T. Regan and Grand Trustee Charles A. Koenig. Vallejo No. 77 was represented by a delegation, and among the old-time members of Solano present were State Senator Ben Rush, Edgar E. Loug, assessor of Solano County, and Edward Dinkelspiel, mayor of Suisun.

NATIVE DAUGHTER NEWS

Fiftieth Wedding Anniversary Celebrated.

Chico—Two campaign groups, one headed by Dr. Nellie Allen and the other by Miss Mabel Lucke, are securing candidates for Annie K. Bidwell No. 168, and they will be initiated November 8 at a reception planned for Grand President Dr. Louise C. Heilbron. December 20 the Parlor's twentieth institution anniversary will be observed.

Mr. and Mrs. G. A. Kesselring celebrated their golden wedding anniversary October 2. Members of the Parlor attended the event and presented the couple with a pair of gold napkin rings. Mrs. Kesselring, before her marriage, was Samantha Eugenia Ash; she is a past president of No. 163 and a district deputy grand president.

Harrison-Warren Nuptials.

Santa Barbara—In the beautiful hillside garden of Mr. and Mrs. Philip Mohan, Miss Frances Margaret Harrison, third vice-president Reina del Mar No. 126, became the bride of A. C. Warren October 13. Miss Marjorie C. Brothers was the bridesmaid and Donald Montgomery the bestman. The bride was gown in ivory satin and wore a long veil held in place with a spray of orange blossoms; she carried a bouquet of roses and sweetpeas.

Following the pretty ceremony the bridal party proceeded to the home of the bride's mother, Mrs. Mamie C. Harrison, past president Reina del Mar, which was beautifully decorated. Here many relatives and friends extended congratulations to the couple. Dainty refreshments were served by the Misses Myra Sumphon, Else Le Blanc, Madalyn Campiglio, Mary Campiglio, Ester Janssens, Lydia Miratti, Frances Bonn, Eva Raffetto and Geraldine Leslie. Mr. and Mrs. Warren were the recipients of many beautiful wedding gifts. After a honeymoon in the Santa Cruz Mountains they will be at home at 3018 Lomita road, Santa Barbara.

An Inspiration.

Quincy—Plumas Pioneer No. 219 entertained Grand President Dr. Louise C. Heilbron and Grand Trustee Sadie Winn-Brainard October 1. The hall was beautifully decorated in autumn leaves and asters, and the ritualistic work was exemplified in a very creditable manner. D.D.G.P. Lena A. Droege also paid her official visit at this time.

Members of the Parlor declared the visit of Dr. Heilbron was an inspiration. Violet J. C. Mori, in recognition of the splendid work accomplished for the Parlor, was made a member of the Grand Parlor committee on roster of pioneers and historical landmarks. Delightful refreshments were served during the evening.

Cottage of Girls Adopted.

Sacramento—Past Presidents' Association No. 4 enjoyed a Halloween party October 15, the tables being appropriately decorated and delicious refreshments being served. The association has adopted a cottage at the Sacramento Orphanage in which fifteen girls are housed, and its first charitable work was the celebration of the birthday anniversary of one of the girls. Mamie Davis provided a birthday cake, with candles and fancy decorations, and the association's gift was a Bible, for which the girl had expressed a wish.

At the December meeting the association will feature a Christmas party, and plans to have as guests the fifteen cottage girls.

ANNIE ADAIR.

To the Officers and Members of Ano Nuevo Parlor No. 180 N.D.G.W.—We, your committee appointed to draft resolutions of respect on the passing away of our sister, Annie Adair, respectfully submit the following:

Resolved, By her being called to our heavenly home our Parlor sustains the loss of an ever earnest and interested member, and one whose loyalty and faithfulness to our Order will ever be an inspiration; resolved, that while we bow in reverent resignation to the will of the Almighty Father, we mourn what seems to be the untimely death of our beloved sister and extend to her loved ones our deepest sympathy.

Not dead to those who love her,
 Not lost, but gone before,
 She lives with us in memory
 And will forevermore.

CALIFORNIA'S WONDERLAND

CITY AND COUNTY

EUROPE, THROUGH CALIFORNIA EYES

(EARL LEMOINE.)

"LEAVING WIESBADEN, WE ARRIVED at Frankfurt, on the River Main, famous as the birthplace of Goethe; the palm garden is magnificent and the municipal band excellent. From here, proceeded to Mainz, a great railroad center at the confluence of the Main and the Rhine; many French soldiers of the army of occupation were noticed en-training for home. Leaving the river, but traveling through the Valley of the Rhine, one of Germany's most beautiful and fertile spots, we came to Worms where, centuries ago, the famous meeting, known as the 'Diet of the Worms,' was held. Passing through Mannheim, Ludwigshafen, Speyer, Metz, Zweibrücken, Homburg and Saarbrücken, we came to Turkismühle, the border town between France and Germany. It was amusing to see how differently the French and the German custom officers tried to act, but all used the same language, French.

"Keeping to the north of the Vosges Mountains, we entered the beautiful Lorraine, with its lovely Valleys of the Meurthe and the Moselle, upon whose banks is its capital, the City of Metz, at one time headquarters of California's famous Fortieth Division. This was the touring point for visits to one of the most interesting sections of Europe. The Valley of Vologne is literally studded with lakes, and at the foot of the Schulte, Girardmer stands out in a lovely air of grace. Nancy, the ancient capital of Lorraine, is one of France's prettiest towns; the gilded grating of Place Stanislas is an exquisite example of the eighteenth century. Near by is the quiet Valley of the Meuse, with the towns of Vaucouleurs and Domrémy, where once lived an humble shepherdess who became the purest and most sublime figure in the annals of France, and it is here the memory of Joan of Arc is still cherished with a folkside simplicity.

"We had the pleasure of spending the Fourth of July in Metz, where the memory of the American doughboys is still held sacred and where Old Glory was seen floating in the breeze; at the statue of Lafayette a real American celebration of Freedom Day was held. Metz was one of the strongest German positions during the world war, and just before the armistice its western outskirts received a million-dollar baptism of fire.

"Leaving here we rode over fine roads past little farms with stone walls, and steep-roofed houses whose architecture is now so popular in California South. In turn, we reached Thionville on the Moselle, Briey and Moineville, where a little monument has been raised to the soldier dead. We are now retracing the footsteps of the famous Fourth Division, among others visiting the following particularly noted places: Fort Verdun, where Marshal Petain in 1916 uttered the famous words, 'Thou shalt not pass!'; Hill 304, from the top of which an excellent view of the Argonne Forest was had; Cheppy, where the Missouri monument stands; Varennes, where Louis XVI was halted in his attempted flight from France in 1791; Grurie Wood, where the crown prince had headquarters for years; Romagne, where 14,000 American boys rest forever; Fort De Vaux, near which place George F. Rand of Buffalo, New York, erected a monument to the memory of the 170 French heroes who, while waiting the signal to go over the top, were buried where they stood by an explosion; Charlevaux Mill, where the lost battalion of the American Seventy-seventh, hemmed in on all sides, fought for four days and were then rescued by the Cuirassiers of the Ninth French Army Corps; Saint Mihiel, the site of the best overseas American cemetery; Bar-le-Duc, which recalled the play 'What Price Glory.'

"There are no highway speed laws or traffic cops in France, so we tried a little speed on our way back to Metz—passing enroute the old city of Chambley, where many pleasant hours were spent in parks and along the Moselle. Departure from this beautiful city, which has many reminders of the days of the Romans, was truly a hard task. Our route was to Straasburg. Following the Moselle, we passed Pont-a-Mousson; the beautiful City of Nancy, heaped with history and romance; through level farming country across the River Saar and up the ever-winding road through the Vosges Mountains, sparkling with creeks, waterfalls and lakes, and numerous villages nestling in the valleys below. Deer and pheasants were always in sight and frequently, when it appeared we were lost in the wilds of all this beauty, an inn would come to view. At last, that single spire of the Cathedral of Straasburg was seen.

"Crossing the Rhine under the old covered bridge the first place visited was the mechanical clock of the cathedral; it would require a lot of space to describe the antics of this curiosity, which has never been duplicated in all the world. Straasburg is one of Eastern France's business shopping centers and the cinema was busy all the time, among the pictures taken being that of an old wine house built of wine bottles, cement and carved oaks. The clothes of the peasant folks proved interesting, as did also the vineyards, which appear to cling to the steepest hills. An imposing sight is Kleber Square; it is surrounded by store buildings capped with beautiful roofs, each different, but blending into

U. S. C. ADVANCES.

The University of Southern California October 6 celebrated the forty-eighth anniversary of the opening of classes. When fifty-five students first assembled with four faculty members in a frame building October 6, 1880, Los Angeles was a frontier town of the West with a population of 11,145, and with forty-three teachers in its school system. Today there are about 400 faculty members at S. C., a yearly enrollment of students in excess of 14,000, and the university consists of the union of seventeen schools and colleges. When the first class finished in 1884 there were four graduates; in June 1928 there were 1,602 graduates.

A statement issued by President von Klein-Smid and the board of trustees of the Trojan institution announces that in no year since the university was founded have events moved more swiftly toward attaining the ideal of genuine service to the southland than during the past twelve months. Following are some of the significant developments of the year:

More than $1,400,000 was pledged toward the semi-centennial fund for building and endowment. About half of this amount came from loyal alumni. The semi-centennial, or fiftieth anniversary of the founding of S. C., will be celebrated in 1930.

Control of the university passed from the founder group, the Methodist Episcopal Church, into the hands of a self-perpetuating board of trustees, and by this action the university became an institution belonging to the whole community rather than to one group.

Two new major divisions of the university were organized, the college of engineering and the school of medicine.

Three new buildings, representing an outlay of approximately one million dollars, were erected and occupied: Student Union, Bridge Hall and Science Hall.

A gift of $265,000 has made possible the erection at an early date of the Seeley Mudd Memorial Hall of Philosophy.

"The trustees envision an institution ten years from now with a full-time enrollment of 20,000, and within the university twenty or more schools or colleges," states President von Klein-Smid.

SECRETARY COMMENDED.

Ocean Park—Santa Monica Bay Parlor No. 267 N.S.G.W. had a largely attended meeting October 8, among the visitors being Grand Second Vice-president John T. Newell, Grand Trustee Ben Harrison, and delegations from Los Angeles Parlor No. 45, Arrowhead Parlor No. 110 (San Bernardino) and Sepulveda Parlor No. 263 (San Pedro). With President Stanley Wheeler presiding, the officers of Sepulveda exemplified the ritual for the benefit of a class of Santa Monica Bay's candidates.

This was the official visit of Grand Trustee Harrison to the Parlor, and in the course of an impressive talk he highly commended Secretary John J. Smith and stressed the necessity of co-operation in every undertaking on the part of all members. A good program, under the direction of Cameron G. Coffey, was presented and refreshments, including ice-cream in the shape of brown bears, were served. No. 267 is waging a systematic membership campaign, and as a result monthly class initiations will be a feature for some time.

PIONEER OF 1852 HOLDS ATTENTION.

The first of a series of winter social affairs planned by Los Angeles Parlor No. 45 N.S.G.W.—a Halloween dance October 25—was well attended and greatly enjoyed. The hall was most attractively decorated, and several prizes were awarded. The good of the order committee, Ray LeMoine, chairman, had charge. Several candidates were initiated October 18.

Grand Trustee Ben Harrison will officially visit the Parlor November 8. Plans are being made for due observance of No. 45's institution anniversary about the middle of November. Organizer Roger Johnson has undertaken to organize the Parlor's many talented members into a minstrel troupe. There will be no meeting November 29, that being Thanksgiving Day.

One of the most enjoyable occasions in the annals of Los Angeles Parlor was that of September 27, when David M. Adams, a native of Arkansas who crossed the plains to California via the Southern route in 1852, was a guest. Although 81 years of age, for more than two hours he held the close attention of his auditors while he related important happenings in his covered-wagon journey and told of his early-day experiences in the state. Recently the speaker, accompanied by his son, Owen S. Adams, a member of the Parlor, returned to Arkansas by auto, over the same route that he traveled to California seventy-six years ago.

TO HONOR FAMED NATIVE SCHOLAR.

A pilgrimage that extended up and down the State of California and east to the Atlantic Coast has been completed by Dr. Hugh Miller of the University of California at Los Angeles. It was undertaken for the purpose of obtaining a complete collection of the published and unpublished writings of Josiah Royce, California scholar and philosopher, who attained international renown for his learned discussions on philosophy, history, psychology, religion, mathematics and other subjects.

from forest fires are so imminent, and the results so far reaching and frightfully destructive.

The reprehensible and altogether inexcusable practice of throwing cigarettes from automobiles is another source of many fires, and this particular danger angle could be done away with by carrying an ash tray in each automobile and using it. It cannot be too often repeated, word upon word, line upon line, and precept upon precept, that there is no possibility of taking too much care in the matter of prevention of forest fires. If every hunter and fisherman could view some magnificent area of forest before it was destroyed by fire, and then see it after it had been practically wiped out, such a spectacle would be one never to be forgotten. It must be remembered that to re-forest such areas is, in many cases, absolutely impossible because of the destruction of the soil, and, in other instances where the soil has not been entirely ruined, it means from thirty-five to sixty years before the original condition can be restored.

It is of course unnecessary to state that anglers who are fishing from a boat upon the lakes or rivers are perfectly safe in smoking to their hearts' content. Smoking alongside streams may be safe at certain points, and extremely unsafe under other conditions. Deer hunters should never smoke when passing through the timber.

This ever-present menace to America, to the health and the happiness of our people, of loss of game and fish, of economic waste in water power and irrigation, is one which, in the last analysis, rests squarely upon the shoulders of every man and every woman driving through these areas in an automobile, camping in such areas, or passing through them afoot while shooting or fishing. This responsibility cannot be dodged. Incendiary fires have always been exceedingly rare. But neglect will make more breaches than the cannon balls, and a fire which results from carelessness can very readily cause as much damage as a fire deliberately and maliciously launched.

Not only is this duty incumbent on every one using the woods and forest areas, but it is the duty of each and every man and woman to warn everyone they come in contact with in such areas to use the most extraordinary care to prevent these disasters. Cover for nesting upland game birds and for the deer and small game of the woods depends absolutely on the saving of the forests. It is strenuously urged, therefore, that the most rigid care possible be exercised by the men of the gun and the rod to prevent these disastrous conflagrations, with their appalling resultant diminution of the fish and game of the country.

pleted at Westwood as a major unit in the new group of buildings for U. C. L. A. has been officially named Royce Hall in honor of the scholar. To further perpetuate his name, Dr. Miller and his associates have undertaken to establish a shrine within the building having both sentimental and practical significance.

This will consist of a small bookcase containing virtually every published work of Royce's and as many of his other writings and pamphlets as can be obtained. Dr. Miller, visiting Grass Valley, California, Cambridge, Massachusetts, and other cities succeeded in procuring copies of nearly everything sought for the purpose. These will not merely be exhibited in the memorial but will be available to students who wish to study Royce. A beautifully mounted picture of the honored scholar will surmount the bookcase.

Dr. Royce has been referred to by Dr. Ernest C. Moore, director of U. C. L. A., as one of California's four greatest men, the other three being Junipero Serra, Bret Harte and Thos. Starr King. He was born at Grass Valley, Nevada County, graduated from the University of California, and later went to Harvard where he became one of its best-known and most-revered scholars. As a member of the faculty both at California and Harvard, he brought fame to both institutions.

A CHRISTMAS OFFER.

The Hughes Photo Studios, 1212 West Pico street, will make your portrait, absolutely free, and give you a print 11x14 colored in oil; you will have three sittings to choose from. The offer is good only for two weeks.

These portraits are very beautiful, and you will be pleased with the service, says W. A. Hughes. Just phone WEStmore 1006 for appointment. You will not have to wait a month for the colored portrait; it will be finished in about ten days.

SPANISH DINNER, NOVEMBER 21.

The bazaar of Los Angeles Parlor No. 124 N.D.G.W. October 24 in charge of Treasurer Grace T. Haven was a wonderful success and drew a large crowd. Chairman Grace J. Norton reports much interest in the loyalty pledge for the Native Daughter Home; many of the members are earning their pledges, as requested by Grand President Dr. Louise C. Heilbron.

Members of No. 124 were guests October 15 of Santa Monica Bay Parlor No. 245 at Ocean Park. The occasion was a Hallowe'en party, and the unique affair proved most enjoyable. A splendid program was presented and delicious refreshments were served.

Los Angeles will have its monthly card party November 14, and November 21 a Spanish dinner, prepared under the supervision of Ruth Ruiz, will be served at 6:30; dancing will follow the supper. All Natives and their friends are welcome to the social functions of the Parlor, which are held in I.O.O.F. Hall, Oak and Washington streets. Grace C. Yarwood, an old-time and popular member, is seriously ill at the Good Samaritan Hospital. City Mother Aletha Gilbert, also a member of the Parlor, is recovering from an injured knee.

CHANGE PROVES BENEFICIAL.

Vaquero Parlor No. 262 N.S.G.W. has changed its time and place of meeting to the first and third Wednesdays of each month at 220 1/2 South Main street. Since moving to the new quarters there has been a marked increase in the attendance and the enthusiasm.

October 17 the officers of the Parlor, with Ray Solomon as president, were installed by D.D.G.P. Vincent Savory, who gave a fine talk, full of encouragement, following the ceremonies. Vaquero will be officially visited November 21 by Grand Trustee Ben Harrison.

"MOTHER KNOWS BEST" SOON TO CLOSE.

But a few days remain in which to see "Mother Knows Best," at Carthay Circle Theatre, just off Wilshire boulevard opposite Hollywood. This outstanding production, the first William Fox movietone talking super-film, will close its capacity engagement Sunday night, November 4, to make way for the world premiere of "Interference" Monday evening, November 5, the first Paramount 100 percent all-talking motion picture, based on the spectacular mystery drama of the same name which enjoyed more than a year's run in New York.

"Mother Knows Best" has been proclaimed by dramatic critics, as well as by all those who have seen it, to be the greatest show ever presented at Carthay Circle. Not only is the feature the first big talking picture to be made by the Fox organization, but the surrounding show is a revelation in the new talking picture attractions, including the Fox movietone talking special by Chic Sale entitled "Marching On," a comedy drama by America's foremost comedian. Other Fox movietone talking pictures on the big "Mother Knows Best" program are ten minutes with George Bernard Shaw, this being the famous Irishman's first American appearance, and Fox movietone talking news which presents world-wide events as they actually occur. Carli Elinor's world-famous concert orchestra plays for both matinee and evening performances.

"Mother Knows Best" will never again be presented in California South with the big Carthay Circle surrounding show, so those who enjoy clean entertainment of the highest merit should see this dramatic hit before it closes its run at the "Showplace of the Golden West."

"SAM BLAKE NIGHT."

There was a large gathering at Hollywood Parlor No. 196 N.S.G.W. October 29, when Grand Trustee Ben Harrison paid his official visit. The occasion was referred to as "Sam Blake night," in honor of Municipal Judge Samuel R. Blake who, at the August primary, was elected to the superior court bench. Several judges and attorneys, members of the Order, were in attendance, and the list of speakers was a long one. Henry G. Bodkin, Ernest Crawford and Edward J. Reilly composed the arrangements committee.

Earl LeMoine entertained the members of the Parlor and their families with an illustrated talk on his travels abroad, October 22.

INDIANS ENTERTAINED.

Long Beach—D.D.G.P. Ida Gillman paid an official visit to Long Beach Parlor No. 154 N.D.G.W. October 4 and gave an interesting talk on the Native Daughter Home; she expressed the hope that all members would have an opportunity to visit it, so as to fully realize the importance of the undertaking they are a part of; she also encouraged the Parlor in the many plans being made for a busy winter. Mrs. Lyde Lucas was presented with a silver spoon for her new daughter; in accepting it she said she hoped the girl would some day affiliate with the Order. The Parlor's latest bride, Mrs. Manda Afmee Mace, was in attendance.

A luncheon party, under the able chairmanship of Geneva Johnson, was featured October 18; refreshments were served and worth-while prizes were distributed. The thimble club, under the direction of Mrs. Nora Dodd, finished the blocks

The Federal Government takes care of the younger ones at the Sherman Indian School, but it is claimed very little is done for the well-being of the aged Indians. Charles C. West has taken up his residence in Atascadero, San Luis Obispo County, and Auhrey L. Adair's future home will be in San Francisco.

NATIVE SON BARBECUE.

San Pedro—Sepulveda Parlor No. 263 N.S.G.W. will have a barbecue, for members of the Order only, in Gaffey Canyon, November 4. John J. Kaveny and William F. Derr have charge of arrangements. Grand Trustee Ben Harrison was extended the usual No. 263 welcome October 26, the occasion being his official visit to that Parlor.

HOLLYWOODER BECOMES BENEDICT.

Miss Loris Landon became the bride October 13 of Edgar Black, second vice-president of and active worker in Hollywood Parlor No. 196 N.S.G.W. The honeymoon was spent in San Diego. A new home, built by the groom for his bride, will soon be ready for occupancy.

ARMISTICE DAY AT SAN PEDRO.

San Pedro—San Pedro is making elaborate preparations for a three-day Armistice Day festival, November 10, 11 and 12. The American Legion, in charge, has the united support of all civic and fraternal organizations in the harbor district, including Sepulveda Parlor No. 263 N.S.G.W. and Rudecinda Parlor No. 230 N.D.G.W.

The festival will open Saturday, November 10, at 2:30 p. m., when the new Branch City Hall will be dedicated by the Native Son grand officers, headed by Grand President James A. Willson. At 6:30 the citizens of San Pedro will sponsor a banquet, and following that Cabrillo Beach and bathhouse will be dedicated.

Sunday, November 11, Armistice Day, an elaborate military pageant will be staged at the Navy Athletic Field.

Monday, November 12, at noon, an Armistice Day parade will be the attraction. This will be participated in by the army, the navy, and all fraternal and civic organizations. Many elaborate floats will be featured. At 6:30 there will be a banquet at which the parade prizes will be awarded.

DEDICATION AT CARTHAY CENTER.

Some time during the early evening hours of Sunday, November 11,—the exact time depending on the conclusion of events at the San Pedro Navy Athletic Field—a memorial to Galen Clark, discoverer of the big trees of California—erected by J. Harvey McCarthy (Ramona N.S.G.W.)—will be dedicated at Carthay Center. The ceremonies will be under the auspices of the Native Sons, with the grand officers presiding.

GRIZZLY GROWLS (CLARENCE M. HUNT.)

President Calvin Coolidge has declared Thursday, November 29, Thanksgiving Day. The proclamation, in part, says: "The season again approaches when it has been the custom for generations to set apart a day for thanksgiving for the blessings which the giver of all good and perfect gifts has bestowed upon us during the year. It is most becoming that we should do this, for the goodness and mercy of God which have followed us through the year deserve our grateful recognition and acknowledgment. . . . Wherefore, I, Calvin Coolidge, President of the United States, do hereby set apart Thursday, the twenty-ninth day of November next, as a day of general thanksgiving and prayer."

At the November 6 election, 2,313,816 citizens will be privileged to vote in California, that record number having registered. Los Angeles County's registered strength is 925,292—nearly 40 percent of the total for the state—San Francisco's 253,043 and Alameda's 241,571.

Every registered citizen should vote, according to the dictates of his or her own conscience, following careful study of the candidates and the measures presented. Failure to vote, is failure to perform the main duty incumbent on a loyal and useful citizen.

Remember the saying of Plato, 2,500 years back: "The punishment of the wise, who refuse to take part in government, is to live under the government of had men."

A published report of the audit of the books of the Los Angeles Bureau of Power and Light for the last fiscal year says, "The net earnings, after all charges of every kind had been paid, were $3,061,728."

How about the $10,000,000 and more damages the taxpayers must dig up for the collapse of the bureau's Saint Francis dam? That is assuredly a charge of some kind, but perhaps the bureau has no incompetency account.

And, incidentally, the taxpayers of Los Angeles City have had their tax-bills considerably increased because of that dam disaster. The mayor said the increase was not necessary, but the council stood "pat."

Then, when a public protest storm appeared to be brewing, both factions got together and, to save the taxpayers,—being systematically and continuously robbed to perpetuate incompetents and worse in the public service—agreed that next year, if there be any surplus from this year's taxes, said surplus shall be used to reduce next year's taxes.

That is, without doubt, the greatest joke of the season! Any one conversant with conditions in the Angel-less City knows that there is just as much possibility of there being one penny of surplus taxes as there is of a snowball surviving in the lower regions.

But, methinks a change in governmental affairs is fast approaching, being hastened by the revelations of Sweeney, whose tale is helieved by a great many; by the $2,500 "good-will offering" tendered by the "four-squarer" to a superior judge; by the sending of a mother to the crazy-house because she would not acknowledge some other woman's son as her own; by the dismissal of indictments against the money-bulls of the upper-crust; by excessive assessments for public improvements, etc., etc., ad infinitum. May the Good Lord speed the change!

Assembled at Yuba City, Sutter County, peach-growers and businessmen of the Sacramento Valley resolved to request the Federal Trade Commission and the State Legislature to investigate the California Canners' League "with reference to controlling the price and the market for California peaches and other fruit."

If one-quarter of what has been published in this controversy is founded on fact, the peach-growers have had a rotten deal, from which "the canners will profit by the amount of 1,750,000 cases of peaches and the sum of $625,000," at the expense of the growers.

In the interest of justice for the peach-growers, would it not be a good idea for the consuming public to refuse to purchase the California canners' products until such time as a settlement, fair to the growers, has been effected? The conscience of some people is reachable only through the pocketbook!

A real-estate operator of Imperial named Thomas has been convicted in the Imperial County Superior Court of conspiracy to violate the California Alien Land Law, in that he agreed to lease a ranch to a Hindu; the latter, indicted along with Thomas, pleaded guilty to his part in the conspiracy.

Thousands of other Whites in practically every county of the state are similarly guilty, having sold or leased land to Hindus, Japs and other aliens who come under the ban of the state law. But the district attorneys are, evidently, either in sympathy with the conspirators or have no knowledge of the Alien Land Law's existence, for seldom indeed is an attempt made to enforce the statute, for the good of the state.

Every foot of California soil illegally in possession of aliens ineligible to citizenship should be, and under the law can be, recovered. Payment, for neglect to now recover that land, must

For 12 years he has capably served the fourth district. As chairman of the county board of supervisors, Mr. McClellan presides over a territory equal in population to one third the state of California, and larger in population and greater in wealth than any one of 27 states. HE IS A MAN OF PERFORMANCE AND NOT OF MERE PROMISE... if re-elected he will continue to administer the affairs of the county in an efficient and business like manner.

he made by the coming, if not the rising, generations of Whites!

"If the business executive would devote more of his time to seeing that tax money is really needed and is properly spent he would be serving his business better than neglecting entirely this matter, and his business could probably pay more in dividends," says the "Tax Digest," publication of the California Taxpayers' Association. "The business man thinks he works for his wife and family. In fact, he works, on the average, one-sixth of his time for the tax collector. Think of it—every sixth peck or hushel of wheat produced by the farmer, every sixth automobile, every sixth kilowatt of electric energy, every sixth fruit tree, every sixth unit of everything sold or used to produce income goes to pay for governmental expenditures. It is estimated that every twelfth person is supported by the taxpayer."

Which is to say that, if tax-monies were honestly and competently expended for the general good, there would be a decided decrease in tax-rates and a wholesale dismissal of feeders at the public trough. But there can be no change from the present deplorable conditions until the taxpayers themselves bring it about, via the ballot-box.

At the recent State School Superintendents' Convention in Del Monte, Monterey County, a proposal to segregate children in the public schools according to races was hotly debated and finally tabled.

Superintendent Susan M. Dorsey of the Los Angeles City schools was reported to have said: "It is pretty late in the history of the human race to bring up a problem of this kind."

It is never too late to do that which should be done! The United States Supreme Court has upheld the right of states to segregate school-children by races, and, if we mistake not, the California law makes compulsory such segregation when a majority of the parents demand it. And the White parents in every school district should make the demand, for the good of their children.

The Nevadans, a society composed of natives of the Sagebrush State, has been formed in Nevada. It will, it is said, be similar in scope to California's Order of Native Sons of the Golden West, and will devote its energies to advancing the interests of Nevada. May you live long and prosper, Nevadans!

Desirous of determining why so many charges of driving while intoxicated are reduced to reckless driving in California, the State Division of Motor Vehicles has ordered all traffic officers to make detailed reports of the disposition of all such cases in which they are involved.

Now, why add to the duties of the already overburdened traffic officers? The "why" is simply this, and nothing more: pull and dough!

The percapita circulation of money in the United States September 30 of this year, based on an estimated population of 118,720,000, was $40.82, which is $1.37 less than the percapita circulation, based on an estimated population of 117,297,000, September 30, 1927. These figures appeared in the Federal Treasury Department's statement of October 9.

Does this indicate "rampant prosperity throughout the length and breadth of the land"?

No need for anyone wanting it, going without booze, for a United States Senator—Cole L. Blease of South Carolina—has publicly declared: "I can take you to the United States Senate, under the dome of the Capitol, where Congress makes your laws, and buy liquor there." He declared, also, that Government trucks, guarded by soldiers, transport the booze to Washington.

A nice state of affairs, is it not? Is it to be wondered that disrespect for law, for lawmakers and for lawenforcers is in the ascendancy in this country? This declaration of Senator Blease is presented as additional proof of the oft-made statement in these columns that there would be real prohibition in this country, if the powers-that-be so desired. As a matter of fact, however, among the most flagrant violators of the Eighteenth Amendment are officials—national, state, county, city and township—sworn to uphold the Federal Constitution.

All grade crossing deaths are not the fault of the railroads, it is indicated in figures reaching the Automobile Club of Southern California. According to a check made of last year's casualties at grade crossings, 238 persons were killed as a result of automobiles running into the sides of moving trains.

STOP . . . . Anywhere you see a blue and white striped pump. It marks a friendly service for you.

UNION OIL COMPANY

Many of these inexcusable deaths resulted from attempts of drivers to heat trains to a crossing, or approaching a grade crossing at a high rate of speed where the view was obstructed in some degree, shutting out the sudden approach of a train.

CALIFORNIA, BY PRESIDENTIAL ORDER, GETS ANOTHER BIRD REFUGE.

The Tule Lake Bird Refuge, consisting of 10,300 acres of Federal Government lands in Siskiyou County, has been created by executive order of President Calvin Coolidge, according to an announcement of the Department of Agriculture. Paul G. Redington, chief of the biological survey, in commenting on the establishment of the project says it is a most important addition to the list of wild fowl refuges.

Tule Lake has long been the mecca for such wild fowl as the mallard, redhead, ruddy duck, cinnamon teal, avocets, stilts, and other shore birds. It also is a favorite wintering ground for the cackling goose, a bird that breeds on the northwest coast of Alaska.

The new refuge, which lies just south of the California-Oregon line, will supplement the Clear Lake Refuge in California just east of Tule Lake, and the recently established Upper Klamath Refuge on the west shore of Klamath Lake in Oregon.

Toll Eliminated—One of the last toll roads in California has ceased to be a revenue producer, the Delta-Trinity Center toll road, built in 1902, having been purchased by Shasta and Trinity Counties.

For History's Sake—At San Diego City, there has been incorporated the Historical Foundation of California, formed to enrich and to perpetuate knowledge of the state's history.

School Bonds—Ventura City is to have a junior high-school, $405,000 bonds having been voted for that purpose.

PIERRE'S CHRISTMAS EVE

Thomas R. Jones

PIERRE, AS THE NAME IMPLIES, WAS a Frenchman, the last son born in the numerous family of a peasant who lived in a village amid the vine-covered hills of the province of Burgundy, France. The father eked out a fair living for his progeny, while they were small and growing, by assiduous attention to the needs of a number of the vineyards in that wine-making section. When the children became grown and big enough to do manual labor they, one by one, had to leave the frugal home and assert themselves. It was thus that, one day, Pierre went to Le Havre and signed as a sailor aboard a ship clearing for Calcutta, India.

Pierre had never before seen the sea, but had heard tales told by those who had voyaged and he also had read stories of the raging main that had excited in him a desire to become a sailor—when it came time for him to strike out. His first voyage was uneventful, as far as life aboard the ship was concerned, but when he got a week of shore leave at Calcutta he lived like a nabob on a franc a day. With the expenditure of that sum he hired a wife and a servant, and had four meals a day with rice and curry as the menu at each. He had the amusements the city afforded every hour of the day to sojourners such as he, for a franc more. It was with sincere regret that when the wind jammer heaved anchor he had to sail and leave all this luxury and enjoyment behind.

He was next ashore in Boston, where there was little to impress a French sailor who could speak little and understand less of the English language. Then the ship cleared for San Francisco. It was to return with a cargo of hides, horns and tallow gathered at ports along the Pacific Coast south of the Golden Gate. From a Yankee sailor who filled out the crew at Boston Pierre took instruction in English so that, by the time the ship reached San Francisco he could navigate the Barbary coast of that city and not only express himself profanely, but otherwise, quite fluently in English.

In due time the ship sailed southward to load a return cargo of hides, horns and tallow, anchoring, in turn, at Monterey, Santa Barbara and San Pedro. The shipment to be loaded at San Pedro was not upon shore when the ship arrived, so there was delay waiting for the clumsily-moving caretas to bring the products from the ranchos of the interior. Time hung heavily on the crew, and to relieve the tedium the sailors were given, in turn, a day of shore leave. With the caballeros willing to let their mustangs and equipment at the rate of a peso a day, with the Indians ready to sell nuts and fruits for small sums, with the dons always ready to treat the sailors to "eats" and wine, and with the señoritas anxious to flirt the tales of jolly hours awakened in Pierre a keen desire for a day ashore. His turn came at length, and the anxiety to ride a horse, of which animal he had never been astride, was uppermost when he stepped ashore.

He was not long in hiring for the day a rather spirited animal, saddled and bridled in the regular native Californian manner. It had a Spanish bit, and he was furnished with a pair of jingling spurs fastened to his heels. Now, it is an old saying that to put a sailor upon horseback something out of the ordinary is going to happen, and it did. When Pierre touched his mount with the spurs it dashed off so suddenly and at so fast a gallop that he had to grasp the saddle pommel firmly to keep from being unseated; but when he pulled the reins, so pronto did the Spanish bit work that, had it not been for his firm hold upon the pommel, he would have been shot over the head of his mount and surely met with disaster. Soon it was a question of whether to go or to stop. Pierre decided to go, hoping that in time the horse itself would consider it time to turn around and go back home. But the mustang showed no such desire.

Thomas R. Jones, the author of this story, says it is based on facts, and that "The story shows: First, how some of the 'L'Ingots,' sent by France to mine gold, remained in California and aided in developing the vineyards. Second, how difficult it is for a man fifty years old and over to find employment. Third, the mistake the viticulturists made when they thought the Volstead Act had ruined them; grapes, then selling at $10 a ton, jumped in price to $100 a ton, and the demand from the East continues."—Editor.

vineyard. The mustang saw, too, and without being guided by Pierre at once quickened its pace toward this welcome haven. There was a water trough beneath an oak tree in the stable yard, the gate of which was open, and the now apparently jaded animal made its way there. When it stopped and began to drink its fill, Pierre took advantage of this first stop of the day to get off. Upon the ground, he found his sea legs were stiff and sore, after the day in the saddle. It was with great difficulty he walked toward the house, where he was greeted by a couple of barking dogs, which had evidently been awakened from an afternoon siesta, and a Frenchman who had passed the prime of life and was becoming adipose. Taking one look at Pierre and recognizing a fellow countryman, he rushed forward and gave him a reception equal to that a long-lost brother would have received. Pierre was too sore to respond in as warm a manner, but as conversation flowed for the first time since leaving France he became a Frenchman in feeling, volubility and gesture. The result of this exuberant meeting was that Pierre was taken into the house as an invited guest and his mustang stabled for the night.

It was past midnight when Monsieur Jean quit asking and Pierre ceased answering questions concerning Burgundy. Monsieur was born and reared there. He had, as one of the "L'Ingots," come to the Golden West. Soon after the discovery of gold in California an ingot weighing 100 pounds was cast in San Francisco and sent to Paris, and finally purchased by the French government. A lottery was held and sufficient tickets were sold to establish a sinking fund of $100,000, which was loaned to several thousand Frenchmen to go to the New El Dorado in search of gold. The French government expected to derive immense benefit from having a colony of its citizens in the gold mines, and also from the "L'Ingots" returning to France with a wealth of gold to distribute through French channels of trade. It did not expect any of those who went would find in the unknown land a country they would come to prefer to their own. But such was the case of Monsieur Jean.

He, with several hundred other "L'Ingots," went to Calaveras County and there, in Steep Gulch near Mokelumne Hill, found a pocket so rich with nuggets he concluded to quit—and leave the exposure to weather, water and mud which the miners underwent to others—and live in future by cultivating the soil. Learning that in California South the vine flourished and that there was a market for all the wine made there, he went to see, with the result that he purchased for a few thousand dollars the land he selected and planted a vineyard. In time he married a señorita who, while not the daughter of a don, made him a dutiful wife and was a good helpmeet. With the development of his vineyard, he had prospered. While the monsieur was not a native of that part of Burgundy whence Pierre came, both knew many of the same people and enough of the famous vineyards there to keep up a continual conversation that fatigued the madam and lasted until after midnight.

The next morning, quite stiff and sore from his ride of the day before, Pierre essayed to return to his ship. He expected to have no difficulty in doing this, for with the mustang headed homeward it would certainly travel as steadily as it had come. But, alas! Gone were his expectations when, on leading it out of the stable, the mustang was found to be foundered. Pierre, through lack of horse sense, had allowed the heated animal to drink its fill when it came to the water trough, and this was the result.

Christmas in California

(MINNA MCGARVEY.)

The smiling sun is shining in December
As brightly as in cloudless summertime;
And never frost nor snow bid us remember
'Tis Christmas, in our California clime.

The orange trees are lavish with their treasure
And offer gifts—as wise men once—three-fold:
Sweet blossom, leaf and fruit, in gracious measure—
Their way of bringing incense, myrrh and gold.

The songsters, never ceasing for a minute,
Pour forth their melody the whole year long;
The merry mocking-bird and lusty linnnet
Help swell the Christmas carols with their song.

The roses, too, display a sweet unreason,
All year they yield their beauty and perfume;
Nor ever stop to reckon time or season,
And so at Christmastide they blush and bloom.

The breezes, from the sea and mountains meeting,
Blend lightly over pepper tree and palm,
And graceful fronds reach up in happy greeting—
On Christmas morn the air is still, and calm.

And Christmas bells, from mission old, and steeple,
With joyous ringing over land and sea,
Fling out their message to a blessed people:
Rejoice, the Lord has come to make you free!

Every time Pierre attempted to pull a rein and guide the animal, it stopped; every time he touched its flanks with a spur, it would lunge forward. So Pierre decided to sit and think.

Along the dusty roads and trails, over hills and through hot vales the tireless equine moved with a jog as steady as the rolling surf along the beach. Occasionally was met a creaking caretta and a mounted caballero. While he would have been willing to stop and inquire his way, the mustang did not hesitate. Some of the people he passed waved a friendly hand and gave a smiling nod, but as he did not understand Spanish and they did not know English or French, the salutations exchanged left no impression. Mustang and man kept on going until the sun, sinking in the west behind Pierre's back, indicated the close of day. He had ridden through no towus, had not seen a place where a drink of water could be obtained, nor observed a blade of green grass growing by the wayside. Occasionally he rode by a clump of trees which indicated an arroyo that sometimes carried a stream of water. He had no idea of the distance now between himself and the ship, and began to worry about getting back.

Suddenly, like a meteor dashing into view in the sky, he saw, a distance away, a hacienda, behind which, upon rolling hills, was a large

Monsieur Jean had no horse to give him in exchange, and Pierre did not have the pesos in his pocket with which to buy another one. So, there was nothing to do but to stay where he was and await results. Monsieur was not sorry to have him remain, and during the forenoon took him over the vineyard and through the winery. He was greatly impressed with his knowledge of the vine and the making of wine, for Pierre, being familiar with the work done by his father and observing the doings in the vineyards of Burgundy, had acquired an understanding of the industry that made him an authority in many ways. This resulted in Monsieur Jean finally offering to employ him by the year, paying him, besides his board and lodging, a wage that made Pierre gasp, for he was unused to thinking in dollars and cents. Thus it unexpectedly came about that Pierre again became a "land lubber."

For many generations the ancestors of Pierre had been peasants of France. While early to bed and early to rise had been their habit, it had made them healthy but not wealthy nor unduly wise; yet, it had given them something of greater intrinsic value—contentment. No dreams of wealth or power unattainable disturbed their humble hours of rest. It was probably due to this fact that Pierre became a son of the soil and a man of toil, willing to remain as such in the years following at Monsieur Jean's hacienda. As seasons came and went he plowed and pruned, culled the bunches of luscious grapes and crushed them in the wine press, ran the juice into barrels and saw that it became the perfect claret to which Monsieur Jean proudly gave his name, and helped to roll the barrels onto the wagon by which they were hauled to and sold to the Los Angeles exporters. He gave no thought to the morrow. The urban sights and its vices had no lure for him, and he seldom went to town. Perhaps three or four times a year he went in and dropped a small "wad" into the bank of the vingt-et-un, or twenty-one, game played in the French quarter and, after he had bought some clothes, went home. He had no inclination toward matrimony. There was not room for another woman with madam in the hacienda, and his job did not pay well enough to support two, so he gave mating no thought. Thus the years went along in an even tenor and, as one after another passed, they saw Pierre unchanged in position, condition and disposition.

Unlike the American-born people, he had never been imbued with the possibility of there coming a rainy day when a financial umbrella would be a good thing to get under. Not giving such a contingency a thought, he did not provide for one. But it came, as unexpectedly as a thunder shower in June, and it was not a wet, but a dry day. When the United States went dry, Pierre went dry, too. Aside from gradually getting in the habit of daily drinking more wine than water, he acquired no bad habits, unless the inordinate smoking of cigarettes can be classed as one, but with all his virtues he saved no money.

A few years before the world war broke out both Monsieur Jean and the madam had passed away. They did not live to feel the anguish and the anxiety that would have been theirs had they lived to see monsieur's beloved France plowed, battered and bleeding, with German armies invading the soil. Their estate went to their son, Henri, to whom they gave a thorough education, ending with his graduation from the University of California and no longer being a Frenchman in habit or thought. He became in time a leading attorney of Los Angeles, with an American woman prominent in society as his wife, and kept a proprietary interest in his father's vineyard, for revenue purposes only. Occasionally he motored to the vineyard to look it over and give some fancied instructions to Pierre, who listened, and obeyed them if he felt so inclined. Henri appeared to be most interested in the growth of an expanding town a few miles away that was enhancing the value of land in that section, and was contemplating the probability of subdividing his land at some future day. When the Volstead act went into effect Henri threw up his hands and, with an expressive expletive, quit the wine industry before the government officials made him do so. After surreptitiously disposing of the wine in his cellar he disposed of Pierre and the other help by discharging them, and leased the vineyard to a neighboring vineyardist.

Thus it came about that, one day soon afterward, Pierre was seen in Los Angeles looking for a job. He had for some years held in abeyance a desire to be a locomotive fireman. Having frequently seen that employe sitting upon his seat in the locomotive cab nonchalantly moving the lever that sprayed the firebox with oil, he had formed an idea that was all a fireman

Questioning not, nor when, nor how;
But knowing that He filleth up
Forever full, our earthly cup.

I worship God in morning light,
I worship Him at noon and night;
I worship God in every breath
Which I inhale from birth to death.
I worship God as part of me,
Who asketh not for bended knee;
Neither for our long drawn prayers
Which we vend out like huckster's wares.
I pray to God in holy thought
And worthy deeds, nor make them fraught
With mummeries of form.

Some men would take their God by storm,
With golden words and phrases sweet,
Or list of wants which they repeat
At morn, at night, in doleful way.
God knows our wants each hour, each day,
And granteth them, if we but strive
To make ourselves with truth alive.

I worship God through day and night,
In doing what He deemeth right.
I worship Him in every sin; had to do. Without having any doubt but that the job could be had for the asking, he concluded to apply for it. He went to the master mechanic's office in the Southern Pacific shops and made application to the employment clerk for the position. Here he received his first jolt, being informed that applicants for such jobs must be under 25 years of age. The affable clerk advised him to get a job in the car-repair department, and also volunteered the information that a number of "Johnny Crapeaus" were working there.

Somewhat crestfallen, Pierre hunted up the foreman's office in the car-repair yard and applied for employment. Here he got his second jolt, being told that on account of the pension rule, which retires under pay employes who reached the limit age or became disabled while in the performance of duty, no new employes were taken on over 45 years of age. The information was volunteered, however, that he might find temporary work in the car-cleaning

For it, as well, doth help me win
The spotless life I hope to gain
Through worship of His holy name.

When we do sin, there is no loss
If we but cast away the dross
And keep the gold which doth remain
In payment for our oft time pain.
The crucible doth wake the gold
Purified, by an hundred fold;
So, when my sins are crucified
Then all my life is glorified.

I worship God in mirth and song,
I worship him in smiting wrong,
And all its evil deeds efface,
By putting right within its place.
I worship Him in daily work,
I worship Him through clouds and murk
As well as in the sunshine bright.
I hold it true that darkest night
And blackest cloud must pass away,
Through coming of some brighter day.
I worship God in every deed;
Because I know He fills each need
My life may feel, and giveth me
His care, in each extremity.
I worship Him, because I know
All things I have to Him I owe.

department, where employment was given without enrolling a man as a permanent employe and one entitled to a pension. Before going there to ask for a job, he returned to his room and, feeling the need of something stimulating to restore his discomfited feelings to normalcy, imbibed nearly a whole of one of the several bottles of wine appropriated from Henri's cellar.

Shortly afterward he went to the office of the car cleaners' foreman, where he had to meet that employing autocrat face to face. Hardly had he spoken all the words necessary to make known his want than the clerk began to shake his head. Inhaling a whiff of Pierre's breath, he silently asked the question of himself: "Where did he get it?" Then Pierre received the astounding information that the railroad company has a "Rule G" that bars from employment any man who drinks intoxicating liquor. "Therefore, your name is Dennis," said the clerk. "It ees not," indignantly replied Pierre, "it ees Pierre." "All the same," was the response, "you can't get a job here." Then Pierre began an endless search elsewhere for employment, but met the insurmountable age limit almost everywhere he applied. Being originally a sailor, he was too far inland for that to be of any advantage to him, and having been a vineyardist was no better, for that occupation was in the discard. As he was inexperienced in all vocations around him, he could specialize in none. In a number of places he was first asked if he could run an automobile and, as he had never even ridden in one, his answer in the negative turned him down.

Then another difficulty developed. For years, Pierre, monsieur and madam had conversed only in French. It was the language of the hacienda, just as it was the court language of the royalty of Europe. The result was, that as Pierre had not kept in touch with the changes brought about by the introduction of the automobile, the telephone, the electric inventions, the moving picture, the world war and the number of other modern innovations affecting the idioms of the time, he had let his imperfect knowledge of the English language slip far away from him and he now found himself turned away in a number of places on account of not speaking understandable English. Another thing insurmountable developed also. In the years spent at the hacienda he had taken no interest in the government. He had never thought to get naturalized, and consequently had never voted, nor did he know who was the mayor of the city. Had he been an American citizen, the French political boss could have landed him in the street-cleaning department or secured for him some other employment. So, Pierre was really a man without a job and without a country.

After many rebuffs, he finally landed a job as the general cleaner-up of a garage. His multifarious duties might be summed up as designating him an auto-wiper. His employer finding

AN OLD NATIVE SON DIAMOND JUBILEE YEAR

AWAY back in 1868, during the pioneer days of California, the great philanthropist, Leland Stanford, who later founded and endowed Stanford University, organized the Pacific Mutual Life Insurance Company of California.

He did his work well, for during all these sixty years this great home company has prospered and continuously led every other life insurance company west of the Rockies. Today it is recognized as a national institution, doing business in forty-five states.

Its rapidly increasing assets are over $130,000,000 and its life insurance exceeds $667,000,000. It has paid to its living policy holders and to the beneficiaries of deceased patrons $146,000,000.

In Southern California alone it has more than 50,000 policies in force—positive evidence of the confidence placed in this company throughout its home territory. Its $7,000,000 Home Office Building at Sixth, Grand and Olive streets, is a lasting monument to the Company's progress and stability.

him willing to stay in the garage night and day, provided a cot for him to sleep upon in a rear room; thereby he got lodging free. While the wage was small and hardly more than fed and clothed him, he was content to stay, and ceased to look for anything that would pay better. With the coming of the October rains, however, the automobile tourist travel disappeared and the local joy riding fell off, so that Pierre's job became a sinecure and as such was finally abolished.

He tried ineffectually for a few days to find another place and then, discouraged, gave up the effort. He spent the sunny days sitting in the Old Plaza or Pershing Square. The rainy days found him in the City Library absorbed, apparently, in reading a newspaper or periodical from which, had he been required to do so, he could not have correctly read a sentence. Some times he sat in the lobby of a cheap hotel, and finally started going to the Salvation Army barracks. Not being a singing, shouting soldier nor a fat contributor to the passing tambourine, however, he was more tolerated than welcomed. Thus did Pierre live a frugal and a placid life, without either a job finding him or he finding a job, until the morning of Christmas Eve.

He arose from his garage cot later than usual that morning, because it was cold and foggy, washed his hands and face from a faucet flow and, after combing his still-full head of gray hair, donned his old derby hat and sauntered out upon the street. Stopping at a corner to take account of his financial condition, he found he had seventy cents standing between the present time and that when he would be broke. To conserve his diminishing resources, he concluded he would eat but one meal this day and that would be late in the afternoon. He could then fast until the hour for the Salvation Army to serve the annual Christmas dinner to the homeless and needy, which had been publicly announced for several days. Of course, the public contributed the funds, but the Army, with unselfish devotion to the down-and-outer, were enthusiastically at work preparing the feast, and Pierre was ready for it. He figured that by doing all this he might get into the new year in a solvent condition and then his luck would change, for it could not possibly get worse.

Aimlessly walking down the street he glanced into a market and saw piled high upon a stand bunches of edible carrots. Now, a Frenchman and a carrot are so closely related they could call themselves first cousins. When Pierre, as he looked at them, remembered the time when, in his boyhood days, he had with gusto eaten them raw, he concluded to buy a bunch for five cents and breakfast on the carrots. As he could not afford meat, he might as well become a vegetarian. Entering the market to make the purchase, he was suddenly confronted by an Italian vegetable vendor who was fat, sleek, round of face, double-chinned and swarthy.

"You wanta job?" asked he of Pierre. "Oui, oui," was the answer. "You comma here," said Joe, and he led the way to his stand. Joe made a specialty of celery for the Christmas trade. The bunches of this popular succulent vegetable were piled high, like a cord of wood. "You getta over there," said Joe, pointing to a place behind a table upon which was a pile of old newspapers and a ball of twine. "I sella, you wrappa," said he, and showing Pierre how, business commenced. It was brisk, both seller and wrapper having all they could attend to during the morning hours and Pierre, being so busily occupied, forgot he had had no breakfast. Occasionally a stem fell from a bunch of celery and between wrappings Pierre nibbled at it so

WHY LAUGH?

Elizabeth Cole

"HO! HO! HO! HA! HA! HA!" shouted two Negro porters in a re-echoing city station. They punched each other, slapped their sides and went off into spasms of laughter. They caught their respective breaths and then went off again. They started to speak, and doubled up. Pretty soon everybody around them was laughing. With no idea of what the joke was, old men and children, bored society women and tired businessmen all caught the infection and while their audience was not as noisy in its merriment, everybody was put into a happy mood.

That was a good example of the truth of the saying, "Laugh and the world laughs with you."

Man has been given the privilege of laughing. Animals never laugh. Even the donkey that says "hee haw" is really not laughing, and grins on animals' faces do not mean that they are enjoying a joke. Animals are really a serious lot. Children laugh easily. The mirth of school boys and girls, so often irritatingly silly to grown-ups, is really a sign of health. Wholesome giggling goes with natural youth. Why should we feel that, as we grow older, we should laugh less? Environment often makes a difference and the habit of laughing usually runs in families. Why is it a good habit? Why should we not derive as much benefit as possible from this privilege of enjoying laughter?

We know that laughter is mentally good for us. The relaxation, the lifting of a temporary depression, the realization that we are perhaps not so badly off—we have all experienced mental stimulation from a good laugh. We all take ourselves too seriously sometimes and we all, at times, have felt positively ill through concentrating on a seeming ailment. Just turn the mind onto something funny and laughter banishes those ingrowing worries.

We have not heard so much about the physical benefits of laughter—but they are present. An eminent physician has said, "Laughter affects the large and most important organs of the body in such a way as to modify their functions in the direction of the stimulation of it. As a result laughter has a distinct place in the realm of the maintenance of health. Those who laugh the most are the ones that live the longest and enjoy the best health." The organs more or less rest upon each other. The heart and lungs rest upon the diaphragm. As we grow older we do not jump about much and give these organs exercise enough. Laughter serves as exercise for them. They need the jerky vibration that comes with the convulsive movements of the diaphragm during a good hearty laugh.

The heart is stimulated by laughter. This blood-pumping organ needs muscular exercise in order to do its work adequately. The circulation becomes more active, and while it used to be an old-fashioned idea that the heart should receive little physical interference we now know that it will stand a great deal. It is meant to be stimulated by the various activities of the body. A lazy heart is very bad.

We all know, too, that the liver needs to be "shaken up" at frequent intervals. Bile is manufactured in the liver and it must be kept flowing freely. Bile is a necessary aid in the digestion of food. A sluggish liver will not manufacture a sufficient flow and digestion will not be efficient. That is why it is good to laugh during and after meal time. The stomach, the pancreas, the spleen and the intestines also are benefited by the up-and-down movements of the diaphragm to stir them up. Laughter improves the digestion and often is an excellent substitute for laxative medicines.

The lungs, however, are the organs most affected by laughter. Large drafts of air are drawn in and out of the lungs during the process and in that way they receive exercise. The chest is also expanded, increasing the air content, sometimes by one-half more than normal. Gusts of laughter increase the intaking of breaths. That is why people with tuberculosis—who must rest their lungs in order for them to heal—are not advised to breathe too deeply nor to indulge in hearty laughter.

Laughter, then, has a real therapeutic value. It must be remembered, however, that laughter alone will not cure organic sickness. You cannot laugh off germs. The laughter that comes from within is the best tonic in the world, and that can come only when a person has no submerged worries.

In order to be sure of your health why not let your doctor decide? Have a physical examination periodically and be sure of your health. It is even better to know a bitter truth, and have a chance to rectify matters, than to stew and fret about the unknown. The worrying mind can never derive the proper benefit from a good, hearty laugh.

To teach the need for periodic physical examination in order to do away with worrying minds is one of the ways the National Tuberculosis Association and its affiliated associations believe they can get the best of tuberculosis. They conduct their annual sale of Christmas seals in December.

that, by the time noon came and there was a lull in business, he felt no pangs of hunger.

Joe went to luncheon, leaving a neighboring vendor in charge of the stand, and on his return he reciprocated. Feeling fine from the good business done and the good feed he must have partaken of, he gave Pierre a surveying look and then asked: "You lika eata somding?" Before the surprised Pierre could reply, Joe handed him a quarter, saying, "You go downa Pete's on Springa street and getta some macaron." Pierre took the quarter and, going down Third street, reached Spring, but then realized Joe had not given sufficiently definite directions for him to find Pete's place, so he entered the first cafeteria he came to. Looking over the different viands, he selected a portion of corned beef and cabbage, a boiled potato and a cup of coffee, all for twenty-five cents.

Now, there is one thing a Frenchman is partial to, and that is a cup of coffee, but he wants it clean. When Pierre reached the table he found a buzzing, struggling fly was meeting a drowning death upon the surface of his cup of coffee. At sight of it, his appetite departed. Taking the tray back to the maiden at the feed counter, he mutely pointed to the drowning fly and just as mutely she handed back his quarter, for it would not do to let, by any argument, the other patrons know there was a predatory fly in the place. Pierre walked out.

THE BIG CITY THAT KNOWS HOW

GOOD NEWS

CONSTRUCTION WORK ON THE Native Daughter Home has been completed, furniture and other necessities are now being purchased and installed, and the home will be formally dedicated some time in January 1929. This will be cheerful news for members of the Order of Native Daughters of the Golden West throughout the state, who have watched with pride the various necessary steps incidental to the undertaking.

It will be good news, too, to hear that responses to the "Loyalty Pledge" are being received in satisfactory numbers, and a goodly sum is already in the fund for liquidating the indebtedness. Those who have visited the Home unanimously declare that it exceeds, in every way, their fondest expectations.

The first floor of the structure is given over to offices, including quarters for the Grand Secretary, and an assembly-room. The second floor has a social-hall and a dining-room, connected by a wide hall; these rooms are built around a 9x9 court, and may be opened into one large room. The third floor is given over to sleeping-rooms.

The stenciling in the Home is very beautiful; it was contributed by Past Grand President Dr. Mariana Bertola, who for years has been a

BASKETBALL LEAGUE.

The Native Sons of the Golden West Basketball League of the San Francisco Parlors is drawing to a close, after a fast and very hard-fought series of games. In the American division, Pacific Parlor No. 10, after finishing at the tail end in the league last year, shows much improvement, and is in first place, with Stanford Parlor No. 76, Rincon Parlor No. 72 and San Francisco Parlor No. 49 tied for second place.

In the National division, Golden Gate Parlor No. 29, winner of last year's league, is in the lead, with Twin Peaks Parlor No. 214 and Utopia Parlor No. 270 tied for second place. If Golden Gate wins its last game, it means the championship of the National division, and it will then meet Pacific, certain to be the winner of the American division, in a series of three games to decide the championship of the league. Following is the standing of the teams, to November 20:

GRIZZLY BEAR CLUB HOST.

Grand President James A. Wilson and other grand officers of the Order of Native Sons of the Golden West affiliated with the San Francisco Parlors were guests of the Grizzly Bear Club November 23. There was a large attendance, and a splendid program was presented.

Henry G. W. Dinkelspiel, president of the club, presided, and in addition to him the principal speakers were Grand President James A. Wilson, Grand Third Vice-president Dr. Frank I. Gonzalez, Grand Trustees J. Hartley Russell, Harmon D. Skillin and Charles A. Koenig, and Past Grand President Lewis F. Byington.

The Grizzly Bear Club was organized several years ago in San Francisco to provide a central meeting place for members of the Order. Club-rooms and a library were established upon the eighth floor of Native Sons Building, 414 Mason street, and today the club is the equal of any in the city. All members of the Order are invited to make use of the club, a special invitation being extended those residing outside San Francisco.

CHAMPIONSHIP FOOTBALL GAME.

December 9, at Kezar Stadium, South San Francisco Parlor No. 157 N.S.G.W. and Twin Peaks Parlor No. 214 N.S.G.W. will stage their annual championship football game. Last year Twin Peaks won the championship after a fast and furious battle, but the South boys expect to turn the tables this year and even up the count. Both teams are composed of former high-school and junior-college stars, and a fast and well-played game is bound to result when the teams meet.

Much interest is being shown by the members of both Parlors. Rooting sections have been formed and cheer leaders picked, to lead the rooting for their respective teams. The drum corps of both Parlors will turn out, and between halves will stage a competitive drill.

THANKS.

Orinda Parlor No. 56 N.D.G.W. had its annual bazaar October 26 and wishes to express thanks to all those whose co-operation contributed to its success. Mae Joseph Shea, the chairman, was prevented by illness from enjoying the result of her efforts, and her mind was relieved by Orinda Gunther Giannini, the chairman pro tem.

One-third of the proceeds from the bazaar will be devoted to the Native Daughter Home, which Orinda supports a hundred percent. Grand President Dr. Louise C. Heilbron officially visited the Parlor November 23.

BENEFIT DINNER.

Members of Castro Parlor No. 178 N.D.G.W. gathered at dinner October 25, the proceeds of which went toward liquidating the mortgage on the Native Daughter Home. Mrs. Griffith was the chairman.

The members came in costume, and much amusement was caused by the variegated array. The table was decorated in yellow and black, in keeping with the Hallowe'en spirit. The event was a pronounced success, both socially and financially, and a goodly sum, about $400, was raised for the fund.

The bazaar-dance of November 10 was enjoyed by many members and their friends. The feature of the evening was the awarding of a hope-chest to a Mr. Thompson.

VISITORS SATISFIED.

PROTECTING OAK TREES.

There are several insects that prey on the oak trees of the state, many of them defoliating the trees. Protection, of course, is through spraying, and if the beautiful trees that grace all parts of the state are to be maintained under conditions of present-day civilization and foreign pests that have been introduced, they must be sprayed. Arsenate of lead is the remedy, and it should be applied when the pests work. Once a year, in the spring, may be safe; but twice a year, spring and fall, will be safer.

REDDING—THE TWENTY-FIFTH institution anniversary of Hiawatha Parlor No. 140 was fittingly observed November 14. Christine Sutherland-Glover, the only charter member in attendance, was the honor guest. Eight past presidents, with Frances Harrington presiding, occupied the official chairs. Visitors from Shasta, Red Bluff and Anderson were present.

Behind Mrs. Glover's seat of honor burned twenty-five candles, symbolizing the Parlor's years of achievements. While the light from these candles provided the room's only illumination, Marie Wolf, accompanied by Elsie Kelly, sang "Memories." Secretary Edna Saygrover read congratulatory messages from the absent charter members and past presidents and related the history of No. 140.

As remembrances, Berendos No. 23 of Red Bluff sent an exquisite wreath of silver leaves, and Lassen View No. 98 of Shasta a lavish basket of yellow chrysanthemums. The hall, and the table at which a banquet was served at the conclusion of the meeting, were decorated in holly, ferns and chrysanthemums. Of the group that founded Hiawatha, the following still maintain their membership: Agnes McNeill, Villa Paulsen, Jessie Rutherford-Nichols, Stella Collins, Christine Sutherland-Glover and Eva Young.

Homeless Children Work Commended.

Fresno—Grand President Dr. Louise C. Heilbron, accompanied by Grand Trustee May F. Givens, officially visited Fresno No. 187 October 26. At a banquet preceding the meeting each course represented something fraternal and Californian. The floral decorations carried out the Order's colors, and novel menu and place cards were presented the many in attendance. The meeting-place was decorated in ferns, and flowers of red, white and yellow shades, and a class of candidates were initiated, the Parlor officers exemplifying the ritual.

Dr. Heilbron spoke on the various activities of the Order and commended the local Parlor for its wonderful homeless children work. Lois Roach sang "I Love You, California." Other speakers were Grand Trustee May Givens, District Deputies Edith Garrett and Elvira Soares, President Katherine Kenny of Madera No. 244, Lillian Beguhl, Frances Oliver and President Lena Vierra of Fresno. The latter, in the course of her remarks, presented remembrances on behalf of No. 187 to Grand President Heilbron, Grand Trustee Givens and District Deputy Garrett.

November 9 the Parlor sponsored a chicken dinner. Millie Burton being chairman of the committee in charge. Awards in a grocery contest were announced by Chairman Maude Crosby. Captains Harriet Boust and Maude Crosby announced a large class of candidates will soon be ready for initiation into the Parlor.

Untiring Efforts Bring Success.

Santa Ana—Quite the most pleasurable of Santa Ana No. 235's recent social functions was the afternoon card party at the Ebell clubhouse, attended by over 100. Quantities of flowers in a riot of brilliant colors gave added charm to the setting. As an entertainment feature D.D.G.P. Lois A. Johnson, accompanied by Ruth Anderson, gave a program of vocal selections. Attractive prizes were awarded Mms. M. A. Yarnell, L. S. Carpenter, John Connell, Leo Rauenzhan, Lyle Anderson and Raymond Marsile. Delicious refreshments were served by the following committee, whose untiring efforts made of the event a complete success: Mms. Walter Hickey, George Seba, George Dickinson, Henry Gerken, Mamie Schonberg, W. A. West, W. D. Doll and Kenneth Horton.

The thimble club of the Parlor has been quite busy, having finished a number of articles for the homeless children, as well as for a bazaar to be sponsored in the near future. Recently Mrs. Henry Gerken was hostess at an all-day session at her home.

Memory Garden Suggestion Approved.

Chico—Grand President Dr. Louise C. Heilbron paid an official visit to Annie K. Bidwell No. 168 November 8. Other visitors included Grand Vice-president Esther Sullivan, Grand Trustee Sadie Brainard, Supervising Deputy Agnes Meade, District Deputy Irene Lund and representatives of Gold of Ophir, Joaquin and Eschscholtzia Parlors. During the impressive initiation of two candidates Catherine Oliver sang "I Love You, California."

Grand President Heilbron gave an interesting talk on the new Native Daughter Home, at the dedication of which each Parlor is to answer roll-call. At her suggestion, the Parlor voted to plant and maintain a memory garden of old-fashioned flowers, in honor of California's Pioneer Mothers.

At the banquet which concluded the meeting the tables were artistically adorned with autumn leaves and chrysanthemums, the decorations being arranged by Anna Stockstill. At each place was a colorful card carrying the Thanksgiving motif and a humorous verse. As a remembrance, the Parlor presented Dr. Heilbron with a picture of Chico's historic Hooker oak. The banquet committee was composed of Mms. Alice Bass

Arrivals of the '50s Among Guests.

Red Bluff—Berendos No. 23's annual reception to the Pioneers brought together nineteen of the old-timers October 27, among them being the following, who arrived in California in the years designated: Mrs. J. M. Howell (1852), Mrs. Helen Eby, Mrs. Annie Lovett and Mrs. F. M. Wilson (1855), J. M. Duncan and J. B. South (1856), J. M. Howell (1859).

A program of musical numbers was interspersed with addresses by Past Grand President Olive Bedford-Matlock, who extended the Parlor's greetings; Judge H. S. Gans, who related early-day history of Tehama County, and President Era Frame of the Parlor. Many of the guests gave accounts of early-day activities in the state.

Brides Honored.

Oakland—Fruitvale No. 177 paid honor October 19 to five members who had recently become brides. Young and old became younger, as they frolicked in tune with the happy occasion. After the games and cards provided for the more sedate (who were not present), refreshments were served in the banquet hall, where the young matrons were toasted and presented with gifts.

War Heroes Honored.

San Luis Obispo—Honoring those from San Luis Obispo County who sacrificed their lives in the world war, San Luisita No. 108 placed November 7 a bronze plaque in the new high-school. The plaque, surmounted by a silk flag of the United States of America, reads:

"In memory of those from San Luis Obispo County who sacrificed their lives in the world war. Placed by San Luisita Parlor No. 108 Native Daughters of the Golden West." The committee in charge of securing the plaque consisted of Mms. N. F. Schlicht (chairman), Callie M. John and C. C. Hunsaker.

Grand President Heads Parade.

Napa—In honor of Grand President Dr. Louise C. Heilbron, Eschol No. 16 had a large and enthusiastic meeting October 22. Previous to the gathering a turkey supper was served at tables beautifully decorated for the Halloween season. "Ramona" was sung and a greeting from Alameda County was received over the radio. Escorted by the drum and bugle corps of Napa No. 62 N.S.G.W. and headed by Dr. Heilbron and President Anne Bartels, the members paraded to Native Sons Hall.

Ten candidates were initiated, and addresses were made by Grand President Heilbron and other visitors, among whom were D.D.G.P. Rose Marie Cobb and large delegations from Vallejo, Sonoma, Petaluma and Sacramento. Dr. Heilbron was presented with a pair of pretty candlesticks. November 26 Eschol gave a card party for the benefit of the homeless children.

Annual Bazaar.

San Jose—The thirty-first institution anniversary of Vendome No. 100 was celebrated on an elaborate scale November 14. Past Grand President Mamie Pierce-Carmichael, the general chairman, was assisted by the past presidents' club. There was a very large attendance. At 6:45 dinner was served, during which community singing—led by Clara Gairaud, with Tillie Brohaska at the piano,—was enjoyed. President Fay Withycombe presided at the meeting, at the conclusion of which a program of stunts, with

Write for pamphlet, "How to Make Coffee"

Mrs. Lotta Koppel as chairman, was enjoyed November 21 nine candidates were initiated. The past presidents' club had a delightful meeting October 31, the hostesses being Anna Dougherty and Beldon Gallagher. With Sadie Howell as chairman, an afternoon card party was held November 21.

All Natives and their friends in and around Santa Clara County are invited to attend Vendome's annual bazaar December 13. Christmas novelties and handwork will be offered at bargain prices. Cards will be provided in the afternoon, a hot supper will be served, and a program will be presented in the evening. Ella Graham, Lotta Koppel and Tillie Brahaska compose the committee in charge. The attendance and membership contest held by the Parlor was a grand success. It served to make the members better acquainted, and brought inquiries from other Parlors. During its progress a great deal of worthy talent was discovered. Early in 1929 No. 100 will stage a minstrel or novelty show.

The annual dancing party of the four local Parlors—San Jose No. 81 and Vendome No. 100 N.D.G.W., San Jose No. 22 and Observatory No. 177 N.S.G.W.—for the benefit of the homeless children will be held December 1, and promises to be a big success. To swell the receipts a beautiful bed set will be disposed of.

Anniversary Banquet.

Oroville—Butte County Past Presidents Association No. 5 celebrated its first institution anniversary with a banquet November 1. A birthday cake with a golden candle formed the centerpiece of the table decorations, which were completed with french marigolds and smilax. Ellice LaVoy cut the cake.

Irene Lund, on behalf of Sherman Relief Corps, presented the association with a beautiful gavel, and Past President Myrtle Bernardo presented the officers' charges mounted in leather cases. The next meeting of the association will be December 7, at the home of Mabel K. Richards, in Chico.

200 Served With Dinner.

Fullerton—After the November 1 Meeting of Grace No. 242, Second Vice-president Callie Sparks invited the members to help celebrate her mother's birthday. A beautiful birthday cake and delightful refreshments were served. November 7 a plunkett dinner was provided for 200 and, much to the Parlor's delight, was a financial success. A hawaiian dinner preceded the November 15 meeting. The recent waffle luncheon and card party proved very successful.

"Miner's Pot Luck."

Lincoln—Placer No. 138 entertained the Pioneers at a dinner October 27. The menu, a "Miner's Pot Luck," consisted of high-grade olives, Fort Trojan onions, Hungry Hollow pickles, humsquizze'em a la '49 with Virginia Town murrhys, Auburn Ravine nuggets, raffle biscuits, Ophir tailings, Gold Hill slugs, Marshall's delight en tasse. The decorations carried out the spirit of the days of '49. Bertha Landis was the toastmistress and responses were made by guests and members of the Parlor.

Benefit Great Success.

Hollister—Hallowe'en was fittingly observed by Copa de Oro No. 105 with a most pleasingly planned party. The hall was decorated with masses of corn stalks from which peeped myriads of jack-o-lanterns. Baskets of autumn-hued flowers were everywhere in evidence. Peppy games added zest to the occasion and shouts of laughter attested to the happy spirit of the participants. Seasonable refreshments were served at tables adorned with Hallowe'en colors.

The annual benefit for the homeless kiddies was an event of early November. A splendid basket of groceries was disposed of, the coveted assortment being captured by Mollie Kennedy, a charter member of the Parlor. At bridge, prizes were awarded Florence McNamara and George T. Wright, and rewards for high scores in 500 fell to Dr. Edythe Lawson and F. S. Faria. H. R. Rich became the pleased possessor of a most acceptable door prize. The party was a great success, socially and financially, $200 having been forwarded to the Central Committee to use in its commendable work. Past President Mathilda Wright and her able committee deserve hearty praise for the success of the affair.

Twenty-third Anniversary.

Pittsburg—Stirling No. 146 celebrated the twenty-third anniversary of its institution with a banquet November 7. President Minnie Marcelli presided, and among those in attendance were Hannah McVay, Annie Woodhouse and

A BIT O' FARMING

PREPARED EXPRESSLY FOR THE GRIZZLY BEAR BY M. H. ELLIS

AMERICAN AGRICULTURE AWAITS the advent of the new federal administration and the promises of farm relief with a great deal of interest. Just what farm relief is, or how it can be accomplished, has puzzled many minds and brought about wide differences of opinion. There is a question whether prosperity can be legislated into agriculture; indeed, the president-elect has intimated his doubts as to this. But there are a lot of things that can be done to aid agriculture, and it is to be hoped that some of these may be accomplished.

The chief competitor of California fruits is not the grower of some other state producing the same commodity; but the fruits that are brought in from the tropics, where labor and growing costs are cheap, under a tariff that permits competition unfair to the American grower. As long as this policy is continued, the California fruit grower, at least, stands in need of relief.

But of course there are problems other than those of the California grower, albeit these are more present and consequently more important to this state. A board composed of able men, whose interest in agriculture is real, should and could produce results that will benefit not only this state but all the other states.

The American farmer has been given a promise, and that promise should be kept. Agriculture deserves just and fair treatment, and the farmers of the nation should see to it that, insofar as it is possible, the Federal Government renders that aid to agriculture to which agriculture is entitled.

FEEDING TURKEY HENS.

With the bulk of the turkey crop turned off, and at profitable prices, there is the usual resultant movement to secure breeding stock for next year. Hens that are carried through the winter for eggs next spring must be fed well, or they will disappoint. First of all, there should be plenty of range, and the feed should not be so heavy that they will not use it. Keep them coming along well, but far from fat. Greens are necessary, of course; good green alfalfa leaves can be substituted. Milk is a fine feed, and if not available some meat must be fed, hogs being scarce at this season. Oyster shell, grit and ground bone are needed; also dry mash in a hopper, and grain once a day, about what the birds will clean up nicely. As laying time approaches, the feed may be increased slightly.

LIME-SULPHUR FOR BORERS.

Watch for the peach twig borer. Usually it can be found at the crotch of branches not more than two inches in diameter, most often from the past season's growth. Brownish colored borings upon the surface of the bark are evidence of the presence of the pest, and usually it is found more upon young trees than old, though quite often upon both. If the borer is present, be sure to spray with lime-sulphur next spring. The moths can be caught then, and the spraying must be thorough.

CROWN GALL OF GRAPES.

When the vineyardist goes through his vines this winter, pruning and giving careful scrutiny to them, he may notice crown gall—large knotty growths extending from just below the surface of the soil to the arms of the vines. Bacterial infection is the cause, and usually the trouble can be traced to infection of pruning wounds, sucker stubs or cultivation wounds. The treatment is to cut out the gall and paint with Bordeaux paste. Many times it is not worth while, especially in old vines. Care in pruning, cutting suckers and in cultivating is the preventive, and where a wound is inflicted near the surface of the ground it should be disinfected. Prevention, as the proverb goes, is worth far more than cure.

CITRUS TREE GUMMING.

Where citrus trees begin to gum, cut out the bark around the gum back to the healthy tissue. No attention need be paid to the discoloration of the wood, however. Wash the wound with corrosive sublimate, one to five hundred, and when it is dry apply a good waterproof paint. Or after the cutting, merely apply Bordeaux paste. Mud and water standing around the tree often cause gumming, and of course this should be remedied. A Bordeaux whitewash will aid in preventing the trouble. Give attention to the trouble as soon as it is noticed, for this, as most other diseases, is best controlled in the early stages.

WHITEWASH THE TREES.

Sunburn, or "2 o'clock," is caused more often from the effect of heat from the sun in the winter than in the summer. It is a result of quick temperature change, and when the nights are frosty or freezing and the days bright and sunny the temperature in the bark ranges from 32 degrees to above 100. At about 2 o'clock in the afternoon a thermometer inserted in the bark will register a heat that will surprise the uninitiated, for the bark absorbs the heat from the sun's rays readily. It will not be as hot as in summer, but it must be remembered that the nights are far colder than in summer and that there are no leaves at all for protection. Whitewash is the preventive, and it should be applied at once. The white reflects the heat, and much less of it is absorbed. The temperature range is cut by half, and not only sunburn but resultant troubles are avoided. The fall or early winter whitewash is more important than that of spring or summer.

PRUNING DECIDUOUS FRUITS.

Deciduous fruits, grapes and berries may be pruned now in most parts of the state, although there is no hurry at all. However, the work has to be done, and the sooner done the more sure the orchardist is that late rains, sickness or some other trouble will not interfere. As soon as the leaves have fallen, indicating that the tree is dormant, the pruning may start.

In the southern part of the state it is particularly necessary to be sure of dormancy. Trees keep on growing, and the practice of pruning before the leaves all are off is apt to induce late fall growth. Delayed foliation in the spring may result, and consequent heavy damage to the orchard. In the southern counties be sure to wait until the leaves have fallen to give the tree a chance to become fully dormant as naturally as possible. This rule is a good one to follow elsewhere, as well. There is nothing gained by pruning while the leaves are upon the trees; the work is more difficult and there always is danger.

WATERPROOFING SHOES.

Winter brings rains and, on the farm many times, wet feet. It is not always convenient to have rubber boots at hand; nor indeed are they always necessary. However, shoes worn about the farm may easily be made proof against dampness, and indeed against water, unless the wearer wades or stands in it. Eight parts of petrolatum to one of beeswax is a good formula for waterproofing; another is twelve ounces of tallow to four of cod oil; still another is natural wool grease eight ounces, petrolatum four ounces and paraffin wax two ounces. Melt the ingredients and mix, applying warm but not hot. Soak the soles; but if rubber heels are used do not get them into the mixture. There won't be much danger of wet feet if one of these formulas is used.

CARE OF STRAWBERRY PLANTS.

In the general cleanup that is so necessary in the fall and early winter, the strawberry patch should not be overlooked. Rake the vines to get rid of dead leaves and trash, and burn the refuse to make sure no insect pests are being given shelter for the winter. You may save trouble from red spider or leaf spot diseases by this. Give the plants a good dormant spray of 5 percent lime-sulphur; and if there has been any serious difficulty from leaf spot, a February spray of Bordeaux will be necessary. The patch then should have an application of clean, well-rotted manure; and you will be assured of good performance in the coming season.

FARM FLOCK OF SHEEP.

There are few farms of any considerable size that cannot support a few sheep; even small acreages have grass and weeds enough to keep a ewe or two. The sheep are splendid cultivators, and they are not to be despised as aids to maintaining soil fertility. A fleece in the spring and another in the fall, together with a lamb or two every year, make the sheep not only not an expense but a means of profit. They will keep weeds down in fence corners and clean irrigation ditches where cultivation by other means is costly. It makes little difference as to the breed, but it does make a difference whether they are well bred. There is money in sheep, the range is disappearing, and the farm flock is soon to be an important economic factor in agriculture.

BURN THE BEAN WEEVIL.

It is a poor practice to let bean straw lie upon the ground until spring, for it furnishes a haven for weevil that will attack the crop next year. Down in Stanislaus County an ordinance giving the horticultural commissioner authority to burn any straw found upon the ground in the spring reduced the infestation by 50 percent, while at the county borders where infestation was easy from across the line, there was no decrease in the amount of weevil. If the straw cannot be plowed under deeply, it should be burned.

COWS WITH CRACKED HOOFS.

Cracked hoofs in cows usually are the result of brittleness that may be corrected with the application of raw linseed oil. When the condition appears, however, bathe the foot in a solution of sheep dip, a tablespoonful to a pint of water. If pus is suspected, pare away the hoof along the crack until it is exposed, and disinfect with the same solution.

BLISTER MITE FALL SPRAY.

The fall spray for pear blister mite has many advantages, and relatively few disadvantages, in comparison with the spring treatment. First of all, the ground is firm and there is more assurance that the work can be done. Work left, often is never done, it is well to remember. The work usually can be done more thoroughly, and there is no danger from the mites to buds. If the trouble is severe, fall and spring sprays may both be applied. The presence of a few leaves upon the tree in the fall is no drawback; usually the leaves aid in a better distribution of the spray. The work should be done in November or early December, and there is no better time than right now.

CULL RAISINS FOR DAIRY COWS.

Ten thousand tons of raisins have been made available for feed, at prices that make them attractive for dairy feed. At $20 a ton, raisins may be fed with good profit over barley at present quotations. The raisins are best fed, however, with some barley, and of course with hay or pasture, meaning alfalfa, for grain hay would put too much carbohydrates in the ration. The University of California rates raisins as worth $22 when barley is selling at $30.

BERMUDA GRASS IN LAWNS.

Bermuda grass would make a splendid lawn, were it not for the fact that it turns brown in winter. How to rid a lawn of this pest has not been discovered; and if an all-year lawn is wanted, it must be had with Bermuda grass, once this pest appears. Probably the best method is to use the Bermuda grass for the summer lawn, and in the fall, before the weather becomes too cool, rake it up and plant clover for the winter. By spring the Bermuda grass will be back. Australian rye may be used instead. Before sowing, clip the Bermuda as close as possible, rake and clip again until it is well thinned; and after seeding encourage germination of the grass seed by sprinkling. Not entirely satisfactory, but probably the best method that has been discovered to keep the lawn green.

WATER THE WINTER GARDEN.

Many the winter garden that has been lost because its maker thought a few fall raindrops meant sufficient irrigation. Those vegetables that will grow during the winter months must have water just as during the summer. Of course, the evaporation rate is not as great, but unless the rains have been heavy and have put enough moisture into the soil to keep the plants growing, they must be irrigated. This is especially true in the case of cauliflower, cabbage and the shallow-rooted crops. Once every ten days is not too often for a thorough soaking, whether the gardener does it or whether the rain accommodates. Few home gardens have been over-irrigated.

OIL DORMANT SPRAY.

An oil emulsion spray right now will do a lot of good in the orchard. Red spider, scale, leaf rollers and caterpillars are controlled through this dormant spray, and moss and lichen also are cared for by this means. Put the material on now, whenever the spray rig can get in the orchard; and use the regular dormant strength mixture.

GET DECEMBER EGGS.

Ten eggs in December are worth as much as twenty in April, and the poultryman who really wants profits will bend every effort to get not only more eggs from his flock, but to get them when eggs are worth the most money. There are four methods to improve the winter production of the laying flock: select hens which mature early, pick those for breeding which lay best after they begin, avoid broody birds, and save those that lay well through the late summer and fall. Hatch early, so that the pullets will be in production by the time egg prices begin to ascend with the advent of the winter months.

KEEP MILK IN THE DARK.

Sunlight is nature's best remedy for many things, but it is not the best environment for milk. Milk kept in the light will at times develop a decided off-flavor, known as "cardboard" flavor, the light apparently acting as a catalyst in the oxidation of the milk fat. This process develops with rapidity in proportion to the amount of light, being greatest in direct sunlight; and it continues even after the milk is put in the dark. Milk should be kept in the dark, even when temperatures are low, to avoid this off-flavor.

CALIFORNIA'S WONDERLAND

CITY AND COUNTY

EUROPE, THROUGH CALIFORNIA EYES

(EARL LEMOINE.)

"AFTER A PLEASANT VISIT IN Strassburg we continued up the Rhine, through ever-beautiful hills and dales, past the quaint border town of Briesach, France, and arrived at Muhlhausen, a busy manufacturing city which exports many fine articles to the United States. Here it was we enjoyed one of the rare treats of the trip, for we met an old Los Angeles friend who now spends his time in this socially care free city of Eastern France. This is the Vosges Mountain district, and near by is Belfort, where a huge lion is carved in solid rock. It was executed by Bartholdi, the sculptor, who built the Statue of Liberty, and is next to the Sphinx in size. A few hours' travel brought us into Germany again, and then we proceeded across the border into Switzerland, the republic which for so many years has been neutral.

"The first important city visited was Basle, with its old Basilea of the Romans enthroned high upon the stately banks of the Rhine. It gained its independence in the middle ages, became a great seat of learning and has enjoyed international fame. The cathedral, founded by Henry II in 1010 A.D., was greatly damaged by earthquake in 1356, so was rebuilt in French Gothic. Its walls are red sandstone, and the roof is covered with green, red and white tile having the appearance of being enameled. The west gate to the city is known as Saint Gallus and is of Roman origin. Basle is truly a gem of well-preserved mediaeval architecture, having ten churches dating from the middle ages. One of the city's noble acts was the giving of aid to the old people and children of the besieged City of Strassburg during the Franco-Prussian war of 1870.

"Winding through the beautiful mountains, clad in firs and harboring herds of goats, we came to Brugg, with its ruins of a Roman theater and the castle of the Hapsburgs. The tower walls are eight feet thick. Of course, we passed through Zurich, called the Athens on the Limmat—Switzerland's most popular city. Here the Helvetians erected the Fortress of Turicum, which in 58 B.C. fell under the power of the Romans. The place acquired prominence through the monasteries of Fraumünster and Grossmünster, the latter founded by Charlemagne in 853. Passing through Talmal and Zug we arrived at Lucerne, bordering the blue-green lake of that name. It is the center of tourist travel to surrounding mountains. Ancient wooden bridges cross the Reuss. Near here, carved in a cliff, is another lion, twenty-six feet long, commemorating the Swiss Guards who fell defending the Tuileries in Paris in 1792. Here we saw also many storks, in wood and clay, perched upon roofs and chimneys.

"Passing enroute Engleberg, we came to Berne, capital of the Swiss, and the bear upon the arms and flag of the city recalled to mind the State Flag of California. It is one of the largest cities of Europe, and is situated upon a high plateau between the Jura and the Alps Mountains. Here the German tongue gives way to the French. In outward appearance, it is the same today as it was seven hundred years ago. The Alps appear to form a frame in which the beauties of Berne are displayed. No architect's fancy has been allowed to disturb the pure Louis IV Baroque style of its facades. A characteristic note is the arcades, protected from sun or rain, in which one may shop at ease. The Parliament Building is a true example of Florentine Renaissance, and the Gothic cathedral is a masterpiece of stone. On the way to Lausanne we passed through Fribourg, capital of the canton of that name. Founded in 1178 by Berthold IV, it has preserved its mediaeval beauty. The cathedral, founded in 1285, has a tower staircase with 365 steps, and a universally famous organ with 7,800 pipes, some of them thirty-two feet long, and 74 stops.

"As we drove into Lausanne a wonderful sight of the lake was unfolded. This place has an enviable reputation as a health center, and every known sport is enjoyed. From here, along the shores of Lake Geneva and through Versey, we went to Montreux, where Lord Byron wrote his masterpiece, 'The Prisoner of Chillon.' It was through this city Napoleon passed in his victorious march over the Alps. Visited the Castle of Chillon, built by the Dominican Friars over 900 years ago. We inspected it from the torture pits to the highest towers, and saw the first type of cannon, made of hard wood wrapped with bands of steel. Over half of its outside wall is built in the stone overhanging the lake, which is hundreds of feet deep and clear as crystal. My cinema was in constant use in this land of enchanted vistas.

"From Montreux we took our longest trip with one driver, spending a week of steady travel between here and Nice, France, on the Mediterranean. It seemed strange to be traveling in the Alps with glaciers all around. Passing through Aigle and Champéry, Saint Maurice came to view. Its history dates from Julius Caesar, and its treasury holds the gifts of Charlemagne. From here may be seen the Matterhorn and Monte Rosa, towering 14,000 to 15,000 feet. Next came Martigny, with its cog-wheel mountain railroad connecting Switzerland with Chamonix, France. Ever climbing up to the next point of vantage for a superb view, then gliding down again, suddenly Mount Blanc, 15,781 feet elevation, came to view. This is the master of the French Alps and the highest mountain in Europe. At the very foot of this mighty eminence was a valley, bathed in sunshine. We were in the very shadow of the greatest pass in the Alps, Saint Bernard, where a temple to Jupiter once stood in Roman times. Through this pass Napoleon proceeded on his victorious march to Vienna. Thanks to the cinema, many wonderful views of this enchanting country were taken. The warmth of the days and the nights was surprising; we spent the evenings listening to outdoor concerts. This spot is almost a junction of Italy, Switzerland and France, and as Chamonix is in France it was hard to realize we were still in the Alps.

"In my next story we will proceed over an ever-winding trail once traveled by Bonaparte on his first march into Italy, in 1797."

BRANCH CITY HALL DEDICATED.

At the dedication of the hall Saturday, a $750,000 seven-story structure housing harbor branches of ten Los Angeles departments, Lloyd S. Nix, Los Angeles County commander of the American Legion, presided, and among the speakers were Mayor George E. Cryer and Past Grand President Lewis F. Byington. Two bronze tablets were laid in the main entrance to the building, the grand officers conducting the dedicatory ceremony. One tablet, the gift of the Order of Native Sons, is inscribed: "This building dedicated to Truth, Liberty, Tolerance, by the Native Sons of the Golden West. November 10, 1928." The second tablet was laid at the instance of the citizens of San Pedro.

In the evening, following the dedication, the grand officers were guests at a citizens' banquet. James W. Mee of Sepulveda Parlor No. 263 was the toastmaster, and among the speakers were Mayor Cryer and Past Grand President Byington, the latter, in eloquent words, expressing the goodwill of the Native Sons and the true patriotic sentiment which should go with the observance of Armistice Day. The grand officers rode in the long naval, military and floral parade which passed through San Pedro's streets Monday.

The three-day celebration was in charge of a citizens' committee including the following members of Sepulveda Parlor No. 263 N.S.G.W. and Rudecinda Parlor No. 230 N.D.G.W.: James W. Mee, William F. Durr, John J. Kaveney, Stanley A. Wheeler, Florence Dodson-Schoneiman, Lazard Lippman, L. M. Sepulveda, O. R. C. Grow, W. Tracy Gaffey, J. C. Baly, Edward Reese, Joseph Pia and Rudecinda F. S. Dodson.

CLARK MEMORIAL DEDICATED.

No one has done more to honor the California Pioneers and to perpetuate their memories than J. Harvey McCarthy, a member of Ramona Parlor No. 109 N.S.G.W. At Carthay Center, he has placed several imposing monuments and markers, the latest addition to the number being a section of a petrified tree from the Sonoma County Petrified Forest, which was dedicated the evening of Sunday, November 11, to the memory of Galen Clark, discoverer of the forest and of the Mariposa Big Tree Grove. Mrs. Ollie Bockee, owner of the forest, furnished the petrified tree section for the Clark memorial.

Past Grand President Herman C. Lichtenherger of the Order of Native Sons presided at the dedication ceremonies, and Past Grand President Lewis F. Byington delivered the main ad-

Other speakers were Grand President James A.

Prior to the dedication Ramona Parlor en-

OLD INSTITUTION IN NEW QUARTERS.

One of Los Angeles' oldest mercantile establishments, the Hellman Hardware Company, started in 1880, will be located in its new building, 744 South Spring and 747 South Main street, the first of December.

Maurice J. Hellman and William J. Hellman, both affiliated with Hollywood Parlor No. 196
N.S.G.W., are identified with this institution, which deals in hardware, plumbing and electrical supplies of all kinds.

ANNIVERSARY SUPPER-DANCE.

Los Angeles Parlor No. 45 N.S.G.W. was officially visited November 8 by Grand Trustee Ben Harrison, who was accompanied by twenty members of his home-Parlor, Arrowhead No. 110
(San Bernardino). Grand Second Vice-president
John T. Newell presided at the social session, and among the speakers were: Grand Trustee Harrison, who urged co-operation through service; Supervisor John Anderson, Recording Secretary "Boh" Brazelton, Judge D. E. Van Leuven, "Sid" Mee and J. A. Gregory of the Arrowheaders, and President Howard E. Bentley of
No. 45.

Los Angeles Parlor will observe its forty-fourth institution anniversary with a supper-dance December 6 at 6:30 p. m. All Natives, Sons and Daughters, their families and friends are invited to attend. Guests of honor will include Past Grand President and Mrs. Herman C.
Lichtenherger, Past Grand President and Mrs.
William I. Traeger, Grand Second Vice-president and Mrs. John T. Newell, Grand Trustee and Mrs. Ben Harrison, Editor Grizzly Bear and Mrs.
Clarence M. Hunt. The committee in charge of the event is composed of Ray LeMoine (chairman), Julius O. Leuschner, Elmer F. Engle-bracht, President Howard E. Bentley and Secretary Richard W. Fryer, from whom invitations, which must be presented at the door, may be obtained.

December 20, the Parlor will have its annual Christmas tree for the members' children, and this will be one of No. 45's old-time parties.
Officers will be elected December 13.

NATIVES TO DEDICATE SCHOOL.

Glendale—Glendale No. 264 N.S.G.W. has been invited to dedicate the new $1,000,000 Glendale Northwest union high-school, now nearing completion. Secretary Claude E. Agard says the ceremonies will be held early in the new year, with the grand officers officiating.

HAS EXCLUSIVE REPUTATION.

Carthay Circle Theatre enjoys the exclusive reputation of being the first theater in the world to be especially constructed for perfect presentation of talking and sound motion pictures.
This is the reason why "Interference," Para-mount's one hundred percent all-talking stage adaptation, and Eddie Cantor in his special movietone comedy prologue, are the talk of California South by reason of the amazing realism and naturalness of the voices reproduced on the movietone.

The circular construction of Carthay Circle Theater, from which the name of this famous showplace is derived, throws the voices and sounds from the talking picture screen into the center of the auditorium and distributes them in a series of circular sound waves to the ears of the audience, with the result that every person hears perfectly, no matter where the spectator may be sitting. Then, again, the walls of the theater are covered with special acoustic plaster which absorbs the sounds which strike against the walls, instead of reflecting them, which assures the true voice tones being delivered to the ears of the audience. Those who like the new talking motion pictures will find them reproduced at their best at Carthay Circle.

thay Circle, now presenting two shows daily, 2:15 and 8:30. "Interference," by the way, is a melodrama of the upper world, of the tense sort that audiences enjoy by reason of the countless moments of breathless suspense created by the action of the plot. It will be succeeded December 6 by First National's talking feature, "The Barker," a George Fitzmaurice production.

ATTRACTIONS ATTRACT.

Ramona Parlor No. 109 N.S.G.W. had several attractions on its November 16 program, and consequently there was the largest turnout in several months, including many of the old-timers and visitors from several Parlors. A class of candidates were initiated. Grand Trustee Ben Harrison paid his official visit and spoke interestingly on California history. Walter Slosson commended Manuel Duarte for suggesting the "1929 Club" of the Parlor, and then requested Burrell Neighbours to present attractive pins to the several members of the club—those who have paid their dues for the year 1929 to the Parlor. The baseball, autographed by Emil Meusel of national baseball fame, was disposed of for the benefit of the homeless children. Grand Second Vice-president John T. Newell and W. E. Kerr (Arrowhead No. 110) were also speakers of the evening. Fourteen life members of Ramona answered present at this meeting.

November 23, Lauren J. Hill of the Security Bank's research department, delivered a most interesting illustrated talk on Los Angeles County history. Refreshments were served at the conclusion of the address. Ramona will elect officers December 7, and on the 21st there will be initiation and the presentation of pins to additional members of the "1929 Club." December 28, the last meeting in 1928, the good of the order committee will present a surprise entertainment.

CHRISTMAS PARTY.

The spanish dinner featured by Los Angeles Parlor No. 124 N.D.G.W. November 21 was a grand success, and Ruth Ruiz, who planned and cooked the meal, was showered with praise, as were also the many members who did the serving. During the feast Lucia Hernandez-Jay sang some very sweet spanish melodies and an orchestra played spanish music. Among the 250 served were the following charter members: Fannie Prather, Louise Robinson, Jennie Elliott and Marjery Alexander. Dancing concluded a most enjoyable occasion. The sewing circle recently gathered at the home of Gertrude R. Allen and completed several garments for the homeless children. The card party of November 14, in charge of Bertha Marshall, proved very enjoyable.

Los Angeles will have a Christmas party December 12 and a pleasant time is assured. Grace J. Norton has in hand the arrangements for the party, the announcement for which says: "Members are requested to bring a gift at the Christmas party. Something inexpensive, costing around fifty cents, if possible; just something to make the evening a little more 'Christmasy.' All gifts will be placed in a bag, then the guests and members will draw 'hit or miss' from the bag." A class of candidates will be initiated December 5.

IMPORTANT GATHERING.

The fourth session of the Institute of International Relations will be held at Riverside, and the University of Southern California in Los Angeles, December 9 to 14, according to announcement of Dr. R. B. von KleinSmid, chancellor. It will provide for the Pacific Coast similar opportunities for discussion of world affairs as are provided through the Institute of Politics at Williamstown, Massachusetts, and the Institute of Pacific Relations at Honolulu.

"Numerous international problems center on the rim of the Pacific, where are clustered all forms of government known today," states Dr. von KleinSmid. "The Pacific is perhaps the largest, the most varied and the most important oceanic area in the world, with the utmost diversity of climate, culture, economic growth, and social, religious and political life."

CALIFORNIA DAY AT LIVESTOCK SHOW.

December 2 will be California day at the Third Annual Christmas Livestock Week to be celebrated at the Los Angeles Union Stockyards, December 2 to 8. Members of the Orders of Native Sons and Native Daughters of the Golden West will be special guests of the stockyards on the opening day, which has been set aside to pay tribute to the California Pioneers.

One of the outstanding features of the program for California day will be a parade in entertainment features provided was a luncheon at the California Yacht Club. Grand Trustee Ben Harrison paid an official visit to the Parlor October 26. No. 263 had a barbecue October 21 and a second one November 4; both were in charge of J. J. Kaveney, W. F. Durr, L. M. Sepulveda, E. Reese, J. H. Dodson Jr. and M. T. Gaffey.

Sepulveda, along with Rudecinda Parlor of Native Daughters, had a large float in the Armistice Day parade November 12. Third Vice-president Joseph A. Brannen was in charge. Meetings are now being held in Odd Fellows Temple, Tenth and Gaffey streets. December 7 the Parlor will have a class initiation, to be followed by an entertainment.

CORDIALITY COMMENDED.

Long Beach—Long Beach Parlor No. 154 N.D.G.W. entertained November 1 D.D.G.P. Ida Gillman, and President Florence Dodson-Schone-man and a delegation of twenty members from Rudecinda Parlor, San Pedro. President Lucetta Coates introduced the speakers. Mrs. Gillman commended the Parlor for its cordiality and extended an invitation to the members of No. 154 to visit her Parlor, Verdugo, at Glendale. Mrs. Schone-man introduced her accompanying officers, and called attention to six girls who, she predicted, will be very active in Rudecinda's affairs. Mrs. Wanda Almee Mace, Long Beach's latest bride, was presented with a wedding gift of silver. Refreshments were served by a committee headed by Winifred Young.

The Parlor conducted a rummage sale, in charge of Julia Arbourn, November 23 and 24. Long Beach and Rudecinda have under way plans for jointly entertaining Grand President Dr. Louise C. Heilbron when she pays an official visit in March of next year.

BAZAAR AT GLENDALE.

Glendale—At the home of Clytelle Hewitt, Verdugo Parlor No. 240 N.D.G.W. sponsored a surprise miscellaneous show for Miss Charlotte Hawkensen, a member of the Parlor who last month became the bride of Elton Haring of Culver City. Games were played, a musical program was presented and refreshments were served. Miss Hawkensen was the recipient of many pretty gifts.

The Parlor had a card party November 23 at the home of Hattie Enright, Betty Sanders being in charge. Prizes were awarded and refreshments were served. Doria Phillips, assisted by Adab Steele, recently entertained the auxiliary at her home. November 21 the auxiliary completed plans for a bazaar to be held December 8.

VALLEY NATIVES PLAN ACTIVITIES.

Reseda—Cahuenga Parlor No. 263 N.S.G.W., the membership of which embraces the San Fernando Valley, is now meeting here every Monday night in Alton Hall. November 5 the Parlor elected officers, choosing Les E. Hadley for president, and outlined a schedule of activities. This meeting closed the Parlor's first year of existence, and resolutions were passed commending Robert L. Hanley, retiring president, and others for their efforts in its behalf.

Plans were discussed for dedicating a park-site presented Cahuenga by R. L. Glover. The park contains two ancient lime-kilns used by the padres in the early days. These will be appropriately marked with bronze plaques and the site will be beautified.

THOUSANDS OF FLOWERS FOR FLOAT.

San Pedro—Rudecinda Parlor No. 230 N.D.G.W. took an active part in the Armistice Day festivities. It made 3,000 chrysanthemums for the floral float entered in the parade by the Native Daughters and the Native Sons of San Pedro and costumed the young women who rode upon the float. The Parlor's drill team, an attraction of the parade, accompanied the float.

President Florence Dodson-Schone-man and her mother, Rudecinda Dodson, were hostesses to the Native Son grand officers at the citizens' banquet. Mrs. Dodson was the donor of the grand prize in the floral parade, and it was won by the San Pedro Fire Department.

RARE TREASURE EXHIBITED.

An art treasure of unusual value and significance has been on exhibition at the University of California at Los Angeles through the medium of the "shadow box," a device in which works of art are periodically displayed for the benefit of the students, faculty and visitors. It is a leaf from the Gutenberg Bible, the first book ever printed from movable type, and one of the rarest volumes now in existence. Only thirteen copies of the original Gutenberg Bible are known to exist in perfect condition. The

GRIZZLY GROWLS

(CLARENCE M. HUNT.)

The celebration of Christmas Day, December 25, in memory of the birth of Christ dates from the fifth century. The Christmas tree is derived from the Egyptian use of a palm branch of twelve shoots to signify the completed year, a custom which prevailed long before the Christian era.

The use of evergreen decorations, particularly mistletoe, has been observed since the time of the Druids. Santa Claus, who delights the hearts of God's children, young and old, has been known by many names: Kris Kringle, Saint Nicholas, Knecht Ruprecht, Robert Goodfellow, etc.

Christmas is one of the most widely observed festal days of the year, a season of "Peace on earth, good will toward all men."

The Japs won a victory in the United States Supreme Court last month, when the court affirmed a decree granting a writ of mandamus to compel California officials to file articles of incorporation submitted by subjects of Japan for the purpose of constructing, in Los Angeles, a general hospital, and to lease land for that purpose.

The California Alien Land Law, which was employed in an endeavor to block this new scheme of the Japs to get control of land, specifically provides that Japs may acquire, possess and enjoy real estate within the state "in the manner and to the extent, and for the purpose prescribed by any treaty now existing between the Government of the United States" and Japan. This provision was necessary, to make the law constitutional.

By its decision, the United States Supreme Court now holds that the words "trade" and "commerce" as used in that treaty in connection with the grant of the privilege of leasing land for commercial purposes, include the operation of a hospital as a business undertaking, and that this is a commercial purpose for which the treaty authorizes the Japs to lease land.

This decision in no way affects the purchase or lease of land by Japs for agricultural purposes. The United States Supreme Court previously had concluded that the words "trade" and "commerce" used in the treaty with Japan do not include agriculture.

Following the November 6 election, Grand President James A. Wilson of the Order of Native Sons of the Golden West sent the following congratulatory message to President-elect Herbert Hoover at Palo Alto, Santa Clara County:

"On behalf of the many thousands of members of California's patriotic society of Native Sons of the Golden West, I congratulate you,

'California's Adopted Native Son,' upon being elected President of these United States of America." To which, he received the following from President-elect Hoover:

"I am grateful for your message. I deeply appreciate the friendship it conveys."

At the December session of the Federal Congress, a determined effort will be made to enact legislation which will place immigration from Mexico under quota restrictions. And, for the good of this country, the effort should be successful. Speaking recently before the Commonwealth Club of San Francisco on this subject, Robert M. McLean brought out these pertinent facts:

"Fifty percent of the Mexican immigrants entering the United States do so illegally. . . . If any industry tells us that it must have peon labor and peon living conditions, then it is time for us to tell that industry that there is something wrong with it.

"There are 47,000 Mexicans in the Belvedere district of Los Angeles, but there are only 250 registered voters. . . . Los Angeles is second only to Mexico City in the number of Mexican residents. . . . Mexicans constitute about ten percent of the total population of Los Angeles.

"The present flow of Mexican immigrants into the United States has been called the greatest immigration movement in the history of the world. . . . If the charities of a community have to make up the difference between the peon's low wages and a decent living standard, then the community is being forced to, in part, support the industries which employ them. . . . Let us get rid of that foolish idea of judging the Mexican people by the great crowd of peon laborers who come here to do our dirty work."

But two veterans of the Mexican War—which resulted in California becoming a part of the United States—now survive, the Federal Interior Department's pension bureau reporting the death, at Sterling City, Texas, November 1, of Richard Albert Howard, aged 97. Howard at one time resided in this state.

The two remaining survivors of that conflict are William Fitzhugh Buckner, aged 100, of Paris, Missouri, and Owen Thomas Edgar, aged 97, of Washington, District of Columbia.

The "Amador Ledger," published at Jackson, Amador County, began its seventy-fourth year with the October 27 issue. It began its career October 27, 1855, at Volcano, Amador County, then a booming mining town, and has been continuously published every week since.

For nearly three-quarters of a century the "Ledger" has been a consistent "booster" for Amador County. May the hope expressed by the editor, "to accomplish even more in the future than in the past," be realized.

Christmas Message

"To the Officers and Members of the Subordinate Parlors of the Native Daughters of the Golden West—Dear Sisters: Once more as the Holiday Season draws near are we reminded, throughout the world, of the birth of our Great Savior and Redeemer, Jesus Christ. While upon Christmas Day we shall hear the church bells peal forth the glorious 'Adeste Fideles' and the many vested choirs within all churches will joyously sing 'Adeste Fideles.'"

"We shall hear the story of the Three Wise Men who followed the Star of Bethlehem, which led them to the Khan, there to behold the New-born King, the Savior of Men; yes, it will be repeated in many different languages, in every clime throughout the world. As the wonderful yet humble birth of the Christ is told, tears of joy will be shed and our hearts will be thrilled just as the shepherds were upon the plains of Bethlehem over two thousand years ago.

"Dear sisters, the Christ Spirit should ever be with each one of us, that we may each day of the year exemplify in our own lives the simple teachings which Christ the Savior of Men taught so freely to all mankind. May each one of you give freely unto others, that you may receive blessings from Him. Then within our hearts

"We shall hear the Angels sing

Peace upon earth

Good will toward men

For today a Savior is born,

A redeemer for all mankind;

And the Heavenly Choir

Shall sing in chorus strong

Hosanna in the highest,

Hosanna forever more!"

"May each one of you brighten your own Christmas Day by serving others; that it may be merry, joyous and a blessing to you. Remember by so doing you will consecrate yourself to a new life that will be unselfish, compassionate and forgiving, yet always recognizing the good and best in those with whom you may be associated.

"As Grand President, may I ask each Subordinate Parlor to sponsor a living Christmas tree somewhere in God's great outdoors within the municipality in which your Parlor is active. For by so doing future posterity may enjoy the beautiful sight of a growing, living tree, God's handiwork, which, when decorated each year, will be a glorious reminder of the Savior's birth.

"May the home of every Native Daughter of the Golden West be showered with God's choicest blessings, and may He grant that the Christmas Spirit abide with each one of you always.

"With my kindest thoughts for a Merry Christmas Season and a Most Happy and Prosperous New Year,

"Believe me, in P.D.F.A., partment for Christmas Day on city, village and rural routes, according to an announcement of Postmaster General New, which says:

"As Christmas Day this year falls on Tuesday it is my purpose to relieve of work on Christmas Day as many postoffice employees as may be possible, and thus permit them to have full benefit of the greatest of all holidays and partake of their Christmas dinners in their homes with their families."

The dreaded influenza is again rampant throughout California, and there are numerous deaths therefrom. Approximately 10,000 cases developed in the state in a period of four weeks, according to a report of the State Public Health Department.

The California history essay contest, conducted by the San Francisco branch of the League of America Pen Women, closed November 15. Fifty-eight writers submitted essays of from 10,000 to 15,000 words.

In time, two cash prizes of $1,000 and $500, provided by Senator James D. Phelan, affiliated with Pacific Parlor No. 10 N.S.G.W., San Francisco, will be awarded for the best essays.

The California statutes do not permit, in this state, the marriage of Whites and Japs. But, despite that fact, courts of the state evidently may set aside such disgusting alliances, for a so-called American woman was recently granted a divorce from a Jap in the Los Angeles County Superior Court.

Consistency, where are thy jewels? The Cali-

California laws should be amended to prohibit courts of the state from hearing divorce actions involving persons who, when contracting marriage, violate the state's laws.

A University of California professor says "the state is scheduled for a wet winter." His prediction, "boozically" speaking, will unquestionably be fulfilled.

Following a season during which tens of thousands camped in the mountains, a poet was inspired to write "a psalm on picnic life." From the lines, it is believed the author must have been a forest ranger:

"Empty cans and hags remind us,
As we reach a spot sublime,
That the party that pre-dined us
Had a simply gorge-us time."

HISTORIC RIDE

(W. O. GILKEY, Chairman
History Committee Los Angeles Parlor N.S.G.W.)

AS A SMALL BODY OF CAVALRY wound their way through the rolling hills of Rancho Chino, little did they realize the perilous situation which was to be theirs at the close of day. Each man was happy, for did not the Californians lay down arms before Stockton and Fremont. Why worry? The fighting was over. But ah, the Californians had long stood the intolerant spirit displayed by one, Captain Gillespie, commander of Pueblo Los Angeles, and was only waiting a chance to make the haughty captain a prisoner. After many days of waiting, now was their chance!

As Captain Gillespie and his little band of soldiers neared the old ranch house, they were surprised by a large body of Californian troops, who surrounded them.

Captain Gillespie, realizing his perilous situation, selected John Brown (Juan Floco) as a dispatch rider to carry the news to Commodore Stockton, who was in San Francisco, some four hundred miles away.

Knowing that a siege would be disastrous, Captain Gillespie hastily scribbled messages upon cigarette papers and gave them to Juan Floco who, in turn, concealed them in his hair. During the night Juan Floco broke through the lines and made a dash for the north, and help from Commodore Stockton.

Eluding his pursuers, Juan Floco rode for miles at breakneck speed through hostile country, despite his lack of sleep and difficulty in securing fresh mounts. But this did not slow him up, for four days out from Los Angeles Gillespie's message requesting help was delivered to Commodore Stockton in San Francisco. Commodore Stockton immediately sent Captain Mervine in the frigate "Savannah" to San Pedro for the relief of Captain Gillespie.

But alas, Fort Hill, which guarded Los Angeles, was untenable long before Juan Floco had delivered his message to Commodore Stockton, so Captain Gillespie surrendered to the Californians under the conditions that his men be allowed to depart on the merchant vessel "Vandalia," then in the harbor of San Pedro. But as they sailed out of the harbor they met the frigate "Savannah" and put back into San Pedro to join forces with Captain Mervine in his march on Los Angeles the following day.

The next morning troops were landed and the march for Los Angeles was started. But before they had gone far they met a large body of Californians, who were able to keep out of range of the American rifles and harass their foe with a four-pound gun which they dragged from place to place by the aid of lassos and fleet horses.

Realizing that the Americans could not capture the gun without cavalry, Captain Gillespie consulted with his officers and a retreat was sounded. An orderly retreat was made back to the boats at San Pedro, and thus ended the battle of Rancho Dominguez.

The Californians at this time were well mounted, having the best of horses, and the men were known for their daring and speed. But even the Californians marveled at the performance of John Brown (Juan Floco), who they called "John of Flight." Even today this ride of Juan Floco is one of the most daring and brilliant rides in history.

Feminine World's Fads and Fancies

PREPARED ESPECIALLY FOR THE GRIZZLY BEAR BY ANNA STOERMER

THE DRESS OF TODAY IS THE BEGINNING, and the accessories form the perfect ending of the smart ensemble. Its success depends on the restraint and skill exercised in combining the two. It is here that the woman who makes her own clothes scores, for by so doing her dress allowance covers the matching hat, the perfect gloves and the half-dozen personal belongings that lift a costume to perfection.

As to accessories with the more formal modes, pearls are again supreme. The jewels are either real or imitations. Many bracelets, large stone rings and elaborate earrings are worn. The necklace is most often of pearls in a long rope or a triple strand having a jeweled clasp.

With the dress pumps the slipper buckle is an important factor. It is made of white or colored crystals, rhinestones or pearls. With the chic browns, bronze or topaz buckles are used.

Undies have for so many seasons dominated the hosiery departments that we sense with relief the gradual withdrawal of these particular tones.

The newer shades, especially beechnut and beach tan, provide a means of injecting something new into the color situation. Light tans, including the sunburn and complexion tones as well as browns, are vying with gunmetal shades for fall popularity. Browns appear to be scheduled for certain favor. Gunmetal and kindred shades are favored for darker apparel.

Ribbons are beginning to be taken seriously. In the past, they have been regarded as somewhat of a "stepchild," and relegated to unimportance as style details of the costume. But the majority of women have assumed a rather patronizing attitude toward them, regarding them as an accessory necessary to cover a poor line in a frock, or as a useful piece of material when the garment needed to be lengthened. In this way, ribbons were looked upon as something to be tolerated; now they are being recognized as an all important factor of the frock and an item on which the frock is often dependent for its smartness. They are no longer an afterthought.

Ribbons are being used for hats, girdles, sashes, entire dresses, purses and shoes. They range in types from stiff, heavy, conventional designs for purses to soft, supple fabrics for sash purposes.

For millinery, velvet and grosgrain are smart and choice rivals. Grosgrain is regarded as a more tailored item. Five-inch widths of satin and faille ribbon are used for draped turbans. Five-inch velvet ribbon is used for entire hats and as a softly looped bow at the side of a skull cap of felt.

The broad-width ribbon of about twelve inches makes a pretty sash on soft taffeta, crepe-de-chine, brocade or chiffon. Metallic brocades are also utilized for these purposes. The taffeta bows are being used for the very becoming style of hair bows for children.

Fabric bags are becoming more and more popular in ribbons. These are usually produced in such heavy media that no backing is needed to make them durable.

Have you been early shopping for Christmas gifts yet? It's better than going to the circus. The array of gift gadgets is the most amazing of novelties.

Leather goods run wild in novelty stunts—trick billfolds equipped for the new undersized currency, and bachelor's sewing sets with oversize thimbles. This will be a novelty Christmas.

A wider range of new ideas in gift objects is being shown than ever before, and the wise giver will be he or she who finds something with a new angle or a new idea to give. The early shoppers will get their choice of distinctive gifts.

The men's shops are alluring, with their display of fancy silk underwear, velvet suspenders with garters to match in all colors, and belt buckles in bright colors with brilliant monograms. Novelty hair brushes, when lifted, start playing "Silver Threads Among the Gold."

The bridge hounds and card sharks are caricatured in score-sets of dangling silver pencils attached to a lop-eared silver bound.

Metal, marble and glass reflect highlights of luxury in gifts. Accessories take renewed interest in modern designing of triangular bags with back straps of brown and honey beige shoe-calf.

Evening bags are of hand-woven seed pearls, studded with straw and jade. Suede envelope bags have their corners embroidered in flower motifs of chenille. Pouch bags are made of lizard-grained goatskin in bright red with gilt frames, and also in black shoe-craft with novel colored composition frames and back strap.

In the jewelry field, the most unusual bit of adornment is found in the upper-arm bracelet matched by a large brooch either for the shoulder or as a complement to the neckline. In one of these sets, marcasite is centered in a plaque worked out in colorful enamels.

The semi-precious stones are seen again in sets, which combine something of the antique with the modern idea in jewelry.

We find the gorgeous scarfs for evening in chenille embroidered versions, also in triangles of Sequin jackets and metallic houses will play a prominent role in holiday gifts.

"CHRISTMAS IN CALIFORNIA"

The following poem, which appears in the "Sunset Magazine," is pronounced by the critics one of the best of the lighter works of Frank Howard Seely, the famous California poet known throughout the West as the "Sweet Singer of Alameda County." It is an interesting fact that Mr. Seely some years ago was one of the editors of the "Pathfinder"—but he reformed. His only fault was that he was such an incorrigible poet that he could not write even the most prosaic news note without breaking into verse. In republishing Mr. Seely's poem on the beauties of California we do not mean to have it understood that the "Pathfinder" is going back on Florida. Let the Florida poets now rush to the defense of their state—otherwise the decision, so far as poetry is concerned, may have to be given to California.—The Editors.

The folks back East think Chris'mas is a time for cold 'n' frost;

The pump fruz up, 'n' icicles a-hangin' from the spout;
Yer fingers jest ez stiff ez they kin be;

The snow a-driftin' so, a feller's liable to git lost
A-walkin' to the barn. I'm glad I've cut them blizzards out.

Old Californy's good enough fer me.

The sleigh-bells' merry jingle! That sounds pretty in a pome.

Yer toes git frosted, though, and then the chilblains—reg'lar sores!

An' skatin' on the river—I don't see
No fun in bustin' through, yer clo's fruz stiff when you git home;

An' say, it's mighty cold a-gittin' up to do the chores.
So Californy's good enough fer me.

I'm always seein' pictures of old Santy 'n' his deer.
He's all wrapped up in fur from head to foot—looks like he's came

From Kansas or Nebraska. It must be He's got some other kind o' rig to travel in out here;

This ain't no place fer sleighin', but he gits here jest the same.

An' Californy's good enough fer me.

To me, the thought of Chris'mas means the new grass on the hill.

Bees buzzin' in the blossoms, the chrysanthemums aglow,
An' butterflies around the orange tree;

A crispness in the mornin' air that makes a feller thrill
With jest the joy of livin', an' he wants to up 'n' go.

Gosh! Californy's good enough fer me!

(Editor's Note—The above is published in entirety as received by The Grizzly Bear from Emil C. Malz Jr. of San Rafael, Marin County, under date of October 20, with this notation: "I am herewith inclosing clipping taken from a December 1926 issue of the 'Pathfinder.' This clipping contains a poem entitled 'Christmas in Californy.' I would be pleased to see this printed in the December Grizzly Bear, and suggest that not only the poem be published but also the editors' note, thus giving credit both to 'Sunset' and the 'Pathfinder.'")

SAN FRANCISCO

"Deceased came of a pioneer family. His father, Manuel Torres, born in Peru in 1826, arrived in San Francisco in 1842. His mother, Mariana Richardsou, was the first child born in San Francisco or California to foreign parents; she was born at the San Francisco Presidio April 9, 1826. Her father, Captain William Richardson, arrived in San Francisco in 1822 aboard the English 'Orion'; he was the first captain of the port, receiving his appointment in 1835, and brought the first ship through the Golden Gate, the 'Ayacucho,' a trading vessel from Peru."

POSTPONED.

The class initiation in honor of Grand President James A. Wilson which, The Grizzly Bear for November announced, would be held by the San Francisco Parlors of Native Sons November 16, was, for good and sufficient reason, postponed.

Shortly after New Year, the Extension of the Order Committee will assume direction of the campaign, and the result, it is assured, will be the largest class of candidates ever initiated in San Francisco.

Native Sons of the Golden West

Following the ceremonies a hanquet was served, and entertainment features interspersed the speaking. C. H. Mortenson was the toastmaster, and those who responded to his call included Grand President James A. Wilson, Junior Past Grand President Charles A. Thompson, Grand First Vice-president Charles L. Dodge, Grand Third Vice-president Dr. Frank I. Gonzalez, Grand Secretary John T. Regan, Leonard Stone, President Alfred Pioda of No. 71, Frank Reynolds and Roy York.

The following day, in the presence of a large assemblage of Mendocino County citizens, the grand officers dedicated the first unit of the county's new court house, costing $105,000. The ceremonies were under the direction of Secretary Ben Hofman of Ukiah No. 71. A splendid program of musical numbers was presented. Rev. C. A. Rexroad pronounced the invocation, and the speakers included District Attorney L. I. Gibson, G. M. Biggar, Leonard Stone, Supervisor N. P. Howe, Grand President James A. Wilson and Junior Past Grand President Charles A. Thompson, the latter delivering the dedicatory address. In addition to those heretofore mentioned, Grand Inside Sentinel Arthur Cleu was among the grand officers in attendance.

Pioneer Native Affiliates.

San Rafael—Mount Tamalpais No. 64 initiated several candidates November 5. After the ceremonies a hanquet was served at which a number of pertinent talks were made by prominent members. Among the initiates was B. H. Williams, silver tongued and silver haired, who was born at San Francisco in 1855. He expressed his pride of membership in the Order and especially so because affiliated with so ac-

Season's Greetings

"To the Officers and Members of the Native Sons of the Golden West—My dear Brothers:

"At this festal season of the year when hearts are glad and cares disappear, our thoughts revert nearly two thousand years to that December morn when the Bethlehem hahe, Jesus, was born.

"Although His birthplace was a lowly manger and His life an humble one, He proved Himself to be the greatest man that ever lived by His preached, and practiced, doctrines of brotherly love, forgiveness, unselfishness, and 'Peace on earth, good will to men.'

"As Native Sons of the Golden West, it is well that we keep in mind the advent of that humble Nazarene and also practice the doctrines which He so lovingly taught.

"With all kind thoughts at this Christmas season and best wishes for your happiness in the New Year, I am

"Sincerely and fraternally yours,

"JAMES A. WILSON

tive a unit as Mount Tamalpais. He praised the spirit of the Parlor's "big five." "That is the spirit," he said, "which animated the '49ers, who made this grand old state the finest in the union." He regretted he had not sooner been in position to join the Order, but his mother died soon after his birth and he was sent to Boston to be reared by relatives. He has made frequent trips to the coast, and now has decided to remain here permanently.

Williams' father came to California with Stephenson's regiment in 1847. He was alcalde of Marysville, Yuba County, in the early days and later established in Mendocino County a mill which is still in operation. In years, but not in spirit, this Pioneer Native is the oldest initiate ever received into No. 64.

The second of a series of three ritual contests between Mount Tamalpais and Seapoint No. 158 of Sausalito was held at the latter place November 21. The drum corps accompanied the members of No. 64 and all participated in a parade. A basketball team is in process of formation in Mount Tamalpais, adding another to the Parlor's many activities to stimulate, and then hold, the members' interest.

Laudable Undertaking.

Santa Cruz—Santa Cruz No. 90 has formulated plans to collect and preserve old photographs and relics of the City and County of Santa Cruz until a public museum, or some other place where they may be exhibited, is secured. Oscar A. Foster, George S. Tait Jr. and Frank E. Burns have been designated a committee to promote this activity. Persons having old possessions of historical interest and who are anxious to further the work of the Parlor are asked to communicate with the committee, which has issued the following statement:

"The Native Sons only wish to act as custodians of the relics and photos collected. In undertaking this work, we believe that we will receive the undivided and unsolicited support of the owners of such relics and photos. An exhibition of the relics will be a decided attraction to all Santa Cruzans as well as visitors. The local Parlor's activity in this regard is similar to that taken by the Grand Parlor in the compiling of California history, in connection with which the Grand Parlor has spent thousands of dollars in maintaining two history fellowships at the University of California, Berkeley."

At the October 30 meeting a letter was received from the local chamber of commerce thanking the Parlor for its support in the recent 159th birthday party of Santa Cruz. No. 90 co-operated in that event with a tableau depicting the California gold-rush period of '49, and it was generally conceded to have been one of the best presented.

Thanksgiving Program.

Santa Barbara—Santa Barbara No. 116 initiated a class of candidates November 21. The ceremonies were followed by a turkey feast and a Thanksgiving program. Officers will be elected December 5.

The Board of Supervisors has requested the Parlor to dedicate Santa Barbara County's new $2,000,000 court house, and the grand officers will officiate. The event is scheduled for early in the approaching new year, and the exact date will be announced later.

County Initiation.

Antioch—The Contra Costa County Parlor—General Winn No. 32 of Antioch, Mount Diablo No. 101 of Martinez, Byron No. 170, Carquinez No. 205 of Crockett, Richmond No. 217, Concord No. 245 and Diamond No. 246 of Pittsburg—will have their quarterly joint initiation here December 12. Each Parlor will present a class of candidates. Grand First Vice-president Charles L. Dodge heads the committee of arrangements.

Perpetual Basketball Trophy.

San Francisco—Grand President James A. Wilson, believing that the young natives of the state can be attracted to the Order by the Subordinate Parlor's encouraging athletics, has announced the donation of a perpetual trophy to be played for each year by the basketball teams of the several Parlor's. In a letter under date of November 6 sent to all the Parlor's he said:

"It has been brought to my attention that many of the Parlor's have increased in membership through the activity of basketball in the Order.

"As I am deeply interested in the upbuilding of the Order, I feel that I should encourage every activity that will help toward this end. Therefore, as an inducement to all Parlor's that have basketball teams, I am offering a perpetual trophy, to be played for after the close of the present basketball season.

"If your Parlor has a team, or if there is a

NATIVE DAUGHTER NEWS

Past Grand President Amy V. McAvoy, charter members. Mrs. Leslie Clement was chairman of the arrangements committee.

Three Parlors in Joint Session.

Ferndale—The Humboldt County Parlors—Occident No. 28 of Eureka, Oneonta No. 71 of Ferndale and Reichling No. 97 of Fortuna—met in joint session October 20 to welcome Grand President Dr. Louise C. Hellbron, the occasion being her official visit. Other guests were Grand Secretary Sallie R. Thaler and Past Grand President Sue J. Irwin. A sumptuous banquet preceded the meeting. Lillie Petersen played the "Portola Grand March" as guests and members marched into the dining-room, and when all were seated Marie East sang "I Love You, California."

During the meeting three candidates were initiated, the ritual being pleasingly exemplified by a corps of officers selected from the Parlors, Mae Petersen acting as president. Excellent talks were made by Grand President Hellbron, Grand Secretary Thaler, Past Grand President Irwin, District Deputy Sadie Berry and Hattie E. Roberts, former Grand Secretary.

GRIZZLY BEAR SUBSCRIPTION PRICE BEST MONEY SPENT IN YEAR.

"Editor Grizzly Bear: I thoroughly enjoy reading The Grizzly Bear, and consider the annual subscription price, $1.50, the best spent money in the whole twelve months, so I am inclosing a check for that amount to renew my subscription—a little ahead of time, as the owner of the race horse said when his 'nag' broke the record.

"There was an article in a recent number of The Grizzly Bear about a big time in Santa Barbara, a sort of fiesta lasting some three days. It was a splendid article, written by a master; I do not recall his name. He paid the people of Santa Barbara a beautiful compliment, which they richly deserve. I read the story with a gusto. More power to his elbow.

"With cordial good wishes for the success of The Grizzly Bear,

"Respectfully,

"DANIEL MCGUIRE.
 "Sacramento, November 14, 1928."

(McGuire, affiliated with Cabrillo Parlor No. 114 N.S.G.W., Ventura, has been a subscriber to The Grizzly Bear for many years. The Santa Barbara story he refers to appeared in the September 1928 issue of the magazine. It related to that city's annual Old Spanish Days Fiesta, and was written by Frank Tierney.—Editor.)

Whereas, It again becomes our duty to record the passing of a brother; and whereas, in the death of Thomas Martin, this Parlor has lost a loyal member; and whereas, his kindly ways, his loyalty to the ideals of the Order, and his honesty, integrity and lovable character have endeared him to his fellow Native Sons; and whereas, each and every one of us, his friends and brothers in this fraternity, will feel deeply and sincerely his going from amongst us; now, therefore, be it

Resolved, That we extend to the relatives of Brother Martin our heartfelt sympathy in their bereavement; that a copy of this resolution be spread upon the minutes of General Winn Parlor No. 32 N.S.G.W.; that a copy be sent to the relatives of the deceased, and that a copy be forwarded to The Grizzly Bear for publication; and be it further resolved, that the Parlor charter be draped in mourning for thirty days.

 Gone from the dear ones beloved during life,
 Gone to a home with the ransomed above,
 Gone to a Saviour whose fullness is love."

Therefore, be it resolved, That this Parlor has sustained the loss of a true and loyal Native Daughter; and be it further resolved, that we extend to the bereaved family in this, their hour of trial, our sincere and heartfelt sympathy and commend them to the will of our Heavenly Father, who doeth all things well; be it further resolved, that a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family of our departed sister, that a copy be spread upon the minutes of our Parlor, and that a copy be sent to The Grizzly Bear for publication.

FERN LUCKENBAUGH.

To the Officers and Members of San Jose Parlor No. 81 Native Daughters of the Golden West—We, your committee appointed to draft resolutions of respect to the memory of Fern Luckenbaugh, submit the following report:

Fern Luckenbaugh, a well beloved member of San Jose Parlor No. 81 Native Daughters of the Golden West, who has passed on to a better sphere, and whose memory will be tenderly cherished as we recall the bright and happy moments spent with her; her passing leaves us with a sense of sorrow; we realize that to her family this loss is infinitely greater.

Therefore, we assure them of our sympathy, trusting that their burden of sorrow may be somewhat lessened by the knowledge that it is shared with others. Resolved, that we extend our sympathy to the bereaved family and spread a copy of this report upon the minutes, and send a copy to the family and The Grizzly Bear.

In Memoriam

JOHN T. YORK.
Death has taken from the ranks of Napa Parlor No. 62 N.S.G.W., one of its most esteemed and useful members, John T. York was born at Saint Helena, in the County of Napa, on the 26th day of March, 1869, and died in the county of his birth on the 17th day of October, 1928. He graduated at the Hastings Law College in San Francisco, and from the time of his twenty-first birthday he was engaged in the practice of his chosen profession, and most of this time in Napa. He was an able lawyer, ever kind and courteous, and held throughout his career the respect and admiration of his fellow members of the bar for his sterling qualities as a lawyer and a man.

It was as a member of Napa Parlor that we knew him best and appreciated his friendship. When our hall was constructed he was a member of the committee having it in charge, and this position brought upon him and his fellow committeemen the many duties concerning plans, working out detail, the sale of bonds, and such other matters usually incident to a new, doubtful and somewhat adventurous task. His services in these matters deserve to be remembered by the members of the Parlor. He attended a number of ses sions of the Grand Parlor, was placed on important com mittees, and was regarded throughout the state for his interest and activities in the Order.

John, as he was familiarly called, had a host of friends who appreciated him for his worth, though by nature he was unobtrusive and never pushed himself forward. He married Miss Lena Keig, who also was born in Napa of one of the old families, and his love of wife and children was one of the beautiful things of his life. He was well calculated, out of his nature, to appreciate the family tie, the most cherished thing in American life, and his love and affection was an inspiration and a blessing. John was widely read and his love of great books brought to him the untold treasures of the past world.

It is resolved, that in the death of our brother the members of this Parlor have lost a friend whose compan ionship was ever a source of instruction and of pleasure; that the community has been deprived of the services of a friend who has ever been ready and willing to assist in community affairs, and that his wife and children have sustained a loss, the greatest that women and children can suffer, and to them we extend our sincerest wishes; be it further resolved, that these resolutions be spread upon the minutes of this Parlor, and that an engrossed copy be pre sented to his sorrowing family.

FRANK L. COOMBS,
HENRY C. GESFORD,
F. L. WEBER, Committee.

LICENSE PLATES FOR 1929 WILL BE DISTRIBUTED DECEMBER 15.

The 1929 California automobile license plates will be available for general distribution at all branch offices of the State Division of Motor Vehicles December 15, says an announcement of Frank G. Snook, chief of the division, who explains that the experiment conducted last year of opening the registration period two weeks earlier proved so successful it has been decided to make it a permanent arrangement.

Although the law does not require motorists to display the new plates until after the first of the year, the earlier opening will eliminate a large part of the rush of former years, as well as enable the division to give the motoring public a quicker and better service at reduced cost.

The office counters at Sacramento and the branches in Los Angeles, San Francisco, Oakland, San Diego and Fresno will be thrown open December 15. However, those desirous of avoiding the necessity of making a special trip to any of these offices for new plates may mail their fees to the State Division of Motor Vehicles at Sacramento any time after December 1. The plates will be mailed out promptly after the 15th. It is entirely unnecessary to make a special trip for the plates.

Although the new plates are larger and heavier, and have a much greater degree of visibility because of the new system of lettering adopted, the fee schedules for pleasure cars will remain the same as in previous years.

The certificate of registration, displayed in the car, should accompany applications by mail. Changes of address should be printed upon the face of the certificate, to insure against the plates being sent to the wrong address.

INCREASE IN HEAVY TRUCK FEES APPROVED BY VOTERS.

Proposition No. 8, known as the Wagy bill, approved by the voters at the November 6 election, makes numerous changes in the registration fees for commercial vehicles. These new fees will be effective during the approaching license renewal period, and owners should govern themselves accordingly in remitting.

The Wagy bill makes no change in the fee for ordinary passenger cars, and will relieve farmers from paying commercial fees for light trucks used in hauling their products to market. On the other hand, the bill provides a sharp increase for heavy-truck fees, the theory being that those responsible for the bulk of the wear and tear upon the highways should pay accordingly.

DECREASE IN NUMBER
 LOS ANGELES TRAFFIC FATALITIES.

Fatalities in traffic for the first ten months of the year in Los Angeles City and County showed a reduction of seventeen, compared with the same period last year, according to a provisional report of the public safety department of the Automobile Club of Southern California. To November 1, this year, there were 451 lives snuffed out in automobile accidents, while the same period last year showed a total of 468 deaths.

It is noted, also, that there was a decrease of three deaths in the total of children of school age, which is from 6 to 15 years. There were 43 deaths among them in 1927, while so far this year there have been 40.

These decreases in the actual number of deaths are in the face of increases in the number of both motor vehicles in use and pedestrians using the streets.

Heavy Loss—Recent studies of the highway accident situation show that the economic loss in this connection runs to $2,000,000 a day.

EMPLOYER'S LIABILITY.

An employer cannot be held liable for damages caused by a driver involved in an accident while ostensibly engaged in his duties but actually on a private errand without the knowledge of the employer. Such was the decision in a recent Washington State case.

The driver was sent on a direct round trip, but took another direction on personal business. Before he had returned to the direct route, he struck and seriously injured a pedestrian. The victim entered suit against the merchant, who won because the driver was not on his business at the time of the accident.

To Keep Road Open—Tourists this year will be able to enjoy the winter sports and scenery of Sequoia National Park, as the park service will keep a tractor and snowplow upon the road after every fall of snow. It is advisable, however, in driving in the mountain regions to carry skid chains, due to the possibility of snow or rain.

MOTORISTS RIGHTS IN CALIFORNIA

TOLD BY AUTO CLUB LAWYER.

The popular conception of the rights of motorists regarding turns seems to be based on the adage of "First come first served," or perhaps the Spartan theory of "All is well that is gotten away with." In any event, these maxims or theories are not applicable in California.

According to the legal department of the National Automobile Club, the law of this state clearly provides that a duty rests on every motorist before starting, turning or stopping, to first see that such movement can be made in safety, and if it cannot, then the driver must wait until it can be so made. This law is particularly applicable to motorists making left turns in the more congested districts, as sudden and unwarned turning subjects the operator to the damage he causes thereby.

A further duty is placed on the motorist in that he must give a signal before making any change in movement. If parked, he must indicate intention to move away. If travelling, then he must so show by proper signals begun at least fifty feet from the point of the intended movement.

THE VETERAN SHOULD SET

EXAMPLE FOR THE NOVICE.

Experienced motorists should set an example of proper driving upon street and highway that would be of material assistance in educating the new driver to avoid careless habits.

From the veteran, the novice should learn to do his slow driving on the right-hand side of the road, leaving the inside lanes for faster-moving traffic; always to move over on a signal from the rear; to make intelligent use of the horn; never to pass another car upon a hill or a curve; to drive with extreme caution wherever pedestrians, especially children, are encountered; to make proper use of the signals, and always to look and signal before pulling away from a curb.

"SATURATION POINT" NOT REACHED.

Dreary predictions of pessimists that automobile registrations in California were reaching the "saturation point" were set at naught November 5 by a statement from the State Division of Motor Vehicles showing a gain of 63,399 in fee-paid registrations for the first nine months of this year over 1927. The total for the nine-months period is 1,800,552, as compared with 1,736,795 for 1927. Before January 1, 1929, the division anticipates the gain will be increased by at least 25,000 more cars.

The records of the division show a total of $8,900,552 was collected from the motorists during that period, the bulk of which will go to the State Highway Commission and the various counties for maintenance and repair of roads.

Car Strain—Strain on an automobile grows in geometrical progression as the speed grows in arithmetical progression. That is, the strain of driving a car at forty miles an hour is four times greater than the strain on the car driven at twenty miles an hour, and at eighty miles an hour the strain is sixteen times as great as at a twenty-mile speed.

Wise Policy—When adding additional lights and other current-consuming electrical equipment to a car, a wise policy is to increase the generator charging rate.

Before a new tube is inserted in a casing, be sure the valve nut is tight.

CAMPAIGN FOR CLEAN AND BEAUTIFIED ROADSIDES PROGRESSES.

Progress is reported in the clean-up and beautify-the-roadsides campaign launched under the leadership of the Automobile Club of Southern California some months ago. This response from the various communities indicates that a decided improvement will be noted in the coming months by tourists and motorists generally.

In some communities the definite job of removing untenanted and dilapidated shacks, old signs, dead trees, dumps and similar wayside disfigurements has been placed in the hands of civic organization committees. Chambers of commerce are realizing their responsibilities, and planning programs that not only will clean up the roadsides but keep them clean.

It is noted, as the campaign progresses, that in many instances the municipal government itself is responsible for permitting city dumps, automobile graveyards and similar eyesores to exist. In other communities ordinances are being framed especially to improve the situation. Service clubs are aiding in the campaign and motorists generally are urged to do their bit by keeping the roadsides free from litter and refuse.

CALIFORNIA AUTO TOURISTS

LEAVE VAST SUM IN STATE.

The State Division of Motor Vehicles reports that an actual count taken at its six border stations during two months of the summer tourist season showed a total of 68,286 out-of-state cars passed into California during the period. An average of three persons to a car would give a total of 204,758 persons who visited the Golden State during that short time. Assuming that the occupants of each car spent $100 while in California—an average regarded as extremely low by state officials—a sum in excess of $680,000 was left in California by these visitors.

The count was made by traffic officers at border stations located at Myers, Donner Lake, Dunsmuir and Arcata in the north, and Daggett and Yuma in the south. The Myers and Donner Lake stations were closed for the season November 1. The others will remain open all year.

DISTRICT MANAGERS AUTO ASSO- CIATION TO HOLD CONFERENCE.

District managers for the California State Automobile Association from thirty cities of Northern and Central California will meet in annual conference in San Francisco December 10 and 11. The gathering will be devoted to a discussion of service matters and to details of the task of directing the vast army of motor tourist travel that flows over the state's highways and byways.

The State Automobile Association has district offices located in thirty principal cities of Northern and Central California, in addition to its San Francisco headquarters and its summer touring bureau office in Yosemite Valley. With the offices of the Automobile Club of Southern California also at the service of the association motorists, the member has available sixty-six points of contact throughout the state.

The Only Hope—Only when the driver practices the principles of courtesy and caution may the nation hope for a reduction in the human toll it pays for transportation, is the conclusion reached in a summing up of the situation by the American Road Builders' Association.

Guard Your Picking—Motorists are being warned, as the season for touring the desert is at hand, to avoid picking desert plants or flowers unlawfully, since practically all of the counties with desert areas have regulations against removal or destruction of certain plants.

Quick Cooling—Cool the automobile engine by shifting into second gear and going down the other side of the hill, rather than by stopping at the top of the hill and wasting time. By this time-saving method the engine will cool twice as quickly.

Clean Windshield—Both sides of the windshield should be kept clean at all times. If this is done, rays from approaching headlights will not bother the driver so much, as a lot of glare is the result of diffusion of light rays by particles of dust.

To Probe Toll Bridges—As a result of nationwide agitations, a special investigation of the toll bridge situation will be undertaken at the December session of the Federal Congress, it is reported.

As he stepped out of the doorway upon the sidewalk his foot slid upon a roll of paper and he was unbalanced for a moment. Glancing down to see what had happened, he saw green. He stooped down and picked up the roll. He looked anxiously around as he stepped to the edge of the sidewalk to unroll it, but no one had seen him pick it up. Opening it there were shown to his astonished gaze ten hundred-dollar bills. He quickly put the roll in his pocket, but Pierre was a conscientious man. His next thought was, the money may belong to somebody who needed it more than he. With this in mind, he re-entered the cafeteria and informed the cashier that if any one reported the loss to send the loser to the Salvation Army barracks at 8 o'clock and ask for Pierre. On his way back to Joe's he concluded he had done a foolish thing, for anybody with even a hundred dollars, let alone a thousand, in his pocket would not be eating in that humble place.

Returning to the market, he was saluted by Joe with the remark, "You getta back queek." He explained why, but did not mention the money finding part of his trip. Joe then told him to go down to Mike's place, near a designated hotel, get some lunch and be back in half an hour. Passing by the entrance of the hostelry his way was obstructed by a couple of scuffling newsboys. Stepping aside toward the hotel entrance to avoid them, he saw lying in the doorway a dollar bill. Picking it up, one of the newsboys immediately claimed it, while the other demanded a half because he had seen it first. Brushing them aside, Pierre soon found Mike's. There, feeling the recklessness of newly-found wealth, he invested the dollar in ham and, two cups of coffee and a dessert. With the invigoration of a new man, he returned to the market and worked so assiduously that, when Joe closed his stand for the night and paid Pierre a dollar and a half for his day of work, he told him to come back on the morrow and maybe he could give him a steady job. In fine spirits, Pierre sought a place where, in his prosperous days, he had dined and there ate a French dinner, the first partaken of for months.

When he came upon the street again, the wad in his inside pocket began to annoy him. He could not feel easy in mind, so he went around to an evening-paper office and inquired of information if anybody had advertised for money lost. Information, always glad to accommodate, looked over the lost and found ads but found nothing that answered Pierre's find. So, he joined the moving line of belated shoppers, occasionally stopping to gaze into the brilliantly lighted diamond palaces and bedecked show-windows and to mentally decide what he would buy for a Christmas present, if he knew anyone to give it to. He passed loitering down the street until he came to the showwindow of a 5-10-15 store. There he was contemplating the purchase of several articles which appealed to him, when a heavy hand descended upon his shoulder, making him wince and half turning him around.

Pierre squirmed momentarily, fearing a policeman was after that thousand dollars. Turning around, his astonished eyes gazed into Henri's face. "Where have you been, Pierre?" asked he. "I've been looking everywhere for you." Pierre explained by saying he had been working in an automobile factory. "Come with me," said Henri. "I am selling my grapes for $100 a ton. I ship them East. I sell them before they go. They want more than I have. Come, Pierre, we will plant more vines and we will sell more grapes than we ever did. I employ you to work for me for life, and I will pay you well." Pierre went. Prohibition, instead of ruining, now made him.

RICHFIELD OIL COMPANY ERECT- ING "GREAT WHITE WAY" OF SKY.

Richfield's "Great White Way" of air beacons which eventually will blaze a sky and highway path of light along every route between Mexico and the Canadian border, already has been partially made a reality, three of the beacon towers having been completed in California South—at Palm City, Beaumont and Capistrano Beach.

Other towers, upon sites which have been selected all the way to the Canadian line, will rise at the rate of one a month, or even faster, till the great chain of glowing Richfield signs will carry a ruddy message of cheer for night flyers or motorists all the way up the "Three-Flag Trail."

The program of the Richfield Oil Company calls for the establishment of unique service stations, each in Spanish-American architecture, at the foot of the gigantic electrical beacons.

CONCRETE HAS MANY USES.

There is a place on every farm for the use of concrete. There is no mystery about its use, and repairs made with it are there forever. Dirt and plank floors should be replaced with concrete. If there is trouble with rotting fence posts, concrete will solve the problem. Tanks and troughs of concrete are permanent and permanently waterproof. Porches and steps should be concrete; they are more easily kept clean and they never will need replacement. Foundations that give evidence of yielding to weather and time should be replaced by concrete. This is to say nothing of walks, stepping stones and pavements to keep mud from the house. It is a good plan, on any farm, to keep cement, sand and gravel at hand for emergencies that may arise.

CALIFORNIA HAPPENINGS OF FIFTY YEARS AGO

Thomas R. Jones

(COMPILED EXPRESSLY FOR THE GRIZZLY BEAR.)

CHRISTMAS DAY OF 1878 CAME ON A Wednesday, and while on the surface it appeared to have been a merry one in California there was not an optimistic feeling, due to weather conditions throughout the state. Fear of a dry season prevailed, as little more than an inch of rain had fallen. No water in the streams for the miners, and sprouting grain reported dying in many sections from lack of moisture, made conditions look gloomy. A rain storm of three days' duration commenced December 28; three inches of rain fell in California South, relieving conditions there, but California North got none of it.

December was one of the coldest months experienced in the state. Beginning the 9th, a chilling north wind blew for four days. The temperature in the valleys fell to 15 degrees, and for two weeks the temperature every night went below 20. A hoary frost that prevailed every morning over the whole state did great damage. Christmas Day was one of the coldest days of the month.

The mining stock market, too, added to the general gloom, as no opportunity had been afforded investors to recoup their heavy losses met in the November debacle. The buoyancy of the market had given San Francisco numerous memorable holiday seasons, and its absence now was manifest.

For his Christmas dinner, William Hesser of Mendocino County pulled from his garden a turnip weighing thirty-seven pounds. A big run of salmon up the Stanislaus River was reported, beginning Christmas Day.

Owing to the maintenance of big heating fires which developed defective flues, and the invasion of barns by careless tramps seeking warm places to sleep during the cold spell, there were heavy losses from fires during December.

At the morning service the 9th the Vallejo, Solano County, Methodist Church caught fire from a defective flue and was destroyed; loss, $5,000.

The Couzens & Wing warehouse at San Jose, Santa Clara County, containing 2,000 tons of hay, burned the 10th with $30,000 loss, and a fire at Arbuckle, Colusa County, starting in a stable, destroyed a dozen buildings and twenty head of horses, causing a loss of $20,000.

San Mateo County's largest hotel, the American House at Redwood City, burned the 30th with a $30,000 loss, and a fire at Sacramento City destroyed Taft's planing mill and other buildings, causing a loss of $25,000.

UNIQUE CONDITION ARISES.

A fire which broke out the 18th in San Bernardino destroyed that town. It had no fire department, and this was the third time it had been swept by flames. The loss sustained in this latest conflagration was $100,000.

The New State Constitution Convention, in session at the State Capitol at Sacramento, had numerous interesting debates during the month, but nothing of a sensational nature occurred.

So far as the public was concerned, Dennis Kearney was quiet, but there was considerable bickering among the leaders of the Workingmen's party in San Francisco. A report of the treasurer December 1 showed a balance of 10 cents, and a sand-lot appeal for contributions was made, but the result was not made known. Kearney declared the ward presidents were getting "too fresh," while the latter claimed Dennis desired to be as autocratic as a czar; to define their respective powers, a committee was appointed.

At a city election in Los Angeles December 3 the Workingmen elected every man on the ticket by a majority of 300. The victory was celebrated two days later with a big torchlight procession and jubilee meeting. At a city election in Sacramento December 3 the Workingmen elected one school director and the Republicans three.

Dr. C. C. O'Donnell, a leading light among the San Francisco Workingmen, sued De Young Brothers for libel, because their "Chronicle" had referred to him as an abortionist. Proving that he was, the case was thrown out of court. The Workingmen then expelled him from that party and requested the New State Constitution Convention, of which he was a member, to do likewise. Thus, the ubiquitous doctor was hoisted by his own petard.

The coinage of trade dollars having some time previously been discontinued, a unique condition arose in the financial world. While in demand, the dollars were exported from San Francisco to China, and thence imported into New York via the Suez Canal. In China, it was stated, they could be purchased for 92 cents, and the exchange paid a profit. The discovery was also made that many of the trade dollars, after reaching China, were cut in two, but for what reason was not explained.

A three-day music festival which commenced in Los Angeles City December 16 was pronounced a great treat for music lovers.

A terrific sand storm burst over the Colorado Desert December 21, and for two days passenger trains were stalled near Cucamonga, San Bernardino County. The railroad track was buried in three feet of sand.

During the month San Francisco passed its first ordinance regulating the street-crossing movements of pedestrians and vehicle. The first week of enforcement many arrests were made.

JUDGE HAS NARROW ESCAPE.

Rich gold placers were reported as having been found in Ladd Canyon, near the new town of Silverado, in eastern Los Angeles County. The place was soon filled with prospectors, some of whom were making $10 a day.

The shrimp industry of San Francisco Bay was now at its zenith, thirty-six boats and more than 500 Chinamen being engaged therein. Some of the dried shrimps were sent to China, but the bulk were sold to the Chinese in the mining towns of the state.

After being brought here by rail from the East, 300,000 young oysters, about the size of a dime, were planted near Benicia, Solano County. They had grown rapidly, and were now being marketed at the rate of 6,000 a day.

Rev. J. W. Brier, near Grass Valley, Nevada County, was raising carp for the market. He

Greetings to Santa Claus

The Greatest Transportation Expert in the World

In a single night with an old fashioned sleigh and some reindeer, he visits all the countries of the globe, paying no attention whatever to traffic signs, boulevard stops or congested streets, and in all these years he has never had an accident.

His slogan is Safety First, with loving kindness to all human beings, and never was Santa Claus known to take anybody's right of way or get on the street car tracks and hold up crowds of people impatient to get home to their families.

During this season of the year, let us emulate Santa Claus in courtesy, safe driving and kindness to each and every one.

found he could raise 1,000 of them for what it cost to raise one hog. In two years the carp would be worth $1,000 and the hog about $26.

Judge E. C. Hart of Sacramento City had a narrow escape this month. He purchased a Colusa weekly. Had the newspaper venture been a success, he probably now would be writing bucolic editorials and personal notices instead of judicial decisions.

A ledge discovered in Nevada County was considered a geological wonder. It was twenty-three feet wide, and four feet of it was copper ore and the balance gold-bearing quartz.

An enterprising young delicatessen proprietor in San Francisco was doing a thriving business selling a new variety of limburger cheese to his German customers. A chemist, however, found he was loading the cheese with small particles of asafetida, and exposed him.

A great stir throughout the state was created by the discovery that examination questions and answers compiled by the State Board of Education were being sold to applicants for teaching positions. An investigation lasting several weeks proved the truth of the charge, but in attempting to locate how and where the information was obtained the investigators were led up a "blind alley" and left there.

Racing meets were held at Sacramento City December 6 and 7, and at Stockton, San Joaquin County, December 5.

In a rifle shoot at San Bruno, San Mateo County, December 22, M. N. Lundenberg made the unprecedented score of 347 in forty shots at 200 and 500 yards.

In a baseball game at San Francisco December 22 between the California and the Athletic clubs the former won by a 11-to-8 score.

dian girl could walk upon her hands and feet, or trot upon them like a dog, and appeared to prefer moving in that way than in an upright position.

Sixteen runaways were in progress at one time in San Jose, Santa Clara County, December 11. No one was seriously hurt.

A prominent Stockton, San Joaquin County, citizen early in the summer concluded his office stove had outlived its usefulness and sold it to a junkman for $1.50. The December cold snap coming on, he purchased a new stove for $8. Inspecting it a few days later he discovered it was the old-timer with a new coat of polish.

Don Jacinto Rodriguez, a native of California and a member of the First State Constitutional Convention, died at Monterey City December 14.

The London & San Francisco Bank of San Francisco was robbed of $13,000 by L. O. Hall, a clerk, December 17. He immediately took passage for China, where he was safe from extradition. Investigation disclosed that his shortage amounted to $38,000.

The body of James Carnall, Berkeley, Alameda County, resident missing since October 20, was found floating in San Francisco Bay December 4. It was discovered that he had wrapped an iron bar in a grain sack, and thus attached the sinker to his waist; he then got aboard a ferryboat and, as it neared Oakland, he mounted the railing, fired a bullet into his head and jumped overboard.

"SAMANTHY WAS USUALLY RIGHT."

Joe Donnelly served a term in San Quentin for grand larceny, being convicted by the testimony of Robert Davis of Contra Costa County. When discharged, Donnelly went looking for Davis, but the latter saw him first, near Pleasanton, Alameda County, December 5, and killed him.

A. Buck, a Tehama County rancher, was killed by three unknown parties in April. This month it was divulged that W. H. Donahue, John Clancy and J. F. Moplin accused him of slaying some of their horses which trespassed upon his land and concluded to put him out of the way.

A number of old timers, seated in the back room of the El Dorado saloon in Grass Valley, Nevada County, were enjoying the relation of the experience one of their number had undergone a few nights before when he stayed until an early morning hour in a poker game that had been frequently irrigated. Going home, he decided not to awaken his wife who, he guessed, was calmly sleeping, so he pulled off his boots before entering the house and noiselessly entered the bedroom. After quietly disrobing and donning his nightshirt he seated himself in a chair by the side of the baby's cradle and began rocking and crooning. The wife, awakened, in surprise said: "What in the world are you doing there?" He replied, "I'm putting the baby asleep. He has been restless for the last half-hour and rather than wake you up I've been rocking him." "Is that so?" contemptuously replied she. "You had better hop into bed, for the baby is here with me and has been in my arms all night."

After the laughter had subsided, a lately-bereaved widower commanded the attention of the coterie by saying: "My old woman was a remarkable girl. She was one in ten thousand. She was so observing and took a deep interest in my affairs. She always sat up for me when I stayed out late. Seems as though I can hear her now as I used to hear her yell, 'You old beast, drunk again!' A very loud-spoken girl was Samantha, and I must say she was pretty clear-headed and usually right. She had a remarkable keen sense of humor and I remember

I nearly laughed myself to death at something she said when I once came in late. She got huffy and said that I was a long-legged, gangling, shanghai rooster. I'm rather long legged, you know. But I did not mind her. I knew she was a positive woman." Here he gave vent to a broken-hearted sigh and then added, "Well, she's gone now. She's dead and it can't be helped. But I wouldn't have had it happen for ten dollars." This caused the other married men to ponder over what the value of a real good wife was.

WEDDING PARTIES WRECKED.

Quarreling over the proper way to fry frog legs, John Blackburn killed Frank Deschoux, a Frenchman, at San Andreas, Calaveras County, December 3.

Joseph Scott, a Sacramento City policeman, was killed by unknown parties while on duty December 9.

William Hayes and Jacob Himmelwright had some difficulty in the latter's San Francisco saloon December 12. Jacob took a shot at William, but the bullet flattened against his forehead. With Himmelwright in pursuit, Hayes ran into an adjoining house, the landlord of which, William Miller, thinking Jacob was after him, killed him with a bullet shot in the eye.

Charles Smith of Anaheim, Orange County, went for a hunt along the sloughs in that vicinity, and the next day was found stuck in the mud, dead.

John Dusel obtained a license in Yuba County Thanksgiving Day to marry Delia O'Brien. They went to Sheridan, Placer County, to have the ceremony performed, but found the Yuba license could not be used in Placer, so decided to return to Wheatland. They obtained the use of a handcar to take them there, and about the same time a number of their Wheatland friends secured a handcar and started for Sheridan to attend the wedding. Neither car carried a light, and about midway between the two places the cars collided. As Della sat with her legs dangling over the front of the car, they were so badly mangled both had to be amputated below the knees. The unfortunate girl died December 1.

Agostino Sanguinetti, with Emanuel and Stefano Costello, attempted to cross the Golden Gate in a plunger December 12. A heavy wave swamped the boat and the Costello brothers were drowned.

The cage of the Guadalupe quicksilver mine near San Jose, Santa Clara County, was being lowered with nine miners. The cable broke and precipitated them down the shaft more than a hundred feet. Thomas Coleman was killed, and the others were badly hurt.

Near Laguna, Sonoma County, a handcar upon which seven persons were riding collided with a flatcar, December 7, and Johnny McHale, 9 years old, was instantly killed.

T. P. Ashbrook, a Susanville, Lassen County, schoolteacher, went skating upon Honey Lake. He fell into an air hole, went under the ice and was drowned.

CALIFORNIA'S NATIONAL PLAY- GROUNDS ATTRACT THOUSANDS.

California's four great national parks—Yosemite, Lassen, Sequoia and General Grant—attracted more than one-fourth of the total of 2,522,188 persons visiting the nineteen national Parks in the country during the 1928 travel season, according to the California State Automobile Association. There were 626,699 visitors to California's four great playground areas. Yosemite was the most popular of all, with a total of 460,619 visitors, almost double the total of the next in popularity.

California also may claim leadership in the number of visitors to the national monuments of the nation. These twenty-seven natural wonders attracted slightly more than a half-million visitors during the year. Muir Woods, in Marin County across the Golden Gate from San Francisco, attracted more than one-fifth of the total number visiting all the monuments, with 105,000 visitors recorded.

Tube Dedicated—The 4400-foot vehicular tube under the Oakland estuary linking that city and Alameda was dedicated October 27. It cost $4,500,000.

Bee Keepers' Meet—The California Bee Keepers' Association will meet in convention at Modesto, Stanislaus County, December 5.

Highway Bonds—Monterey County voters have approved a $2,000,000 bond issue for improvement of highways in that scenic county.

MONTHLY, SINCE MAY 1907

THE BOULDER DAM BILL, HAVING passed both houses of the Federal Congress and been signed by President Calvin Coolidge last month, is now a law. It provides for flood control, water storage, irrigation and power development on the Colorado River, and it carries an appropriation of $165,000,000. Estimates for the expenditure of this huge sum include: dam, 550 feet high, $70,000,000; power plant, 1,000,000 horsepower installation, $38,200,000; All-American canal, from Laguna Dam to connect with distribution system of Imperial Valley, a distance of seventy-five miles, $38,500,000; interest during a construction period of seven years, $17,700,000.

By the term of the law, the secretary of the Federal Interior Department is authorized to proceed with construction of the dam as soon as contracts for the sale of water and hydroelectric power rights sufficient to assure amortization in fifty years have been obtained, and as soon after a period of six months as six of the interested states ratify the Colorado River compact, which provides for the distribution of water among the seven states which adjoin the river. The law is based on the financial plan that the sale of water for irrigation and domestic uses and of hydro-electric water power or of water-power rights will pay the entire cost of the project.

Other provisions of the legislation are: That the power be sold at a price that seems justified by competitive conditions at the distributing point. That water can be sold for potable purposes outside of Imperial and Coachella Valleys. That preference be given the states for purchase of power at the switchboard for use within the states. That the All-American canal shall be constructed under the Reclamation Act, which provides that all expenditures be underwritten by the lands benefited prior to beginning the construction. That the consent of Congress is given to the seven States of Colorado, New Mexico, Wyoming, Utah, Arizona, California and Nevada to enter into a compact or agreement supplemental to and in conformity with the Colorado River compact. That California shall be limited to a division of 4,400,000 acre-feet of water from the Colorado River; Nevada, 300,000 acre-feet of water; Arizona, 2,800,000 acre-feet of water; and that California must ratify this provision through its State Legislature before the law shall become effective.

So far as California and the other far-western states are concerned, this is generally looked on as the most important legislation ever enacted by the Federal Congress. The Boulder Dam bill was before the national law-making body for eight years, and it probably would not now be a law had not two Native Sons of California—Senator Hiram W. Johnson, affiliated with Sunset Parlor No. 26 N.S.G.W. of Sacramento, and Congressman Ralph B. Swing, affiliated with Arrowhead Parlor No. 110 N.S.G.W. of San Bernardino—displayed such wonderful generalship. President Coolidge attached his signature to the bill December 21, and immediately thereafter Senator Johnson issued this statement:

"The long legislative contest over the Boulder Dam project had its happy ending this morning in the President's approval of the bill. There yet remains before the work begins the ratification of the Colorado River compact, distributing the waters among the states constituting the Colorado River basin.

"In this, because of the concessions made in the measure that is now a law, there should be no difficulty. Hereafter the nation embarks upon the greatest constructive work of our generation.

"The people most interested, whom I in part represent, are deeply grateful to all who have contributed to our final success—to the members of the House and the Senate who have so generously aided, to the members of the press who have advocated this great work, and finally to the President, who from the beginning has recognized the potential possibilities for unbounded good of the project and who has today given it his official approval."

After many vicissitudes, the California State Historical Association is again an active institution. The purpose of the association, now a part of the California State Government, is to promote knowledge of and interest in the state's history. The association's publication, the "California History Nugget," has also been revived, the October 1928 issue being distributed the latter part of December.

The current issue of this little magazine contains an interesting article on the voyage of exploration of the Cabrillo expedition, entitled "Pioneers in the North Pacific—San Salvador and La Victoria." Also, a brief but interesting account of the activities of Alberto de Cordoba, Spanish engineer whose influence may still be seen in irrigation projects at the missions and in the forts and pueblos of Spanish California. The number is illustrated with several well-selected photographs.

The State Historical Association held its annual meeting at Pomona College, December 28, in a joint session with the Pacific Coast Branch of the American Historical Association. At that time three papers were presented evidencing wide research in the field of California and Western history: Professor A. P. Nasatir of San Diego State Teachers College spoke on "French Interests and Activities in California Before the Conquest." "Unpublished Portions of the Memoirs of Duflot de Mofras" were discussed by Verne Blue of the University of Oregon, and Dr. Owen C. Coy, Director of the State Historical Association, talked on "Paper Towns of Forty-nine."

By the time this issue of The Grizzly Bear reaches the thousands of readers of the magazine throughout California a new year, 1929, will have dawned. May it prove to be a record-year in the development of the state and of unparalleled prosperity for all its citizens.

Here is good news! Grand juries of San Diego, Yuba and Sutter Counties have returned indictments against Japs, Hindus and Whites, charging them with violations of the California Alien Land Law, and the district attorneys of those counties are preparing to prosecute the charges. The hope is expressed that, if the charges are proven, the lands involved will be confiscated to the state, as provided for in the law. Fines or imprisonment, or both, do not have the desired effect in these cases.

As often remarked in The Grizzly Bear, the Alien Land Law is being openly violated in practically every county of the state, and particularly in Los Angeles County. Why do not the officials of other counties take action? The Whites' welfare should have a stronger appeal than the yellows' influence.

Divisionists in Los Angeles, displeased because the people approved the federal reapportionment plan at the November election, are again talking division of the State of California. And, because of the situation regarding representation in the California Federation of Women's Clubs, the division-propaganda is winning converts among the members of the Angel City's women's clubs. Commenting on the subject, the "Santa Barbara Press" of December 4 said, editorially:

"Division talk may be a mere screen for the politicians of the southland in driving a bargain with the remainder of the state for concessions—and again it may not. The politicians of Los Angeles are ambitious political bosses. If the statutes of the state permit the formation of a new state out of the southern half of California, there is grave danger that Los Angeles will eventually, if not now, take advantage of the provision. It would not help the remainder of the southland, however."

All in favor of a One California—and they constitute a great majority of the citizenry, we believe,—should keep a careful watch on the divisionists and not permit them to quietly slip something over.

The annual report of Governor W. R. Farrington of Hawaii to the secretary of the Federal Interior Department, made public December 3, said, among other things: "The present population, totaling 348,767, is made up as follows: Americans and Europeans, 64,397; Hawaiian, 20,720; part Hawaiian, 25,985; Filipino, 8,208; Japanese, 83,252; Chinese, 15,058; others, 10,657—all of whom are citizens of the United States—and 120,491 aliens."

Consider those Jap figures, 83,252, "citizens

THE NEVADANS

(MRS. FRANK ELLIS HUMPHREY, Past Grand President N.D.G.W.)

"THE PURPOSE OF THIS ORGANIZATION shall be for mutual benefit, mental improvement and social intercourse of its members; to preserve in the minds of all native Nevadans the memories of the days when the Territory of Nevada flourished in the wealth as taken from its mines and from its other natural resources; to perpetuate the history of the Battle-born State from territorial days to the present and for all time; to promote the welfare of all the people of this great commonwealth, and to encourage an interest in all matters and measures relating to the material interests and to the upbuilding of the State of Nevada." Thus reads the preamble to the constitution of the Nevadans as adopted at a meeting a few days ago when this state-wide organization was formally launched in the City of Reno.

And so, the native sons of another Western state pledge loyalty to the home of their birth, and to the nation as well.

The "Sagebrush State," fourth in size in the United States, has a history quite as romantic as our own California, and restoring and preserving her historic landmarks, collecting and making known her interesting history, will be a joy to those who have placed their names upon the membership roll of the Nevadans.

It is generally believed that a White man did not cross Nevada territory until 1775, when a Franciscan friar, Francisco Garcés, passed through from east to west on his way to California. In 1843, John Fremont, also on his way to California, passed through the same territory.

In 1848 the United States, through the treaty of Guadalupe Hidalgo, acquired the territory from Mexico and made it a county of California. Settlements were made at various places, by immigrants from other states farther east as early as 1845, and four years later the Mormons established a trading post near the present site of Genoa, a small town near Carson City.

In 1850 a part of the territory was incorporated into the newly-organized Utah Territory. Residents of Carson Valley, claiming that they were not properly protected under the Utah government, in 1853 and 1856 asked to be annexed to California. A provincial government was established at Carson City in 1858.

The most important and interesting phase of Nevada's history, which thrills the heart of every native today, came when the Immortal Abraham Lincoln, in his great desire to abolish slavery, besought Congress to amend the Constitution of the United States. In canvassing the possibility of passage of the bill, it was found that one more vote was necessary to make the required three-fourths. Nevada Territory, always loyal, was chosen to make passage of the measure possible, and so, on October 31, 1864, Nevada was admitted to statehood.

From early history, we find the interests of California and Nevada closely interwoven. A sincere friendliness is always apparent, and now, with the organization of the Nevadans and the congratulations and co-operation of the Order of Native Sons of the Golden West, an enduring friendship between the Golden State and the Silver State is assured.

While Californians sing: "Sun and dews that kiss it, balmy winds that blow, the stars in clustered diadems upon its peaks of snow, the mighty mountains o'er it, below, the white seas swirled, just California, stretching down the middle of the world," Nevadans are singing the praises of their state in these words: "We love your plains and your mountains high, your rocks and your sagebrush too, your flowers gay, and deserts gray, and skies of brilliant blue; we love the songs of the birds that sing, the winds and the sunset's hue, for east and west, we love you best, Nevada, we love you."

ON THE TRAIL OF THE CALIFORNIA FILIBUSTERS IN MEXICAN ARCHIVES

Rufus Kay Wyllys

THE ORDER OF NATIVE SONS OF THE Golden West saw fit, through the University of California, to award me in March of 1928 one of the two annual Native Sons of the Golden West Fellowships in Pacific Coast History. It is the purpose of the following paper to give some idea of the use to which this fellowship has been put.

As a graduate student at the University of California, I had become deeply interested in the careers of a group of men known collectively in California history as "the filibusters." Much had been written concerning the enterprises of these persons, but always simply as they were known to Californians of their day. Little or nothing had been discovered, from the Mexican viewpoint, of the deeds of Gaston de Raousset-Boulbon, William Walker, Henry Crabb and others of their type. And since a fair judgment of these or other historical characters requires the presentation of evidence on both sides of the story, it became my object to gain access to the Mexican records dealing with the adventurous expeditions of the California filibusters.

In the years immediately following the gold rush and the admission of California to statehood, numerous projects were set on foot to emulate the overland expeditions of Fremont and others by which California (and, somewhat earlier, Texas) had been acquired. These later expeditions were for the most part directed toward the revolutionizing of Sonora and Lower California, and took place in the decade of the fifties. They were somewhat furthered, as it seems, by the rather unfortunate policy of the Mexican government itself in the early years of the decade, a policy of planting military-agricultural colonies along the Sonora frontier for the purpose of defense against the frequent raids of the border Indians, and also, perhaps, to offset the advance of American settlement.

The first expedition of this type was probably honestly organized as one of the military colonies, by a Frenchman, Marquis Charles de Pindray, in 1851-1852. It was proposed to plant a military colony of California Frenchmen at Cocóspera, in northern Sonora. But the project ended miserably in the death of De Pindray and the desertion of most of his men.

Another and more ambitious plan was evolved in the agile brain of the most famous of the filibusters of Sonora, Count Gaston de Raousset-Boulbon, also an expatriated Frenchman, who had been attracted to California during the gold rush. His proposal, sanctioned by the Mexican government and the French ambassador to Mexico, and financed by a great French banking house in Mexico City, was to lead a military force of Frenchmen to the "mines of Arizona," and to work them while at the same time serving as defenders of the frontier. The expedition, of some two hundred Frenchmen, was at first welcomed by the Sonora government and people, as prospective defenders; but disagreements with the Mexican military authorities led to open hostilities, the capture of the City of Hermosillo by the French, the proclamation of the independence of Sonora by Raousset-Boulbon, and then, ignominious surrender to the enveloping Mexican forces and the deportation of the French, late in 1852. Raousset-Boulbon then spent a year in fruitless negotiations at Mexico City, for the renewal of his scheme, of which the Mexican government, not without reason, had become suspicious.

Meanwhile, William Walker, "the grey-eyed man of destiny," as he was called, greatest adventurer of his day, began his checkered career as a filibuster by leading a band of kindred reckless spirits to La Paz, in Lower California. Here, after capturing the town, he boldly proclaimed the "Republic of Lower California," to which he later generously annexed (on paper) the State of Sonora. His was the first frankly revolutionary expedition to Mexican soil from California. He was unable, however, to hold his position in La Paz, and was forced to sail up the western coast of the peninsula to Ensenada, not far south of San Diego. From Ensenada, encouraged by the arrival of recruits from Alta California, he rashly attempted to invade Sonora, with disastrous results, and was soon afterward forced back over the international line, to stand trial at San Francisco for his first violation of the federal neutrality laws and be triumphantly acquitted, in 1854. Having been Herewith is a brief report by Rufus K. Wyllys, Native Sons Traveling Fellow in Pacific Coast History, telling of his six months' work in the archives of Mexico. Numerous historians have told the story of the California filibusters in Lower California and Sonora on the basis of American documents. But there was another side to the story, and no one hitherto has investigated the archives of Mexico with a view to seeing these episodes from the Mexican side.

Wyllys has accomplished a highly important mission for the advancement of California history. He has intelligently and patiently investigated the Mexican archives and has brought back to the Bancroft Library nearly five thousand pages of hitherto unused historical documents relating to these filibustering expeditions. He will spend the rest of the year in writing up the results of his investigations, and I predict that the outcome will be a fresh, interesting, and important new book on Pacific Coast history.—DR. HERBERT E. BOLTON, chairman of the Department of History and director of the Bancroft Library, University of California.

disappointed in Mexico, he passed on to other exploits in Central America, and outside the scope of this study.

In the same year Raousset-Boulbon sent his second expedition to Sonora, in search of empire. The wily Mexican president, Santa Anna, sought to forestall him by enlisting, through the Mexican consul in San Francisco, a battalion of Frenchmen, Germans, Irishmen and Chileans for service in the Mexican regular army. But soon after the arrival of these men at Guaymas, Raousset-Boulbon himself appeared upon the scene, whereupon it developed that a majority of the Frenchmen in the battalion, many of whom had shared in the 1852 expedition, were in favor of following the lead of the bold, if rather erratic, French nobleman. The Mexican comandante at Guaymas, General José María Yañez, suspecting the trend of affairs, was ready to accept the challenge thrown down by Raousset-Boulbon; and in a short but lively battle in the streets of Guaymas, July 13, 1854, the French were completely defeated and forced to surrender at discretion. But all were pardoned or escaped with light penalties save Raousset-Boulbon himself, whose stormy career was ended by a firing-squad a month later.

The last of the French expeditions from California occurred in the following year. This fiasco was led by Jean Napoleon Zerman, a veteran French naval officer, exiled from France by the revolution of 1848. His expedition appears to have been auxiliary to the outbreak called, in Mexican history, the revolution of Ayutla, begun in the State of Guerrero against the old dictator, Santa Anna. But, stopping in La Paz on his way from San Francisco to Acapulco, Zerman and all his followers were seized and imprisoned.

Two years later came the last and most tragic of the California filibustering expeditions. Henry Crabb, California politician and old schoolmate of William Walker, sought to emulate his friend by organizing an expedition ostensibly to work the mines in the recently acquired Gadsden Purchase, but in reality, it seems, to take advantage of a state of civil war in Sonora. His plan was to send one branch of his expedition by sea to the coast of Sonora, and to lead the other branch himself into Sonora overland from the lower reaches of the Colorado River. But, arrived in northwestern Sonora, he discovered the Mexican national guards awaiting him, and at Caborca he was surrounded and forced to surrender. The next day he and about sixty of his men were executed, only one person, a boy, being spared to tell the story.

The foregoing is a very brief sketch of the filibusters of California. Various studies have been made of these men and their deeds, but not one of these studies has involved full use of documents in Mexican archives, nor have they considered the background and essential unity of the filibustering movement of the '50s. All have been written from the American or French point of view exclusively, and all have arrived at essentially the same conclusions. But a story told from only one point of view is a story only half told, and it was for this reason that I wished to investigate the Mexican records concerning the deeds of the California filibusters.

The question of expense was a seemingly insurmountable obstacle to the realization of this dream. But, thanks to the kindly interest and encouragement of Dr. Herbert E. Bolton, I was enabled to persevere in my studies of this subject, and joy was unconfined when the announcement came that research in the archives of Mexico would be made possible by the grant of the traveling fellowship from the Order of Native Sons of the Golden West.

Leaving Berkeley at the close of the regular university session in May, I arrived in Mexico City May 29. Several days were spent in getting acquainted with the city, and in improving my knowledge of the Spanish language. Then, about the middle of June, application was made to the United States Embassy for assistance in gaining access to the public records of Mexico. David Schoenfeldt, then acting United States Ambassador in the absence of Ambassador Morrow, provided me with letters of introduction, and by this means I was favorably presented to Señor Genaro Estrada, sub-secretary of foreign relations of Mexico. He in turn very kindly secured permission for me to work in the Archivo General de la Nación. There, with the help of Señores Rafael López (director of the archive) and Nicolás Rangel, I was able to begin work. In all my research in the capital, the way was pointed by Bolton's "Guide to the Archives of Mexico," published in 1913.

Little was found in the Archivo General bearing on the subject of the California filibusters, for the materials therein chiefly date back beyond the period 1850-1860, in which occurred the events studied. But from the Archive of the Secretaría de Gobernación a great number of documents were brought to the Archivo General, and space there was provided for the work of the copyists hired. The documents from the Secretaría de Gobernación were of a nature to provide much of the Mexican background of the California filibustering expeditions, namely, the military frontier colonies of the early '50s. It is believed that they will prove to be valuable in other respects as well. There were a few rare old periodicals in the Archivo General itself, which also contained material useful for the purpose, and from which selections were copied.

Having completed the copying in the Archivo General, the next step was to investigate the materials available in the Archive of the Secretaría de Relaciones Exteriores, or Foreign Relations. This is a well-kept archive, but at the time of my investigations was undergoing reclassification. Due to this fact, it was somewhat difficult to locate materials which were known to be there. But many valuable documents were nevertheless found and copied, most of them bearing on the expeditions of Jean Napoleon Zerman and William Walker. Much of the success in this archive was due to the kind assistance of Señor Hernández, the archivero, who in the midst of the business of reorganization of the archive found time to extricate valuable materials from the confusion, for my use. A large number of clippings from old California newspapers were found among these documents, indicating that the Mexican consular and diplomatic officials of the day were by no means indifferent to the imminence of the filibustering attacks.

While at work in the Archive of the Secretaría de Relaciones Exteriores, time was found also to negotiate for permission to investigate the Archive of the Secretaría de Guerra y Marina. This proved to be rather more difficult of access than were the other archives, but eventually I was admitted to the records, through the kindness of General Amaro, secretary of war. Of all the documents found in Mexico, by far the most valuable, for a study of the California filibusters, were located in the War Archive. Here was complete documentary evidence on William Walker, on both of the expeditions of Raousset-Boulbon, and more than enough on the expedition of Henry Crabb. Concerning the last-named filibuster, a valuable discovery was the complete "sumaria," or report, written of this expedition and the means of defense taken against it, by General José María Yañez, comandante general of the west coast states of Mexico in 1857. More than half of the copying of the documents was done in the War Archive, which was well organized and easily investigated, once access was secured. The orderlies took a deep personal interest in the work, and offered suggestions to me, and I was often surrounded by genial commentators in khaki. Many thanks are due especially to Colonel Méndez, the chief archivero.

By the end of October I was ready to leave Mexico City for the west coast. At Mazatlán Sinaloa, a week was spent investigating documents in the files of the United States Consulate. Some very useful transcripts were made therein, for which thanks are due to Consul William P. Blocker and Vice-Consul Waldo E. Bailey. Another week, at Guaymas, Sonora, was even more profitable. Here was found tangible evidence of the expedition of Raousset-Boulbon in 1854. Some of the buildings historic in the battle of July 13, 1854, are still standing, old French cannon are to be seen at street corners

THE HAND OF MAN— A STORY OF THE FORESTS

Southard M. Modry

SOME DAY, SOME WHERE, MEN WILL cease erecting monuments to the heroes of the past and the benefactors of the human race, just long enough to erect an obelisk to the "Men Who Forgot," and that monument will be a reminder to all men of the frailty of human endeavor. Among the most prominent names at the base of the obelisk will be those who, through the ages, contributed most to the destruction of man's greatest benefactor, the forest.

It is inconceivable, but nevertheless true, that the greatest destroyer is man himself. And it is also true that, in this supposed age of reason, the civilized man far surpasses his uncivilized brother as a destructive agent. Where Nature endeavors to build up and replace, the ruthless hand of man, always contrary, pulls down, destroys and desolates, leaving in his wake a fruitless desert which even Nature herself cannot gain populate with her children, the forests and the wild things.

Centuries gone, when man was but an infant in knowledge, and all things beyond his comprehension were supernatural and clothed with mysterious power; when the sun, the moon, the stars, the elements and all things humans could not understand were deified and controlled by the gods, the forests were inhabited by satyrs, fairies, genii, gnomes and other creatures possessed of miraculous powers. Some were the enemies of mankind, and others friends and benefactors. At that age, mankind came to the realization that the tree was his friend. As time went on, it provided him with food, shelter and even clothing. It furnished cover for the game he hunted, fuel with which to cook his food and, later on, the means to navigate streams and other bodies of water.

Comparatively recently, as we count time, these beliefs and legends persisted, and thus we find, just previous to our own period, the Teutonic tribes of Europe giving to each tree in the forest a nymph, a good fairy you might say, who was forever watchful of the welfare of man. The Druids venerated the oak, and other races their giants of the forest. Thus did man, in ignorance and superstition, give credit to his best friend which his descendants, in this more enlightened age, fail to recognize. Possibly our forefathers were not so far off in their beliefs, for they distinguished good from evil and sought to protect rather than to destroy.

"This is the forest primeval!" In how many and days throughout the world can men stand and utter that phrase? We read in the Holy Book that "Moses led the children of Israel out of Egypt into a land overflowing with milk and honey." At that time, evidently, Palestine possessed all the natural advantages of California and supported a population many times that of today. For centuries, Palestine has been despoiled and desecrated until it is absolutely denuded of forest cover. The first step in the restoration of that country, when the Zionist movement gained momentum after the great war, was the planting of trees, to make the land habitable again. Yet away back in 465 B.C., Artaxerxes I, ruler of the empire of the Persians and the Medes, recognizing the result of forest exhaustion, attempted to regulate the cutting of the famous forests of cedar upon Mount Lebanon.

Our scientists place the location of the Garden of Eden in Mesopotamia, watered by the Tigris and the Euphrates. Yet, today we find the sword of General Yañez adorns the town-hall museum, monuments and plazas commemorate the victory of the Mexican soldiery who fought in that engagement, and one stately, dignified, old Mexican gentleman can recall seeing, as a child, the debacle and execution of Raousset-Boulbon. To the hospitable people of Guaymas the events of July 1854 are still very vivid and fresh, being revived annually by appropriate celebrations. Herbert S. Bursley (United States Consul), Señor Alejandro Ibarri, Señor Don José A. Márquez and M. Villedent (Consul of France) are especially to be gratefully remembered for assistance rendered. Finally, two weeks were spent in beautiful Hermosillo, capital of Sonora, where many officially printed documents were copied in the archives of the State of Sonora. But little was found therein which had not already been copied in Mexico City, but that little was well worth the copying. Señor Baltazar Gutiérrez, the archivero, was

At the Forty-ninth Grand Parlor of the Order of Native Sons of the Golden West, held at Santa Rosa, Sonoma County, a resolution was passed creating a Forestry and Reforestation Committee, as it was deemed appropriate that the Native Sons of the Golden West should take action toward the protection of California's magnificent, but fast diminishing, forests. At the Fifty-fifth Grand Parlor, held at San Pedro, Los Angeles County, the delegates had the pleasure of hearing a fine address by George L. Barnes of the Green Cross Association on the protection of the forests and the reforestation of the cut-over and burned forested areas. That address brought to the attention of the delegates the necessity for immediate action, and especially did it fire enthusiasm in the soul of Southard M. Modry of Bret Harie Parlor No. 260 of San Francisco. He went home, filled with the desire to do something for the cause of forestry in this wonderful state, obtained literature from Europe and from many states in the United States, studied the forestry laws of the world, and prepared a well-thought-out plan for an ideal forestry and reforestation bill to present to the Grand Parlor and to the next Legislature of the State of California.

The proposed bill was presented to the Fifty-first Grand Parlor at Redding, Shasta County, last May, and after discussion was placed in the hands of the Forestry Committee to present to the State Board of Forestry. That was done soon after the Grand Parlor session, and a meeting was held by the state board to discuss the bill with Modry and the chairman of the Native Sons' committee. The United States Forest Service was also represented at the meeting. After the discussion, it was stated the board was preparing a new forestry bill for consideration by the next State Legislature and that Modry's proposals would be considered at that time. Soon after this meeting Modry was requested to be a member of the committee revising the state's present forestry laws.

Modry has written an excellent story for The Grizzly Bear, the first chapter of which appears herewith. He has given the subject of forestry thorough study, and is well qualified to present views that are not only interesting to read, but which should bring to the attention of all the necessity of protecting our standing timber and reforesting our denuded former forests. I congratulate him on the good work he is doing, and hope that the articles will result in the general public viewing the cause as we professional foresters, who have made forestry a life work, see it.—RICHARD L. P. BIGELOW, Chairman Grand Parlor N.S.G.W. Forestry and Reforestation Committee.

that territory a desolate waste which once supported teeming millions of people. History tells us, "The City of Babylon covered an area of thirty square miles, contained a population of about thirty millions of people, and was surrounded by walls three hundred feet high and broad enough at the top for two chariots to drive abreast." Just imagine a city of thirty million souls, and then consider that there were many cities in that country in those days approaching the size of Babylon.

It seems that, the longer a civilization persists, the more fatal is the hand of man. Thus do we find in China, whose civilization dates back over four thousand years, an almost total absence of forest cover, with the resultant devastating floods which yearly sweep down through the valleys of the Yangtze-kiang and its tributaries, carrying everything before them and costing the lives of thousands through death and starvation. Yet, back there in the dim past, China was a well-wooded country whose forests held back this raging flood and benignly blessed the country they looked down on.

Truly, the hand of man is the greatest destroyer, and the hand of the present-day man far greater than its predecessor. For, as you will later be shown, the present-day man destroys in a decade where it took his progenitors centuries to despoil. The savage and also the man of previous eras realized the tree was their friend, while in this modern age, having formed a habit of feeding ourselves from cans, we lose sight of the original source of production.

It is recorded that William the Norman, conqueror of England, destroyed vast areas of culmost helpful and kind. From Hermosillo I crossed the border to Tucson, Arizona, where a few days were spent in search of evidence on Henry Crabb's expedition. Thence I returned to Berkeley, after an absence of six months and one day.

The trip, on the whole, was highly successful in its primary objective—the gathering of Mexican documents on the California filibusters. Over 4,500 pages of document transcripts have been made for the files of the Bancroft Library of the University of California. In addition, maps and photographs have been obtained which will help to make clear a proposed history of the California filibusters, whose exploits give so much color to the story of the Pacific Coast in the '50s. For all these, and for the opportunity to study at first hand an interesting nation and a wonderful country, I wish to express my heartfelt gratitude to the Order of Native Sons of the Golden West.

tivated lands and even tore down villages, to create the famous Sherwood forest and other forest lands. Possibly he is our first advocate of re-forestation, and might have been animated by a more noble desire than just merely to create a game preserve.

Forest lands act like a sponge—they hold the moisture after the rain and snow, preventing the waters from rushing down to the rivers and carrying with them the soil and alluvion, and thus leaving the mountains bare rock, where even grass will not grow.

CALIFORNIA'S WONDERLAND

CITY AND COUNTY

EUROPE, THROUGH CALIFORNIA EYES

(EARL LEMOINE.)

"LEAIVING CHAMONIX, MOUNT Blanc was ever in sight as we passed through Le Fayet, Plumet and Ugines, finally arriving at Alherville, where Mount Blanc was lost sight of. From here, going over some of the most beautiful mountain roads in Savoy, we passed through Frontenex, Miolan, St. Pierre de Alle, Montmillian, Pontcharra, Goncelin, Tencin, and late in the afternoon arrived at Grenoble, one of Europe's most interesting cities. Across the River Isere is the old Roman part of the city, with walls and buildings dating back to B. C. Here is located the renowned college of international law. Grenoble is the capital of Dauphine, from which province the French gave their young kings the name of Dauphin. Here is the tomb of the great knight of the fifteenth century, De Bayard, a beautiful monument of the sixteenth century and the ancient garden of the kings. The Valley of Vencon, with ever-blooming flowers, thriving vineyards and productive orchards, is a wonderful sight.

"A twelve-mile drive brought us to the Grande Chateau de Vizille, which especially interested the writer, for here Guillaume LeMoine planned and built this great edifice, the foundations of which were laid in 1601 and which took twenty-four years to complete. Jacob Richier, the great bronze sculptor, was there for sixteen years, and his horses of Neptune are among the world's masterpieces. A rippling brook flows through the 6,000-acre estate. Napoleon camped in the courtyard on his way to Italy in his first campaign. Strange to say, there have been designers and builders in the LeMoine family since 1181.

"Leaving Grenoble and following the path trod by Napoleon and his illustrious soldiers who won that dashing Italian campaign with almost nothing but valor, we passed through Uriage, Vizille, Laffery, Pierre, Chatel, La Mure and St. Bonnet and arrived at Gap, from where a magnificent panorama came to view. The hillside houses with overhanging balconies and artistic balustrades were very picturesque. Over some of the roads we traveled many of the Crusaders marched a thousand years before to Palestine. Continuing through Charges, Prunieres and Savines we entered the fertile valley of the River Uhoie, where quantities of grain are produced. Near La Lauzet is a 12,000-foot peak named Pre Coolidge. An interesting little town is Barcelonnette, founded in the eleventh century. Among the outstanding historic features of the place are the graves, some of the monuments dating back hundreds of years. Nestled at the foot of the Basse Alps, many Chasseurs de Alps—the famous blue devils who visited the White House in Washington, D. C., during the latter part of the late war—are to be seen here, for a short distance away in the mountains is their headquarters.

"Leaving here, we passed through D'Allos, near the pretty lake of that name; Colmars, where stands a fort over 1,500 years old; Beuvezer, Annot and Pont de Gueydan. Then came Entrevaux, a city part Roman and part Gallic, which flourished before the time of Christ. Some fine pictures of this historic spot were filmed. Then Pugettheiniers, the ancient home of the man our northern sound was named after. On the last leg of the trip to Nice, for miles we rode through a marvelous flower garden, for in this section the flowers are raised for the world's most famous perfume factories at Grasse, France.

"Nice, known the world over, was eventually reached, and from here a superb view of the Blue Mediterranean was had. Here are some of the oldest relics of man, this region being known as the land of the Phoenicians during the Jewish regime in Palestine before the fame of Rome spread north. A great sight to behold is the color of the sea changing from emerald-green to cobalt-blue. From here we visited the great Tower of Augustus, built in 24 B. C.; it sits upon the Hill La Turbie and rises 1,500 feet. Also Genoa, the superb city of palaces, and the birthplace of Columbus. Among its palaces the most interesting is the Palazzo Doria. The cathedral is a charming pile, mingling the styles Romanesque, Gothic and Renaissance. Also the town of Eze, built by the Phoenicians upon solid rock in 600 B. C., and Monaco, with its great gambling palace of Monte Carlo, one of the costliest buildings of its size in the world. The little Province of Monaco is independent, but under the protectorate of France. We visited the Museum Oceanographic, in which the collection from the Arctic regions is said to be the most complete in the world. From Nice the journey will be continued along the Riviera to Marseilles, etc."

"HEY, RUBE!"

The familiar old circus call for aid rang out at the First National Studios one day on "The Barker" set and was the signal for one of the liveliest free-for-all fights that has ever been recorded by a motion-picture camera.

George Fitzmaurice, who directed this super talking picture which is now attracting crowds to the Carthy Circle Theater, is a stickler for realism. The carnival show grounds were the real article, for an entire carnival was purchased for use in the picture. And the crowds gathered for the big light scene were typical of such a gang. Hard-looking characters representing late and half-drunken millhands in a manufacturing town; equally hard-bolled show-people and all of the principals, including Milton Sills, Dorothy Mackall, Betty Compson, Douglas Fairbanks Jr. and George Cooper, were in the fray.

The show was about wrecked—this being a part of the picture—and excitement was rampant. Nobody was seriously hurt, but plenty of the extras and featured players carried marks of the battle for days.

As an added attraction the Carthay Circle Theater is presenting Gus Edwards' "International Revue" in technicolor, with talking, singing, dancing and color all combined for the first time in a motion picture. Carl Ellnor's famous symphonic concert orchestra is heard in concert at each of the two performances daily, which start at 2:15 and 8:30 p. m. Upon the spacious grounds in front of the theater is a complete carnival sideshow, and everything is free.

ADDED CHRISTMAS CHEER FOR HOMELESS.

Mrs. Herman Edward Hertz's term as president of Californiana Parlor No. 247 N.D.G.W. will terminate in January, when the newly-elected officers, with Mrs. Arthur Wright as president, will be installed. The Parlor has been organized but six months, but has accomplished a great deal. In addition to taking a prominent part in all Native Daughter affairs, it has been a liberal contributor to all functions held jointly with the Native Sons. Its membership now numbers 125, and many pioneer families are represented upon its roster-roll.

The homeless children of California had one additional box added to their Christmas cheer when Californiana had an enthusiastic all-day meeting December 11. Each member brought two attractive garments for the kiddies to add to the layettes completed at the home of Mrs.

MRS. HERMAN EDWARD HERTZ.

Ralph Tuttle, with Mrs. C. W. Decker as chairman of the committee. Mrs. Isabella Joughin Granz, chairman of the Parlor's hospitality committee, arranged a luncheon, with Mms. Charles W. Decker, William T. Hearst, Edward Reaves Taber, Milo Aylward, Alfred Ross Sitton, Charles Meade, George F. Parris and Augusta Corbitt assisting. The newly-elected officers were guests of honor, among them being Mrs. Arthur Wright, president; Mrs. W. H. Chambers, first vice-president; Mrs. A. O. Evans, second vice-president; Mrs. Leiland Atherton Irish, third vice-president; Mrs. William Behm, treasurer; Mrs. C. E. Noerenberg, financial secretary, and Miss Florence Steinike, recording secretary.

Following the business meeting, which was presided over by Mrs. Herman Edward Hertz, president, the following program was presented: Miss Helen St. Rayner, soprano, with Milona Moore at the piano; Helen Wells Johnson, lecture, "The Story of the Christmas Star," and Master Gordon Thorpe, pianologue.

CALIFORNIA HAPPENINGS OF FIFTY YEARS AGO

Thomas R. Jones

(COMPILED EXPRESSLY FOR THE GRIZZLY BEAR.)

A HOAR-FROST COVERED CALIFORNIA North, New Year Day 1879. Ice two and a half inches thick formed upon pools, and engines arriving at Sacramento City over the Southern Pacific had icicles a foot and more in length hanging from their tenders. At Santa Barbara, a terrific gale ushered in the day, and rain fell in torrents. Houses, barns and outbuildings were blown down, trees were uprooted, a ninety-foot wharf was carried away by a schooner being blown through it, and an immense amount of damage was done both in the city and the adjoining country. During the squall 3.72 inches of rain fell.

Bakersfield, Kern County, had a blinding sandstorm January 1 and 2, and San Diego County was drenched with 2.13 inches of rain. The cold spell in the northern part of the state was routed by a rainstorm January 3. Other mild storms followed, and during the month 3.29 inches of rain fell, bringing the season's total to 5 inches—enough to restore hope, but not sufficient to assure full crops.

Though cold and damp, New Year was an ideal day for calling, and the custom was observed throughout the state. Matrons of Sacramento City, believing that much of the inebriety characterizing the day resulted from the serving of drinks where "open house" was maintained, introduced an innovation—and served no liquor. One state official, after visiting more than forty homes in his calling expedition, confidentially told a friend he had not been invited to have a single drink, and so had to buy his own.

A Sacramento City young man called on his

"sweetie" who, when he rang the doorbell, was sewing upon a chemise. It was hastily dropped upon a chair in which the caller seated himself. She was too bashful to inform him of the fact, and he, glancing downward and backward, noticed hanging over the side of the chair something white which, he surmised, was his shirt-tail. Surreptitiously, and avoiding the glances of the young woman, he began tucking the thing back where he thought it belonged, and at length succeeding in stowing it away, he departed. The chemise returned by express to its owner the next day.

Statistics published this month showed that in 1878 California produced $18,920,609 in gold and silver, while Nevada State produced $35,181,000, nearly all of which came into California. In the two states seventy-six mines were producing. From $3,000,000 in January of 1878, dividends fell to $1,000,000 in January of 1879. The 1878 California wool clip amounted to 41,402,500 pounds, about 10,000,000 pounds less than in 1877.

The New State Constitution Convention continued in session at Sacramento, going over the 100-day limit this month, and the end was not in sight. The $150,000 expense appropriation was exhausted the eighty-sixth day, but the convention's credit apparently was good, for the daily sessions went on.

MAMMOTH CAVE DISCOVERED.

Deunis Kearney went before the San Francisco Grand Jury January 2 and asked that several city officials be indicted for defrauding the city; he said he could furnish proof. During the month he delivered several sand-lot diatribes against the jury and the savings banks.

The California Pioneer Association of Sacramento had its annual reunion January 8, Joseph Winans delivering the main address.

Captain G. Watson, at his Austin Creek ranch in Marin County, killed a California lion measuring eight feet four inches.

John Charlton killed a forty-six-pound beaver near Vallejo, Solano County.

A twenty-seven-pound trout, caught in Lake Tahoe, was on exhibition in Truckee, Nevada County.

Fifteen-year-old Susie Jones, noticing that dogs had treed something near her Stanislaus County home, took a rifle and proceeded to investigate. A California lion leaped out and, pursued by the dogs, escaped to another tree a mile away. Susie followed, and killed the lion.

Hunting along Lost Creek, Plumas County, a Frenchman named Tebeau unexpectedly met a grizzly bear, which he shot at and wounded. The bear making for Tebeau, he dropped his gun and sought safety in a small pine tree. Standing erect, the bear clawed at him and tore off his breeches, and then unsuccessfully tried to reach him from a large adjacent tree. Finally the bear retired a short distance, and then Tebeau descended and secured his gun. Taking another shot, he went in one direction with his shirttail flapping in the breeze, while the grizzly scampered off in another.

January 4, near Sonora, Tuolumne County, a mammoth cave was discovered. Over a mile in length, magnificent stalactites were hanging everywhere, and there were many chambers, some sixty feet long by thirty feet wide.

California lions made a raid upon the Norris goat ranch near Carpinteria, Santa Barbara County, one night and killed twenty-two goats.

Through the overflow of the San Gabriel River, a lake upon the Dominguez Rancho, near Wilmington, Los Angeles County, became filled with trout, and when the water receded they became easy prey for the ranchers thereabouts.

A bunch of ripe dates, from a date-palm upon the Solano County ranch of S. C. Wolfskill, was on exhibition this month. The fruit was from a twenty-four-year-old palm, grown from a planted date-seed.

To protect their field from wild geese which were destructive to sprouting grain, Boyle & Evans, Gridley, Butte County, farmers, had cast a cannon four feet long and six inches in diameter.

Placer diggings found by George Hall in San Francisco Canyon, north of Newball, Los Angeles County, were yielding eight cents in gold per bucket of gravel and were attracting public attention.

VIGILANTES MURDER INDIANS.

The discovery, in the north end of Lake County, of a big cinnabar lode caused great excitement. Traced for several miles, cinnabar in large blocks was exposed at numerous points. The find, made by Charles Rice, was along the South Fork of Eel River.

A reported discovery of float gold quartz about forty miles from San Luis Obispo City sent over 400 men stampeding there to make locations.

Trial of the biggest land suit brought in California was begun this month in the Santa Clara County district court. It was for the partition of the 20,518-acre Los Amigos Rancho in that county, and there were 1,082 defendants. The City of Gilroy was located upon a portion of the acreage.

A Stockton, San Joaquin County, woman was daily annoyed by tramps asking for a meal. Invariably they wanted to saw wood in payment. So, she bought some four-foot wood and had it piled close to the kitchen door, and no more tramps appeared.

In May of 1878, Billy Ross, a Mariposa County Digger Indian, killed a rancher named Thompson, and a vigilance committee of ranchers failed in an attempt to take him from the jail for a "necktie" party. This month he was tried and convicted, but given life imprisonment. The vigilantes made another attempt to lynch the Indian, but were frustrated by the sheriff, who rushed him to Merced City, the distance being covered, via horseback, in two hours and forty minutes. Foiled in their attempt to "get" Billy, the vigilantes went to the rancheria of his people, and there hung his father, shot his mother to death, executed three bucks and beat the squaws and children. Eight ranchers, five of them said to be prominent church members, were subsequently arrested for committing the crime.

Mrs. Josepha Livermore, relict of Robert Livermore, who gave the Livermore Valley in Alameda County its name, passed away January 16. She was born in the valley in 1810 and had resided there all her life.

Captain John Douglass, Negro, a California Pioneer of 1848, died at Sacramento City January 9. In 1827 he, as a jockey, rode a winner for General Andrew Jackson over the Washington, D. C., racetrack, and during the Mexican War he was a mess-cook for General Zachary Taylor.

Rienzi Hopkins, a leading lawyer, orator and former State Senator of Calaveras County, died at San Andreas January 2.

The barns of J. W. Grigsby near Napa City burned January 22, causing a $20,000 loss. Eight horses were cremated.

Colusa City's Chinatown went up in smoke January 13. One Chinaman was burned to death, and the monetary loss was $20,000.

The store of William McNamara at Table Bluff, Humboldt County, burned January 1, causing a $10,000 loss.

TRAGEDIES NUMEROUS.

Daniel Sullivan, working upon a scaffold in the shaft of Lake County's Sulphur Bank quick-silver mine, fell into the sump containing water at a temperature of 180 degrees, and was scalded to death.

In the Succor mine near Iowa Hill, Placer County, January 15 a box containing forty pounds of frozen giant-powder cartridges was placed in a crevice and a hot rock placed upon the top of the box to thaw the explosives. Stansbury Smith, a carman, came opposite the box as it exploded and he was blown to atoms.

Hiking in Niles Canyon, Alameda County, New Year Day, Pat Fitzgerald fell off a 160-foot cliff and was killed. His remains were not found until four days later.

A Hindu sailor died aboard a ship in San Francisco Harbor and his fellow-countrymen of the crew applied to the city authorities for a permit to cremate the body. It was denied, on the ground that it would be injurious to public health.

A BIT O' FARMING

PREPARED EXPRESSLY FOR THE GRIZZLY BEAR BY M. H. ELLIS

HAS AGRICULTURE REACHED THE saturation point in the matter of production here in California, and must we wait until the population of the world increases before the areas devoted to farming are extended? There are those who would have us believe that is just the condition; but on the other hand, there are those who believe that plantings in California should continue. The correct answer seems to be the guess of the person speaking.

This much, however, may be granted. At the present time and under present conditions, the production of all the California specialty crops is apace with consumption. In many instances, it seems too far ahead. But that does not mean agriculture is not a paying industry in California, or that it will not continue to be. There have been, and will always be, in industry those manufacturers who cannot keep pace with the leaders. Business has evidenced this condition times without number. Agriculture is no different. There are those who are making money in farming; there are those who are not.

In former years, the farmer planted and reaped, and sold his crop for what it would bring. The increased values of his holdings were his real profits. Those days have passed. The country is settled from ocean to ocean, and land values will increase only as profit from production does. Now the farmer, if he is to be successful, must be a man who can show profits year by year on his enterprise, just as does the manufacturer or businessman. Dull years may be interspersed with bright ones, of course; but over a period of years he must make money. The good farmer, just as the good man in other lines, will prosper. That does not mean his condition need not be bettered. Factories would fail if the tariff were removed; agriculture has just as sore need of protection.

But viewing the question from an unbiased point of view, it appears that if the farmer knows his business, and pays attention to it, he has a fair chance to succeed in this state. But until some inequalities of production are equalized, there is no need of any great expansion in agriculture in California, nor much hope of success for it.

WHAT TO PLANT?

Three years ago the farm organizations of California appealed to the University of California to start some research into the conditions of the principal California crops. This was done, and some fifteen or twenty bulletins have been issued showing the history, the present, and the probable future of these crops. No advice is given as to the course farmers should pursue in regard to raising these crops; the facts are given and the farmers are to draw their own conclusions. Taking them as a whole, the bulletins show practically every crop in the state, so far surveyed, overproduced and with considerable acreages coming into bearing.

Some crops, like grapes, are in bad shape. Some, as apricots and almonds, have been returning a profit, but new plantings will alter this soon. Only two possibilities of future profit appear clear: beef cattle, and grapefruit for summer market. Beef cattle producers are told they may profitably expand somewhat, but that amateurs had better keep out. Growers of grapefruit for summer market may have a chance, but the limitations are such in this crop that there is not much danger of a rush. The answer to the question: what to plant? seems to be, don't.

But, resuming the thought of the first item, there are farmers producing every one of these crops at a profit, where soil and climate are right, where the farm practices are good, and where the farmer is a farmer. California agriculture is all right, if you are a farmer and a good one.

CARE OF ARTICHOKE PLANTS.

As soon as the last picking has been made from the artichoke plants, they should be cut off. Not below the ground, but just at the surface, should the pruning be done, otherwise the buds for the next year's crop, already formed, may be destroyed. It is important to cut the stalks just as soon as the picking has finished, because buds that are permitted to bloom and go to seed take much of the vigor of the plant. Prompt trimming of the stalks has been known to increase the crop of the following year by 50 percent. Whether the artichoke is raised on a commercial scale, or whether it is grown only in the home garden, makes no difference, of course. Except that the practice means dollars in the former case and perhaps only pride or satisfaction in the latter.

WATCH THE FIELD MOUSE.

When spring work opens up and the orchard or vineyard is plowed, take care to provide no refuge for the field mouse near the trunks of trees or vines. If the soil is plowed toward the tree or vine row, and isn't worked down firmly, a haven for the mouse is furnished, and splendid accommodations for nests are given. Protected by the loose soil, which may be in large clods, the mouse raises his family, and the trees and vines suffer. The damage may not show up until summer, when food is scarce, but it will be a little late then to do anything about it. So, when the soil in the orchard is worked in the spring, be sure it is firmed down about the trunks of trees or vines, even if a hoe is required to do the work.

WHEN TO PRUNE THE ORCHARD.

Just when the deciduous fruit orchard should be pruned depends on a lot of things, mainly the inclination of its owner. It seems pretty definitely established that the really best results may be obtained, theoretically, by pruning just before growth starts in the spring. Practically, I have never been able to see much, if any, difference. There are other considerations that must be taken into account. First of all, if a lime-sulphur spray is to be used in the spring, that must go on before the buds break. So the pruning must be done before that time.

Almost every orchardist has something else he wants to do, and is convinced he must do; usually it is done first. Of course, where there are soil conditions that must be reckoned with, soft ground from freezing and thawing or from rains, pruning must depend on that. So that while the work may be done any time from late October until March, and may be best done latest, the safest rule is to get at it as soon as the leaves are all off the trees and the ground is firm beneath the feet. Have the tools sharp; thin the branches rather than cut them back; make the cuts longitudinal with the branch from which the one is removed; and cut out a little more than you think you should.

CLEANUP SPRAY FOR BERRIES.

Mites and mealybugs in the trailer berry patches make it imperative to do some spraying. Oil emulsion is the thing for the bugs, and it is discouraging to the mites. If but one spray is to be used, the best bet is to try a good oil emulsion, thoroughly applied, in February. That will get the mealybugs and there won't be many red berry mites left upon the blackberry vines. If the infestation is heavy, or a better job is wanted, use the oil now and the lime sulphur in the spring. The mealybug probably will show up again in the summer, when the oil emulsion diluted to the summer strength will get them, and any mites that may have been missed.

PROPAGATING WALNUTS.

English walnuts are best grown by grafting upon black walnut stock. Such trees can be purchased from reliable nurserymen; there are those, however, who wish to do their own propagating. Now is the time to start. The black walnuts can be planted in the tree rows, if hit and miss methods are sufficient; where the planting is in earnest it will be found better to sprout the nuts in a sand bed first. This is done by covering the seeds with about three inches of sand, which is kept moist.

Along about February or March, they should be sprouting. At that time dig a few up and see what their stage or progress is. When they sprout, select the hardiest and most vigorous in appearance, and plant them out. It will be safest to put about three or four sprouted nuts where one tree is desired. The seed and care up to this stage have cost little, and from now on it is important to get a tree. When the growth is started and danger of loss is over, select the best of those that have grown, culling out the rest. The young tree then is brought along in the regular way until time for top working.

GUARD AGAINST THRIPS.

The orchardist who suffered loss from thrips last season will make up his mind this winter to avoid repetition of the trouble. In the first place, let the cover crop remain upon the ground as long as it can be safely done, with regard to moisture. Thrips will not come up so quickly from moist, cold ground such as is developed by the cover crop; and too, the more nearly the cover crop reaches maturity, the more good it will do the soil when turned under. Of course, when the buds begin to swell comes the danger time, and only nicotine will control them. But there will be less thrips to control if the cover crop remains on late.

SELECTING THE BROODER.

Baby-chick time is with us again, and there will be many new poultrymen starting in the business, and many old ones buying new equipment. Electric brooders are gaining in popularity, and where the current is available, they are to be recommended. In purchasing the brooder, it is of course important that one be secured that will consume as little current as possible. With this in mind, select one with the hover made from material that is a nonconductor of heat, or that is well insulated. A hover made of material that is a good conductor of heat will heat the whole house instead of the brooder. A curtain around the edge of the hover also will save heat; also, it will go far toward eliminating "hot spots" under the cone.

Ventilation will be properly provided if the hover is raised an inch every week. These same principles apply, of course, to brooders using any other kind of heat.

DIGGING FOR BORER.

If the orchardist failed to protect his trees against the peach root borer last fall by the use of paradichlorobenzene, or PDB as it is popularly known, he now has no recourse but to dig for the worms. It is a good idea to dig around a bit to see if there are any of the white worms working. Gum is the sign. If they are there, a long-bladed knife will get a lot of them; and next fall PDB will be at hand and easier to use.

KILLING MOSS AND LICHENS.

Trees that are covered with moss and lichens should be relieved of this burden during the winter season. When applying the dormant oil spray, add about three pounds of lye or caustic soda to each 100 gallons of the spray. This will clean out the moss. If a dormant oil is not to be used, Bordeaux will kill the parasitic growth when the brown rot spray is applied. Moss and lichens appear to be only a covering upon the limbs; in reality, they are parasites that sap the strength of the tree and should not be overlooked.

BUYING BABY CHICKS.

It will not require much arithmetical ability on the part of the poultryman, prospective or experienced, to see that spending a few cents extra for well-bred baby chicks is going to bring big returns. While the bill for the chicks may be larger, may even be double, the returns are going to be larger out of all proportion, perhaps four or five times. For it must be remembered that a poor-laying hen requires about as much feed as a good one. A few cents difference in a baby chick may mean four or five dozen difference in the number of eggs produced.

With accredited hatcheries available for all parts of the state, the buyer can determine pretty accurately what he may expect from the stock he purchases. Breeding, feeding and housing produce eggs. But all the feed and good houses in the world cannot get from a hen eggs that were not produced in her breeding.

GET GRAFTING STOCK READY.

While it is not time to begin actual grafting operations, the scions should be prepared now, for that wood must be dormant. To get dormant scions they must be cut early, and now is a good time, particularly for almonds, apricots, peaches, prunes and plums. Pears, apples and walnuts stay dormant longer, and in fact may be cut at grafting time. But if the wood is secured while there is plenty of time, it may be kept well in moist sand, shavings or sawdust, and be ready at hand when grafting is done in February or March.

WIRE BRACE THE TREES.

There was not a great deal of trouble last season from overhurdled trees, but that is just the reason that precaution should be taken against possible trouble from this source next summer. The wooden prop is obsolete, costly and always in the way. Wire bracing is out of the way, permanent and cheap. There is but one time to do it, and that is when the leaves are off the trees, and following pruning. The investment is small, the labor once performed does not need to be repeated, and the trees are given real protection. Wire brace now; and forget the props next summer.

CUTTINGS FOR GRAPES.

In selecting grape cuttings, be sure to take only the thick, heavy canes. Discard the spindly, late-maturing ones. Taking the strong, well-matured canes, cut off the tips and use the lower portions. The thick, heavy wood has more food reserves stored to feed the buds and rootlets at starting time and always produces better growth. With the heavy pruning in most vineyards, there is no reason why plenty of proper wood cannot be secured.

PREPARED ESPECIALLY FOR THE GRIZZLY BEAR BY ANNA STOERMER

SINCE THE VOGUE FOR COLOR CONTRAST in ensembles is now established, there is better opportunity than ever before to effect a really flattering combination of frock and coat. The glossy black of a seal or broadcloth coat will look well with a wine-red or a beige frock. Black is pretty over taupe. Beaver or cinnamon brown is excessively chic, when well chosen and well worn. Brown is a color that is either a great success or a great failure.

A green coat and a beige fur may complete a frock in tones of beige. A blue coat with gray fur may be worn with a gray or a blue frock. This season, there is such latitude in color, fabric and style that the woman who sews is at a great advantage.

Sports coats of fur fabric continue a successful career. The first type to win consideration is the high-piled woolen of beaver-like construction, which is now popularly promoted, for the rumble seat wear. The model which is most liked introduces a notched collar, while cuff, strap and belt are of suede. The darker shades of brown are preferred.

Krimer cloth fabrics have shared in this field with the woolens of thicker pile. Two types of simulated krimer or astrakhan appear. The one is of a tight stitch, while the other, with its looser effect, approaches caracul in appearance. Black-and-white mixtures, which achieve a gray tone, prove the most popular here. Very little is being done about formal dress coats, with the exception of the showing of black broadcloth with caracul trim.

The spring season will bring fabrics and color into the foreground, but will see very few changes in silhouette from those which crystallized during the fall season.

Of course, fur coats are always with us, and most flattering with their gorgeous comfy collars.

Ensembles for sports and afternoon wear dominate the advance spring ideas, and the most emphasis is placed on the two-piece ensemble, consisting of a silk dress paired with either a silk or wool coat. The range of fabrics embraces printed crepes, chiffons, flat crepes, cantons and georgettes for the dresses, while imported tweeds, worsteds and wool-crepes are exploited for coats.

Fine-spun jersey is favored for the three-piece sports suits with cardigan jacket, skirt belted and pleated like a man's trousers and tuck-in blouse of plain crepe-de-chine or printed crepe. The ensemble idea is expressed in line as well as in color and fabric.

In some of the high-grade collections of the more dressy afternoon frocks, the irregular hemline of the past season is noticeably absent, being supplanted by low-posed fullness, achieved through all manner of circular and pleated flounces.

Fullness concentrated at the back is another new feature. Narrow fabric belts and softened necklines subscribe to bow, scarf and many collar treatments.

The selection for evening dresses centers on tulle, chiffon and velvet. High shades and street shades are both good. Shades of sherry, raffia, beige and acorn, all of which are shades of tan and brown, are shown. Some other very light beiges also, including peanut and eggshell, have been popular.

Chiffons are favored in high shades, and are made up with graceful skirt draperies and often embellished with crystal and rhinestones, while the taffeta and heavier materials are worked into picture types.

This tendency toward period styles is very apparent, with the influence of the princess or houffant mode visible in practically all of the stiffer materials as well as in some of the tulle dresses. The frock of tulle with fluffy bouffant skirt is preferred by the younger college or high-school girl.

The natural flower shades for the miss, such as aster, june rose, sweetpea, geranium and gladiola, are especially lovely in taffeta, chiffon or tulle, following up the idea of two-color effects in formal dress. Vivid shades in evening slippers contrast sharply with the gown.

Constant reference is made to color of women's fashions. Blouses, for instance, are advanced with the idea of brightening the ensemble. Neckwear has staged a revival in colored contrasts. Gloves and hosiery are promoted with more insistence to the color harmony. They are destined to carry on the vogue for costume color harmony. Suggested for wear with the formal afternoon chiffons and velvets, is the washable glaze kid slip-on glove. Green is emphasized to some extent.

The long white kid glove ventures into the evening mode, at least for the opera or the after-theater affairs. The glove with the extremely long cuff is very new and mighty smart.

Accessories for evening wear must strike a glittering note. The evening scarfs and caps to match, embroidered in gold and sequins, are most attractive.

Festoon necklaces are of brilliants, mounted in silver. Bracelets and necklaces to match are made of moonstones and rhinestones. A necklace of crystals is mounted in antique gold.

Evening bags are of pearlized beads, with tracteries of pastel colors. Background shantung bags have embroidered or hand-painted designs.

Another fancy bracelet is made of navy or black silk rope, with clusters of metal or jeweled ring ornamentation and carved crystal or colored stone bobs.

Of more importance just now are the angora jerseys in plain colors with matching berets, for the young girl's general sports wear.

The tight-fitted knitted woolen shorts, with horizontal stripes, also promise to be a comfortable novelty for winter sports. Back to the boyish phase in jacket suits and blouses!

HEALTH*M. F. FOSTER, Opt.D., D.C.

Uncomfortable feet cause many ills in women, because few ever get properly fitted shoes. They go hobbling through life—some with shoes too short, others with heels that give the appearance of walking upon stilts, and still others with shoes too small in every way—to sooth their vanity, not realizing the damage to health and good looks.

Stand for one hour, any day, upon any downtown corner and count the comfortable feet that pass. Some women make a brave effort to conceal the hurts, but a good look at their faces will show a drawn, pained expression, even if they are not limping physically.

One need not be a great beauty to be attractive; graceful movements and a sweet temper are more to be desired. One cannot have a radiant face or easy gait with aching feet. Shoes too short deform the feet, causing bunions, broken arches and other disfigurements. Most feet are built for straight-last shoes; most shoes are built pigeon-toed.

A shoe expert, when asked the cause of existing foot troubles and the difficulty women have in getting shoes that fit, said: "Manufacturers give the people what they want." Yet, nine out of every ten women will say they cannot find good, comfortable shoes; that at least a few sensible ones should be made, for women who like comfort.

One should always wear heels of the same height, because the body adjusts itself to one posture. To raise or lower the heels causes bodily disturbance by necessitating re-adjustment to the new posture. Give the feet a sensible heel, enough room in width, room and to spare in length, and then go shopping in comfort. The clerks will have an easier time pleasing the shopper, and the shopper will choose more wisely—and she will not be ill the next day.

Women no longer are the vain creatures they used to be. Each year sees more and more of them seeking comfortable clothing. Demand sensible, comfortable shoes for beauty, grace and health.

ORDERLY ARRAY OF FACTS IN GOVERNMENT ACCOUNT BOOKS.

Up to October 1 of this year 2,220 account books, designed by the Federal Department of Agriculture's home economic bureau, were sold by the government printing office. These account books were not on the list of documents for free distribution; they were sold for 50c each, and the people who bought them were those who were interested in planning their family expenditures in an orderly way and keeping track of them systematically.

These books are much more than mere pages with ruled lines for recording various household expenditures. They are prefaced by a concise classification of the items of family expense, and directions for using the book in conjunction with a complete spending plan or budget. They have places not only for entering what has been spent for food, clothing, running the house or the car, for savings or sending the children to college, but also pages for keeping track of insurance, investments and other matters not always included, as they should be, in the cost of maintaining a family. For the farm woman there are separate pages for entering the value of products furnished by the farm and canned goods. A marginal index makes it easy to locate the desired classification, and as the book is made up in loose-leaf form pages that do not apply to one's needs may be dropped.

As the year draws to a close most of us begin to think about next year's budget or spending plan. How can we get more out of our incomes than we did this year? What are the leaks, the unnecessary expenses we could have avoided? Which member of the family has had an undue share of the good things of life? Which ought to have had more? Where shall we start to pare down? All these points and many similar ones are brought out by the orderly array of facts in one of these account books if properly kept.

THE BIG CITY THAT KNOWS HOW

CHAMPIONS

GOLDEN GATE PARLOR NO. 29 AGAIN won the championship in the N.S.G.W. Basketball League of San Francisco, defeating Pacific Parlor No. 10 in the championship series by a score of 30 to 24 December 7 and a score of 40 to 31 December 15. Both games were hard fought, with the teams showing much class. In the first game, the score was 17 to 17 at half time, with Golden Gate coming fast in the last half. The second game started off with a bang and it looked as though the Pacifics would even up the series, being soon in the lead with a score of 16 to 8 in their favor, but Golden Gate came fast the last few minutes, and the half ended with a tied score, 20 to 20. Again in the second half the Golden Gate boys showed wonderful condition, which enabled them to wear down Pacific and come out on top.

Gene Minor, Dink Kotta and Al Sanders were the shining lights for Golden Gate, and when a team has three such players in its lineup it is one to be reckoned with in any basketball league. For Pacific, Les Potts and Dave Bocabella were brilliant in their play, and Baron played a clever game at center. By winning this championship, Golden Gate will be entitled to enter its team in the playoff for the James A. Wilson perpetual trophy, which will carry the state Championship with it.—H.J.R.

SOUTH SAN FRANCISCO VICTOR.

December 8, at Kezar Stadium, South San Francisco Parlor No. 157 N.S.G.W. defeated Twin Peaks Parlor No. 214 N.S.G.W. in the annual "big game" by a score of 13 to 0. The boys from South San Francisco showed their superiority early in the first quarter, when they made two marches down the field to Twin Peaks' five-yard mark, where they lost the ball on downs. The first half of the game was played entirely in Twin Peaks' territory, although South San Francisco was unable to score.

Early in the third quarter Twin Peaks fumbled and Badder scooped up the ball on a dead run and scampered fifty-four yards to a touch-down. Bromberg added the extra punt with a well directed drop-kick. In the fourth quarter, after two short passes from Guerra to Steele, Quarterback Bromberg advanced the ball to Twin Peaks' nine-yard line, with a beautiful cut-back which netted twenty yards. From here the ball was bucked over for another touchdown by Fullback Maheras. Bromberg failed to kick the extra point. Guerra, Steele, Badder and Maheras were the outstanding stars for South San Francisco, while Deering starred for Twin Peaks. The lineup follows:

Past Presidents Association No. 1 N.D.G.W. entertained at dinner November 19 Grand President Dr. Louise C. Heilbron, Grand Treasurer Susie K. Christ, Grand Trustee Evelyn I. Carlson and the founder of the association, Leah Williams. Entertainment was provided, and a gift of china was presented Dr. Heilbron, who was most grateful for the happy evening provided. The following committee was responsible for the success of the party: May Rose Barry, Anna Saxson, Past Grand Presidents May C. Boldemann, Emma Gruber-Foley and Margaret Grote-Hill.

President Carlson of the association has inaugurated a series of monthly whist parties to create a fund with which to purchase furniture for the Native Daughter Home. The parties are much enjoyed.

OFFICERS COMPLIMENTED.

Carlson, Grand Outside Sentinel Millie Rock, Past Grand Presidents Eliza D. Keith, Emma G. Foley and May C. Boldemann, District Deputy Sadie Blake, and delegations from Marinita, Tamelpa, Alta, Golden State, Buena Vista, La Estrella, Keith, Gabrielle, Golden Gate and Dolores Parlors. Special honor was accorded Miss Keith in introducing her as the supervising district deputy for San Francisco.

The officers of the Parlor were complimented for their rendition of the ritual charges, and Organist Verena Friede for her "peppy" music. Thirteen of No. 56's past presidents were presented with regalias of that distinction. At the close of a perfect evening refreshments were served. The committee of arrangements, Madeline King chairman, received honorable mention for the decorations of chrysanthemums and huckleberry.

Past President Hazel Nelson and a very enthusiastic committee.

The Parlor is taking an active part in the endeavor to lift the mortgage from the Native Daughter Home. Grand Trustee Evelyn I. Carlson is being assisted by Past Presidents Mayme O'Leary and Katherine Keating in an endeavor to have No. 169 make a substantial showing.

January 20 will be the twentieth institution anniversary of the Parlor and a real live committee is working on plans for a celebration that will long be remembered.

PRIZE WINNERS HAPPY.

Members of Castro Parlor No. 178 N.D.G.W. are very happy—because they went away "with the bacon" from the homeless children Thanksgiving Eve ball: first prize for the best exhibition drill team, and first prize for having the largest number of members, sixty-six, in the grand march. Captain Eva Hirshen is very proud of her team and she received many compliments. Cora Stohing designed the costumes worn by the members in the grand march; they were made of paper in pastel shades and, according to Mayor James Rolph, "they added color and beauty to the whole ensemble."

Alice Lane was chairman of a large committee which had charge of the annual Christmas tree for the "kiddies" of the members. Georgia Nelson sponsored another party for the children in the tubercular ward of the San Francisco hospital. Sixty little ones forgot their pains and were made happy. She asked the members to make scrapbooks from magazine pictures, and each exercised her ingenuity to design the most attractive collection.

PROUD OF DRILL TEAM.

December 14 Twin Peaks Parlor No. 185 N.D.G.W. had a Christmas party for its members and their children. Following a program Santa Claus distributed toys and candy, and refreshments were served. Much credit is due Chairman Hannah Sandell and her committee for a very pleasant evening.

The Parlor is very proud of the splendid showing made by its drill team at the homeless children ball. The stunning new uniforms, designed by Bessie Hulten, president of No. 185 and a member of the team, were much admired.

CHRISTMAS LUNCHEON.

The annual Christmas luncheon of the N.S.G.W. Friday Luncheon Club started at 12:30 December 21 and finished at 4 p. m. Among those present were Grand President James A. Wilson, Grand Third Vice-president Dr. Frank I. Gonzalez, Grand Secretary John T. Regan, Grand Trustees J. Hartley Russell, Harmon D. Skillin and Charles A. Koenig, Chairman Joseph B. Keenan, Frank M. Buckley and Jesse H. Miller of the Board of Appeals, Harry W. Gaetjen of the Finance Committee, M. J. McGovern of the Supplies Committee, District Attorney Matthew Brady, George W. Schonfeld and Eugene O'Donnell of the Laws of Subordinates Committee. After the party the two latter found it necessary to go to the steam-room.

This event, one of the social affairs of the Order, is annually looked forward to. The bond of friendship among the regular attendants at the luncheons is so strong, that when the annual Christmas party comes around a genuine festive spirit prevails. Presents and well-wishes for the future are exchanged.

The Friday Luncheon Club, composed of members of the Order of Native Sons of the Golden West in San Francisco, has been in existence seven years. Any member of the Order may attend the luncheons, held at the Elks Club. There are no dues, and everyone pays for his own lunch.

500 CHILDREN MADE HAPPY.

South San Francisco Parlor No. 157 N.S.G.W. had its annual Christmas tree party December 23, and over 500 children were well taken care of by Santa Claus, impersonated by Fred W. Zimmerman. A very fine program was provided, concluding with Fred Rasmussen's Punch-and-Judy show. Both young and old spent a most pleasant evening. The committee in charge was: George Kendall (chairman), Henry Delagnes, Theodore Portello, Jack Reid, John J. Ryan, Edmund Olson, Willard Spelman, James Brady, George Nilan and Louis Terry.

MARYSVILLE—MARYSVILLE NO. 162 and South Butte No. 226, in joint session here December 8, were officially visited by Grand President Dr. Louise C. Heilbron, who was accompanied by Past Grand President Ema Gett, who organized No. 162 twenty years ago, Grand Secretary Sallie R. Thaler, Grand Trustee Sadie Brainard, Grand Marshal Estelle Evans, Grand Outside Sentinel Millie Rock, District Deputies Ethel Brock and Gertrude Cable. Grand Vice-president Esther R. Sullivan was pleased to welcome the visitors to her home-Parlor, Marysville.

A supper preceded the joint meeting, and special guests of honor in addition to the grand officers were Fred H. Greely, Past Grand President N.S.G.W., and Mrs. Greely. The tables were decorated with autumn leaves, baskets of rose chrysanthemums and rose tapers in crystal holders. The place-cards were autumn leaves edged in silver. Grand Vice-president Sullivan presided as toastmistress and the following program, each number of which was greatly enjoyed, was presented: Fancy dances, Miss Pearl Boyers' pupils; vocal solos, Miss Lois Smith; piano solo, Miss Helen Mason.

The meeting-hall was beautifully decorated with hollyberries, Christmas trees and garlands of greenery. Red crepe paper streamers shaded the lights, casting a soft glow over the entire setting, which was effective for the approaching Yuletide season. President Bernice Sperbeck of No. 162 presided. Grand President Heilbron delivered an inspiring and instructive address, and all the grand officers responded to extended greetings. Mrs. Gladys Betty and Miss Ruth Clipp, attired in white costumes decorated with red poppies, sang "California, Queen of the West," with mandolin and guitar accompaniment; the appropriate selection was beautifully rendered. Gifts were presented Grand President Heilbron, Past Grand President Gett and Grand Vice-president Sullivan, and all the grand officers were recipients of flowers. Refreshments were served at the close of the meeting, which was attended by many out-of-town members.

Preparing Pioneer Honor-roll.

Bieber—At the Pioneers' dinner recently sponsored by Lassen No. 215 an old resident made the request, which was cheerfully approved, that the Parlor appoint a committee to investigate the early settlement of Big Valley and contiguous territory with a view to completing an honor-roll of the earliest settlers. As a start, the committee has read Fairchild's "History of Lassen County" and has interviewed some of the old settlers. While enjoyable, the task requires much time and will be continued through 1929.

Upon this honor-roll it is planned to include only the names of the men and the women who settled in the neighborhood prior to 1875—those who bore the hardships of pioneering, who established permanent homes and contributed to the community's upbuilding. When completed, the honor-roll will be framed and hung in the Parlor's meeting-place.

Clubhouse Cherished Project.

Santa Ana—Santa Ana No. 235 has passed its third milestone, having been instituted December 19, 1925, through the efforts of Mrs. Bertha Hitt of Long Beach No. 154; it now has 113 members. Though young, the Parlor is proud of its achievements, among which are the purchase of a tree in the Pioneer Memorial Redwood Grove, reconstruction of the baptistry of San Juan Capistrano Mission, and co-operation in carrying out the Order's several projects.

The Parlor has been working indefatigably to carry out a cherished plan to have a clubhouse of its own—a difficult undertaking, but it will be accomplished. Those who have headed the Parlor since its institution are: Louise Mock, the initial president; Mamie Schonberg, Mary Moore and Eunice Fox, the incumbents.

At the December 10 meeting the corps of officers were unanimously re-elected for another term. The needle club, under the able leadership of Florence Watson, has accomplished quite an assortment of work for the homeless children and for a bazaar held December 15. Members are looking forward in pleasant anticipation to the official visit of Grand President Dr. Louise C. Heilbron, when No. 235 will entertain jointly with Grace No. 242 of Fullerton.

Enjoyable Evening for Everybody.

Petaluma—Accompanied by large delegations from Sacramento and Vallejo, Grand President Dr. Louise C. Heilbron officially visited Sonoma No. 209 and Petaluma No. 222 in joint session here December 4. The hall was beautifully decorated with pepper berries and chrysanthemums. Three candidates were initiated, the ritualistic work being beautifully rendered by officers of both Parlors, with Elsie Riccioli of No. 222 presiding.

Dr. Heilbron gave a very interesting talk on the work of the Order, and among the other speakers were Past Grand Presidents Margaret Grote-Hill and Emma Gruber-Foley, District Deputies Mary Vogt and Beatrice Cook, and President Peterson of No. 209. After the meeting a ravioli supper was served at tables decorated with flowers, greens and candles. Everybody, including representatives from Parlors in Santa Rosa, San Rafael, Napa, Fairfax, Sausalito, San Francisco and Sacramento, had a most enjoyable evening.

Petaluma Parlor had its annual Christmas tree and program December 18. Captain Dixon of the drill team has declared a vacation from drilling until after the holidays.

Dishes for Sunshine Camp.

Antioch—Antioch No. 223 had a delightful card party November 28 at which the prizes included a chicken, fruit cakes and blanched nuts in fancy jars. Grand Marshal Estelle Evans was chairman of the capable committee and a neat sum was realized. After the December 11 meeting a very interesting party, for members only, was held. From a beautiful Christmas tree gifts were presented every one in attendance. An Italian supper was provided by Edith Stogie.

December 20 the Parlor had its annual Christmas tree for all Native Sons and Native Daughters and their families. Each child received a gift and a bag of candy. A program, prepared by Grand Marshal Evans, was presented. The Parlor authorized the purchase of a set of dishes for the Sunshine Preventorium at Mount Diablo.

This camp for undernourished children is kept up by donations from the various lodges of Contra Costa County. Members of No. 223 are looking forward to the official visit of Grand President Dr. Louise C. Heilbron January 8, when a large class of candidates will be initiated.

Officers Justly Complimented.

Oakland—Grand President Dr. Louise C. Heilbron paid an official visit to Fruitvale No. 177 December 7. A large number of the members of the Parlor, three Past Grand Presidents, other grand officers, and delegates from many other Parlors gathered to greet her. Every officer was at her station, and during an exemplification of the ritualistic work a class of seven candidates were initiated. Dr. Heilbron justly complimented the officers.

During a recess Fruitvale No. 252 N.S.G.W. presented the Grand President with a bouquet of flowers, and her response showed deep appreciation of this mark of courtesy. The business concluded, the Parlor adjourned to the banquet-hall, where a hard-working committee had set upon prettily-decorated tables a very substantial feast.

Twentieth Anniversary.

Chico—Annie K. Bidwell No. 168 celebrated its twentieth institution anniversary December 13 with a pioneer party at which the following charter members were honored guests: Margaret Warren, Elizabeth Bond, Nora Arnold, Rowena Allen, Florence True and Dr. Nellie Allen. Margaret Hudspeth reviewed the Parlor's history, readings were given by Myrtle Bernardo and Nora Arnold, and Lois Heberle entertained with a novel illustrated song, "Hats of Other Days."

Centering the bouquet table was a miniature covered wagon, and a birthday cake with twenty lighted candles was placed before President Alice Coleman. Cora Hintz, hostess-chairman of the evening, was the toastmistress and responses were as follows: "California," Annie Skelly; "Our Pioneers," Dr. Nellie Allen; "Our Charter Members," Lois Coleman; "Our Lot," Laura Anderson; "Our Future," Frances Snider. The affair had a "days of '49" atmosphere, and the arrangements committee—June Wright, Ila Cole, Mabel Ames, Dorothy Smith, Icel Snyder, Mabel Lucke—appeared in costumes of pioneer days.

Carnations Presented.

Monterey—During a recent three-day visit here Junipero No. 141 sent beautiful carnations in the three colors of the Order to the men in the hospital aboard the U.S.S. "California." Miss Estelle Gonzales, member of a pioneer family and for many years an active worker in the Parlor, passed away November 25.

Weather's Inclemency Interferes.

San Luis Obispo—Grand President Dr. Louise C. Heilbron, accompanied by Grand Trustee Sadie Brainard, officially visited the San Luis Obispo County Parlors during December, starting with San Miguel No. 94, the 12th. On account of the inclemency of the weather many were prevented from attending. The afternoon of the 13th El Pinal No. 163 at Cambria was visited, the meeting being preceded by a luncheon. Dr. Heilbron, who was accompanied by Julia Bell and Agnes M. Lee, gave a talk which was much enjoyed.

Returning to San Luis Obispo, San Luisita No. 108 was visited that evening. The address of the Grand President was most inspiring, instructive and interesting. As a remembrance she was presented with a picture of Morro Rock. At the meeting's close refreshments were served.

Christmas Frolie.

Hollister—The annual Christmas frolie of Copa de Oro No. 105 opened with a dinner at which a happy group gathered about tables cheerily decorated with bright berries and shining tinsel. Following the dinner adjournment was had to the meeting-hall, where two candidates were initiated.

Santa Claus appeared upon the scene and proceeded to distribute from the gayly-decorated and brightly-lighted tree cunning stockings filled with nuts, candies, fruit and gifts. Each one present was asked to perform a stunt on receipt of her gift, and the presentations and entertainment numbers caused much merriment. After a very happy evening the members dispersed at a late hour, regretting that Christmas comes but once a year.

Christmas Cheer Enjoyed.

Alturas—The evening of December 6 found Alturas No. 159 in its new home, the beautiful Alturas Civic Club, and despite the "flu" epidemic against which the community has been struggling a large number of members were present. After the business meeting they were joined by guests who gathered to enjoy the spirit of Christmas cheer which emanated from the blazing yule logs in the spacious fireplace, and the pine, fir and cedar decorations. Cards furnished the evening's entertainment until refreshments were served, at midnight.

The Parlor sponsored a moving-picture show Thanksgiving Eve, and its annual Christmas ball was held December 25.

Jolliest Card Party Ever.

Wheatland—The occasion of the official visit of Grand President Dr. Louise C. Heilbron to Camp Far West No. 218 was a very pleasant one. The ritualistic work, given by the officers, brought high praise from all the grand officers in attendance—Dr. Heilbron, Grand Vice-president Esther Sullivan, Grand Trustee Sadie Brainard, Supervising Deputy Agnes Meade and District Deputy Ethel Brock. A number of visitors were present from Marysville No. 162 and South Butte No. 226. Following the business session a social hour and refreshments were enjoyed in the beautifully decorated banquet room. The centerpiece, a horn of plenty, attracted much attention.

The Parlor, along with Rainbow No. 40 N.S.G.W., recently gave a card party for the benefit of the homeless children. The novel prizes, live turkeys, chickens and ducks, caused much merriment. In fact, this was declared "the jolliest card party ever given in Wheatland." As a result, the Parlors are happy to have a goodly sum to send to the busy Central Homeless Children Committee.

Past Presidents Elect.

Chico—Butte County Past Presidents Association No. 5 met at the home of Mabel K. Richards December 7 and elected officers, Margaret Hudspeth being chosen president. During the social hour bridge and whist were played, Alice La Voy and Margaret Hudspeth making the high scores. The Richards home was decorated in red chrysanthemums, with harmonizing tones reflected in the supper appointments.

Bachelor Gets Hope-chest.

Manteca—The turkey-whist and dance of Phoebe A. Hearst No. 214 was a great success. Turkeys were awarded Amelia Lamberty, Polly Watson and Joe Christensen. A hope-chest was disposed of and it went to J. Cahill. Being a bachelor, however, he presented it to Miss Josephine Converse. The committee in charge of the affair consisted of Hattie Newborn, Dorothy Foster, Virginia Paul, Eunice Converse and Millie Huber.

Sons Joined at Banquet.

Vallejo—Grand President Dr. Louise C. Heilbron officially visited Vallejo No. 195 December 7. Accompanying her were Grand Trustee Sadie Brainard, District Deputies Rose Marie Cobb and Gladys Kerner, and a delegation from Sonoma Parlor. The lodgeroom was beautifully decorated in poinsettias and greenery.

Eight candidates were initiated, and at the election of officers Helen Segoria was selected for president. Dr. Heilbron was presented with a gift of silver, President Carrie Congrave making the presentation address. Following the meeting guests and members of No. 195 joined Vallejo No. 77 N.S.G.W. at a banquet. The Christmas scheme was effectively used in the table decorations.

Seventh Anniversary.

Martinez—Las Juntas No. 221 celebrated its seventh institution anniversary December 3. Visitors were present from Pittsburg, Antioch, Concord and Crockett. Entertainment numbers were presented by Ritchie Delevati, Evelyn Hough-Scripko and Grand Marshal Estelle Evans. At whist, high scores were made by Mrs. P. J. Kane, A. Webster and B. B. Rogers. Refreshments were served.

Native Sons of the Golden West

PLANs ARE BEING RAPIDLY COMPLETED for the playoff for the perpetual basketball trophy, donated by Grand President James A. Wilson and to be awarded each year to the Parlor whose team wins the state basketball championship of the Order of Native Sons of the Golden West. The playoff will probably be at Kezar Stadium, San Francisco, January 4, 5 and 12.

Teams from Sacramento, Mountain View, Redwood City, Alameda County and San Francisco have entered the competition for this trophy, and some high-class basketball is in store for the fans who are lucky enough to be able to witness the games.

Players on the teams competing for the cup must be members of the Order, thus assuring complete teams composed of members of the Order in the playoff. Further details will be forwarded direct to the competing Parlors from the office of the Grand Secretary.

Grand Officers To Meet.

The Board of Grand Officers, with Grand President James A. Wilson presiding, will meet at Native Sons Building, San Francisco, January 5.

Praise for Ritual Efforts.

San Rafael—In the second of a series of three contests in ritual perfection won by a very narrow margin over Sea Point No. 158 of Sausalito in that city November 21, Mount Tamalpais No. 64 regained a silver plaque which is to be permanently awarded as a trophy to the Parlor winning it two out of three times. The score was 905 for No. 64 and 901 for No. 158. The judges were J. H. Stanley, J. G. Schroeder and J. H. Hayes of San Francisco Assembly No. 1 Past Presidents Association. A year ago, at San Rafael, Sea Point won the plaque, so the winner a year hence will retain it.

At a banquet which followed the ceremonies much praise was bestowed on the teams of both Parlors for the splendid manner in which the work was exemplified. Emil Malz Jr., responsible for these competitions, suggested a perpetual trophy to stimulate interest. The suggestion has the approval of Mount Tamalpais' "big five," who will take steps to procure what will be known as the "Malz trophy," to be kept up perpetually as a prize for the Parlor whose officers make the highest ritualistic score each year. C. W. Russell has been elected president of No. 64 for the ensuing term.

Home Parlor Greets Grand Officer.

San Bernardino—Grand Trustee Ben Harrison officially visited his home-Parlor, Arrowhead No. 110, December 12, and the occasion brought out a large attendance of members, as well as visitors from Los Angeles No. 45, Sepulveda No. 263 (San Pedro) and Glendale No. 264. A supper preceded the gathering.

Seven candidates were initiated, the ritual being splendidly exemplified by the Parlor's officers. Among the speakers of the evening were Grand Second Vice-president John T. Newell, First Vice-president Dr. Joseph A. Kleiser of Glendale, President Stanley Wheeler, William F. Durr and Vincent E. Hopkins of Sepulveda, and Grand Trustee Harrison.

Arrowhead is one of the strongest links in the chain of Native Son Parlors. Its membership embraces men prominent in the affairs of San Bernardino City and County, and its affairs are conducted in a business-like manner by competent, hard-working officers and committees.

Inter-City Gathering.

Napa—Napa No. 62 was host December 10 at the inter-city meeting of Parlors in Napa and Solano Counties—Saint Helena No. 53, Napa No. 62, Calistoga No. 86, Solano No. 39 (Suisun) and Vallejo No. 77. A class of twenty-five candidates were initiated.

At a banquet which followed the initiatory ceremonies an entertainment program was presented, and among the many speakers were Grand President James A. Wilson, Grand Third Vice-president Dr. Frank I. Gonzalez, Grand Trustees Richard M. Hamb and Charles A. Koenig.

Forty-fifth Anniversary.

Merced—Yosemite No. 24 observed its forty-fifth institution anniversary December 10, all the San Joaquin Valley Parlors being represented among the visitors. Two candidates were initiated by a mixed team headed by D. K. Stoddard, charter member of No. 24.

Grand Trustee Frank Lane was the chief speaker of the evening, his subject being "John C. Fremont." Among the other speakers were Merced County District Attorney Frank M. Ostrander, District Deputy George Voight, Hugo McKinley of Modesto, R. J. Marracini of Tracy, President J. W. Smith of Madera No. 130, Mariposa County District Attorney L. T. Milburn and President P. A. Dillard of No. 24.

Yosemite was instituted November 10, 1883, eleven years after the first railroad was built into Merced and six years before the town became an incorporated city. The Parlor's slogan is: "Preserve the history and tradition of our early gold days and keep alive in the hearts of succeeding generations the story of the early California Pioneers."

'49 Camp Big Success.

Saint Helena—The annual '49 camp sponsored by Saint Helena No. 53 the latter part of November was a great success, both socially and financially. It was held in the Native Sons Pavilion, which had been transformed into an early-day California mining camp. Various concessions, operated by members of the Parlor, made it easy for the patrons to dispose of their "bones," the coin of the camp.

Perry Blake will head the Parlor during the January-July term, being elected president December 3. A social evening was enjoyed with La Junta No. 203 N.D.G.W. December 10.

Christmas Party Recalls History.

Santa Barbara—At election of officers in Santa Barbara No. 116 December 5 Police Judge Weston E. Learned was selected for president. He will succeed George A. Black, who has successfully guided the Parlor's destiny the past three years and inaugurated several innovations which advanced the interests of both the Order and No. 116.

A '49 Christmas party December 19 commemorated the eighty-second anniversary of the raising of The Flag of the United States of America over Santa Barbara City and the twenty-third anniversary of the discovery of "black gold" at Summerland, Santa Barbara County. The party was in charge of the following committee: Judge Weston E. Learned (chairman), Mark Bradley,

In Memoriam

GUSSIE FORKNER RAINE.

Resolved, That whereas it has pleased the Almighty, in His infinite wisdom, to remove our beloved sister, Gussie Forkner Raine, from our midst, Napaqua Parlor No. 152 N.D.G.W. extends, through this committee, its heartfelt sympathy; and he it further resolved, that a copy of this resolution be spread upon the minutes of this Parlor, that a copy be sent to the family of the deceased, and that a copy be forwarded to The Grizzly Bear for publication.

CLARA E. GIBSON,
 LUCILE DOYLE,
 LENA HALL,

Committee.

Standish, December 5, 1928.

MINNIE E. FLYNN.

To the Officers and Members of Past Presidents Association No. 2 Native Daughters of the Golden West—We, your committee appointed to draft resolutions of respect to the memory of our dearly beloved sister, Past President Minnie E. Flynn, submit the following:

Whereas, God, in His infinite wisdom, has seen fit to take from our midst our beloved and highly esteemed sister and past president of our association; and whereas, she has been called from our councils; her body has been returned to the soil of California, which gave her birth, her spirit has been called into the presence of Him who breathed into it the breath of immortal life; but with us there remains the memory of her devotion to our Order, her pride in its achievements and her intense loyalty to its ideals. Oft times in the future will her name be mentioned by those of us that loved her for her fraternal devotion, sincerity of purpose and her kindly disposition. Therefore, be it

Resolved, That while bowing humbly to the will of our Heavenly Father, we shall retain in our hearts a lasting affection for our sister; and be it further resolved, that we extend to her bereaved husband in this, his hour of trial, our sincere and heartfelt sympathy; and be it further resolved, that a copy of these resolutions be sent to the husband of our departed sister, a copy be spread upon the minutes of this association, and a copy be sent to The Grizzly Bear Magazine for publication.

Sincerely and fraternally in P.D.F.A.,
 CHRISTINE BARTLETT, JOSEPHINE CLARK,
 WINIFRED BUCKINGHAM,

Committee.

Oakland, December 8, 1928.

EBY ATHEY HETTINGER.

Whereas, It again becomes our duty to record the passing of a brother; and whereas, in the death of Eby Athey Hettinger, Palo Alto Parlor No. 216 N.S.G.W. has lost a loyal member; and whereas, his kindly ways, his loyalty to the ideals of the Order, and his honesty, integrity and lovable character have endeared him to his fellow Native Sons; and whereas, each and every one of us, his friends and brothers in this fraternity, will feel deeply and sincerely his going from amongst us; therefore, be it

Resolved, That in the death of our brother the members of this Parlor have lost a friend whose companionship was ever a source of instruction and of pleasure; that the community has been deprived of the services of a friend who has ever been ready and willing to assist in community affairs; and be it further resolved, that we extend to the relatives of Brother Hettinger our heartfelt sympathy in their bereavement; that a copy be spread upon the minutes of Palo Alto Parlor No. 216 N.S.G.W.; that a copy be sent to the relatives of the deceased, that a copy be forwarded to The Grizzly Bear for publication, and that the Parlor charter be draped in mourning for thirty days.

FIFTY YEARS AGO

John Hill, a Little York, Placer County, miner, January 5 put three giant-powder cartridges near a stove to thaw them. He succeeded, and the building was blown to pieces.

Investing heavily in mining stocks on the advice of spirits and losing, Dr. S. M. Ottinger, a San Francisco medium, committed suicide January 12.

Jack Epperson killed Henry Thomas in a saloon row at Geyersville, Sonoma County, January 10. Attempting to escape, Epperson was shot in the leg by Constable Rummel.

N. Landrey, a San Francisco realtor, committed suicide and left a farewell note saying, in part: "You may as well blow your brains out as your money. You can live as well without the one as without the other. This earth will roll on as heretofore."

Duke Thompson, employed to write the autobiography of an ex-field marshal of France named Massena, got into trouble at Truckee, Nevada County, and was sent to jail. He was so chagrined he committed suicide by holding his breath.

George Gusman and Teresa Parras were married at Tulare City January 20. Following the ceremony the groom got drunk and quarreled with the bride, who was found dead upon the kitchen floor the next morning, having been stabbed with a dagger. Gusman had fled.

While in the snowsheds near Summit, Placer County, the wood-burning locomotive of a Central Pacific freight train blew up January 2. Engineer W. C. Norton was blown 100 feet and killed, and Fireman Charles Hoy was scalded to death. The cause of the explosion was never ascertained.

SAN FRANCISCO

Officers of the Parlor, with John Reid as president, will be installed January 16 by D.D.G.P. Frank Shea. Grand Trustee Richard M. Hamh will at this time pay an official visit to No. 157 and great preparations are being made to receive him.

STATE AUTO ASSOCIATION

PREPARES FOR RECORD YEAR.

Predictions of a record season of motor touring in Northern and Central California in 1929 were made by H. J. Brunnier, president of the California State Automobile Association, before the annual conference of district managers and department heads of the motorist organization in San Francisco during December.

The two-day meeting of the association's thirty district managers and the executive staff of the San Francisco headquarters building was devoted to discussion of administrative and service problems, and a program for handling increased motor tourist travel during the coming year.

CALIFORNIA-NEVADA DIVISION

LINE SUBJECT MANY SURVEYS.

Probably no other inter-state line has been the subject of as many surveys, partial or complete, as the diagonal line separating Nevada and California, between Lake Tahoe and a point on the Colorado River.

In all, seven such endeavors were started, between 1852 and up to the final and official line of the United States Coast and Geodetic survey of 1893-99.

Six different lines began at Lake Tahoe as follows: Captain Sitgreaves in 1853, G. W. Goddard in 1866, Houghton and Ives in 1863, Von Schmidt in 1873, Minto and Grunsky in 1889, and the United States Coast and Geodetic Survey in 1893-99.

The extreme separation of these lines at the lake was approximately one mile. The official starting point which each party tried to establish, and which was finally determined by the latter survey, is the intersection of the 120 degree meridian with 39 degree north latitude.

The line of Von Schmidt was thought to be accurately established, and nearly all government land surveys and subdivisions have been tied onto it. There has been no recent change in the line.

"1929 CLUB" FLOURISHING.

There was a large attendance at the December 21 meeting of Ramona No. 109 N.S.G.W. when ten candidates were initiated, among the number being the son of Treasurer Harry J. Lelande—Davidson Lelande, a student at the University of California. Twenty-five additional members were admitted to the Parlor's "1929 Club," and Chairman Walter Slosson presented each with a significant pin. Secretary John V. Scott was directed to send to Senator Hiram W. Johnson and Congressman Ralph D. Swing telegrams of congratulations for their efforts in behalf of the Boulder dam. Among the speakers of the evening were William H. Hunsaker, who told of his recent visit to New Zealand, and Past Grand President Herman C. Lichtenberger, who spoke of Ramona's valuable collection of historic relics.

While the Parlor was in session, Ramona Troop No. 109 Boy Scouts of America, sponsored by No. 109, enjoyed a Christmas tree in an adjoining hall. Gus Alvarez was the Santa Claus, and a gift, as well as candy, was presented each boy. Ramona is very proud of the members of Troop No. 109 and sees to it that the boys want for nothing. Ray Northrup is the scout-master, and is devoting a lot of time to his charges.

Ramona's newly-elected officers, with Ralph I. Harbison as president, will be installed January 4. Another class of candidates will be initiated January 18, when more members will be admitted to the "1929 Club," and the good of the order committee will provide entertainment January 25.

CHRISTMAS PRESENTS CREATE FUN.

At the December 5 meeting of Los Angeles Parlor No. 124 N.D.G.W. two candidates were initiated and Miss Flora M. Holy was re-elected president for another term. Several visitors from Santa Monica Bay Parlor No. 245 were among the visitors.

The Christmas party December 12 was most successful. Grace J. Norton, social hostess, was in charge and had the assistance of a very able committee. Santa Claus appeared and his distribution of presents from a gayly decorated Christmas box created much merriment. Pearle K. Dwinell was heard in piano selections, and David Douglas sang "Silent Night." At tables decorated in Christmas colors delicious refreshments were served. Dancing concluded a most enjoyable occasion.

Los Angeles' January calendar includes: Card party, the 9th; social evening, the 16th; installation of officers, in charge of D.D.G.P. Florence Dodson-Schoneiman, the 23rd.

PUBLIC INSTALLATION AND DANCE.

The supper-dance in recognition of the forty-fourth institution anniversary of Los Angeles Parlor No. 45 N.S.G.W. proved a most enjoyable social affair. At the annual Christmas party December 20 presents, candy, etc., were distributed from a decorated tree to the members' children. Every member of Los Angeles received from No. 45 a card of Christmas greetings.

The Parlor is making great plans for January 24, when the new officers, with Lewie W. Smith as president, will be installed. All Native Sons and Native Daughters and their friends are invited to attend, as the ceremonies will be public. Following installation dancing will be in order. January 10 is listed on No. 45's calendar as initiation night.

CALIFORNIA HISTORY SECTION.

California history formed the entire program of the California Teachers' Association section meeting December 20 at Trinity Auditorium. Arthur M. Ellis, president of the Historical Society of Southern California, was chairman.

Three groups of songs and dances were presented under the direction of Mrs. Mary B. Murray, supervisor of California history in the Los Angeles schools. A pleasing background, peopled with life-sized wax figures in authentic early California costumes, added color to the scene. Dr. Owen C. Coy, Director of the California State Historical Association, gave as the address of the afternoon his well known "Legacy of Forty-nine."

"Here Comes Art"

Contrary to the prevalent opinion, teachers in California South were keenly interested in California history. This is the second year in which a section meeting has been devoted to this subject, with attendance each year exceeding 2,500 teachers.

TWO INITIATED.
Hollywood Parlor No. 196 N.S.G.W. had its last 1928 meeting December 17, when two candidates were initiated. Officers were elected December 3, Clarence W. Riley being selected for president. The Parlor has outlined an ambitious program for the January-July term, starting with the initiation of a class of candidates January 14.

HUNTING EXPEDITION PROVES FATAL.
Arthur G. Caughey, secretary Caluenga Parlor No. 268 N.S.G.W., died at San Diego City December 17 as the result of injuries sustained while hunting in Lower California.
He was a native of Marin County, aged 29, and is survived by his mother. Following services in Van Nuys the remains were sent to San Rafael for interment.

SCHOOL SYSTEM'S GROWTH.
During the fiscal year 1927-28 the Los Angeles Board of Education expended $32,424,-389.43, according to Bruce A. Findlay, formerly assistant superintendent of schools. Of that amount $27,372,500.88 went for instruction, maintenance and operation, and the balance for land, buildings and equipment. The growth-story of the Los Angeles City public schools is an interesting one:

Fiscal Year.	Number Schools.	Enrollment	Number Teachers.	Total Salaries.
1865-6	2	244	6	$ 5,734
1880-1	12	1,924	29	24,100
1900-1	57	21,648	325	389,343
1920-21	233	160,228	4,056	7,479,913
1927-28	380	355,735	8,976	21,461,797

The present teachers' payroll for one month is $1,971,000 and the number of instructors employed is over 9,000.

JUDGES NAMED REPRESENTATIVES.
The Interparlor Committee has selected Superior Judges Walton Wood and Ruben Schmidt to represent the Orders of Native Sons and Native Daughters of the Golden West in the Associated Patriotic Agencies of Los Angeles.
The next meeting of the Interparlor Committee will be January 11, when the Admission Day celebration, proposed to be held in Los Angeles in 1932, will be discussed.

SPECIAL MEETING FOR INITIATION.
Santa Monica—On account of its regular meeting night being Christmas Eve, Santa Monica Bay Parlor No. 267 N.S.G.W. held a special meeting December 20 for the initiation of several candidates. The next meeting will be January 14. Clarence E. Webb, as president, will head the corps of officers during the January-July term.

UNTIRING EFFORTS APPRECIATED.

San Pedro—Rudecinda Parlor No. 230 N.D.G.W. elected officers December 6, Anna Spickler being chosen president. The election was followed by a surprise birthday shower for Senior Past President Rudecinda F. S. Dodson, arranged by Tenny Padillo, who presented Mrs. Dodson with a lovely bed pillow. The members of the Parlor gave her a card shower. Delicious refreshments were served, and a most pleasant social time was enjoyed.

District Deputy Nellie Cline visited the Parlor December 20 and spoke especially of the spirit of Rudecinda. President Florence Dodson-Schoneman presented her report for the term, and was given a rising vote of thanks for her untiring efforts in the interest of the Order. The good of the order committee had decorated the hall with a Christmas tree containing remembrances, and the dining-room with tree favors, red and green nut baskets and candleholders. Plum pudding and coffee were served, with apples, nuts, raisins and candy as embellishments. Officers of the Parlor will be installed January 17.

1929 AUTO LICENSE PLATES

ARE OF STATE-WIDE INTEREST.

Counter deliveries of 1929 California automobile license plates opened at Sacramento, all branch offices of the State Division of Motor Vehicles, and branches of the various automobile clubs December 15. Plates may be secured at these places on payment of the amount of the registration fee and presentation of the certificate of registration.

Branches of the division are located at Los Angeles, Long Beach, San Diego, Fresno, San Francisco and Oakland. The automobile clubs, which have branches in practically every town and city in the state, will serve their members.

If the legal ownership of a car has changed hands during the year, as in the case where payments have been completed, an additional $1 fee is exacted.

Because of the radical departure from the past system of numbering there is unusual interest all over the state in the 1929 black-and-orange plates, which began to make their appearance shortly after deliveries of the plates commenced.

AUTO CLUB PUBLICATIONS

GIVE VALUABLE INFORMATION.

A vast fund of information on picnicking, camping, fishing, hunting, yachting and golf is listed in the new outing map of California South recently completed by the Automobile Club of Southern California.

Upon the black-line map of the section is superimposed, in red, the name of the game that may be found at various places, such as bear, deer, dove, trout, rabbit, bass, ducks and other types that lure the hunter afield.

Visiting motorists who wish to play golf while in California South will find their pathway made clear through another new booklet, just compiled by the club, which shows forty-one public golf courses that are open to visitors on payment of green fees only.

This pamphlet gives a description of each course, its location, number of holes, its length, par, whether grass or dirt fairways, grass or sand greens, prices for playing by day, holidays or by the month, and all information of interest.

MUFFLER CUT-OUT BANNED BY LAW.

Disconnect your muffler cut-out! This warning has been issued to motorists by the enforcement department of the State Division of Motor Vehicles, which reminds them again that it will be illegal to drive a car equipped with a cut-out capable of being operated by the driver after January 1, 1929.

This provision was included in the Motor Vehicle Act of 1927, the two-year period being allowed to permit car owners to take their cut-outs off. Division officials announce it will not be necessary to take the cut-outs off, but that the law will be complied with if they are disconnected or sealed so that they cannot be used.

FEWEST ACCIDENTS AT DANGER POINTS.

Dangerous places in the highways cause the fewest accidents, while the locations which look so safe that drivers relax produce more accidents, according to observations made in an Eastern state.

Where the highway obviously is liable to invite accidents, the drivers are extra cautious and negotiate the difficult places safely. But where the open road looms ahead apparently free from obstruction and danger, the relaxation and the carelessness of drivers increase the accident toll.

Best Tires at Rear—Four-wheel brakes have not changed the truth that the better-treaded tires belong upon the rear of an auto, as in most cases those wheels take the heavier part of the braking force.

NEW ORGANIZATION DESIGNED

TO REDUCE AUTO'S HEAVY TOLL.

The new California Committee on Public Safety for the promotion of safety upon the highways is expected to reduce this state's heavy annual toll in the future. Organization was effected at a conference, held in Sacramento, attended by representatives of every group in the state having interest in public safety.

A definite program has been outlined for bringing about legislation and practices designed to improve existing conditions. Among the activities planned are the following:

To obtain uniform traffic regulations.

To obtain a uniform interpretation of traffic laws.

To obtain a uniform schedule of fines and penalties.

To obtain centralization of control and adequate training of traffic officers.

To co-ordinate the administration and enforcement of traffic laws among municipalities of the state.

A uniform and state-wide program for educating schoolchildren to the dangers of modern traffic.

A continuous program of adult education embracing both motorists and pedestrians.

MOTORISTS SHOULD AID IN ## SUPPRESSING ROAD-SIGN VANDALISM.

Road signs are particularly useful and vital in the desert regions, but it seems they now are not even safe there from shotguns, revolvers and stones.

Motorists are urged to report any instances noted where official signs are being molested in any way to the nearest police department or sheriff's office, or any office of the Automobile Club of Southern California. A reward of $25 is offered by that organization to any person offering information leading to the arrest and conviction of persons seen shooting, stealing or otherwise molesting highway signs.

GREATER FEDERAL AID SOUGHT.

Support of the program of Western motoring organizations for greater participation on the part of the Federal Government in highway building in the West was voted by the recent convention of the American Association of State Highway Officials in Chicago.

The convention went on record as favoring increase of the annual appropriation for federal aid to state highway construction from $75,000,000 to $100,000,000. It also favored increase of the forest highways appropriation from $7,500,000 to $10,000,000 a year. The Oddie-Colton bill, providing for government participation in the cost of building roads across unappropriated public lands, was also endorsed.

SCHOOL COURSE IN TRAFFIC SAFETY.

Teaching of traffic safety would be made a part of the course of study in all public schools of California under a bill that will be sponsored before the forthcoming session of the State Legislature by the California State Automobile Association and the Automobile Club of Southern California.

The bill provides for a compulsory course of safety instruction, primarily devoted to traffic hazards and conditions encountered by children. This move is being made by the two motoring organizations, whose membership totals over 200,000 automobile owners, to reduce the traffic accident toll among children.

COMMON CAUSES OF TROUBLE.

Tires, ignition and the gasoline or oil supply are the three parts of a motor vehicle most neglected by the average operator of an automobile. This conclusion is drawn from an analysis of the free emergency road service calls from members answered by the California State Automobile Association.

This diagnosis of the common causes of being stalled upon the road is made from a total of 74,461 such services rendered by the association for its members during the year 1928.

TRANSCONTINENTAL HIGHWAY MAP.

A pictorial map showing the direct transcontinental routes leading to Northern and Central California and describing the scenic and historic attractions of these main arteries has been published by the California State Automobile Association.

This map will be given nation-wide distribution in a campaign for increased motor tourist travel over the Victory and Lincoln highways during the 1929 touring season.

Overheating of the motor may be the result of worn hose connections.

HOW IT WORKS: Oil in chamber G flows around plunger D automatically maintaining a column of oil to take the blow from the cam; a shock absorber for the valve.

A revolutionary invention based on an old, established principle! Absolutely eliminates valve noise in the most efficient type of motor ever designed! Your motor need never be "NOISY!"

The JOY HYDRAULIC PUSH RODS eliminate the necessity of outside push rod clearance. So simple in construction and operation they outlast the life of a car. To install, simply remove the regular push rods—replace with JOY HYDRAULICS—just a few moments' job—and the trick is done! Then a SILENT MOTOR FOREVER!

CAUTION MOTTOES FOR PEDESTRIANS SUGGESTED BY SAFETY COUNCIL.

In the continuous campaign for promotion of street and highway safety, there are many lists of caution mottoes coined for motorists. Occasionally advice of a similar nature is needed for the pedestrian, points out the National Safety Council:

Don't try to dodge when a vehicle approaches you; the driver will be better able to avoid striking you if you act normally.

Don't forget that the proper place to cross the street is at the crosswalk.

Don't daydream when crossing a street—you are likely to wake up in the hospital.

Don't jump on or off a moving vehicle.

Don't try to anticipate what a driver is going to do—whether he is going to stop or start; give him sufficient space to pass you.

Don't forget that carelessness, thoughtlessness, undue haste and recklessness are the causes of most accidents.

Don't let your familiarity with traffic breed contempt for its dangers; very few out-of-town visitors are killed or injured in city streets—they are cautious.

Don't do anything you would object to the other fellow doing.

Advice for Novices—Novices who find difficulty in starting without making the car buck like a broncho might well try starting in second gear, with the intention of going up a hill. This action, while it puts a bit heavier burden on the engine, lessens the strain which results to the transmission, rear end and universal joints from the bucking operation.

CROSSING ELIMINATION GIVEN IMPETUS.

The decision of the Interstate Commerce Commission, recommending that railroads concentrate their attention and resources on doing away with dangerous grade crossings over highways instead of spending further money on the installation of control devices, has given the movement for elimination of railroad grade crossings decided impetus in all parts of the country.

The Why of Dirt—When a car is rolling along at a pretty good gait, the wheels kick up a lot of dust and grime. The motion of the car creates a vacuum, which pulls the dirt on to the car body. That is why the back of the closed car is always getting so dirty, an occurrence both annoying and mystifying.

A squawking brake is caused by the fact that the drum is scored, or it is out of round, or the entire mechanism is improperly adjusted.

To see that the valves are properly seated, inspect them occasionally.

Speed Meter—An instrument which can measure the speed of an engine twenty-five times a second has been evolved by the Federal Bureau of Standards. It is designed to find out the degree to which low-test gasoline will allow acceleration.

Too Much Not Good—In removing grease from the body of a car with gasoline, there is an inclination to get the job done quickly by using a generous supply of the liquid. This should not be done. The cloth should be merely dampened, not wet, according to best authorities.

When buying spark plugs mention the name of the particular model for which intended; this will insure getting the proper plug.

Have the hand brake tight, as when loose it has a tendency to work on when the car is in motion and so cause serious trouble.

Injury to extra inner tubes hung across rusty nails will result; wrap them in cloth or soft bags.

GRIZZLY GROWLS

(CLARENCE M. HUNT.)

"FEWER CROSS FROM MEXICO, FIGURES SHOW," is the heading frequently seen in that portion of the daily press which give space to propaganda against the application of the quota to Mexico. There is just as much truth in that heading and its accompanying "news," as in the oft-repeated declaration that the Mexican hordes flock in here to "assist the farmers in harvesting their crops and then return to Mexico."

James J. Davis, Federal Labor Secretary, is in position to know the real situation regarding Mexican immigration and emigration, and in a lengthy statement January 5 he showed conclusively that there is no truth in the Mexican propagandists' contentions. The figures following are from Secretary Davis' report:

From 1921 to 1928, both years inclusive, 397,753 Mexicans were admitted, a yearly average of 49,719. In 1928, 57,765 were admitted, a number considerably greater than the average annual influx.

For the same period, 28,326 Mexicans departed, the number in 1928 being 3,873. "Existing records show a very considerable decrease in the movement of Mexicans returning to Mexico for permanent residence in the last few years," says the secretary.

Of the 57,765 Mexicans admitted during 1928, 37,965 were males and 19,800 females; 10,079 were under 16 years of age; 32,209 were single; 373 were classed as farmers, 19,964 as common laborers, and 22,294 had no occupation.

In 1890, according to the federal census, 77,854 Mexicans were resident in the United States; 1910 census, 221,915; 1920 census, 478,383. Since the 1920 census, 448,795 were admitted and 34,738 departed, leaving a net increase for that period, including the year 1928, of 414,057. Adding that net increase, 414,057, to the 1920 census figures, 448,795, gives the approximate number of alien Mexicans now in this country—862,852. Since the 1920 census, it should be noted, the Mexican population of the United States has, by immigration alone, almost doubled. About 4.8 percent have become naturalized; the balance are aliens.

"Whatever may have been the situation on that [the Mexican] border in the past," said Secretary Davis, "during recent years we have succeeded in enforcing the law, so far as applicants for regular admission are concerned, to an extent which I think is fairly comparable with such enforcement at seaports of entry and on the Canadian border. . . . Immigrants from Mexico are not admitted unless they meet the requirements laid down in the General Immigration Act of 1917, as well as in the Act of 1924. . . . The provisions of the law relative to illiteracy, physical condition, etc., afford no adequate barriers so far as numbers are concerned. . . . If it is the desire of Congress to materially reduce or limit the volume of such immigration, it is an absolute certainty that it cannot be done under the present Immigration Laws."

These figures certainly should convince every American who has the welfare of this country at heart of the immediate need of applying the quota to Mexico. At the same time, they plainly show that the propaganda agents of those opposed to the proposed quota concern themselves not about facts. The quoted words of Secretary Davis are submitted in answer to the frequently advanced "argument," that ninety percent of the Mexicans would have been refused entrance had the law been enforced.

The Mexican propagandists say "fewer cross from Mexico, figures show." Fewer may cross to somewhere other than the United States. 57,765 Mexicans came in here, however, in 1928, although the average annual number of arrivals since 1921 has been 49,719!

The Mexican propagandists also contend the "poor farmer" will suffer, if the quota be applied. Among the 57,765 Mexicans admitted during 1928, 373 were farmers! Any benefits the farmers may have derived from the coming-in of these 373 will be far offset by the cost, to them as taxpayers, of supporting and educating the other 57,392.

The Mexican propagandists also contend that the "large number of departures removes all danger" from the across-the-border invaders. 57,765 Mexicans were admitted during 1928, and 3,873 departed!

Yes, the "figures"—the authentic ones—"show," but they show just the opposite to what the Mexican propagandists would have them show. They show that Mexicans are coming in in larger numbers, that the percentage of departures is smaller, and that the dirt-farmer is being used as a smoke-screen to bring in hordes of undesirables for the benefit of moneyed interests.

The California Legislature of 1927 created a division of parks in the new State Department of Natural Resources, and authorized a state-wide survey of suggested park projects and a $6,000,- 1900 state park bond issue to be matched dollar for dollar with private gifts and local funds. The bond issue was ratified at the November 6 election, and the survey has been completed under the direction of Frederick Law Olmsted.

The report favors 125 park projects distributed throughout California and strongly urges the preservation, for public enjoyment, of the state's ocean beaches, forests and other outdoor attractions. It says: "The magnitude and importance, socially and economically, in California, of the values arising directly and indirectly from the enjoyment of scenery and from related pleasures of outdoor life, are incalculably great."

Somo 325 projects were originally suggested, and the scenic and recreational opportunities of each were thoroughly considered. Those recommended were singled out because of their urgency and outstanding characteristics. In passing on the projects, they were grouped under various headings, first being the seacoast, the report saying "the beaches, because of their scenery, their climatic conditions and the variety of enjoyments to which they are adapted, constitute one of the great scenic and recreational resources of the continent." Then, in order, forest, desert, mountain, historic, scientific, and miscellaneous. Prominent among the recommended projects are the following, in the historic and the scientific groups:

Fort Ross addition, Sonoma County; Marshall monument park extension, El Dorado County; Columbia Town, Tuolumne County; Shasta town, Shasta County; Pioneer Memorial park and Donner Lake park, Nevada County; Mark Twain's home, Tuolumne County; Santa Barbara County missions, Santa Barbara County; Camulos ranch, Ventura County; De La Guerra ranch, Santa Barbara County; Vallejo home, Sonoma County; painted rocks, San Luis Obispo County; Santa Barbara pictograph, Santa Barbara County; fish traps, San Bernardino County; hell mounds, Tulare County; Petrified Forest, Sonoma County.

At a hearing last month of Japs accused of attempting to evade the California Alien Land law, Superior Judge Charles C. Haines of San Diego County declared unconstitutional that section of the law which places on the defendant the burden of proving citizenship. That decision should be appealed, to the United States Supreme Court if necessary.

For, if allowed to stand, it will be near-impossible to convict any alien ineligible to citizenship of any infraction of the state's Alien Land law. And that, in turn would mean the complete surrender of California to Japan's army of "peaceful invaders," already strongly entrenched upon California soil.

January 24 was the eighty-first anniversary of James W. Marshall's famous gold discovery at Coloma, El Dorado County, January 24, 1848, which resulted in the historic gold rush to California.

Federal aid for highways in the forty-eight states of the union and Hawaii Territory during the fiscal year beginning July 1, 1929, will amount to $73,125,000, according to a Federal Agriculture Department announcement.

California will receive the largest sum of any of the Western states, $2,495,345. It ranks sixth among all the states in the amount to be received.

Reference, in "Grizzly Growls" for December 1928, to the Mexican immigration question brought forth the following, under date of December 22, from C. M. Goethe of Sacramento, president Immigration Study Commission:

"Continual advancement of inventions in machinery, both farm and industrial, must continue to accelerate unemployment. Because immigration control prevents an aggravation hereof, we are interested in your recent story.

"The trouble herein lies in the differential birth rates. One Latin American family boasts of twenty-five living children from a marriage contracted twenty-eight years ago. At this rate, this couple would eventually have 625 grandchildren.

"Their competitor, the old-stock Anglo Saxon father who must hustle to feed, clothe and educate a brood of three, can expect, at his rate, nine grandbabies.

"Six hundred and twenty-five to nine means the sinking, to Latin America's level, of our nation!"

Commenting on future conditions in this country, the January news-letter of The National City Bank of New York City said:

"There is no apparent reason for thinking that conditions in the money market in the com-

THE HAND OF MAN-- A STORY OF THE FORESTS

Southard M. Modry

CHAPTER II.

WHEN THE PILGRIM FATHERS first landed upon the coast of New England they found a land veritably covered with virgin timber that had never heard the echo of the woodsman's ax. The needs of the primitive inhabitants of America were few and simple. The forests furnished an abundance of dry branches for fires, the birch trees plenty of tough bark for canoes. Thus were the forests practically untouched by the hand of man.

Almost simultaneously with the arrival of our famous predecessors, however, there began a campaign of desecration unsurpassed in all history. Their first step was to cut down trees to build cabins, then to systematically destroy the monarchs of the woodland in order to clear ground to plant crops. In this way millions of the finest kind of timber trees were destroyed without any practical use being made of the wood. This work of destruction continued, as the wave of settlers advanced westward. The needs of the settlers being almost as few and simple as those of the Indians, they had no use for most of the timber cut down, so it was hauled to one side and left to rot.

This was before the day of commercial lumbering, and as yet, from an economic standpoint, the timber of the United States had hardly been touched. As time went on population increased, great cities sprang up, railroads were constructed, and commercial intercourse between nations necessitated manifold uses for timber, so that the lumber industry came into its own. And as the wave of settlement and immigration traveled ever westward, the corresponding increase in the demand for lumber resulted in an almost total depletion of the forests of the East first, and then those of the South and the Middle West. Thus do we find the last stand of virgin timber here upon the Pacific Slope.

As the Far West, particularly the Pacific States of California, Washington and Oregon, were the more recent portions of the United States favorable to forest growth to become populated by the energetic American people, in those states there is still time to protect and preserve the virgin stands of timber, and to reforest the recently cut-over lands and the forests which are now being cut down. If we do not, within the next few years, profit by the lessons of the past our forest lands will go the way of those in the East, South and Middle West.

In less than a century we have destroyed and ing year [1929] will be fundamentally different from what they have been in the past eight months [of 1928]. The supply of bank credit is dependent on the gold reserves, and gold will not come to the United States from other countries unless interest rates are high enough to make this the best place to employ money. Other countries will resist attempts to take gold from them, and will bid against us for new supplies. This is enough to indicate that we will not have cheap money unless something happens to release credit in this country, such as a decline of general business activity or a decline of prices in the stock market.

"Business is unusually promising, and if it comes up to expectations will want increasing supplies of credit. There is still plenty of optimism in the stock market and probably more credit will be wanted in that quarter. . . . If business is destined to want more bank credit it will naturally have the first call on the supply, as heretofore, and this will leave less for the stock market than even in 1928, unless the market holds resolutely for more, at rates that will attract it from other uses."

Signal Hill, a corporate city in Los Angeles County, is claimed by the captain of its fire department to be the richest, for its size, in the world. He reports that:

Each of the 1,373 acres of producing oil land within its boundaries has an averaged assessed valuation of $19,500, or a total of $29,707,000 for the entire city, and the percapita wealth is $6,820.

President Calvin Coolidge, by executive order, has designated Oakland, Alameda County, a customs port of entry, according to announcement of the Federal Treasury Department.

The port of entry is on the east side of San Francisco Bay and includes Oakland, Alameda, wasted more timber, cut over more forest lands, desolated more territory than any race of people throughout all history, with the result that we are moving faster toward the destruction of our national life and natural resources than any nation since the dawn of history.

Bear in mind that it took thousands of years to destroy the forests of China. The groves of cedars were still standing upon Lebanon at the commencement of the Christian Era, and in other parts of the world forest lands have survived centuries of lumbering. Only in civilized America, it seems, are we so blinded by our own egotism that we cannot profit by the lessons of the past and take adequate steps for the protection of the forests.

All the nations of Europe have long since taken wise protective measures to protect forest lands, and have enacted the proper legislation to make those measures effective. Are we so enthused over our own progress and advancement that we cannot profit by the experience of other nations? Will we continue to destroy the last remnant of forest life until the same physical exhaustion that has overcome many races in the past will, in turn, destroy us?

Truly, if we were to travel through many of our Eastern and Middle Western states and gaze upon the wanton destruction of what were once magnificent timber lands we would query, "Where is the Forest Primeval?" In many of our once most heavily forested states it is but a memory which will soon be entirely forgotten.

Forests are necessary for our health and well being. Trees breathe carbon dioxide and clarify the air, making it fit for human use. When we are ill and run down and our organs fail to function properly we go into the forests to again build up our systems. In places which are naturally unfit for human occupancy we plant trees. When they begin to grow, Nature removes the obstacles to our survival and, through the medium of forest life, our lives, in turn, are benefited, and we profit in health and longevity accordingly.

No truer example of this condition can be manifested than that of the Imperial Valley, in California, which, just a few years back, was a desert country unfit even for human existence and which today, through the hand of man and the assistance of the tree, has become a prosperous and even healthful land. And each year, as more trees mature, there is a noticeable and corresponding change, not only in the health conditions, but also in the climatic conditions.

Berkeley, Emeryville and San Leandro. The order became effective January 14.

"Grizzly Growls" of January 1929 had an error—giving credit, for valuable service in pushing the Boulder Dam bill through the Federal Congress, to "Congressman Ralph B. Swing, affiliated with Arrowhead Parlor No. 110 N.S.G.W. of San Bernardino."

The California congressman by the name of Swing who for eight years waged a vigorous battle for the Boulder dam is Representative Phil D. Swing, a member of San Diego Parlor No. 108 N.S.G.W. Ralph B. Swing, affiliated with Arrowhead Parlor No. 110 N.S.G.W., is a member of the state legislative body.

Incidentally, one of the first measures passed by the California Legislature assembled at Sacramento last month was a bill approving, on behalf of this state, the seven-states Boulder Canyon dam compact. And the measure was promptly signed by Governor C. C. Young.

The Pacific highway, now designated as United States highway No. 9 by state and federal authorities, is the queen of the nation's roads, according to a report of the Federal Agriculture Department. It stretches 1,590 miles from the Canadian border to Mexico, through the States of Washington, Oregon and California.

"It traverses a section of the United States that is the delight of the vacationist," says the report, which lists among the "outstanding scenic wonders" the Sierra Nevada with Mount Shasta, Mount Lassen (the only active volcano in the United States), Lake Tahoe, Mount Whitney and Death Valley (the highest and the lowest points in the country), and the redwoods in California.

Co-operation does not mean, "let Jim do it." It is a call to you, Native Sons, to give the best that is in you to assist "Jim" in accomplishing something worth while.

THE HOUSE BEAUTIFUL

Dr. Mariana Bertola

(PAST GRAND PRESIDENT N.D.G.W.)

OF SPANISH STYLE OF ARCHITECTURE, four stories high, steel and concrete, the Native Daughter Home proudly stands at 555 Baker street, San Francisco.

Entering the iron gates, with their emblem of flaming torch, you see the lovely hand-painted tile panels, given by Past Grand President Mary E. Bell. The foyer contains a fine fireplace of stone, donated by Mabel Phillips of Alta Parlor No. 3 in memory of her father and mother. Above this mantel rests the mirror, donated by Grand Trustee Evelyn I. Carlson. Two lovely ferns in wicker stands are at either side of the archway, given by Encinal Parlor No. 156. A fine lantern, given by Alta Parlor No. 3, hangs in the foyer.

To the left, is the Grand Secretary's office, also the small lodge-room which was originally designed to be the committee-room, but, on demand for more lodge-room, was turned into one and appropriately furnished.

Straight ahead, is the beautiful large lodge-room, with rich hangings, and a view of the lovely garden outside. Upon the walls is an emblem, commanding and interesting; a wreath of the native madrone leaves, caught up by clusters of madrone berries. In the center is the United States shield. On the right of the foyer are the coat-room, dressing-room and elevator.

Let us take the elevator to the second floor. We get out and face the court, with its profuse collection of plants donated by our friends, John McLaren and Mrs. Minnie Dobbins. We look up to an imposing crystal chandelier, donated by Past Grand President Ema Gett. We love that chandelier! Did you say I have used the wrong word? No, I said "love," and I mean "love."

To the right is the dining-room, containing another fine mantel which was donated by Orinda Parlor No. 56. There are ten tables in brown, to harmonize with the stencils which decorate the frames of doors and windows. From here

The Order of Native Daughters of the Golden West now has a modern commodious Home of its own in San Francisco. The Home was formally dedicated and opened for service Saturday evening, January 12. Among the many in attendance at the ceremonies were representatives of sixty-five Subordinate Parlors.

On all sides were heard expressions of approval and appreciation for the work of the Grand Parlor Home Committee. "I had no idea the Home would be so beautiful," was the general opinion.

Dr. Mariana Bertola, Past Grand President and Permanent Chairman of the Grand Parlor Home Committee, presided at the dedicatory ceremonies, and prepared the accompanying article for The Grizzly Bear.—Editor.

we may look out onto the hack garden, or, to the left, onto the court garden. Opening off the dining-room is the serving-room, and then the kitchen, which is splendidly equipped—plenty of closets, sinks, a steam table, a fat trap in the sink exit, a refrigerator.

To the left of the elevator is the lounge. At one end is the fireplace, with a magnificent stone mantel. In this fireplace, as well as that of the dining-room, stand hand-wrought iron andirons donated by Grand Trustee Sallie Brainerd and her husband. At the opposite end of the room stand the bookshelves.

The library is dedicated to the memory of the late Past Grand President Clara K. Wittenmyer. Up-to-date books on biology, botany, biography and history are wanted. Here stands a lovely lamp, donated by Miss Millie Tietjen and Mrs. Kate Tietjen. A valuable painting by Valencia has been donated by Past Grand President Dr. Victory A. Derrick. It is desired to have only a few pictures upon these walls, and those paintings only by the best artists. A silk velour chesterfield with two chairs have been donated and stand at this end of the room. The hangings in this room are of rich wine-colored velour. A beautiful vase was donated by Past Grand President Addie Mosher.

We mount to the third floor. There goes a bell. It is the house phone, from one floor to the other. Here is the director's room, Mrs. Hawkins, a member of Santa Cruz Parlor No.

26. This room and the one above it have bathrooms attached. The rooms at each end of the hall have private baths also. A large bathroom, equipped with showers and lavatory, is at the left of the elevator.

The fourth floor is equipped with the old home furniture, repainted and varnished. To the right is the ward-room for the sick; the furniture was donated years ago by Buena Vista Parlor No. 68. This has its private bath. At the opposite end is the Alta Parlor No. 3 room, also with private bath. The Home Committee has taken a room upon the fourth floor for its meetings, instead of the lovely room upon the first floor, heretofore mentioned.

Dedication night, January 12, 1929, about fifteen hundred people visited the Home, and over five hundred stayed to hear the program: Vocal solo, "Marie," Mrs. Eva Jones; prayer, Mrs. Pearl Lamb, Past Grand President, whose Grand Parlor accepted the plans of the new building and arranged for its financing; presentation of Governor C. C. Young's representative, Dr. Dickie, who spoke of the governor's cabinet;

NINETEENTH NATIONAL ORANGE SHOW

(E. M. GORE.)

ORANGES ARE AS NATIVE TO CALIFORNIA as gold or palms or peppers. Long before the time when the movies were born or even before oil came gushing forth to add a new characteristic to this state, the orange trees bloomed and bore and yearly spread the magic message of "California fruit" to the nation.

Thus it is, because oranges and California are so inseparable in association—either to native or settler, to newcomer or less-fortunate residents of other states—the National Orange Show at San Bernardino is often agreed to be the Golden State's most typical annual exposition. And it is held, too, in colorful and picturesque San Bernardino, tropically treed city nestling at the base of towering mountains; a city that was a real city before hundreds of now-bustling California cities, as large or larger, had even been dreamed of.

Once again this February—for eleven brilliant days and nights from February 14 to 24—historic San Bernardino will act as the hostess to citrus exposition throngs. This, the Nineteenth National Orange Show, is expected to be by far the biggest and best and most beautiful citrus celebration ever staged.

The Native Son, old-timer to youngster, has watched the wealth of his natal state develop and increase, always going higher, higher. He may well be proud that everything of moment has increased and augmented. The citrus industry is no exception. Groves by the hundreds may have disappeared to make room for teeming cities and towns, or subdivisions whose backers fondly dreamed might team. Notwithstanding all this, the 1928-1929 citrus crop of California is away out ahead in quantity and value of any crop ever produced before.

It is natural, therefore, that the forthcoming show should be a record one, for it celebrates the success of the season's bumper crop—a season in which the golden groves have borne $150,000,000 worth of fruit: oranges, lemons, grapefruit.

This is pointed out by Roy H. Mack, general manager of the show, who expresses the opinion that last year's attendance—past the quarter-million mark—will reach a total of at least 300,000 by the time "taps" is sounded the night of February 24.

The main event of the show, as usual, will be the display of feature exhibits, representing some of the main cities and communities of the state, north and south. While most of these striking exhibits will be installed by southland cities, there will be not a few from north of the Tehachapi so that the state, as a whole, will be fittingly represented in this truly national event. The feature exhibits, as in former shows, will be distinctive structures—bridges, towers, palaces, all sorts of unique ideas in feature construction—built entirely of citrus fruit.

The show will consist of main feature department, industrial show, auto show, by-products department and the carnival "Orange Trail." Creator's band from New York, on the Pacific Coast for a series of engagements, will furnish the major music throughout the show. There will be a series of special days, including one in honor of the Native Sons and Native Daughters of the Golden West.

All in all, it is asserted, the Nineteenth National Orange Show at San Bernardino, February 14 to 24, is an event that no one—especially loyal Californians—can afford to miss.

FLAG RAISING RE-ENACTED

SANTA BARBARA—WITNESSED BY SEVERAL hundred persons, ceremonies sponsored by Santa Barbara Parlor No. 116 Native Sons of the Golden West re-enacted December 27 the first hoisting of the Flag of the United States of America over this city. The ceremonies were carried out at the original site, now known as 809 State street, where Lieutenant Theodore Talbot of Captain John C. Fremont's United States military scouts raised the flag following the capitulation of the Pueblo of Santa Barbara, the morning of December 27, 1846.

A parade, headed by the color guard and the band of the Boy Scouts of America, proceeded to the site where, after an invocation by Rev. Benjamin Goodfield, President George A. Black of Santa Barbara Parlor outlined the events leading up to the historic incident. He told how William Benjamin Foxen, an early-day rancher of Santa Barbara County, harbored the United States forces and led them through San Marcos Pass to evade an ambush prepared by Indians, and related how the soldiers came into the pueblo and captured it without the firing of a shot or the loss of a single life. Concluding his remarks, he introduced descendants of men who were in Captain Fremont's service: Mrs. Matilde Carter, daughter of Foxen; Dewey Carson, son of Kit Carson, and Frank Leslie Kellogg, relative of Benjamin Franklin Kellogg.

Mayor T. R. Finley, a member of Santa Barbara Parlor, again raised the Flag of the United States of America upon the historic site, the assemblage sang "The Star Spangled Banner," and the Boy Scouts of America led in a recital of the oath of allegiance to the flag. As a concluding number, H. A. Adrian delivered the following address:

"To you, Native Sons and Daughters of the Golden West, we give most generous thanks for the magnificent work you are doing to keep vivid in the minds and hearts of our people the colorful and splendid events of those elder days of California. We thank you for the thousands of dollars you are spending for research into the archives of the old world and the new, in order to worthily re-write the history of this 'land of the western sun.' And we thank you too for your noble endeavors to place homeless children in childless homes; to plant green growing things along barren highways and shadeless streets; to reclaim the waste places of the city where boys and girls may expend their energies in growing things of beauty and of use.

"Here upon the same hallowed ground where eighty-two years ago the Stars and Stripes leaped out upon the winter winds above an unknown adobe village, today we raise anew its fluttering folds to float above a city whose charm and beauty have won the love and admiration of all the world. When first it floated here, there were but a few more people in all our broad land than now dwell within the Golden State alone.

"When first the Stars and Stripes were fashioned by the fair hands of Betsy Ross from a sketch drawn by the loving child of Washington himself, there were but a scant two million to give it their allegiance. Now, more than a hundred and twenty million dwell beneath its protecting folds in peace and unity. We think of our flag as youthful, while in fact there are only two that are actually older than ours—Switzerland and Japan—one of them the oldest republic, and the other the oldest empire.

"Flags were born of battle, of the stress and strain of conflict, and of the red rage of war. At first, far back of history's dawn, a branch of flame-colored foliage was held aloft to mark the place where the leader fought; then a spear-shaft bordered with the brilliant plumage of birds; then the outstretched skin of a wild beast—totem of the tribe; and after that banners of woven fabrics, of varying colors and combinations, have led on to victory, or gone down in defeat and despair, through all the slow-footed march of man's long journey upward. But always a symbol of battle as was our own beloved flag. Yet gradually through the passing years it has come to be the emblem of a nation's power—not alone upon the field of battle, but in the marts of trade and upon the ships of commerce, above the home, the church, and the school. A symbol of conquest, not of peoples and nations, but of Nature's forces of earth and air and sunshine; of science and art, of misery and disease, of waste and want, of passion and crime.

"Created as a symbol of war, this flag of ours is leading the world in the conquest of war itself. Yet a little while and its glad folds shall be draped in eternal peace above the grave of war's last soldier, slain upon earth's last battlefield."

AN EVER-GROWING MENACE

Ernest McGaffey

TO THOSE CITIZENS OF CALIFORNIA to whom the question of the safety of human life is not a matter of entire indifference, the growing and appalling record of the deaths of men, women and children in the state through automobile accidents has become a question of immediate, crucial and monumental importance. It is a situation which can neither be denied, excused nor minimized. Every year the death toll climbs. Every year the roll of the seriously injured increases. And every year the property loss grows by leaps and bounds, until the staggering total of eight hundred million dollars runs up the waste due to this cause in the United States during 1927.

The conditions have become so menacing that the entire nation has become alarmed. Automobile traffic has increased, and is increasing tremendously. More cars are upon the streets and highways, more highways are being built, more population is being shown in the various states, and while a certain number of casualties are inevitable, there is no sane reason why the slaughter should be so nation-wide and so great. Laws have been passed in California, ordinances put in force in the different cities, rules and regulations established and strenuous efforts made to bring about some measure of reform, but what of it?

"The moon shines like a beacon bright,

The clouds drift high above it,

The stars light up the Milky Way,

And yet I ask, WHAT OF IT?"

It has become apparent that drastic steps must be taken to curb the death-roll, and in connection with this determination the launching of the new state-wide organization for the promotion of safety is expected to aid in reducing the startling number of California's fatal accidents growing out of motor traffic. This association was launched at a meeting recently held in the City of Sacramento, and a clear-cut program was agreed on for the purpose of cutting down the list of killed and wounded.

Among the objects listed in the plan formulated are: To secure uniform traffic regulations; to bring about a uniform interpretation of traffic laws; to obtain a uniform schedule of fines and penalties; to establish centralization of control and adequate training of traffic officers; to co-ordinate the administration and enforcement of traffic laws and regulations among the various municipalities of the state; to institute a uniform and state-wide program for educating school children as to the perils of modern traffic; and finally, to launch a continuous course of adult education concerning safety measures on the streets and highways which should include both motorists and pedestrians.

Senator Arthur A. Breed, president pro tem of the State Senate and author of the California Motor Vehicle Code, was elected chairman of the new organization, Edward B. Lyman, vice-president of the Automobile Club of Southern California, was named as vice-chairman, as was also Mrs. R. L. Cardiff, president of the California Parent-Teacher Association. The executive committee, appointed by the chairman of the organization, is headed by E. B. Lefferts, manager of the public safety department of the Automobile Club of Southern California, and includes more than a score of prominent men and women from all parts of the state.

The various organizations represented in this state-wide safety campaign are the California Parent-Teacher Association, State Railroad Commission, State Division of Motor Vehicles, State Department of Public Works, State Department of Finance, Judicial Council of California Peace Officers' Association, Commonwealth Club of California, Steam Railroad Association, Automobile Club of Southern California, California State Automobile Association, Motor Transportation Association of California, California League of Municipalities, County Supervisors' Association of California, Electric Railway Association, Chamber of Mines and Oils, National Aeronautic Association, California Farm Bureau Federation, American Legion, East Bay Safety Council, San Francisco and Los Angeles Motor Car Dealers' Association, state organizations of Rotary, Kiwanis, Lions and Optimists Clubs, San Francisco Traffic Survey Committee, San Diego Public Safety Committee and the San Francisco and Los Angeles Police Departments.

That this is a splendid roster of leading organizations and associations in the state admits of no doubt, but it faces a task to which the cleansing of the Augean stables by the late Hercules was a mere bagatelle. We have a perfect cataract of laws, and a sea of ordinances and regulations concerning motor traffic and the rights and duties of motorists and pedestrians, but they do not reach, in the ice-cold judgment of men who have devoted many years to the study of this problem, the root of the trouble. They have sadly, reluctantly, but unanimously arrived at the conclusion "that no enforceable legislation will strike at the root of highway accidents." Only when the individual practices the principles of courtesy and caution as a part of his natural self may the nation hope for a reduction in the human toll it pays for highway transportation."

These are solemn words! And they are the truth! It follows, therefore, as the day the night, that nation-wide education and a nation-wide awakening of conscience is the only sure remedy for the predicament America finds itself in as regards the growing death record arising out of traffic fatalities. It is you, sir or madam, who are responsible, and until you mend your ways there is no prospect of permanent relief. The fact that so many and so influential bodies have joined in a vigorous effort to stem the tide of fatalities is a matter for rejoicing, but it is going to take the active co-operation of all the citizenry of California in the movement, in order to make any appreciable progress in this great humanitarian design.

Caution, courtesy and commonsense, the three Cs which form the side-columns and the arch of the gateway of safety, are so much of a necessity in modern traffic that it would seem an instinctive impulse for everyone to adopt them. But while there are many thousands of motorists and pedestrians who do follow these principles, there are many thousands of others who apparently never heard of them. It would actually seem as though many otherwise sane men and women lose all sense of decency and care when they get into an automobile, and that scores of pedestrians let their wits go wool-gathering when they walk the streets of a busy metropolis.

In the 26,618 deaths caused by automobile accidents in 1927, intoxication on the part of drivers was responsible for only 9 percent of the fatalities. Of the deaths caused principally by pedestrians, 32 percent grew out of children playing in the street or crossing in violation of the traffic laws; 27 percent by adult "jay-walking," and 16 percent by inattention. Fourteen percent were charged to "confusion." Of the fatalities charged to motorists, 32 percent were attributed to inattention, 23 percent to speeding and 20 percent to traffic violation. More than two-thirds of all fatalities are pedestrians.

One cause of accidents which is inexcusable is the practice of some motorists in making sudden and swift turns around a corner, when the traffic signal has given the pedestrian the right to cross. While the motorist has also a right to make a turn which crosses the path the pedestrian is taking, caution, courtesy and commonsense should teach him that such a turn must be taken slowly, as the pedestrian has really the initial right of way. But many motorists whirl round corners at lightning-like speed, and numbers of pedestrians are cut down without warning. The excuse given by the motorist is that the victim stepped in front of his car, the case is listed as "unavoidable," the funeral is held and the incident, as well as the grave, is closed. There should be an iron-clad law compelling all motorists to turn all corners slowly where pedestrian traffic has started to cross, whether it is one or a hundred people.

One class of automobile accidents which also should never happen are those occurring at the tops of hills, or just over the top of a hill. You may go up twenty hills in "high," and at a rate of from 35 to 50 miles an hour, and all will be well. Over the top of hill number 21 there may have been an accident, with a couple of cars in a heap that obstruct the roadway or a big truck squarely in the middle of the highway, and there you are—inevitably faced with a smash. Especially at night time! Take your hills fast to within 100 yards of the top, then go into second gear, and go over the tops slowly, cautiously and commonsensically. It will pay, in the long run. No matter how skilful a driver you may be, the other fellow's carelessness, recklessness or lack

(COMPILED EXPRESSLY FOR THE GRIZZLY BEAR.)

THE NEW STATE CONSTITUTION CONVENTION, in session at Sacramento City one hundred and thirty-five days, for thirty-five of which the members received no pay, completed its work February 28, 1879. Compared with the ten commandments of Moses, the completed document was a prodigious one and was said to cover all the ground of good government. The press of the state viewed it with mingled feelings. Prominent woman's suffrage advocates of Sacramento to the number of eighty February 20 adopted and sent to the convention a memorial asking that the new constitution provide for woman's suffrage, but it had no effect. Dennis Kearney announced his intention to stump the state, commencing March 1, in behalf of the new constitution.

Washington's Birthday, February 22, was observed by the display of a flag of the United States of America from every flagpole of the state. Governor William Irwin participated in a review of the National Guard in San Francisco.

The month's rainfall was very satisfactory, several storms dropping 3.77 inches of much-needed moisture. At the end of the month the season's total amounted to 9 inches.

The new Los Angeles City Council raised license rates so high laundries and vegetable vendors quit business, to the great distress of housewives there.

Four miles north of Millville, Shasta County, a vein of coal 18 inches wide was uncovered; it was said to be of fine grade. Sinking a well at Ione, Amador County, James Parkinson penetrated a coal vein 6 feet thick.

An oil well at Sespe, Ventura County, was reported down 1,500 feet and flowing 150 barrels of black gold daily.

General John Bidwell was establishing at Chico, Butte County, a 100-acre poultry yard upon which he intended to raise chickens by the thousands.

Santa Cruz City had a severe shock of earthquake at 3 a. m. of February 4.

At the Finnell grain ranch in Tehama County 1,020 mules were pulling plows, and 7,000 acres had been summer fallowed.

STAGE DRIVER FOILS ROBBERY PLOT.

Sacramento Parlor No. 3 N.S.G.W. gave its second annual party Valentine Day, February 14. A moonlight effect was very striking and greatly praised. E. R. Knox was the floor director, and was assisted by Ed. F. Cohn and Jack Stafford.

Edgar F. Wade, a druggist, and Carrie Graves were married at Chico, Butte County, February 14. The editor of the "Record" of that city rhymed the event as follows: "The doctors and druggists, as every one knows, cause many a mortal to turn up his toes; retribution will follow, and one of these days the balance, like Edgar, will go to their Graves."

A young man of Yountville, Napa County, while out riding was stopped by two highwaymen who, after taking all his money and personal effects, strapped him upon his horse and, Mazzeppa like, sent the animal galloping away. Fortunately, it carried him home.

January 14 highwaymen attempted near Oroville, Butte County, to rob the stage from Quincy, Plumas County. Whipping his team into a run, Driver Joel Meacham foiled the plot. This month Wells-Fargo & Company presented him with a gold watch and chain for saving the express box.

The Order of Caucasians, an anti-Chinese organization, held its annual convention in Sacramento February 25. John Greenwell of Amador County was re-elected supreme chief and A. D. Dawson of Nevada County vice-chairman.

A trial jury in San Benito County cast a secret ballot and found a prisoner guilty, and then the ballots were thrown into a waste-basket. A reading of them by a quidnunc showed nine of the jurymen spelled the word guilty either "giltie" or "gilty."

Michael Vincent, a Frenchman known to fame as "The Iron Man" and said to be the world's strongest man, died in San Francisco February 10 at the age of 44.

A Negro tramp with the biggest feet on record walked into Sacramento February 21. He wore a 21 shoe, and his feet had breadth in proportion.

Dr. W. F. Smith, wealthy oculist and prominent society man of San Francisco, became enamored with a society helle and made several unsuccessful attempts to divorce his wife in this state so as to marry his inamorata. Finally he became a citizen of Arizona and this month, as a rider to an appropriation bill, he got a bill through the legislature of that state giving him a divorce.

GREENBACKS NO GOOD WITH "SHOWME."

A Vallejo, Solano County, butcher seeking beef cattle found in the Contra Costa Coast Range an old Missourian, looking as aged as Noah and living in a backwoods cabin in a primitive manner, who was the owner of a stock range upon which a thousand head were grazing. Selecting a number of steers in prime condition, the hatcher pulled a roll of currency from his pocket and began to peel off the required number of hills to pay for his purchase.

"What's those thar?" asked the old man. "Greenbacks," answered the hatcher. "What's greenbacks?" queried he. "Money," replied the hatcher. "Each note has upon it the government's promise to pay its face value, and it's as good as gold." "Wall," replied old "Showme," after pondering a few minutes, "if you'll endorse 'em I'll take 'em, but if you won't then I want twenty-dollar pieces." The butcher tried to explain, but the old man was ohndurate, and he had to return to Vallejo and get the necessary gold coins before he could drive the band of steers away.

The residence of J. Whrift at Watsonville, Santa Cruz County, burned February 1 with a $5,000 loss.

S. D. Lee, owner of a fine sawmill upon Kidder Creek near Fort Jones, Siskiyou County, had a pile of slabs which he decided to get rid of by burning. A shift of the wind carried the flames

A fire in Drytown, Amador County, February 10 destroyed Soracco's store and several other buildings, causing a $20,000 loss.

The Ophir mills in Oroville, Butte County, burned at midnight February 16. The loss was $40,000.

The night of February 8 three men committed a burglary in Sacramento and carried their loot over the north levee to bury it temporarily. While digging a hole they noticed, a short distance away, a man standing beneath a tree looking at them. To scare him away, the burglars took a couple of shots at him, but he did not move. One of them then decided to investigate, and found a suicide hanging by his neck from the limb of a tree. The shooting causing an alarm, the burglars were captured.

The wife of Martin Elftman, living near Los Angeles, was stabling the family horse February 21. It klicked over the lamp she had set down to light the stable, her dress was set afire and she was fatally burned.

MISSION PLAY

CALIFORNIA'S HISTORIC PAGEANT drama, the "Mission Play," written by John Steven McGroarty and produced in its own playhouse at San Gabriel for seventeen consecutive seasons, is enjoying greater popularity and patronage this year than ever before. The eighteenth season opened January 1 with the 2829th performance, and with Juanita Vlgare dancing her 2828th number in the colorful fiesta scene.

The "Mission Play," and the magnificent Mission Playhouse in which it is presented by a cast of more than 100 talented artists, has been established as a California institution through the generosity of McGroarty and a group of other prominent Californians, who have given this famed production and its home to the people of the state. All proceeds are pledged to the restoration and preservation of the historic landmarks of California.

Atmospheric innovations added this year at San Gabriel have awakened augmented interest in this historic spot where the first grapevine was planted, and where it still grows and bears fruit, spreading its twining tendrils over more than an acre of trellises to furnish restful shade and quaint sanctuary to thousands of visitors.

The old adobe by the grapevine, which one time sheltered Ramona, has been converted into a picturesque art gallery for the exhibition of California antiques and mission relics. Just around the corner, near the massive entrance to the playhouse, native Indians, part of the mission family, deftly weave and fashion their works of rare tribal art in their new mission craft shops.

Fray Junipero Serra, courageous Pioneer, again comes to life in the "Mission Play" through the dramatic art of R. D. MacLean, celebrated Thesplan, who brings to the production this year an even more gripping portrayal of the stellar role. Irmalee Campbell, who has been cast for the leading feminine part, makes a charming Sonora Josefa Yorha and her rich voice is a distinct triumph in the musical numbers.

A beautiful new pipeorgan, presented to the "Mission Play" by a group of wealthy Californians, lends peculiar glamour to the production, as under the deft touch of Ernest Douglas, the man who first assembled the unwritten Mexican folk songs and lilting melodies handed down through generations, the musical accompaniment of the play unfolds, scene by scene, to leave the audience enthralled.

"You haven't seen California until you have seen the 'Mission Play,'" say the critics of international fame, "for it is the story of the beginning of California, when the first dauntless hand of storm-tossed voyagers landed at San Diego and, under guidance of Father Serra, set up the little camp that started Christian civilization in the West."

Arrangements for special parties to attend the "Mission Play" at San Gabriel are now being handled by L. H. Boydston, newly appointed field director, who reports that many reservations are being made by organizations, clubs and civic bodies throughout California South to take advantage of special-party rates for the entertainment of employees, members and visiting guests.

Then came Cannes, made famous by King Edward VII of England; before leaving here we visited Sardou's home, where Rachael, the great tragic actress, died in 1858. Grasse is the center of the world's most famous perfume distilleries. La Napoule has its old castle upon the beach, and not far away is the beautiful curving beach from La Bocca to the heights where the California quarter is located. through quarries of red and blue porphyry rock, passing Agay Bay before reaching Boulouis-Sur-Mer and St. Raphael, known as the starting point of the porphyry coast. Then, a glance at Frejus (Forum Jalli), with its Roman ruins—arena, aqueduct, walls and even the Roman lighthouse. Leaving the sea, we traveled around the Les Mauris Mountains and arrived at Hyeres-Les-Palmiers, the most southerly Mediterranean resort. A very interesting spot came next, Toulon, where Napoleon, as a young artilleryman, first showed his military skill to the world by defeating the British after a long siege. Noticeable to the visitor here are the famous naval shipyards, Les Sablettes, the great arsenal and the strongly fortified chain of mountains.

"Passing enroute numerous new resorts, we arrived at Marseilles, founded sixteen hundred years before Christ and one of the world's most colorful ports, where ships from all climes, manned by all races, enter daily. As one stands in the shadow of the grand old cathedral, perched high upon limestone cliffs, his mind wanders across to Algeria and the lands of the Pharos, with their sphinx and pyramids. Near here is the delta of the Rhone, that mighty river which flows from Geneva. Its outlet is at Aignes-Mortes, the dead city of the Crusade days, where King Louis bade his last farewell. Here may be seen the best thirteenth century fortifications in France, and across the bay is the Chateau d'If, made famous by Dumas' 'Monte Cristo.' Marseilles is known as the gateway to the Orient, and is also the port of embarkation for Africa.

"From here we took the fast express which runs to Paris via Avignon and Lyons. And such speed, at times reaching ninety-five miles per hour! Arriving at Avignon we stopped at a hotel which, from 1580 to 1799, was the mansion of Marquis de Graveson, and is yearly the headquarters of thousands of Americans; in its time it has housed such notables as Napoleon, General Bertier, Maximilian, Queen Victoria, etc. Avignon is upon the left bank of the Rhone, and its most famous landmark is the Palace of the Pope. Pope Clement took up his abode here in 1309, and until 1377 this, and not Rome, was the home of succeeding popes. The ruined bridge of St. Benezet, known as Pont d'Avignon, is interesting. The ancient walls surrounding the city are intact. In the cathedral of the Crusader days are the original Madonna and child, carved from an elephant's tusk in the fourteenth century. Along the Rhone shores are the towers of Philippe and Belvedere, dating from 1307, and St. Andre Fort, 1367. From Avignon we visited:

"Le Pont de Gard, a great Roman bridge, well preserved, built before Christ over the Eure; it rises in three stages 152 feet and across the top runs a water channel 7 feet high and 4 feet wide, which supplied a reservoir; at its base is an ancient cave, no doubt used by some Gallic tribe; through the ages the rocks of the bridge have blended into brown and golden hues, making a pleasing sight against the green background. Vaison, ancient capital of the Gauls of Voconces, which flourished long before Christ; the Romans later invaded this section and many relics of their day are to be seen along the River Ouveze. Tarascon, with the grand chateau of King Rene, overlooking the Rhone, of remarkable military architecture of the fifteenth century; here also is a large, grotesque, stone monastery. Orange, the very interesting old Roman capital in France; a theater, 328 feet long and 110 feet high, built before Christ, is in fine shape. Arles, the city of pretty women, the site of the largest Roman amphitheater in France; the Roman burial grounds are here, also, and the palace of Constantine; a short distance away may be seen the Abbey of Montmajour, with an underground chapel. Nimes, an important Gallic town before the Romans occupied it, 112 B. C.; without doubt, it has more relics of antiquity than any other city in France.

HISTORY RECALLED.

Commemorating the eighty-second anniversary of the occupation of Los Angeles by American forces, January 10, 1847, a parade wended its way January 10 from the City Hall, around the Plaza, to the old Ahila adobe in Olivera street, where the Americans established their headquarters. In line were the firemen's band, a detachment from the One Hundred and Sixtieth Infantry and a delegation of Ramona Parlor No. 109 N.S.G.W. members escorting the California State (Bear) Flag. In the assemblage at the adobe were delegations from all the local Native Son and Native Daughter Parlor, headed by Herman C. Lichtenberger, Past Grand President N.S.G.W.

At the adobe there was a short program, presided over by President Bonelli of the City Council. Superior Judge B. Ray Schauer (Ramona N.S.) pleaded for the preservation of the few remaining historic landmarks. "Out of respect for the valorous deeds of the troops of 1847," he said, "this generation should take immediate steps to preserve the Ahila adobe, as well as all landmarks of a similar nature." Captain T. Gardiner Brown explained the significance and purpose of the ceremonies, and taps were sounded as a tribute to all those soldiers who lost their lives in the taking of Los Angeles.

Christine Sterling, who has interested herself in the preservation and the restoration of the Ahila adobe, says: "It would appear to me that if the public were educated along the lines of patriotism and the history of their city all civic matters would move with less effort. The ignorance of most of the people in Los Angeles for their history is pathetic and tragic. It is a history to be proud of, and surely the men who made this history must have believed that a patriotism equal to their own would live after them. Los Angeles today is like a great tree which has attained a fine growth; her people are so busy decorating the top branches they do not see the roots decaying under the ground. She is a transient, orphan city, her birthplace now the gutter, her grandparents too shabby to associate with. If January 10 means nothing to us, it will mean nothing to our children and to our children's children."

AGAINST ADVERTISING PROGRAMS.

At the January 11 meeting of the N.S.G.W. and N.D.G.W. Interparlors Committee the following officers for 1929 were elected: Burrell D. Neighbours (Ramona No. 109 N.S.G.W.), chairman; Carrie Kessner (Los Angeles No. 124 N.D.G.W.), vice-chairman; Fred J. Burmester (Los Angeles No. 45 N.S.G.W.), secretary; Loring E. Kent (Glendale No. 264), treasurer.

A resolution against advertising programs of any nature in connection with Native Son or Native Daughter activities was unanimously adopted, the Orders having but one official publication, The Grizzly Bear Magazine, issued regularly every month since May of 1907.

PRETTY SCENE.

Los Angeles Parlor No. 124 N.D.G.W. is going to assist in restoring the Ahila adobe on Olivera street, and has appointed Grand Trustee Marvel Thomas chairman of a committee to secure funds. This historic landmark was occupied for ten days by American forces when they captured Los Angeles from the Mexicans. The property has been leased by Christine Sterling, who seeks the co-operation of all those interested in preserving the early-day landmarks. January 16 the Parlor initiated two candidates, and District Deputy Florence Dodson-Schoneman gave a fine talk on the Native Daughter Home. The card party of January 9, under the chairmanship of Irene Eden, was an enjoyable affair.

Officers of the Parlor, with Flora Holy as president, were installed January 23 by District Deputy Schoneman, who was assisted by officers of Rudecinda Parlor No. 230. All those participating were gowned in white, and this, with the attractive decorations and the inspiring music of Organist Pearl K. Dwinell, made a pretty scene long to be remembered. Talks were made by Past Grand President Grace S. Stoermer, Grand Trustee Thomas, District Deputy Schoneman, President Holy and Annie L. Adair. Grace J.

Feminine World's Fads and Fancies

PREPARED ESPECIALLY FOR THE GRIZZLY BEAR BY ANNA STOERMER

"WHEN IN DOUBT SELECT black." This might be a good slogan for the woman who wishes to always appear smartly gowned. Black is perhaps the most "sophisticated" of all colors. Even the regal deep purple, deep blue and very dark wine shades cannot quite reach the degree of smartness achieved by black. Smart folks prefer black sports garb. An added dash of red and white supplies the relief, and frequently a striped pullover is worn to lighten the sombre note effectively.

All of the bright promises of the flare minaret and softened effects are being fulfilled in the newer styles for evening wear. The jacket or bolero is remaining in spite of two seasons of popularity and, judging from advance showings, it is to continue in the role of the separate jacket to be worn with evening gowns.

Smart dresses are not just a question of cut and fabric, for there is behind the best of them sensitive knowledge, fine appreciation of little things and good taste.

The mode is not going to give up anything that is beautiful and useful. Comfort, ease and freedom of movement will be demanded of every successful dress. Tiers and flounces will continue, the peplum will take several steps forward and there is no reason why the up-in-the-front and down-in-the-back line should stop. Spiral and diagonal lines are important. For sports garments, circular and straight cuts are newer than pleats. Pleats are used only in groups.

Bodices will be soft and supple, but the actual blousing will be very much less. And broken lines will have greater length and value. The lovely soft blouse will be longer than usual. In fact, a feeling of length of blouse, even in a dress, is an important phase of the line of the next season.

Let no one be mistaken. Scarfs will still be knotted and ends will still flutter. There will be bows, buttons and belts galore.

Weather permitting, the season will start with a rush of prints. There is hardly a fabric that has escaped patterns. Checks have every chance of being as popular as polkadots were last year, and polkadots have every chance of settling down into a classic. It is only a short step from checks to plaids, so watch them.

Jerseys will be as important as ever, plain or fancy in weave and varied in design. There is something so smart about horizontal bands that there is no reason why they should leave the mode. In fact, the horizontal use of striped materials will be very important.

Spring coats will be of many lengths. Three-quarter length coats are on their way to become a permanent feature, while the long straight coats are too good to ever leave us and many of them are furless. Separate fur scarfs that hang or tie about the neck will rival foxes.

Watch out for the tailored suits, both the trim classical tailored suit and that marvel, the dressmaker's suit that is soft and supple and has less of the tailor's iron. There is no reason why some suits should not have a checked coat and plain skirt, and vice versa. Silk suits will be right this season, in fact better than ever.

In the color combinations of this year's prints is the fact that white is frequently replaced by pale sulphur-yellow, the palest of pink or very pale beige. The latter is most important as it gives stress to white worn with a color combination and to black and white as a very separate and distinct expression of the mode.

Green is an excellent spring color, both plain combined with other colors and in self-toned prints. Blue alone and in combinations will be excellent. Dark blues, lighter blues and vivid blues will be best. Greys will still have to be used with discretion.

The footnotes are fully as important as the main theme, and are certainly not to be skipped over by the student of fashion. Feet have stepped into the front ranks of importance, and now comes the white kid shoe, which has had a revival after years of neglect. There are many white shoes trimmed with colored kid. These colored trimmings accompany costumes of white and color. There are also very charming shoes of kid in pastel tones such as sea green, yellow, pale blue, orchid and pink.

The fabric shoe is among the novelties of the season, and it is best made of shantung or linen in natural or pastel tones. For evening wear, crepe-de-chine rivals satin in the new silk slippers. Old gold shoes are excellent, as they do not tarnish and they are taking the place in the wardrobe formerly held by the beige satin. These are extremely smart when a satin bag to match is carried.

Satin slippers in colors to match the chiffon or lace evening gown strike the right note of contrast with the sunburned tones of evening stockings.

The new hats are of straw and felt. The modified mushroom may be expected to oust ear-muffler, helmet and bonnet shapes.

The coming hats cast a shadow with their front brims, although it is seldom a brim of even diameter is seen. Usually it is the right side of the hat that is wider, and so the left cheek is the exposed one.

Combination of felt and straw will mark the first spring hats, with black, navy and dark reds predominating. For wear a little later, light beige and cream shades may be expected. Two tones are often combined in the use of straw and felt.

There is no fixed rule for the use of felt.

Sometimes it forms the draped brim of a hat lifted off the face at the left side and having a crown of straw, and upon other hats the brims are of straw, rather elaborately cut, with small ends and tabs jutting out to break the line.

Some of the advance summer hats have trimming underneath wide brims, usually flat bows of ribbon.

NO FOOLIN'

(LEILA M. HERSEE.)

If you're ill and feel depressed,
And think you need a rest,
Pack your trunk and come out West
To California.

If the sleet is coming down
In your frozen Eastern town,
Get your map and hunt the noun
"California."

When the winds do blow a gale
That makes you look so sick and pale,
Jump a train and hit the trail
For California.

When your joints commence to rust
And you're filled with mild disgust,
Seek the land so much discussed—
California.

When the streets are deep with snow,
Come West and bring your hoe
And a bag of "oats to sow"
In California.

When your hinges start to squeak,
There's a frozen blossom on your beak,
Put your gum boots on and take a sneak
For California.

When Atlantic waves are rough,
And the going's pretty tough,
Just admit you've had enough
And come—to California.

"Land of sunshine and blue sky,
Where we thrive and don't half try;"
Hope we'll see you bye and bye—
In California.

ALMANAC CLOTH THE SAME AS OSNABURG OR GREENVILLE.

New names for old familiar things are constantly appearing, but "almanac cloth" and "greenville cloth" are new names for a fabric that has itself only recently become known in many parts of the United States. In the South, however, "osnaburg," as this material is more generally called, has long been used extensively for industrial purposes. People made clothes out of it, or used it for cotton-picking bags, potato sacks and other articles requiring a strong, durable, inexpensive cotton fabric.

Some one with an artistic eye, liking, perhaps, the unbleached, undyed color, or the irregularities of its rather coarse, loose weave, decided to try it for portieres or window curtains; and in a very short time the merits of "osnaburg," or "almanac," or "greenville cloth"—whichever name one likes—were recognized for all sorts of household uses. At the present time, this fabric can be found under one of these names almost everywhere.

"Almanac cloth" indicates that there are uses for it practically every day in the year. The Federal Agricultural Department's home economics bureau has suggested "osnaburg" for many home purposes besides draperies, and for almost any room in the house. It makes good slip covers for upholstered furniture, or sturdy couch covers such as the men and boys of the family prefer to dainty spreads in their rooms; trunk covers when trunks must be among other room furnishings, shoe bags to make the closet convenient, cushions for the window seat, the porch or the boat, or for use anywhere that plainness and durability are desirable qualities in a household fabric. If natural undyed "osnaburg" is used, articles made of it harmonize in a very satisfactory way with more colorful furnishings; or it can be easily dyed to match or blend with a color scheme.

A BIT O' FARMING

PREPARED EXPRESSLY FOR THE GRIZZLY BEAR BY M. H. ELLIS

THE CHAIN-STORE IDEA FOR AGRICULTURE has been recommended of late, as a means of solving some of its problems. The suggestion is not amiss, but it is not entirely new. As applied to agriculture, the chain store can mean nothing more than co-operation, and carried to its ultimatum would include co-operative buying as well as selling, co-operative operation of farms and the handing together of farmers, large and small, in their every operation where such wholesale operations are profitable.

This plan has been followed, in a measure, ever since agriculture has had a history. Farmers have aided in threshing each other's crops, in building houses and in many such operations. More recently the co-operative selling agencies have become popular, and have succeeded. Co-operative buying organizations have not been so popular, for the farmer always has felt a sense of loyalty to his home-town merchant. But if the chain store develops, as seems now possible, until the home-town merchant is no longer a factor, then the co-operative buying concerns will find new life. Indeed, in many parts of the United States they are now doing a good business.

We now find in the great valleys of California those who have purchased the heavy machinery necessary for subsoiling, and who serve the farmers in need of such work. This may easily be carried further, particularly for the small farmer; and his plowing, seeding, cultivation, etc., might well be done for him by individuals or organizations, private or co-operative. Spraying, pruning and practically every farm practice might be accomplished in such manner, either through a co-operative organization of the farmers or by some other agency equipped to do it for the farmers at a price that would be profitable to both.

There is no question that in many instances farmers have too large amounts invested in equipment. This is recognized in the districts where stationary threshing machines are used. Either one is purchased co-operatively and operated by the farmers together, or some one farmer buys one and all aid in running it, or it is owned and operated by a firm or individual at a fixed price. Perhaps no other similar farm activity requires as large an investment, but perhaps similar savings on a smaller scale might be effected. At any rate, the trend seems to be in that direction.

NEW CODLING MOTH THEORY.

An interesting theory on the control of codling moth has been brought forward at the University of California, where Professor W. B. Herms of the division of pomology has been experimenting with bright lights in connection with these well-known pests. Six 500-watt electric lights were used upon six trees, and the lighted trees showed considerably less damage to the fruit than those trees not lighted.

The theory is that the codling moth lays its eggs at twilight, and if there is no twilight, the eggs laid will be few. An artificial twilight maintained in the orchard for several hours each evening increased the infestation. Attempts have been made before to use lights for bait, but this is one moth that will not respond. But the lighting of the orchard during the period when the eggs are ordinarily laid will greatly decrease the damage done by the codling moth, Professor Herms believes. Incidentally, it will eliminate the problem of spray residue upon pears and apples, if further experimentation proves the theory.

BABY CHICK TIME IS HERE.

Again the season comes round when the hatcheries are operating at capacity and the poultryman is getting ready to brood the chicks needed for replacements in his flocks. In California today the poultryman has an advantage over his rival in most states, in that he may purchase chicks from pedigreed stock, and may reckon when he buys his chicks just about what their production will be. The guess work has been taken out. This granted, the wise poultryman will do well to buy stock that will return him a profit, and the best possible profit.

Remembering that it takes just as much feed for a poor chick as for a good one, and that there is no profit until expenses are paid, the conclusion must be that the chick that will develop into an excellent layer will be far and away more profitable than the average layer. If the chick from pedigreed stock costs 20 cents more, allowing for half of them to be cockerels, there must be 40 cents more returned in the year to make up the difference. That means a dozen, perhaps a dozen and a half eggs more. But that extra 20 cents will buy chicks that will lay 50 to 100 eggs more, and those eggs represent profit.

SPRAY FOR REDBERRIES NOW.

Redherry mites are pretty well known to blackberry growers of the state now, and sprayings in the last two years have checked the spread of the trouble. For those who do not know, the redherry mite, attacking the vines, causes the herry not to grow and not to ripen, leaving it small, hard and red, hence the name redherry.

The remedy is a lime-sulphur spray, and the time to apply it is now. Use one gallon of liquid lime-sulphur to ten of water, or two and a half pounds of dry lime-sulphur to a gallon of water. Get the pruning done at once, if it has not already been attended to, and then spray. A second spray just as the petals are falling in the spring, with a 4 percent solution, will get any missed now.

PASTURING ALFALFA.

Many farmers hesitate to pasture cattle upon alfalfa, fearing that the stand may be injured. As a matter of fact, pasturing is the cheapest way of cutting, and neither do the cattle injure the alfalfa plants with their hoofs nor by close cropping as they feed. As a rule, the first stand should be cut for hay; the cattle cannot clean up the rank growth of the early season. Aside from that, there is no advantage in cutting the forage, curing it, stacking and then feeding. Of course, no more cattle should be put upon the field than it will well carry.

PORTABLE LOADING CHUTE.

A portable loading chute for hogs and sheep will be found to be a useful appliance around a farm where these animals are raised; and there are few farms that can afford to be without a few hogs and sheep. The ordinary chute, being stationary, is always at the wrong place. If it is placed upon wheels, and a lever attached to the axle so that the wheels may be lowered when the chute is to be moved, and raised when it is to be used, much trouble will be saved. It is a lot of work to drag a chute around unless it is equipped with wheels.

ORCHARD HEATING.

Time for heating of deciduous orchards is close at hand, and the grower in frost belts should see that his equipment is ready and that fuel is available. Orchard heating is an insurance not to be lightly neglected, and one that will pay big dividends any year where the frost takes a toll. Thinning, by trusting to frost, is an unscientific and dangerous method. The fruit will not be removed where it should be, and much more of it may be taken than the grower desires. With the co-operation of the United States Weather Bureau, the newspapers, radio stations and farm advisors throughout the state, the grower may be ready when the danger point arrives and need not fire his heaters until that time.

GRAFTING GRAPE STOCK.

The grower who is planning to graft over his vines should have his scions ready now. They should have been cut in mid-winter and stored for use when grafting season comes, which is pretty soon now. As a matter of fact, grapes may be grafted any time from February to April, with March the best time to do the work. If new vines are being set in an old vineyard, be sure to make the hole large, cutting off roots from other vines that may have strayed into the feeding area. Give the new vine a good dose of fertilizer and show it some favor during the first season or two, particularly in the way of water and fertilizer.

INCUBATION OF TURKEY EGGS.

In addition to the fact that it is a more economical practice, the artificial incubation of turkey eggs has other advantages which should make it appeal to the grower. The old turkeys used for hatching and brooding the new crop may be infected with blackhead or cecum worms, and if so the infection will be carried into the brood of poults. Young turkeys are hard to handle when they run with hens, and diseases are much more easily controlled under the artificial method of rearing. And the practice no longer is an experiment.

SPRAY FOR SPANISH MEASLES.

Spraying for spanish measles in grapes should be done before the buds start to break, and February is an ideal time for the treatment. The spray is strong, and if the vineyardist waits too long he will be more than apt to injure the vines. The material used is sodium arsenate, six pounds of the dry material or one gallon concentrated liquid to 100 gallons of water. The disease is caused by the entrance of fungi into wounds caused by pruning or cultivating, and care used in cutting and working about the vines will in most cases prevent its entrance into the vineyard.

GYPSUM IN IRRIGATION WATER.

The application of gypsum to the soil by means of irrigation water is pronounced by the United States Department of Agriculture as entirely feasible. A hopper is placed over the ditch and a paddle wheel, operated by the current in the ditch, feeds the fertilizer into the water and stirs it up in a submerged mixing basin. A full description of the apparatus may be obtained from the department, Washington, D. C., by applying for Circular 38-C. The plan appears to be one that should aid greatly in the application of this material to soil in need of it.

ANOTHER REAL FARM AID.

What to do with cull fruit, sound in quality but which from its size or some blemish will not grade for market, is one of the problems that faces the orchardist. The cost of production is there, and if it could bring some revenue it might aid in making black figures instead of red ones in the farm ledger. There are many by-products, such as jams, jellies and juices, that may be made from such fruits; but until some protection is given these through legislation there will be difficulty in selling them. Such protection should be in the nature of proper labeling of imitations and synthetic products which have no food value and carry no vitamins. A bill to remedy this has been prepared and if it is passed will be of material benefit to the fruit producers of the state.

STARTING ROSES FROM CUTTINGS.

In California, as elsewhere, the rose is a favorite flower; here, however, it has the added advantage that the flowering season is longer and the less hardy varieties flourish. It is not difficult to start roses; indeed, from a cut flower one may happen to have been given a bush of them may be grown. Either new or old wood may be used for cuttings, and these will do well now.

If the cuttings are from new wood, make them about three or four inches long, leaving a leaf or two at the top, stripping the rest. Plant with two eyes in the soil. Cuttings from old wood should be six to eight inches in length. The new wood cuttings should be given protection, and an inverted fruit jar does nicely; the old ones need no protection. It is a good plan to start them in sand, moving them to the soil in which they are to be grown when they show by their growth that roots are established. Plant at least twice as many as are needed, for not all are likely to survive.

COCCIDIOSIS AND CHICKS.

There is no other enemy of the baby chick that equals coccidiosis in the toll it takes. Cleanliness, sunlight and milk will prevent the disease; prevention always is cheaper than curing. A well ventilated brooder house admitting sunlight, with cement runs to prevent the chicks from picking up the infection from the soil; the houses cleaned regularly and fresh litter put in to keep the chicks clean; and the addition of skim milk, either liquid or dry, will be almost absolute insurance. Chicks may be fed at twenty-four hours, starting on a mash which may be the regular laying mash with eight pounds of dry skim milk substituted for five pounds of meat or fish scrap. Such a food will do well for the first four weeks, the danger period, of the baby chick.

BEANS FOR LAMB FEED.

Where lambs are fed for market, bean screenings will be found a cheap and excellent feed. With barley high, bean screenings will fatten the lambs just about as well, and at much less cost. The lambs may not take on as much weight as with barley, but the poundage added will cost less. Alfalfa hay must be fed for roughage, of course. Cottonseed meal for such feeding is not economical, nor is rice bran. Some barley added to the screenings will aid in putting on more weight, but aside from a slight tendency toward scouring, the lambs will do well on the screenings alone.

CITRUS AND BROWN ROT.

Brown rot is showing up in many of the citrus districts, and while it is too late to do anything for the fruit already affected, spraying will prevent its spread. Three pounds of sulphate of copper, or common bluestone, and three pounds of lime to fifty gallons of water is the mixture advised. It should be applied to the lower parts of the tree and the ground. Bordeaux mixture, applied thoroughly at the regular time, usually prevents this trouble and growers who have neglected it probably will not omit the applications in the future.

PREPARING THE SPRING GARDEN.

In preparing the soil for the spring garden, remember first of all that merely putting on a commercial fertilizer will not assure the results desired. The soil must be in good mechanical condition, ready to absorb plant food and pass it along to the roots of the vegetables. With this in mind, spade the ground well, as deeply as possible; or if it is to be plowed see that the job is done thoroughly. It is too late to use manure for spring vegetables, unless it be well rotted. It will be better to use an 8-6-6 commercial fertilizer. Let the ground settle before planting. And in the garden don't forget berries, the easiest of all table foods to grow and usually the most neglected.

Crops Increase in Value—The total value of California's 1928 vegetable, fruit and field crops was nearly $10,000,000 greater than that of 1927, the figures being $498,540,000 for 1928 and $488,973,000 for 1927.

GOLDEN GATE PARLOR NO. 29 N.S.G.W. of San Francisco won the Native Son basketball state championship from Berkeley Parlor No. 210 N.S.G.W. in a fast and hard-fought game by the score of 37 to 32. By this victory Golden Gate gains possession, for one year, of the James A. Wilson perpetual basketball trophy donated by Grand President Wilson. The game was played upon the Golden Gate Athletic Club court in San Francisco, and was well worth witnessing, as the result was in doubt until the last minute of play.

This last season was the first time basketball was given any consideration by a grand president of the Order of Native Sons, and it will be followed up diligently by the Parlors of San Francisco and Alameda Counties. Every Parlor of the Order will next season be invited to participate in the basketball playoffs.—H.J.R.

GRAND TRUSTEE N.S. VISITS.

The corps of officers of Bay City Parlor No. 104 N.S.G.W. for the January-July term are headed by Maurice Borden as president. Grand Trustee Richard M. Hamh recently paid an official visit to the Parlor, and was extended a fraternal greeting by Grand Organist Henry G. W. Dinkelspiel, a member of No. 104.

Christmas Day, Miss Minnie Borelson was united in marriage to Dr. Walter M. Goldberg, a member of the Parlor.

YOUNGSTER GROWING.

Utopia Parlor No. 270 N.S.G.W., instituted May 13, 1928, is growing in numbers and enthusiasm. Recently a Grand President James A. Wilson class of candidates, numbering thirty-two, were initiated, bringing the roster-roll to 168. Timothy J. O'Leary has been elected president for the January-July term.

In the recent basketball tournament the Parlor's team finished in third place, and it has football and baseball teams. Its drum corps is the largest in the Order, and it is adding a huge corps. It has two orchestras, and is planning on a band. "Utopia meets every Monday night and invites all members of the Order to visit it," says Chairman Ed. Maher of No. 270's hooster committee. "We're young yet, and can learn."

BEAUTIFUL PICTURE.

Grand President Dr. Louise C. Hellbron officially visited Castro Parlor No. 178 N.D.G.W. January 16. A splendid dinner preceded the meeting. In the meeting-hall the opening march was a beautiful picture as the officers came trooping in in evening dresses, each carrying a shower bouquet in pastel colors; all wore silver slippers and stockings to match the broad silver ribbons with which the bouquets were tied. Five candidates were initiated. Mrs. Leonore Walters presided with ease and grace, and the ritual was beautifully exemplified.

Grand President Heilbron gave a very interesting and inspiring talk on the work of the Order, and was followed by District Deputy Agnes Curry and other grand officers. Dr. Heilbron and Mrs. Curry were the recipients of very handsome gifts. The business concluded, a dainty repast was served at prettily decorated tables.

PUBLIC INSTALLATION.

Officers of Twin Peaks Parlor No. 185 N.D.G.W. and Twin Peaks Parlor No. 214 N.S.G.W. were jointly installed at public ceremonies presided over by District Deputies Elizabeth Muller and Ferdinand Haught. Margaret Dodsworth and Edwin McCarthy becoming the respective presidents. Past president emblems were presented Marjorie Reid and James Karuza by Hazel Wilson and Ed. McAuliffe. Dancing concluded the ceremonies.

The veteran welfare committee of No. 185 under the chairmanship of Harriet D. Cate made the usual Christmas visit to the Letterman Hospital. The ward and the tree were decorated and well-filled boxes were presented the veterans. Ice cream and home-made cakes were served.

CALIFORNIA CROPS NOT NATIVES— ORIGINATED OTHERWHERE.

Cultivated crops spring from countries with high civilizations and California, with its comparatively new origin in history, grows fruits, vegetables and livestock that have been imported from other countries or parts of this country, according to Dr. E. D. Merrill, dean of the University of California College of Agriculture.

"We are apt to take our agricultural products for granted," says Dean Merrill, "and give little heed to how, where or when our cultivated plants and domestic animals originated, or how or when they reached California. In fact, it is not generally appreciated that not a single plant, animal or bird important to California agriculture, and forming its present tremendous agricultural production, is native to the state, but all have been introduced since the coast was colonized from Mexico.

"The history of agriculture in California hence covers a very brief period, at most 150 years, but the history of its agricultural products goes back to the prehistoric period in various parts of the world. There is romance not only in the origins and development of these everyday plants and animals, but also in their migrations, how and when they reached California, why they were introduced and whence they came.

"The world-wide search for new plants and better varieties is constantly adding to the list of those now grown in California, and in the last decade or two very important additions to the list of 150 commercial agricultural crops have been made in such items as rice, cotton, dates, etc. There still are many species and varieties to be brought in, acclimatized and adapted to our conditions to replace present cultivated crops or to add to the already great diversity of commercial crops in California."

Cattlemen To Meet—The American National Livestock Association will have its thirty-second annual convention in San Francisco, February 5, 6 and 7.

TO HOOK UP OLD WEST OUTPOST.

One of California's last remaining outposts of the old West, the West of rolling range lands and isolation, soon will be hooked up with "the outside" by direct wire for the first time in its history, with the State Government making the hook-up.

The laqua district, as the hitherto isolated area is known, lies in northeastern Humboldt County, a range of 150 square miles, still devoted largely to raising cattle and sheep.

Progressive forestry methods will give the district its first telephone communication with the outside world, State Forester M. B. Pratt announces, with the state and the range-owners joining hands in stringing the forty-five miles of wire necessary to bring the voice of the "hello girl" into the heretofore untapped territory.

SANTA BARBARA—JANUARY 16 WAS A notable date in the history of Santa Barbara No. 116. Final organization of the Grizzly Bear luncheon service club, an auxiliary of the Parlor, was perfected.

Its motto is "Unselfish Service to the Country of My Birth," and among its objects are: "For mutual benefit, mental improvement and social intercourse; to initiate and encourage the material growth and development of the natural resources of the State of California, but more particularly the development of the city in which this club is situated, its environs, and the county in California in which it is located; to unite all worthy members of the Native Sons of the Golden West in one harmonious public service body; to improve the conditions of its members through encouragement in legitimate business pursuits." George A. Black, who retired as president of the Parlor after four consecutive terms, is the originator of the club and was made its first president.

GEO. A. BLACK.

This was also the occasion of the official visit of Grand Trustee Ben Harrison, who was accompanied from San Bernardino by John Anderson Jr. of the Board of Appeals, and Past Presidents J. W. Jasper and J. A. Gregory of Arrowhead No. 110. They were met upon the summit of Ortega Hill by President Black and District Deputy Henry G. Myers and welcomed to Santa Barbara. Following dinner, Walter Gardner Blossom entertained with an educational motion picture of California, after which No. 116's newly-elected officers, with Judge W. E. Learned as president, were installed by District Deputy Myers.

During the evening a class of twelve candidates were initiated, among them being Joseph Foxen, a descendant of William Benjamin Foxen, who entertained Captain John C. Fremont and his United States military scouts at his rancho near Los Alamos, Santa Barbara County, and acted as Fremont's escort over San Marcos Pass; his father was present when the Pueblo of Santa Barbara was taken in the name of the United States and the Flag of the United States of America was, for the first time, raised upon Santa Barbara soil. George A. Black, the retiring president, was presented by the Parlor with a wrist watch, in recognition of valuable services rendered, and in accepting it he commended Santa Barbara "for the many initiatory, constructive and praiseworthy endeavors of a community interest so successfully accomplished for the City of Santa Barbara, the County of Santa Barbara and the State of California, marking a course for other Parlors to follow." The memorable occasion concluded with an oyster supper.

BOARD GRAND OFFICERS MEETS.

San Francisco—The Board of Grand Officers met January 5, those in attendance including: Grand President James A. Wilson, who presided; Junior Past Grand President Charles A. Thompson, Grand First Vice-president Charles L. Dodge, Grand Second Vice-president John T. Newell, Grand Third Vice-president Dr. Frank I. Gonzalez, Grand Secretary John T. Regan, Grand Trustees Ben Harrison, Frank M. Lane, Richard M. Hamb, J. Hartley Russell, Harmon D. Skillin, Charles A. Koenig, Irving D. Gibson.

It was ordered that the granting of life memberships by Ramona No. 109 (Los Angeles) be submitted to the Board of Appeals for a decision as to the law.

A letter of thanks from the State Parks Campaign Committee, for assistance in winning success for the $6,000,000 bond issue last November, was received.

Grand Secretary Regan was directed to have every Subordinate Parlor file in his office a report as to its assets and liabilities.

Grand President Wilson reported that, "on recommendation of the board of inquiry appointed to hear charges filed against Louis H. Mooser, Past Grand President, he ordered his expulsion from the Order."

On motion, the chairman of the Grand Parlor History Committee was requested to report to the next meeting of the Board "on the progress being made by the traveling fellows in California history, and to give approximately the amount of transcripts gathered by the fellows that is on hand at the University of California [Berkeley] and not in book form."

It was ordered that all members of the Board of Grand Officers be notified of all affairs in which the grand officers participate.

After New Blood.

Sacramento—Sacramento No. 3 has under way a membership campaign as the result of which it expects to initiate the largest class in its history February 14. The committee in charge—Lou Wallace (chairman), Chas. Hartmeier, Herb Drennon, Fred Mier and R. C. Younger—in its letter to the Parlor membership says: "There are lots of young native-born Californians ready and waiting to join the Order; all they need is the asking"—and that applies to every Californian community.

The Parlor has a basketball team which is meeting with much success, also a horseshoe team. H. Wittpen heads the corps of officers for the January-July term.

"Dance of the Drums."

San Rafael—With District Deputies J. S. Rosa and Ethel Stuhr presiding, officers of Mount Tamalpais No. 64 and Marinita No. 198 N.D.G.W. were jointly installed January 28. Refreshments, after the ceremonies, were followed by dancing.

January 12 Mount Tamalpais' drum corps sponsored a "dance of the drums," and a goodly sum was realized for the uniform fund. Captain Manuel Andrade says the success of the affair was largely due to the co-operation of the "big 5" committee of the Parlor, which during the past year was responsible for many of No. 64's activities, social and otherwise.

A recently-initiated member of Mount Tamalpais, whose father was a veteran of the Mexican War, relates the following, which his father told him years ago: During the skirmishing near Los Angeles an American lieutenant with a squad of men were captured and put under guard pending further developments. One of the squad was hungry, and Irish. He soon asked, "When do we ate?" The guard replied, "No entende." Our Hibernian friend immediately reported to the lieutenant that they would "not know before ten days whether we ate or not." The lieutenant set the man's mind at ease by explaining that the guard meant that he did not understand and that rations would undoubtedly be served in due process of time. Pat, having discovered that the lieutenant was versed in Spanish and being rather curious to know what the guards were talking about, kept annoying the lieutenant with his incessant, "Liftinent, phwat did he say?" This finally got on the lieutenant's nerves, so he told Pat, "They say we are all to be lined up and shot tomorrow morning before breakfast." This was a poser for the Irishman, but he braced up and fired one more question at the harassed officer: "Liftinent, sure an' isn't that a very quare state av sassyty?"

This Tamalpaiser also tells a story on a Los Angeles Native Son who was discussing the relative merits of their respective states with a Texan, until finally the poor Texan claimed that Texas, at least, was the largest in area. But California's champion would not admit even that. "Why, Texas is flat," he replied. "If our mountains were flattened out, California would exceed Texas in area as well as in everything else." The last seen of the Texan was at the railroad station, where he was buying a through ticket to Galveston.

Relics Collection Enriched.

Among those active in the affairs of the committee are District Deputy Edgar Hanson, George Oakes, Grand Trustee Richard M. Hamb and Grand Inside Sentinel Arthur J. Cleu. The committee meets the first and third Mondays of each month at Native Sons Hall, Eleventh and Clay streets.

Enjoyable Occasion.

Joint Installation.

Highly Successful.

San Bernardino—The New Year Eve carnival-dance sponsored by Arrowhead No. 110 was highly successful from every point of view. The Municipal Auditorium was packed with merry-makers and a twelve-piece orchestra furnished inspiring dance music. Charles Frost was the general chairman.

District Deputy J. J. Cadd installed the Parlor's officers January 16, Police Judge Donald Van Loven becoming president. January 30 the December-January birthday party, with John Andreson Jr. in charge, was the attraction.

CALIFORNIA'S 1928 MINERAL PRODUCTION SHOWS DECREASE IN VALUE.

The total value of the mineral production of California for 1928 is conservatively estimated by the statistical division of the State Division of Mines and Mining under the direction of Walter W. Bradley, state mineralogist, to have been approximately $353,444,500. This estimated total is a decrease of approximately $13,300,000 from the value of the 1927 production.

The drop was due mainly to petroleum, and in smaller measure to gold, zinc, lead and brick. Although there was a decrease of approximately only 1,000,000 barrels in the quantity of crude oil, the total value will probably show around $19,000,000 less, owing to lower average prices effective.

Receipts of bullion at the mint and smelters show a decrease in gold yield of about $800,000 compared with 1927, the drop being chargeable to both the lode mines and the dredges. The drop in silver yield is due to smaller shipments of copper, lead and zinc ores. There was an increased output of about 1,000 flasks of quick-silver, and the average price was $123 compared with $111.67 in 1927.

Among the structural, industrial and saline groups there were no notable changes, with the exception of a decrease in brick and hollow building tile, due to lesser building operations in the cities.

Most Valuable Crops—Oranges were California's most valuable 1928 crop, according to the Federal Crop Reporting Service, the state producing $92,000,000 worth of that fruit. Hay ranked second, $74,008,000; grapes third, $35,030,000; barley fourth, $22,926,000; lemons fifth, $22,720,000; lettuce sixth, $20,109,000; beans seventh, $19,470,000.

Native Daughters of the Golden West

ALTURAS—ALTURAS NO. 159 HAS appointed a committee to investigate the feasibility of organizing a night school to further americanization work among the foreign-born laborers which the opening of mills and the railroad construction are bringing to this community. The secretary has been instructed to submit the name of the meadow-lark for California's state bird.

The Parlor is indebted to the Federal Forest Service for a copy of the Modoc National Forest bulletin and guide map, upon the front page of which is a picture of the Modoc War battlefield monument erected by No. 159 to the memory of General Canby and his men. It is also happy to note that, among the selected 125 state park sites is Blue Lake, in the Modoc National Forest, suggested by Grand Trustee Irma Laird.

The inmates of the Modoc County Hospital received their usual packages of Christmas cheer from the Parlor. The Christmas ball was a social and financial success. January 9 "Grandma" Bare, one of Modoc's oldest Pioneers, celebrated her ninety-third birthday anniversary; she was sent a gift by the Parlor, and many members called to extend greetings. A delegation from No. 159 attended the Native Daughter Home dedication in San Francisco January 12.

The Modoc County Board of Supervisors has received, as a gift from B. B. Robinson, the old Cressler & Bonner trading-post, and has turned the building over to the custody of Alturas Parlor, which will repair it and use it as a museum for early-day relics. The first building in Cedarville, this structure, which is of logs and roofed with shakes, was built in 1865.

Eight Initiated.

Antioch—Grand President Dr. Louise C. Heilbron honored Antioch No. 223 with an official visit January 8, when eight candidates were initiated. Among the many visitors in attendance were Past Grand President Amy V. McAvoy, Grand Marshal Estelle Evans, District Deputies Edna Hill, Nellie Nichols and Mary Ross, and delegations from Sacramento, Martinez, Pittsburg, Santa Cruz and Byron.

Grand President Heilbron gave an interesting and instructive address, and short talks were given by the other grand officers. All were presented with gifts, as was also the president of the Parlor, Grace Gattes. A Spanish supper, prepared by Margaret Wicker and a capable committee, was served. The tables were decorated to represent snow scenes, the centerpiece being a huge snowball, with bluebirds flying around.

Busy Term Planned.

Petaluma—Officers of Petaluma No. 222, with Annie Dickson as president, were installed January 15. The ceremonies were conducted by District Deputy Beatrice Cook, who was escorted by a large delegation from Santa Rosa No. 217. Visitors were present also from Clear Lake, Sausalito and Mill Valley. A past president's emblem was presented Genevieve Riccoli, and District Deputy Cook was remembered with a pretty gift. The evening concluded with a social time, and a banquet, in charge of G. Riccoli, F. Anderson and G. Bettenilli, served upon prettily decorated tables.

President Dickson plans a busy term for the Parlor. The drill team, of which she is captain, sponsored a dance at Cotati January 26. A pretty crocheted rug has been given the Parlor to be disposed of for the benefit of the homeless children, and a sewing club, which will make pretty garments for the kiddies, is under way.

Joint Installation.

Oakland—Officers of Piedmont No. 87 and Piedmont No. 120 N.S.G.W. were jointly installed January 10. Dorothy Derrick, daughter of Past Grand President Dr. Victory A. Derrick, officiated for No. 87, of which Bernice Stevens became president. No. 120's new president is Richard C. Hamb. Grand officers present included: Native Daughters—Past Grand Presidents Addie L. Mosher and Dr. Victory A. Derrick, and Grand Secretary Sallie R. Thaler. Native Sons—Past Grand President Harry G. Williams, Grand Trustee Richard M. Hamb and Grand Inside Sentinel Arthur J. Cleu. Dancing concluded the ceremonies.

Yellow Finch Favored.

Estelle Forcum, California Walker and Amelia Ames, members of the Parlor residing in Oakland, were named to represent No. 168 at the formal opening of the Native Daughter Home in San Francisco. Refreshments were served by a committee composed of Ruie Lyle, Ruby Bickley and Irene Henry.

Grand Secretary in New Quarters.

San Francisco—After February 1 the headquarters of the Grand Parlor, with Grand Secretary Sallie R. Thaler in charge, will be located in the new Native Daughter Home, 555 Baker street.

Tuolumne Parlors in Joint Session.

Sonora—Odd Fellows Hall was crowded to utmost capacity January 18 when Grand President Dr. Louise C. Heilbron paid an official visit to Dardanelle No. 66 (Sonora), Golden Era No. 99 (Columbia) and Anona No. 164 (Jamestown) in joint session. Visitors were present from Joaquin No. 5 (Stockton) and Ursula No. 1 (Jackson). The distinguished visitor was graciously welcomed by Mary E. Gorgas, president Dardanelle. The ritual was exemplified by a mixed team from the three Parlors, and each officer presented her charge with grace and dignity.

The charming Grand President delivered a forceful and instructive address, and complimented the Parlors on their splendid condition. On behalf of the three Parlors, Past President Martha Marshall of Dardanelle presented Dr. Heilbron with a beautiful nugget pin of gold from dear old Tuolumne County—"The Land of Dreams."

Mendoza; presentation of the Home Committee; reading of congratulatory telegrams and letters, Mrs. Emma G. Foley, Past Grand President, secretary of the Home Committee; address, "Past History and Future Aspirations," Dr. Mariana Bertola, Past Grand President, chairman of the Home Committee; violin solo, "Ave Maria," Dan Maris; benediction, Mrs. Genevieve W. Baker, Past Grand President, member of the Board of Relief, Grand Parlor N.D.G.W.

Dr. Bertola spoke of the opportunity that donors might have to donate certain sums in memory of fathers or mothers who have passed into the great beyond. Immediately Miss Mahel Phillips donated $150 for the mantel in the foyer in memory of her father and mother. Judge Cutler volunteered to raise $350 from the Native Sons for the beautiful iron gates. Orinda Parlor raised $250 for the distinctive looking mantel in the dining-room.

The following donations may be made by those interested: $400 for the splendid stone mantel in the lounge, $150 for tapestry to grace the wall space above this mantel, $150 for a beautiful painting, $50 for an electric grate, $150 for hooks for the library, $200 for the fine looking library shelves, $50 for floor lamps, $100 for a flat wall mirror above the dining-room mantel, $350 for a piano in the lounge, $75 for the small iron gates at tradesmen entrance, $200 for a first-class radio, $400 for a first-class refrigerator, $100 for plain bedroom chairs, $25 for table lamps, $250 for crockery with N.D.G.W. monogram, $150 for french tapestry for over the mantel in the lounge.

Above all, said Dr. Bertola, we need some large donations to apply to the mortgage. This Order of ours has done much in a philanthropic way, but its greatest need is to inhuhe the young with patriotism and a reverence for our Pioneers. There are many Pioneers outside of the Order who would be glad to donate large sums to this project, did they only know of it. One member told me of a woman of her acquaintance who can easily give $10,000. There are many in the Order who are rich enough to give large sums. Money and goods cannot be taken with us when we go into the next world. We must leave them behind us, many times to be quarreled over. It is a strange thing that all we take with us is what we have given away. Love, kindness, charity, integrity, help us on our way on that last journey.

We ask that money, rather than articles, be contributed, as we are trying to maintain a harmonious entity. The following donations have been made:

Tiles, hand painted, for vestibule, Mrs. Mary E. Bell (P.G.P.), Buena Vista Parlor No. 68, N.D.G.W. Labor, setting tiles, Malott & Peterson, San Francisco. Stencils used in building loaned to Dr. Mariana Bertola; saved the Order thousands of dollars. $200, Julia Morgan, architect, towards the payment of stenciling; indebted to Miss Morgan for watchful care of our interests in the construction of the building. Carved wood panels in lobby, Miss Julia Morgan, Chesterfield and two chairs, Dr. Mariana Bertola (P.G.P.), and the giving of much of her valuable time. Andirons, two sets, Grand Trustee Mrs. Sadie Brainard, the work of Mr. Brainard. One dozen embroidered kitchen towels, Dolores Parlor No. 169, N.D.G.W., San Francisco. One dozen initialed kitchen towels, one pair initialed pillow cases, one pair initialed sheets, one embroidered dresser scarf, four lid lifters, Mrs. Louise Northey, Sutter Parlor No. 111 N.D.G.W., Sacramento. Plants, Golden Gate Park Commission, John McLaren. Service in re plants, Messrs. Rock and Barry. Service in filing notice of completion,

FAMOUS ORGAN BUILDER'S SON
CALIFORNIA PIONEER OF 1851.
"Editor Grizzly Bear—In your December edition I read with interest the article entitled 'Europe Through California Eyes,' by Earl LeMoine. In speaking of Friebourg, Switzerland, and more particularly of its cathedral, which, to quote him, 'contains a universally famous organ with 7,800 pipes some of them 32 feet long and 74 stops,' it may be of interest to you and some of your readers to know that this famous organ was built by Aloys Mooser and his son, Joseph Mooser. The two of them themselves hewed the trees and seasoned the lumber out of which this organ was built. The greater part of this wood came from the famous Black Forest.

"This organ was so far superior to anything built up to that time that it caused a great sensation, and both the emperor of France and the emperor of Russia gave an order to Mooser for a duplication of said organ. He, however, refused to fill either of these orders, desiring his own native city to be the only one to have such a masterpiece. He presented the organ to the cathedral with the understanding that the people were to be admitted free to its concerts on certain days of the week. His monument can be seen within the cathedral.

"Joseph Mooser's son, William, lured by the news of the great gold discovery in California, came to this state via Panama in 1851. All of his children still survive him—all native Californians: Joseph H., Charles E., Louis H., William, Alice and Albert.

"Faternally yours,
"Charles E. Mooser, M.D.
"Oakland, December 4, 1928."

EDWARD BYRD BRADLEY.
To the Members of Fresno Parlor No. 25 of the Native Sons of the Golden West—We, your committee appointed to draft a resolution of condolence upon the death of Brother E. B. Bradley, beg leave to submit the following:

Whereas, It has pleased our Heavenly Father to call from our midst our beloved friend and brother, Edward Byrd Bradley; and whereas, Brother Bradley was one of the oldest members of the Order in the San Joaquin Valley, having maintained a continuous membership in the Order since the organization of Visalia Parlor No. 19, and spent the greater part of his life in loyal and efficient service to the City of Fresno as a member of its police force, making an enviable record as a man and as a citizen and always retaining the respect and affection of his neighbors; and whereas, it is our desire to express in a fitting manner the love and respect in which we hold the memory of our brother, and our sympathy for his bereaved family, as well as our own sorrow and regret at his loss; now, therefore, be it

Resolved, That we, the members of Fresno Parlor No. 25 of the Native Sons of the Golden West, in open Parlor assembled, do hereby extend to the family of our deceased brother our deepest sympathy, and assure them that we, too, feel a sense of irreparable loss in the passing of our brother; and be it further resolved, that this resolution be spread upon the minutes of the Parlor and published in The Grizzly Bear, and that copies thereof be sent to the family of our deceased brother.

FIFTY YEARS AGO

Capitan" drifted with the tide nearly to North Point, whence a tug pulled it to Melggs wharf.

A Los Angeles lad had his head shingled with newly-introduced clippers at a lively stable where the "kids" congregated. Seating himself at the supper table that night his father remarked about a wonderful animal on exhibition at the zoo—a creature resembling a human being, with head round as a pumpkin, ears standing out like dumplings upon a cocoanut, nose protruding like a figure four from what purported to be a face, and head covered with short bristles. It was called, he said, the "Whatist." With evident surprise, the father then remarked, "Why, on my soul, it is right here now sitting at the supper table."

Unhushed, the lad muttered another piece of bread and then remarked: "There is a blamed sight worse looking thing right here on this block." "Well, what kind of a thing is it that can be worse looking," inquired the father. "It's the father of the 'Whatist,'" nonchalantly replied the lad.

A terrible calamity befell Stockton, San Joaquin County, February 22. George Norton had invented and patented a propelling pump, and to give it a public demonstration secured a threshing machine engine and proceeded to get up steam while a crowd of about 200 men and boys, identified with the city's prominent families, gathered around. Just before he was ready to start the pump the engine boiler exploded, killing outright seventeen of the onlookers and injuring, some fatally, twenty-eight others. Business was suspended for several days and the funerals of the victims of the accident were attended by almost the entire population.

In tunnel three, being run on the South Pacific Coast railway near Alma, Santa Clara County, a crevice was opened February 12 that emitted a large flow of petroleum gas. A terrific explosion resulted, and a flash of flame shot 200 feet from the entrance to the tunnel.

In Memoriam

ELLA S. RIDGE.

To the Officers and Members of Manzanita Parlor No. 29 N.D.G.W.—Your committee appointed to express the regret of our Parlor at the loss of our dear sister, Ella S. Ridge, and also to voice our respect and love for her, beg to respectfully submit the following:

"We shall meet, but we shall miss her.

There will be a vacant place,

We'll be sad without our sister—

Could we see her pleasant face."

Tonight we miss from our fraternal circle our loved sister, Ella S. Ridge, whose passing from this life on Thursday, December 16, 1928, saddened our Christmas holidays and cast a pall of gloom upon our entire community. We, who associated with her in these halls, miss her sorely—miss the warmth of her radiant smile, miss her kindly words of encouragement and love, miss her example of unselfishness and cheerful Christian living. Every worthwhile activity in our city feels the loss of an earnest worker and a conscientious friend.

We would have kept every sorrow from her life and every pain from her, had we but the gift; but that could not be, and all that we can do is to humbly bow to the merciful will of All-powerful God and feel that all is well with our sister and that though we mourn, she is where no mourning comes, where her sweet smile will last forever, where

"There at last, life's trials past,

We'll meet our loved one more

Whose feet have trod the paths to God—

Not lost but gone before."

We wish to extend to her hereafter husband and to her relatives our expression of sympathy in the loss of a loved one, and also our expression of deep appreciation of her worth. We wish a copy of these tributes of affection to be forwarded to her husband, Darcy Ridge; a copy to be spread upon the minutes of this meeting, and a copy to be sent to The Grizzly Bear Magazine for publication.

Yours in P.D.F.A.,

ANNIE F. CONLIN,

KATE FULLER,

ALYNE MCGAGIN,

Committee.

Norton, social hostess of No. 124, and her efficient committee served delicious refreshments.

The Parlor's regular monthly card party will be held at Odd Fellows Hall, Oak and Washington streets, February 13. Plans are being made for the official visit of Grand President Dr. Louise C. Heilbron, March 6.

CHARITY BALL.

To raise funds with which to carry on the homeless children work, the Native Daughters and Native Sons of Los Angeles and Orange Counties will give a grand ball at Elks Temple, February 9. Special entertainment features will be introduced.

The benefit is in charge of a joint committee representing all Parlor of both Orders in the two counties, of which Irving Baxter is chairman and Annie L. Adair secretary. Tickets may be had from the secretary of any Parlor.

INSTALLATION LARGELY ATTENDED.

A large crowd attended the public installation of officers of Los Angeles Parlor No. 45 N.S.G.W. January 24. District Deputy Grand President Eldred L. Meyer conducted the ceremonies and Lewie W. Smith became the new president. Deputy Meyer was accompanied from Santa Monica by several members of Santa Monica Bay Parlor No. 267, headed by President Clarence Webb.

Following his induction into office President Smith thanked the assemblage for their presence and said he hoped they would participate in all of No. 45's social functions. On behalf of the Parlor, Grand Second Vice-president John T. Newell presented Howard E. Bell, senior past president, with a past president's emblem. Dancing, to good music, occupied the balance of the evening.

ATTRACTIVE PROGRAM.

Mrs. Isabella Joughin Granz, hospitality chairman of Californiana Parlor No. 247 N.D.G.W., is in charge of the buffet breakfasts which are planned to follow each talk in a series of travel lectures to be given by Inga Nelson Brown, at 11 a. m. the second Tuesday of February, March, April, May and June in the ballroom of the Garden Court, Hollywood.

The intimate and concise way in which Inga Nelson Brown presents her wealth of European knowledge is quite unique. She gives vivid glimpses of the other side and holds her audience from start to finish. Whether for prospective travelers or those that stay at home.

there is a message of fascination and value. There are word pictures of European life, with the added charm of typical musical illustrations. The first of the series will be Venice, continuing throughout the following months with Florence, Rome and Naples, and concluding with Paris. Mrs. Granz has planned delightful breakfasts to follow the talks, and will be assisted each month by various members of the Parlor.

scheduled as literary afternoon, with Mrs. Jack Valley, well-known lecturer on book reviews, as the feature. The work outlined is attracting many new members to this daylight Parlor.

TO HONOR BOY SCOUTS.

Officers of Ramona Parlor No. 109 N.S.G.W. were installed January 4 by District Deputy Al Cron, Ralph I. Harbison becoming president. An emblematic ring was presented Senior Past President Walter Slosson, who is doing such effective work for the Parlor, Dwight Crittenden making the presentation address. Robert E. Duncan has been appointed chairman of the athletic committee, and basketball, baseball and other athletics are being promoted.

Twenty-four additional members of the Parlor became identified with the "1929 Club" January 18, bringing the total to 113. The next presentation of club-pins will be February 15. The American Legion Service Department has presented No. 109 with a large oil painting of Mount Lassen, California's active volcano.

February 8, Ramona will honor Troop No. 109, Boy Scouts of America, which it is sponsoring, at an open meeting to which everybody is invited. A patrol flag and merit badges will be presented, and the boys will demonstrate the splendid progress they have made. February 15 will be initiation night, and February 22 the good of the order committee will provide a program in recognition of Washington's Birthday.

Play golf? If so, get in touch with Ray Russell, who heads a committee which is handling a Native Son golf tournament, sponsored by Ramona, to be held at Whitley Park Country Club on Ventura boulevard in March. In the afternoon bridge will be provided for the women-folks, and following dinner in the evening dancing will be in order.

NEW MEETING PLACE.

Glendale—Commencing February 5, Verdugo Parlor No. 240 N.D.G.W. will meet at the Thursday Afternoon Clubhouse, Cypress street, between Brand boulevard and Central avenue. Following the initial meeting in the new quarters the members will be entertained at cards by Hazel Bruschi Hansen, installed as president January 30. February 14 the Parlor will entertain the members of Glendale Parlor No. 264 N.S.G.W. and their wives.

A large delegation from Verdugo accompanied Past President Ida Gilman to Long Beach January 17, where she installed the officers of Long Beach Parlor No. 154. Past President Ella Mae Madden has been seriously ill.

EXCELLENT HOSTESSES.

Santa Monica—Grand Trustee Marvel Thomas, assisted by President Flora Holy and members of Los Angeles Parlor No. 124, installed the officers of Santa Monica Bay Parlor No. 245 N.D.G.W. January 21, with Reta Smith as president.

Following the ceremonies, which were largely attended, refreshments were served in the banquet-room, beautifully decorated in pink roses and ferns, with rose dolls as favors. The evening was a most enjoyable one, and the visitors were unanimous in declaring the Santa Monicans excellent hostesses.

of skill is a factor you are bound to consider.
And once set for a hell-for-leather collision, it is usually death or serious injury.

The getting together of all these organizations in a determined effort to save life is a landmark in safety work in California. It means, or should certainly mean, a decrease in the deathrate from automobile fatalities which will be continuous and marked. It will be so, without doubt, if the people support the movement. The purpose of an educational program for safety upon the streets and highways must have for its object the fixing in the mind of each individual, motorist and pedestrian, the feeling of a personal responsibility on his part. He must be grounded in a resolution to be invariably courteous and cautious.

While such a campaign of education will not influence everyone, it will impress many whose practice of such principles, in its turn, will influence others. The result, in the last analysis, will be to bring about a widespread sense of individual accountability, and make the reckless and careless of all classes mend their ways by the force of an aroused public opinion.

The pulpit, the press, the radio, the schools and the individuals can all aid in this work.
Their assistance will be of incalculable value to the projectors of this state-wide and vitally-necessary movement.

STATE'S PROGRAM PROVIDES MORE AND BETTER HIGHWAYS.

California added 255 miles of paved construction, 34 miles of bituminous macadam, and 693 miles of grading with crushed rock, oil sealed or armored surfaces, a total of nearly 1,000 miles of improved highway during the last biennium. This is the summary of a report just issued by the State Department of Public Works.
For the coming two years the plans contemplate 311 miles of paving, 154 miles of macadam and 541 miles of grading, a total of 1,007 miles.

In addition to its building program, the state is making the highways safer. The minimum width of pavement has been set at 20 feet and the minimum width of grades at 36 feet, providing for an eight-foot shoulder on either side, thus giving the motorist ample room to stop a car with all four wheels off of the pavement.

Dangerous curves are being eliminated, and the maximum grade is fixed at six percent. A safety device is being applied in the marking of traffic lanes. During the past two years, twenty-six grade crossings were eliminated. Guard rails have been built along narrow grades, and through the co-operation of the State Railroad Commission warning signals have been placed at all grade crossings.

MANUFACTURERS ESTABLISH RECORD.

American automobile makers established a new production record during 1928, according to a January 21 announcement of the Federal Commerce Department. The output totaled 4-357,384 machines—3,826,613 passenger cars and 530,771 trucks.

The previous high record was in 1926, when 4,301,134 machines were turned out. The 1927 output totaled 3,401,326.

ADEQUATE BRAKES WOULD BE DEFINED IN PROPOSED LAW.

Establishment of a standard of adequacy for automobile brakes was recommended by the executive committee of the Motor Vehicle Conference in approving a list of proposed amendments to the California Vehicle Act for presentation to the State Legislature. The state law now requires adequate brakes, but no definition of adequacy or standard is provided. According to the legal department of the Automobile Club of Southern California, which is represented in the conference, the amendment recommended to the Legislature for adoption is as follows:

Section 94, making it unlawful to operate a motor vehicle upon a public highway unless it is equipped with adequate brakes, is to be amended to provide a table of stopping distances according to the speed at which the vehicle is traveling. This table, for a vehicle operating upon a dry asphalt or concrete pavement where the grade does not exceed one percent, is as follows:

At ten miles per hour, vehicles should be capable of being stopped at 9.3 feet; at fifteen miles, 20.8 feet; at twenty miles, 37 feet; at twenty-five miles, 58 feet; at thirty miles per hour, 83.3 feet.

CRIME COMMISSION AGAINST DOUBLE-HEADED PATROL SYSTEM.

A two-year study of the crime problem in California has convinced the California Crime Commission that traffic cannot be controlled and traffic violations reduced until officers patrolling the highways are placed under the direct supervision of the state, and the present "double-headed" system of authority eliminated. In a report this body came out flat-footed for state control, declaring that "only in this way can responsibility be placed and absolute control obtained."

The members of the commission based their conclusions on a survey in which thousands of persons were interviewed and letters written to hundreds of others. "The commission favors a change in the method of appointment so that complete selection, appointment and control of these officers will be in the hands of the State Division of Motor Vehicles," says the report, which coincides with the general opinion entertained by state authorities, that there should be a change in the present method of traffic control, and in resolutions adopted by the California Development Association, the League of Municipalities, the California Traffic Officers' Association and other interested bodies.

TRAFFIC COPS'LL GET YOU—

IF YOU DON'T GET 1929 PLATES.

All motorists who did not apply for 1929 license plates on or before January 31 must now pay a double fee, and the law gives the State Division of Motor Vehicles no alternative but to collect the penalty from the tardy ones. And traffic officers will soon be instructed to arrest all persons displaying the 1928 plates.

The division also calls attention to a section of the law which requires that plates be displayed in a prominent position on the car and not concealed behind any obstruction. Considerable trouble has been experienced with autowedded January 5 to William Fisher. The honeymoon was spent at San Diego and Coronado.

Annie L. Adair and Mary K. Corcoran (both Los Angeles N.D.) were in Santa Barbara City last month in the interest of the homeless children.

Grace J. Norton, Isahel Stander, Anna Hall, Anna Benson and Grand Trustee Marvel Thomas (all Los Angeles N.D.) attended the dedication in San Francisco last month of the Native Daughter Home.

Miss Margaret Pickles and Ellis Adams Jarvis (Amador N.S.) were wedded in this city December 20. The groom, a son of Clarence E. Jarvis (Past Grand President N.S.), is head of the music department of the San Pedro senior high school.

PERMANENT MEMBERSHIPS AWARDED.

Long Beach—At the January 3 meeting of Long Beach Parlor No. 154 N.D.G.W. four candidates were initiated. Kate McFadyen, Ella Borden Ware, Mahel Emery and Nora Martin, charter members, and Mrs. Adeline Pierce, the mother of President Julia Arhorn and herself a Native Daughter, were made permanent members of the Parlor.

January 17, District Deputy Ida Gilman, assisted by members of Verdugo Parlor No. 240 (Glendale), installed the officers, Julia Arhorn becoming president. Presentations were made to District Deputy Gilman; Lucretia Coates, retiring president; Fannie McPherson, retiring past president; President Julia Arhorn and First Vice-president Lillian Lasater. Grand Trustee Marvel Thomas gave an inspiring and beneficial talk. Refreshments were served to the 200 and more in attendance.

RETIRING PRESIDENT GIVEN RING.

San Pedro—Accompanied by twenty-five members of her home-Parlor, Grace No. 242 (Fullerton), District Deputy Nellie M. Cline visited Rudecinda Parlor No. 230 N.D.G.W. January 17 and installed its officers. Anna Spickler was inducted into the office of president, succeeding Florence Dodson-Schoneman who, carrying out the Parlor's custom, was presented with a past president's ring, the presentation being made by Hazel Raines, chairman of the evening. Letitia Sarciaux was installation chairman, Virginia Bruckner chairman of refreshments, and Dora Baly chairman of decorations. One candidate was obligated.

Among the many visitors, in addition to the Fullerton delegation, were Past Grand President Grace S. Stoermer, District Deputies Genevieve Hickey, Mamie Schonberg and Nellie Cline, all of whom delivered addresses. A delicious supper was served at the gathering's close. Poinsettias and stocks were used effectively in decorations of the evening.

"THE DIVINE LADY."

"The Divine Lady," the spectacular $2,000,-000 First National production now showing at the Carthay Circle Theater, marks once more the combination of Corinne Griffith as star and Frank Lloyd as director under the First National banner. Both were formerly associated with that organization, left for a short time at the expiration of their contracts, and now have signed again.

"The Divine Lady" is a fitting production to herald the return of two such screen personalities. It gives Miss Griffith her most colorful screen role, a characterization of the tragic beauty, Lady Hamilton, and in production value and magnitude it eclipses even Lloyd's previous effort of a few years ago, "The Sea Hawk." H. B. Warner and Victor Varconi head the large supporting cast.

Carli Elinor's Concert Orchestra, the only theater symphony orchestra in California South, is heard in concert at each of the two daily performances, at 2:15 and 8:30 p. m. The overture is a fantasy of selections by America's well-known composer, Rudolf Friml, and is delighting the many music lovers who attend the Carthay Circle Theater especially to hear Elinor and his orchestra. Edward Everett Horton's latest all-talking comedy, "The Eligible Mr. Baugs," with Johnny Arthur, famous for his role in "The Desert Song," is the comedy attraction.

"The Divine Lady" opened in a blaze of glory January 29 and was witnessed by an audience containing many of the celebrities and socially prominent in the city. All seats are reserved at the Circle, and there is no standing in line.

POLICE CHIEF HEADS NATIVES.

Santa Monica—At a largely attended meeting January 14 officers of Santa Monica Bay Parlor No. 267 N.S.G.W., with Chief of Police Clarence E. Webb as president, were installed by District Deputy Eldred L. Meyer. Big things are planned for this year, including an aggressive membership campaign.

March 25 has been set aside by the Parlor as "Eugene Biscailuz day," in honor of Undersheriff Biscailuz, the first senior past president and long a worker for the Order. A large class of candidates will be initiated, an exceptionally fine entertainment program will be presented and there will be a Spanish dinner. All Parlors of the county will be invited to participate in this function.

MORE RELICS FOR COLLECTION.

Reseda—Cahuenga Parlor No. 268 N.S.G.W. has come into possession of several knives and spurs unearthed at what once was the Rancho de la Osos (ranch of the bears), and they will be added to its rapidly-growing collection of early-day relics.

A century ago the ranch served as a stagecoach station, where teams were changed before attempting the trip over the Santa Susana grade into the Simi Valley. The property is now included in a cemetery development.

GRIZZLY GROWLS

(CLARENCE M. HUNT.)

DURING THE PAST MONTH TWO JAPS and two Hindus were found guilty, in the superior court of Sutter County, of violating the California Alien Land Law—leasing rice land in that county. The two Hindus, having pleaded guilty, were fined, and the two Japs, being convicted by a jury, were fined and ordered confined in the state prison.

The district attorney of Sutter County is deservng of the plaudits of those citizens of California who desire that this state be preserved for the White race. More power to you! But don't stop with convicting the conspirators. Proceed to have the lands involved confiscated, to the state.

Fines and prison-sentences are not, alone, going to have the desired effect. The prize at stake, California, is so important in the scheme of the yellows that they will willingly rot in prison and pay limitless fines to win that prize. They, and their white co-conspirators whose loyalty and patriotism are regulated by the almighty dollar, can be thwarted only by confiscation of the lands involved, for the future of this Golden State rests with the possessors of the soil.

The California Alien Land Law—the sole barrier to prevent this state from becoming a paradise for the yellow races—is being openly violated in practically every county. In how many counties is any attempt being made, or has a single attempt been made, to enforce that law? Very, very few; five at the most! Which fact should he made the basis for replacing most of the district attorneys with officials who will make a determined effort to enforce the California Alien Land Law.

There are before the State Legislature companion measures—Senate bill 382 and Assembly bill 422—which "provide a debt burden limit for lands within counties, cities and counties, and cities, and providing the method of ascertaining the amount thereof." The principle involved is excellent, for the special-assessment-district bugahoo has been overworked, to the pauperizing of many property-owners and the enrichment of contractors and proponents.

Some such law is sorely needed, and one which will withstand a constitutional onslaught by those who reap unreasonable and unjust profit from the assessment-district schemes should have the approval of the Legislature and the governor. The proposed law provides, among other things:

"No board of supervisors, city council or other governing body shall adopt any ordinance or resolution instituting proceedings for any assessment district or creating any debt or submitting any bond issue to vote of the people without first securing the certificate of the auditor hereinbefore provided for showing that the debt burden limit will not thereby be exceeded. . . . No contract let in any county, city and county or city or district hereafter formed shall be valid where the contract price exceeds the estimate of cost of the engineer or surveyor as given in the certificate of the auditor hereinbefore provided for."

Charles W. Lloyd of Australia, in this country studying highway and traffic conditions, stated in an interview that, although Australia has no prohibition statute it avoids the drunken-driver problem by making, and enforcing, such strict penalties motorists fear to incur them.

"A motorist in Australia," says Lloyd, "is liable to be hanged if he kills a person while under the influence of liquor. Or, if the driver is convicted only of manslaughter in such cases, he is subject to eight to ten years' imprisonment. Knocking another person unconscious in traffic accidents is punishable by two to four years' imprisonment, if the driver is intoxicated, while the lowest penalty for drunken driving is a fine of $125, six months' imprisonment and loss of license."

California has a law pertaining to drunken auto drivers, but the number of their killed and maimed victims increases. The trouble here is not with the statute, but with the law-enforcing agencies. Compared to the number of such drivers, the law is seldom enforced. And, if it is enforced, in a particularly flagrant case, the defendant, if found guilty, is generally given probation. Justice should not be tempered with mercy, when the drunken auto driver is involved, for booze mixed with gas constitutes the greatest menace to life and limb extant.

Dr. R. L. Adams, professor of farm management at the University of California, Berkeley, is opposed to applying the quota provision of the Federal Immigration Law to Mexico. He is quoted as having said: "The Mexican is an important factor in the producing of California crops. . . . He will work under direction, tak-

FRENCH ACTIVITIES IN CALIFORNIA BEFORE STATEHOOD

Dr. A. P. Nasatir

IT IS NOT COMMONLY KNOWN THAT France was interested in California during the greater part of the first half of the nineteenth century. Writers heretofore have failed to gain access to the one great source for the study of such a question as "French Activities in California Prior to the Conquest," namely, the archives of the Foreign Office located in the Quai d'Orsay in Paris. The present writer, as holder of one of the Native Sons Traveling Fellowships in History for the academic year 1924-1925, spent a greater part of his four months' "sejour" in Paris, that mecca of lovers of history, in perusing the Archives du Ministère des Affaires Étrangères. The results were somewhat surprising. They are now being prepared for publication in the form of an extended monograph covering "French Activities in California," accompanied by an Introductory "Guide" to the materials relating to California history reposing in the archival depositories of France, and by a few illustrative documents.

Only a cursory sketch of the facts concerning the activities of the French in California before the Conquest is here presented. Among the various peoples who have played parts in the interesting drama of California, emphasis has been placed upon the aggressive action of the Anglo-Saxon people, the British and Americans. Although the fact has been overlooked, the French too played a sufficiently large part in California history to warrant the writing of a monograph concerning their activities. True also is it that the French, although just as desirous as were citizens of other nations of obtaining "a place under the sun" in the Pacific, were handicapped by internal revolutions and faltering governments. Therefore, the French menace was not, could not be, as great to the Mexicans in Mexico and California as was that of either the Americans or the British. Nevertheless, and especially during the regime of the citizen-king and later under the prince-president, France made some notable strides in her belated efforts to re-establish a French empire in the Western Hemisphere.

This can be detected from the activities of Frenchmen within California, from the pens of French officials and from the activities of French vessels in the Pacific. We are interested only insofar as California is concerned. For example, not only was Duflot de Mofras officially sent to explore the western coast of North America, but French citizens at Monterey were clamoring for the establishment of a French consulate there. This demand of the French citizens of Monterey was echoed in the correspondence of the French consuls at Mazatlan, Tepic, Honolulu, and even through the embassy at Mexico City. Moreover, when rumors of the arrest of French citizens during the Graham affair were heard in Mexico a French mano-war, heavily armed and with its guns trained on Monterey, suddenly appeared and demanded satisfaction of the Mexican officials.

But that is anticipating. Let us retrace our steps and begin when French interests in California may be said to have begun. Although many French navigators had traversed the Pacific and described or touched at points along the western shores of North America, and although six French scientists accompanied by two officers of the Spanish Marine had observed the transit of Venus in California in 1769, it may be stated that the first contact of California, certainly Upper California, with any foreign nation occurred when, on September 15, 1786, Jean François Galoup de La Perouse anchored in the port of Monterey.

La Perouse's expedition was fitted out at the expense of the French government and although the expedition failed to effect its return to France, by a fortunate coincidence their journals, detailing all the information sought by the government of France, were—fortunately—dispatched to France but a short time before the expedition went down to posterity in the South Sea, constituting one of the many unrecorded disasters of maritime history. La Perouse was accorded a cordial reception by the Spaniards who, hardly two decades prior to his arrival at Monterey, had effectively occupied Alta California. From his sojourn in California dates the friendliness between the Spanish and the French

The accompanying article, a summary of researches relative to California history in the archives of France, comes to The Grizzly Bear from Dr. A. P. Nasatir, instructor in history at the State Teachers College at San Diego City. Substantially, it is the paper which he recently read before the Pacific Coast Branch of the American Historical Association at Pomona College. In a letter to the editor, Dr. Nasatir says:

"I was a Native Son Traveling History Fellow for the academic year 1924-25 and spent four months in an endeavor to calendar the material in the archives at Paris relating to California. This calendar, I hope, will be published this ensuing summer. I thought this summary would be desirable for publication in The Grizzly Bear, especially since it is a result of my work while enjoying the benefits of a history fellowship of the Order of Native Sons of the Golden West."—Editor.

elements in California which persisted until the conquest of California by the Americans.

During La Perouse's absence from France the French revolution broke out, hence nothing was done to further the objectives achieved by La Perouse's voyage, one of which was the opening up of a commercial traffic between France and the northwest coast of America. In fact, nothing could be done until the turmoil within France subsided. Indeed, it was not until the regime of the citizen-king that the next official governmental act with regard to California was taken.

During that interval of about a half-century, however, Frenchmen were active with respect to California. In an effort to revive and extend French ocean commerce, which had almost been annihilated during the French Revolution, M. Balguerie Junior, a patriotic merchant of Bordeaux, dispatched the ship "Bordelais," commanded by Lieutenant Camille de Roquefeuil, on a commercial venture around the world. Roquefeuil's ship was the first French vessel ever to enter the Golden Gate, which it did on August 5, 1817.

Following Roquefeuil, came Duhaut-Cilly and Antoine Placiat who, however, engaged in "cut-throat" competition, which defeated the accomplishment of the purpose of each.

Difficulties in France caused another lull in French commercial connections with California for nearly another decade, after which a steady stream of French commercial vessels, especially whalers, presented themselves upon the shores of the Golden State.

During the thirties, French interests and activities in the Pacific "took a decided rise on the stock market." The Orleanist regime, typifying the new spirit, had for one of its motives the desire to secure for France, once again, "a place under the sun," to re-establish a French colonial empire and replace the one lost in 1763. Witness, for example, the acquisition by France of Algeria, and the activities of the French in the Pacific. Along with the stimulation of official interest and activity with regard to California came a corresponding increase in commercial activity on the part of the French in the same area. Whereas heretofore many a decade had passed with one or two, and sometimes no, French vessels touching California ports, during the five years, 1835-1840, at least five French vessels are known to have visited California, some in an official capacity. Nine more appeared during the period 1841-1845, while seven anchored between 1846 and 1848.

Among the official expeditions sent out by the government of France with motives hardly short of acquiring new territory, and more especially commercial bases, must be placed the visits of Captain Abel de Petit-Thouar, sailing the French frigate "Venus," and Captain Piere Théodore Laplace, sailing in a larger French vessel of war, the "Artemise." These French naval officers made tours of the world. In opposite directions, and especially detailed in the narratives of these official French voyages are the facts descriptive of the men, the activities and the towns in California at the time of their visits, the former visiting California in 1836, the latter in 1839.

The Instructions to Petit-Thouar and Laplace, given by the government, and their extensive journals and observations, published by order of the king, indicate official activity and interest on the part of the government of France in expansion and the acquisition of territory—with their eyes focused on the Pacific in general, and coveting California. And the activities of Rosamel and De Mofras leave little doubt as to the keen official interest which the government of France took with regard to California.

It must not be supposed, however, that Frenchmen other than those previously mentioned refrained from visiting the coasts of the Golden West. In nearly every journal of almost every voyage ever made to California appear the names of Frenchmen, such as "John,"—one name is enough for a sailor—whose name is constantly mentioned in Richard H. Dana's celebrated "Two Years Before the Mast." Two Frenchmen belonging to the crew of the Italian ship "Rosa," lying in the port of San Diego in 1835, came in nightly to meet a fellow countryman, "Nicholas the hide curer." Indeed, it would be hard for one not to find Frenchmen among such a motley society as that which Dana found during a sojourn in San Diego:

"The greater part of the crews of the vessels came ashore every evening and we passed the time in going about from one house to another, and listening to all manner of languages. The Spanish was the common ground upon which we all met; for everyone knew more or less of that. We had now, out of forty or fifty, representatives from almost every nation under the sun: two Englishmen, three Yankees, two Scotchmen, two Welshmen, one Indian, three Frenchmen (two of whom were Normans, and the third from Gascony), one Dutchman, one Austrian, two or three Spaniards (from old Spain), half a dozen Spanish-Americans and half-breeds, two native Indians from Chili and the Island of Chiloé, one Negro, one Mulatto, about twenty Italians from all parts of Italy, as many more Sandwich Islanders, one Tahitian, and one Kanaka from the Marquesas Islands." No wonder the author could remark when they gathered to spend an evening, "where, amid the babel of English, Spanish, French, Indian and Kanaka, we found some words that we could understand in common."

Often times Frenchmen came in official capacities. Such, for example, was Adelbert von Chamisso, the naturalist and the interpreter who accompanied, in an official capacity, the voyage Captain Otto Von Kotzebue made into the South Sea and Monterey Straits between 1815-1818. Victor Prudon was secretary to Vallejo and was sent as his emissary on an important mission to Mexico; later he was a military judge.

Other Frenchmen became famous as commanders of boats registered under other nationalities than that of France. For example, Captain Limantour sailed the vessel "Ayacucho," a "brick-goelette" belonging to the firm of Bizat and Roussel of Bordeaux, but which sailed under the Mexican flag.

French-Canadians, chiefly as traders and trappers for the Hudson Bay and other companies, entered California. Such, for example, were Michel Lamframboise, some of the Lajeunesses, as well as others. It was from the practice of the Hudson Bay Company's brigades, made up as they were mainly of Frenchmen and French-Canadians, to "rendezvous" near Stockton, that the name "French Camp" is derived.

Frenchmen, too, joined the ranks of California pioneers, settlers and residents. Any list that can be given would of necessity be incomplete, and none will here be given. Just when the first Frenchman to take up his residence in California arrived is difficult to say. Probably the first one was Jean Louis Vignes, who after a reverse in his fortunes departed from Cadillac, a town near Bordeaux—where also was left his family—in 1827. After four years "a exploiter sans grand succès une distillerie" in the Sandwich Islands, Vignes purchased a farm near Los Angeles, where he lived until his death, which occurred in 1862. Vignes' nephew, Sainsevain, Vioget(?), Blain, Victor Prudon, Charles Roussillon, Octave Custot, the Lepage brothers, Olivier, Leyssègues, the men who became consular

The Palm

(MINNA MCGARVEY.)

Beloved palm! So sweetly serving
When here on earth our Lord did hide.
You stand as true, the faith preserving,
As in that first fair Easter-tide.

Your graceful fronds upheld to Heaven
Are seeking naught, just to adore;
Unlike us, blent with selfish leaven,
Receiving much and asking more.

Your beauty soothes, your symbol lifts us,
Serene you sway, in stately calm;
You strewed the way, adventing Christ,us,
And were His herald, happy palm!

officials, Gasquet, Moerenhaut, and many others count themselves among the French residents of California prior to 1848.

It must be said, however, that most of the French natives who came to California prior to the gold rush, generally speaking, did not come directly from France. They arrived in California by a process of drifting and shifting from country to country—those arriving in California early coming from those countries nearest to the land of perpetual sunshine, particularly from Mexico, Chili, Peru, Sandwich Islands, Tahiti and the United States, notably from Louisiana. Beginning with the anchoring of the "La Meuse," on the 14th of September, 1849, and the discharge of from thirty-six to forty settlers who had come directly from France, the direct stream of French immigration into California began, but that is where our story ends.

Duflot de Mofras, who visited California in 1841 and 1842, states that the total White population of Upper California amounted to 5,000 persons, of whom some eighty were French. Edouard Auger, although he visited the country in 1852-1853, in quoting the statistics of California prior to the American occupation gives the same figures, adding that the eighty French inhabitants were located, in the main, at Monterey and Los Angeles. St. Amant, envoyé du gouvernement Français, about the same time, estimated that on December 31, 1853, there were 350,000 souls in California, of whom three-fourths were American and one-quarter foreign. Of the latter, about one-third were French, or from 25,000 to 30,000 in numbers.

Let us, for a moment, again peer at the "official activity" concerning California. As early as 1790 California entered the correspondence of the French diplomats. But one quickly turns the pages of the many volumes of the "Correspondence Politique" in the archives of the French Foreign Office to the years 1817-1819, when rumor had it that California had been ceded to Russia, which gave grave concern to the French ambassadors at Madrid and Washington, who in turn worried their superiors.

California, during this era, was in a rather unstable political condition. Revolutions were common, and respect for authority uncommon. The ease with which any nation might seize California, the opportunity for wealth, coupled with the neglect of Mexico, gave vent to the desires of England, France and the United States to acquire California. Mutual jealousies, however, and the determinations of each against the acquisition of California by the other, allowed California to remain under the flag of Mexico until 1846.

In 1840 occurred the well-known so-called "Graham Affair," in which an American bartender, together with many of his compatriots and Englishmen, were arrested, several of them being shipped in irons to Mexico. During this "scoop" of Governor Alvarado and Vallejo, rumors reached Mexico that a number of Frenchmen had been killed. Swiftly changing his plans, Captain Joseph de Rosamel, then at Mazatlan on the eve of departing for the Sandwich Islands, with the French corvette "La Danaide" sailed full speed to California. Arriving at Monterey with guns trained on the town, the Frenchmen were disappointed in not finding an excuse to fire, for the truth was that a few Frenchmen had been arrested but were immediately released, for a Frenchman, according to De Mofras, was not considered a "foreigner," and only foreigners were arrested during the "Graham Affair."

Rosamel and his crew, however, took advantage of their visit to Monterey to enjoy themselves, which indeed they did, to the mutual satisfaction of all parties concerned. The Frenchmen were the envied favorites of the fair sex, and what is like unto a señorita? One day the Frenchmen attended mass at the Old Presidio Church. So marked were their attentions to the fair devotees that the officiating priest ordered the strangers to leave, saying that "They only come here to coquet with the girls." Thereupon arose a tumult. The virgin devotees exclaimed, "Let them stay; they are as good Christians as we are." And the padre had to submit.

Climaxing a long period of official concern about California, the French government decided to collect all information relative to the Pacific Northwest. As its representative, Eugène Duflot de Mofras was sent, and two rather stout volumes attest to the accomplishment of the objective. De Mofras visited California during 1841 and 1842. He visited every place and noted every thing. He accomplished all the French government desired, despite his love for a "wild time," which was fully gratified in California despite his excitability, arrogance, frequent escapades, quarrels and utter lack of self-respect when under the influence of liquor.

THE HAND OF MAN— A STORY OF THE FORESTS

Southard M. Modry

CHAPTER III.

"THE KING CAN DO NO WRONG." This seems to have been the slogan of the lumber industry from its inception. Indeed, the large operators in our forests have been kings not only in name but in fact. Until quite recently, when the destruction of timber and the denudation of our watersheds grew so alarming that action by the government was necessitated and the national forests were created, the lumber companies were a law unto themselves. They dictated their own policies to the various state legislatures, and brooked no interference on the part of anyone.

The destruction continued from the time a tree was felled until it reached the mill. The most wanton carelessness followed every step taken, from start to finish. No rule whatsoever was observed in the felling of trees, or for the protection of the adjacent forest growth. When the commercial operator completed logging a certain area, he left in his wake a scene of desolation which is indescribable.

Men have been interested in the lumber industry who have made honest efforts to improve these conditions. And recently some operators have gone even further, with the result that right here in California, in the redwood belt, most of the larger operators have seen the wisdom of forest conservation and set the pace for better things. Generally, in the privately-owned forests, the conditions are not very much different from what they were twenty years ago.

When the tree was felled no precaution was taken to protect adjacent trees, with the result that one tree in falling damaged and destroyed its fellows. Trees were felled indiscriminately, and if they were unfit or undesirable for the mill they were left to rot. Often, in order to facilitate work upon a giant, the smaller trees in the vicinity were chopped down. The logs were dragged in such a way as to destroy most of the young trees in the vicinity, and to scar and injure the larger ones.

In trimming, immense amounts of slash—that is, the lopped-off limbs and undesirable parts of a tree—was left lying where cut, creating an additional fire risk. No precaution was taken in selecting the character of trees to be felled, with the result that valuable seed-trees were cut down and therefore there was no means of reproduction.

These methods, with some few exceptions, are still universally in use, though most lumbermen have come to the realization that, unless they themselves correct these evils, there will soon be no more trees to log. The few lumber companies which own their own lands have been the first to begin logging in an intelligent manner, in order to secure the best results and provide for a further crop. On leased lands the old methods, with practically no exceptions, prevail. Usually there is no selective cutting, and almost all the trees in an area are cut down, without respect to size or use.

Most of our present-day forest lands are fit for no other use, or are so far from the centers of population that they can be used only as forest lands. The results of this kind of logging, without taking into consideration the fire hazard, can easily be seen. The wastage is simply enormous, and the lumberman has not even the justification that the settler had—the desire to put the land to some other use.

Many of the lumber companies today operating on the Pacific Coast are controlled by the same operators who assisted in exhausting the forests of Michigan and the other Middle Western and Southern states. When the timber supply became depleted in those states, they followed Horace Greeley's suggestion and came West, buying or securing the controlling interests in the western lumber companies. From investigation, the local companies were the first to adopt progressive measures, and the old-timer is still up to his old destructive methods.

It can be readily seen that in most cases, if we give the forest a chance, it will reproduce itself. We can still maintain our present forest areas and watersheds if we use the same methods now in vogue in the national forests, with proper protection from fire.

Fresh in our minds are the great floods which recently overwhelmed the Mississippi Valley and, in a smaller way, the Sacramento Valley in 1927. Every year the volume of water poured into the Father of Waters and its tributaries—through the lack of forest growth to hold it back—is increasing. And with other streams the same rule holds true, only in a slightly lesser degree.

If we desire flood control, we must start at the source, our denuded watersheds, and replant them. We must protect virgin timber land, and enact the proper kind of legislation for its protection.

If the lumber industry as a whole be composed of public-spirited citizens, they should be the first to come forward and play the game as it should be played. There are many men associated with the lumber companies today who are big men, and are making an honest endeavor to better conditions. The lumber industry needs more of these men.

If future national calamity is to be averted, you, Mr. Citizen, must assist, for, as a matter of fact, you are just as indifferent to your country's welfare as the men here described. Your negligence and indifference are partly responsible for the present condition.

The slogan of every American citizen should be, "Save the Forests!"

they could add:

"Mas si vienen los Frances, Ay!

La muger está rendida."

Moreover, De Mofras points out the identity of religion and temperament between the French and the Spanish. He speaks of Alvarado having offered to grant him a large tract of land in the Tulare Valley for a French colony. So impressed was De Mofras with the strength of the French influence in California that he entertained the belief that the inhabitants would be favorably disposed towards French rule, should an opportunity be afforded to introduce it. "Le sort de ce pay est d'être conquis," writes De Mofras, "s'il ne se replace sous la protection d'une Monarchie européenne, seul moyen de salut qui lui reste. Ce moyen est, il nous semble, celui que la France doit préférer." Continuing, the Frenchman stated that "England and the United States flatter themselves alike with the idea of taking California from Mexico. It is, moreover, evident that California will belong to whatever nation chooses to send there a man-of-war and two hundred men, and since California must change masters, we should prefer to see it in the hands of the United States rather than in those of England," if it cannot belong to France.

By the time of De Mofras' visit to the Pacific Coast of North America the designs of the French upon California and in the Pacific area in general had excited the agents of England and the United States, not to mention Mexico. Vallejo, writing to Governor Alvarado on July 27, 1841, states that there is no doubt but that France is intriguing to become mistress in Cali-

Coming, as De Mofras did, at a time when France was interested in expansion and the acquisition of colonies; just at the close of a period of strained Franco-Mexican relations; following, as De Mofras' visit did, close upon the recent arrival of the "La Danaide"; the fact that there was a strong French-Canadian element among the trappers; the establishment of New Helvetia, and the threats of John A. Sutter to call in aid promised him by the French; and De Mofras' visit itself—all these tend towards the unmistakable conclusion that France had its designs upon, as well as aspirations for, California. Indeed, there can be little doubt that France, in sending De Mofras as an agent to collect information about the Pacific region, entertained hopes similar to those of England and the United States, that California might some day fall into her possession.

Indeed, De Mofras was careful to note what Frenchmen resided at each point. He pointed out the importance of New Helvetia as essentially a French settlement. He particularly called attention to the friendship accorded the French by the Californians—"Is sympathisant particulièrement avec les Français." The señoritas were especially struck by the presence of the Frenchmen:

"El Frances el Capitan

Es muy noble en su querer

Agasaja a las mugeres

Asi las ha de coger."

And, after reciting the following couplet in a drol tone:

"Ay! si vienen los Ingleses, Ay!

California está Perdida!"

fornia. This no doubt may have been actuated not only by the arrival of De Mofras, but also by the arrival during the preceding year of Rosamel and the French manofwar "La Daualde," and the request of the French citizens of California for a French consular agent. The latter, however, appears improbable in that it is doubtful whether either Alvarado or Vallejo was aware of the move. About the same moment, too, De Mofras wrote that hereafter one or two French frigates would visit the shores of California each year. Wilkes, upon his arrival in California, was particularly anxious to find out designs or intentions of France with respect to California, and particularly San Francisco Bay.

French designs upon California began to excite other nations, which likewise had their coveting eyes focused upon the "land of perpetual sunshine." England was excited to the state of furor. Ambassador Pakenham and Consuls Barron and Forbes, who kept the British government well informed, as their correspondence in the Public Record Office in London attests, demanded that England act or all would be lost. Lord Aberdeen, who was at the head of the Foreign Office, was not an expansionist, however, and hence no action was taken. England, however, negotiated for the purchase of California, which was strongly resented by both the United States and France.

The United States, also, found it necessary to act in a hurry, or it would lose its opportunity to expand to the Pacific. Waddy Thompson, in Mexico, urged the United States to act. Consul Thomas O. Larkin, as his correspondence now reposing in the Bancroft Library fully shows, urged the Americans to act. Repeatedly he warned Calhoun and Buchanan of the French and British menaces in California. The press of the United States re-echoed Larkin's words and must have had some effect upon President Polk, as the instructions given to Larkin and Stidell conclusively prove.

Indeed, until the very outbreak of the Mexican War the American Secretary of State feared that if England learned of the determination of President Polk to acquire California, she, together with France, would join Mexico against the United States. However, it was also true that the dread of a war with the United States, coupled with the uncertainty of what action France really would take, caused Great Britain to refrain from acquiring California by seizure.

The French were far from being inactive. The French government was kept fully informed of all events transpiring in California and particularly of Anglo-American rivalry and jealousy in Oregon and California, etc. Ambassadors Cyprey and Pageot and Consul Gueroult wrote minutely detailed reports to the home government. The ambassador to Mexico and the consuls at Tepic and Mazatlan urged France to seize California, and stimulated the appointment of a French consul in California, which had been asked for by the French citizens of Upper California as early as 1840.

When, in 1844, Micheltorena's "Cholos" attacked the crew of the French vessel "Angelina," an international conflict became almost imminent, resulting in the dispatching of a consular agent to California to demand satisfaction and a warvessel to back up the consul's action.

The official activity of France in respect to California culminated in the appointment of a consular agent to represent France in California. The agent appointed was Barrier, who, however, never came to California. But in 1845 Gasquet arrived to serve ad interim, and thus became the first French consul in California. As the French menace during the forties, in the eyes of the other nations, consisted of the presence of a consular agent in California, receiving the magnanimous salary of $4,000 per annum, without France having any apparent need for such an agent, let us see who these agents were.

Louis Gasquet was a gentleman of about fifty-five years of age, very refined in appearance and living. He thought a great deal of himself, and his being consul gave him much leisure in which to engage in self-glory and meditation over his self-inflicted importance. He did very little, except to become obnoxious to the authorities. He made a few inquiries concerning the fight which Micheltorena's "Cholos" had with the crew of the French vessel "Angelina" and he interposed on behalf of Cambuston, which brought him into disfavor with the Mexican authorities in California.

July, 1846, witnessed the conquest of California by Commodore Sloat, who was later succeeded in command by Commodore Stockton. Gasquet's refusal to recognize the new authorities resulted in the arrest of the French consul. However, Gasquet was shortly thereafter relieved of his duties by the newly-appointed

DEVELOPING FUTURE LEADERS

(MARGARET BURKE.)

TWELVE YEARS AGO WHEN HUMANITARIAN interests centered largely overseas, the Native Daughters of Santa Barbara, Reina del Mar Parlor No. 126, were awakened to the need of little native sons and daughters of their own community. Little children, many of them orphans or half-orphans, were struggling against the handicap of undernourishment. Social service workers from the Visiting Nurses Association reported cases of many creeds and nationalities where the building up of little bodies and the development of future leaders depended upon immediate provision for proper nourishment.

Pressed by the innate interest of the Order in child welfare and the desire to make a distinct contribution to the very heart of their immediate community, the Native Daughters organized the "Milk Fund," to be used in supplying free milk to the babies and children of families whose financial situation made the purchase of milk impossible. To this list were added the names of sick and aged persons whose health also depended upon such nourishment.

Necessarily, the fund started on a small scale. Miss Anna E. McCaughey assumed the chairmanship of the organizing committee and now holds the title of honorary chairman of the "Milk Fund" committee. Mrs. William R. Vick, now district deputy grand president of Santa Barbara, headed the first benefit luncheon, which netted $125 to initiate the movement. Miss McCaughey enlisted the support of all women's organizations in the annual tag days held on Admission Day, September 9, the birth date of the state, which for several years were the main source of revenue for the fund. Mrs. Charles Hopkins, who has contributed greatly to the social service work in Santa Barbara, aided the work by bag sales and garden teas. Five hundred dollars made up the fund the first year, and it grew to $4,500 during 1928.

Reaching as it does the most pitiful of needy groups, tiny boys and girls and aged folk, the "Milk Fund" movement carried itself, and during the twelve years of its existence founders of the fund have witnessed the development of sturdy little bodies, joyfully attending school and becoming playground and organization leaders.

French consul, J. de Moerenhaut, who arrived in California in September of 1846.

Being a man of more common sense and practicability than Gasquet, Moerenhaut provisionally recognized the new regime. He presented a number of claims on behalf of his fellow-compatriots who, it was asserted, were the victims of outrages perpetrated against their property by American army and naval officials. Most of these claims were not ratified by the American government, although they enter the diplomatic correspondence between the French and the American governments as represented through Ambassador Pageot and Secretary of State Buchanan. In December of 1848 Moerenhaut appointed Etienne Jourdain vice-consul at Yerba Buena.

Just before the outbreak of the war, the French attempted to negotiate in California for the supplying of cattle and necessities for the French establishments in Oceania, Tahiti, and more especially the Marquesas Islands, which trade it appears was carried on for some few years.

Even the acquisition of California by the United States did not completely extinguish French ambition to acquire the "Golden West." The chaos and the tumult which occurred in California as a result of the discovery of gold led the French to believe, and the succeeding events justified their belief, that the American hold on California was insecure and that intervention was justifiable. Frenchmen urged that the powers of Europe come to the aid of the union and protect the mines of California against foreign nations and their subjects. The gold of California, one writer concluded, would ruin humanity, or benefit it, only as the nations saw fit to intervene. If not to seize California by force of arms, let France acquire California by means of peacefully penetrating and colonizing it.

During 1849 numerous schemes and organizations for the colonization of California, for exploitation of the mines, for the purchase of real estate, for the promotion of commerce and agriculture in California, were created in France. Pamphlets galore deluged the French public with news and advertisements concerning California.

September 9, 1850, however, spelled doom to Supplying children of American, Italian, Mexican, Irish, Japanese, Negro, German, French and other nationalities, the "Milk Fund" makes no national or religious distinctions. During the course of a year, the free milk is carried into every district of the city, sometimes only for a short period of financial handicap, sometimes for periods of months or years.

Happily, the Neighborhood House, situated upon the site of the Old Adobe which is full of sentiment for those who knew old Santa Barbara, has been made the distributing center for the "Milk Fund." Mrs. Nancy Welch Emery, superintendent of the Associated Charities, has taken the responsibility of dispensing the fund. Working with her are case workers, visiting nurses, school nurses, Eastside social workers, the probation officer and Salvation Army workers, who report needy cases for help. Mothers have been trained to a knowledge of the value of milk in saving their children, and some of them receive instruction in how to cook with milk to tempt invalid appetites.

With the organization of the Community Chest in Santa Barbara, the "Milk Fund" was incorporated with thirteen other welfare agencies, but the Native Daughters have retained their sponsorship. Each year they contribute generously in time and money to raising the chest budget and insuring the continued growth of the "Milk Fund."

The last chest year, which ended in February, saw 42,151 pints of milk distributed to 316 children and 32 aged people. One hundred and six families not capable of supplying milk for their children or invalid and aged dependents were cared for through the fund. In addition, the chest supports a school milk fund from which undernourished schoolchildren receive milk daily during school hours.

During the week February 11-17 the Native Daughters sent out a team of chest workers to aid in putting over the Community Chest goal for the current year. Those serving on this committee were Mrs. Harry Wood, William Belt, Edna McCormick, William Vick, Bada Pacheco, C. E. Lataillade and Frances Warren; Misses Inez Sharpe, Elizabeth Hollow and Christine Moller. Directors of the "Milk Fund" include Mrs. William Vick, Irene S. Quinn, John Mitchell, Bada Pacheco, Edna McCormick, Harry Wood Jr. and Miss Christine Moller.

the French designs, ambitions and hopes for possessing California, for on that day California was admitted to the union and the uncertainty and chaos occasioned by the "military interregnum" came to an abrupt end. "With California as an integral part of the United States," write two former Native Sons Traveling Fellows in History, "she (California) was definitely removed from the field of conquest and colonization, and no longer could France, or any other nation, entertain designs upon her with impunity."

CALIFORNIA HAPPENINGS OF FIFTY YEARS AGO

Thomas R. Jones

(COMPILED EXPRESSLY FOR THE GRIZZLY BEAR.)

A HEAVY STORM SWEEPED OVER CALIFORNIA during the first week of March 1879. The Sacramento Valley received a good drenching, the rainfall in Sonoma and Napa Counties was over 10 inches, and 12 feet of snow fell at Summit, Placer County, in the Sierra Nevada Mountain. High water caused some damage, and a few towns were partly inundated.

Reports from every section of the state were optimistic, and good crops were considered assured. In consequence, wheat dropped to $1.70, barley to $1.15 and potatoes to 85c a cental. Onions, however, were scarce, and brought 15c a pound.

President Rutherford B. Hayes vetoed March 1 the anti-Chinese bill passed by the Federal Congress, and a canopy of gloom spread in consequence over California. Howls of disgust went up from every section, and meetings were held in several towns at which resolutions were passed condemning the president in unmeasured terms.

To add to the general disgust, a steamer arrived at San Francisco March 20 from China with 577 Chinks aboard. And one sailed for the Orient during the month, taking away but 175.

Dennis Kearney started March 3 on his stumping tour for the New State Constitution. His first address was at Redwood City, San Mateo County, where President Hayes was burned in effigy. Reaching California South, in an address at Santa Ana, Orange County, he lambasted several of its prominent citizens. As a result, he was given a mauling which disfigured him beyond recognition.

Indications were that the Workingmen were going to split into two factions, one for and the other against the proposed new constitution.

Settlers at Hanford, Kings County, organized March 4 to resist ejection from their lands by the Southern Pacific Company. A military company was organized, and the members expressed their intentions to fight, if necessary.

To secure equal rights in California for all women, a Women's State Club was organized at Sacramento, March 31. A committee of twenty-one was named to conduct the campaign.

The "Passion Play," portraying the life of Jesus Christ, was presented in San Francisco this month amid much social agitation. Some claimed it to be sacrilegious, while others maintained otherwise. The play was not a financial success.

On the other hand, Mlle. Henri's "Sensational Blondes," thirty-five shapely female artists appearing in a musical olio, were drawing crowded houses.

The Capital City Club, composed of Sacramento young men, gave a high-class performance there March 7. In the minstrel part, Ed. F. Cohn, Bert Kidder and Fred Myers, well-known Native Sons, had prominent parts.

FAILURES CAUSE CONSTERNATION.

Judge Keyser of the tenth judicial district rendered his decision this month in the suit of Keyes vs. Little York hydraulic mine—to restrain it from washing hydraulic tailings into Bear River, to the claimed injury of Sutter County farms. Judgment was given the plaintiff, thereby putting the first legal obstacle in the way of hydraulic mining in this state.

To irrigate their domain in Kern County, Carr & Haggin were constructing a canal 80 feet deep and 7 feet wide from the head of Kern Island to Buena Vista Slough. To navigate the canal, a sixty-ton boat had been constructed.

A temperance movement in Petaluma, Sonoma County, led by Dr. McKenzie, organized a Gentleman's Reform Club which 415 prominent citizens joined. As a result, several saloons closed their doors for want of patronage.

Godchaux Brothers, San Francisco importers, failed for over $300,000, and a half-dozen other concerns, hacked by them, also went bankrupt. Consternation reigned in the Bay City, as almost all the liabilities of the involved concerns, totaling over $1,000,000, represented loans by banks.

A Red Bluff, Tehama County, newspaperman shaved off his mustache and beard without notification. Entering his home that night his wife, not recognizing him, cracked him over the head with a piece of stove-wood.

The roots of a tree washed into view in a Nevada County hydraulic mine disclosed a petrified trout 8 inches long.

Fifteen vessels loaded with grain for Europe sailed out through the Golden Gate this month.

Exports of California wine during 1878 totaled 1,764,144 gallons valued at $770,150, and the demand for the product was constantly increasing.

Rich placer gold diggings found along Onion Creek, near Georgetown, El Dorado County, were attracting a rush of prospectors.

The stage from Santa Barbara City was stopped by two masked men near Los Alamos, March 18, and the express-box was taken.

A pig, littered in Kern County, had a proboscis more than 2 inches long and closely resembled an elephant.

Saint Patrick's Day was generally observed in the cities of the state, but there was a noticeable decline of numbers in the parades. At Sacramento, Frank D. Ryan, later a Past Grand President of the Order of Native Sons, was the orator of the day.

W. R. Andrus, the Workingmen's candidate, was re-elected mayor of Oakland, Alameda County, March 10.

Two rival San Francisco attorneys, Tom Fitch, the silver tongued, and Geo. W. Tyler, the irrepressible, engaged in a fight during the progress of a trial, and both were fined for contempt.

The Hyer sisters, Negroes born and reared in Sacramento who had been starring in the East as phenomenal vocalists since 1872, returned to their native city this month and were given a great ovation.

CHINAMAN HANGED.

Wm. L. Newell, a printer who came to California in 1849 and helped establish one of San Francisco's early-day newspapers, died at Sacramento March 12 at the age of 57.

John R. Driver, operating a "little giant" in his Canyon Creek, Trinity County, hydraulic claim, got in the way of the monitor and was shot twenty-five feet into a bank.

Schoolchildren of Millerton, Fresno County, found pay dirt near the schoolhouse and mined it at recess time. Digging too far into the bluff March 5 there was a cave-in, and Charlie and Willie Brown, Jeff Donovan and Johnny Mathews were buried. A passing Chinaman rushed to the spot and, with his hands, dug out Jeff. It required about an hour to get to the others, and Johnny was dead when reached.

Daniel Watterson, a 19-year-old Santa Ana, Orange County, youth was accidentally killed while hunting March 31.

Frank Page and Willie Dyer, 14 years old, attempting at Truckee, Nevada County, March 29 to ride a log through the railway from one sawmill dam to another, were drowned.

Elrod Ryan was killed as the result of falling 450 feet down the shaft of a Bodie, Mono County, mine. When half-way down he yelled to the miners working below, "Look out, I'm coming!"

Rather than continue going to school, James Roche, a 15-year-old North San Juan, Nevada County, lad hanged himself March 29.

Ah Ben, a Chinaman who committed murder while burglarizing the McDaniels home in Marysville, Yuba County, in 1878, was hanged in the jailyard there March 14.

Dr. A. W. Bayles of Lake County was drowned in Clear Lake March 1 while operating a small sailboat.

Near Kernville, Kern County, John Evey invited several neighbors to dine with his family. J. W. Dickman picked up one of the Evey chillren, who slapped him in the face. Dickman pushed the child violently away and remarked that Evcy was rearing a litter of hoodlums. Evcy resented the aspersion, a fight ensued, and he was stabbed to death.

Andrew Searle, while working in the Ferguson mine of Tuolumne County broke his leg, and had to be carried fourteen miles upon a litter to obtain surgical aid.

As the result of a bullet wound received while mer Lathrop, San Joaquin County, home was being hurglarized about a year before, Mrs. Susie Shepard died March 12.

The body of Fred Chamberlain, a veteran of the Mexican War who disappeared from Sacramento City in June of 1878, was found in the Sacramento River March 10.

A man arrested in San Francisco for burglary was found to possess an ingenious device for cheating at poker. It was not visible to other players, and by its use the manipulator could frequently hold four aces.

"LA REINA"

In commemoration of the fortieth anniversary of its founding, the Security Trust and Savings Bank of Los Angeles issued, February 11, a most interesting and valuable booklet entitled "La Reina," a history of Los Angeles in three centuries. The 212-page work, copiously illustrated, was compiled by Laurance L. Hill, publicity manager for the bank, and is the result of years of research.

"Two more years and Los Angeles will be 150 years old," says the foreword of "La Reina." "This fact will come as a surprise to many. The sesquicentennial year begins on September 4, 1931, and before its close Los Angeles will be the scene of the Olympic Games. Never before have these historic athletic contests been held in America.

"To those of us who are here now and to those who will come to the Olympiad, Los Angeles may seem a very young city to have been chosen for these very old games. Possibly a more venerable American city should have the honor. The fact that this municipality was founded while Washington and Lafayette were closing in on Cornwallis and will celebrate its one hundred and fiftieth birthday during the sesquicentennial year of the famous surrender at Yorktown, does not dissipate the oft-repeated and generally-held impression that Los Angeles is 'the newest city in the world.' Even one of America's most reputable publications says that Los Angeles may be 'described as a city without a past, and as vehemently up-to-date as the latest extra issue of an evening newspaper.'

"The reason for all this is not far to seek. Since 1870, with the exception of a single decennial, the population has doubled without fail every ten years. During some decades it has done more than that. After every census, therefore, a very old city finds itself a very young city. Every other person on the street is a new arrival, unacquainted with Los Angeles' past and living very much in the 'here and now.' Ancestor worship is unknown because those with local ancestors are few and far between. Los Angeles will never be troubled with hardening of the civic arteries. It always has new blood."

Then follows a complete and authentic history of the city's progress from sleepy pueblo to animated city. "La Reina" is a prized addition to the several history publications published, and gratuitously distributed, by the Security Trust and Savings Bank.—C.M.H.

REAL OPPORTUNITY FOR BREEDERS OF DAIRY CATTLE.

California breeders are overlooking a real opportunity to supply dairy cattle for California South. Many thousands of dollars are now being sent to other states for the yearly replacements of unprofitable or undesirable dairy cows, culled out of the herds and disposed of each year. The dairymen of California South would prefer to buy acclimated cattle in California or Arizona rather than in the colder states, and the only thing necessary for California producers to get the benefit of this situation is to furnish the highest grade of heavy producing cattle, free from disease.

Statistics for the year 1928, covering Los Angeles County alone, show that 16,207 cattle were brought in from other states, as against 5,655 head from California. Sacramento County was the largest contributor with a total of 996 head, and Tulare County came next with a total of 847 head, so that Los Angeles dairymen paid to other states during that period more than $162,000 for cows that can be produced to better advantage in California. The average price for the year in Los Angeles County was about 15 percent above the price of the previous year, but the cows were not so good. This situation presents a real opportunity for breeders of dairy cattle.

MOTOR VEHICLE REGISTRATIONS IN 1928 OUTDISTANCED 1927.

During 1928, 1,859,432 motor vehicles, including passenger cars, solid- and pneumatic-tire trucks, motorcycles and trailers, paid registration fees in California during 1928, according to the State Division of Motor Vehicles. This was an approximate gain of 7 percent, compared with the 1927 registrations, which totaled 1,736,765. The 1928 total does not include 27,109 automobiles, 448 motorcycles and 2,963 trailers registered but exempt by law from payment of license fees, nor 83,506 non-resident cars that came into the state during the year.

The fee-paid registrations for 1928 were divided as follows: Automobiles, 1,591,739; solid trucks, 36,618; pneumatic trucks, 184,450; motorcycles, 9,455; trailers, 37,170. The net gain in passenger cars alone for the year was 112,328. There was a slight drop in the number of solid-tired trucks, but motorcycles, which had been losing consistently for several years, showed a slight increase.

Los Angeles County registered 745,929 motor vehicles during the year—more than one-third of the total registration for the entire state. These included 654,100 passenger cars, 13,588 solid trucks, 66,369 pneumatic trucks, 2,889 motorcycles and 8,983 trailers.

CALIFORNIA SOUTH IN UNITED EFFORT FOR MORE STATE ROADS.

A united effort will be presented by California South for the proposed addition of 615 miles to the secondary state road system in this section, it is indicated by a conference held in the headquarters of the Automobile Club of Southern California which was attended by legislators, county supervisors and others interested in highway development. To incorporate this additional mileage, the Edwards-Kline Highway Bill has been introduced in the State Legislature as senate bill No. 717 and assembly bill No. 845.

The bill in no manner conflicts with or changes the provisions or principles of the Breed bill, which became a law in 1927, nor does it in any manner interfere with the designation of improvement of the primary roads, according to highway authorities. The measure is proposed as an aid to the development of California South's road system, and is declared to be fair to the north and the south alike.

GRADE CROSSING ELIMINATION URGED ON STATES AND RAILROADS.

Classification of railroad grade crossings so as to provide a basis for elimination in any program of highway development, is recommended by the Federal Agricultural Department's public roads bureau.

The outline proposes that a definite classification of crossings be made, based on the relative value of their elimination to the traveling public; that a definite program for eliminating crossings of highest classification be adopted by each state and each railroad in it; that authority to create new grade crossings be restricted; that each state adopt a definite program for installing safety warning devices of a standardized type; that the cost of eliminating and installing safety devices be readjusted between the railroads and the public.

HORN BLOWING STILL REQUIRED.

Although unnecessary blowing of the horn is out of date in towns and cities, there is still a state law requiring that a driver passing another car on the open road should give a warning "toot."

The law also specifies that "any vehicle overtaking another vehicle proceeding in the same direction shall pass at least two feet to the left thereof, and shall not again be driven to the right side of the highway until reasonably clear of such overtaken vehicle."

Remove Grease—If the brakes of a car become soaked with oil or grease, no amount of adjustment will remedy the condition. Proper procedure is to have the hands removed and then burn out the grease with a torch.

Overheating the motor often is caused by retarding the spark too far.

Bad for Steering—Improper wheel alignment provides about as much difficulty in steering an auto as insufficient lubrication and improper adjustment of the various units of the steering assembly. Excessive tire wear is usually an unerring symptom of wheels out of alignment.

Report has it that several automobile manufacturers, especially among the higher-priced group, plan to equip their products with radio sets.

UNIFORM ROAD SIGNS TO REPLACE FAMILIAR WHITE ANGELS.

Motorists soon will begin to note that the familiar blue and white signs along California South's highways are giving way to the uniform system of road marking adopted by the American Association of State Highway Officials and the Bureau of Public Roads of the Federal Government.

The passing of the "white angels" of the highways will be sincerely regretted by many, as these friendly guides of blue and white have stood as travelers' beacons for the past quarter-century. They all were erected and maintained by the Automobile Club of Southern California, which bore the entire expense, as it will the heavy cost and arduous work entailed in making the changes.

The beginning will be made on all United States highways, which include Route No. 66, from San Bernardino to Needles; Route No. 80, from San Diego to Arizona State line via El Centro; Route No. 99, Daggett to Nevada State line; Route No. 99, El Centro to Fresno County line; Route No. 101, from Mexican border at Tijuana to Monterey County line.

The new signs will be a different type and color from those with which motorists in this section have become familiar. The warning signs will be rectangular, with black letters upon yellow background. The direction signs will be rectangular, with black letters upon white background. Boulevard stop signs will have red background with white letters.

HONEY USED IN RADIATORS

AS ANTIFREEZE SOLUTION.

Another agricultural product finds a new use. This time it is honey. Honey, mixed with water, has been tested as an antifreeze solution by private motorists and state agricultural colleges, and practically all reports of these experiments have been favorable, says the Federal Agricultural Department.

The proper proportion of honey to water varies according to the lowest temperature expected. Where zero weather is expected, equal parts of honey and water are commonly used. Such a mixture begins to form slush at zero, however, and a greater proportion of honey is required for best results at lower temperatures. A quart of alcohol added to each three gallons of the mixture will improve the circulation.

To make the solution, use a cheap grade of extracted honey, stirring it into hot water. Heat the mixture to a boil and skim off the scum. If alcohol is used, stir it in and boil from three to five minutes. Fill the radiator and maintain the level by adding water as needed.

When honey is used as an antifreeze mixture it is important that all gaskets, pump packing and hose connections be tight. A slight seepage around the hose connection is not serious, but any considerable quantity leaking into the engine may cause considerable difficulty. Should honey reach the cylinders and valve heads, it will carbonize, making it necessary to remove the engine head and clean out the residue. The solution can be saved for use year after year by sealing it while hot in a tight container.

CARBON-MONOXIDE DANGEROUS.

Again carbon-monoxide is claiming many victims among motorists who fail to realize the danger of "warming up" cold motors in closed garages. The deadly fumes that escape from the exhaust of a car often overcome the driver before he realizes the menace.

The best practice is to throw garage doors wide open before starting the motor, then backing into the driveway to complete the warming-up process.

Replace Valve Cap—Don't forget to replace the valve cap when changing a tire. It performs the valuable function of keeping dust and road-grit out of the tire.

It is wise to occasionally inspect the muffler, as a clogged muffler puts pressure upon the engine, and one that is completely closed means that the engine cannot function.

A BIT O' FARMING

PREPARED EXPRESSLY FOR THE GRIZZLY BEAR BY M. H. ELLIS

THE FIRST CROP OUTLOOK ISSUED IN California came last month from the University of California Agricultural Extension Service, prepared by Dr. H. R. Wellman, specialist in agricultural economics. While the statement is made in issuing this outlook that it is not pessimistic, a careful review of the bulletin, its conclusions and the facts leading to them, gives but one possible thought—it is no time to plant more acreages to fruits in this state. It does not say, nor is it possible to read into it such a meaning, that all crops are going to be unprofitable this year. On the other hand, the prospects for some crops are good, others not so good, others frankly had. But, after scanning this outlook closely, and reading the series of economic bulletins on California crops as it has developed, one can hardly be optimistic about additional plantings of any tree or vine fruit, particularly on marginal land. Where splendid soil is available, well watered and in favorable climatic location, with market facilities at hand, it may pay the man who knows how to raise fruit, to plant it. But the novice will do better at dairy farming.

Until the markets have caught up with the production of California specialty crops, or the population has increased so that they are in real demand, or such a demand is created through systematic advertising, added acreages must be a burden on the fruit industry. The sales problem right now is a real one, and whether it is over-production or under-consumption that is the trouble, the fact remains that the gap between consumption and production is too great at the present time. Co-operative marketing has helped and will help, but the perfection of co-operative marketing still is a long way off, and there is an educational row to be hoed that reaches far down the production furrows.

There is no need to be discouraged with agricultural prospects in California. They are better than in most other places. But there is need to discourage additional acreages, particularly on lands that are not the very best. Colonization right now is a business better left dormant until a readjustment of conditions is brought about. There may be such schemes this side of the Boulder Dam colonization rainbows that will bear close scrutiny.

GET VINE MILDEW EARLY.

Once vine mildew gets a hold in a vineyard it is hard to control, and there is pretty apt to be damage from it. The better practice is prevention, and all said and done it is far easier than control attempts after the disease appears. Sulphur dust is the preventive, and the only remedy.

Prevention is almost certainly accomplished by three thorough dustings: when the new growth is six to eight inches long, again when it is 15 to 18 inches in length, and the third time near blossoming. Any kind of sulphur is good if it is finely ground, the more finely the better. If the work be perfectly done, a pound per acre would be sufficient, but as there always is waste, figure on applying three pounds per acre the first time and five pounds per acre in the later dustings. Use a duster; hand shaking from a sack is slow, inefficient and wasteful.

GIVE CHICKS GOOD CARE.

The only way to get good hens is to get chicks from pedigreed stock. Having done this, however, don't figure that these chicks will automatically develop into 250-egg hens. They won't, any more than a machine will run indefinitely without attention. The chicks must have air, care and feed. Overcrowding in the brooder houses, poor ventilation and lack of light may cause suffocation, toe picking, tail picking and other bad habits. Sick hovers usually are dirty and coccidiosis flourishes if it gets a start. The usual rule is to allow one square foot of space in the house to four chicks, some 500 in a house ten by twelve feet. Four hundred would do much better. Give the chicks light, direct light and not through a window glass if it is at all possible to do so, and keep them warm at the same time.

EXERCISE THE BROOD SOW.

See that the brood sow has plenty of exercise. One way of accomplishing this is to place the alfalfa feed rack some distance from the sleeping quarters. Alfalfa is a valuable feed for brood sows, and they will eat it freely if given the opportunity. By making them walk for the feed, they will get exercise. Pregnant sows that are not permitted to become sluggish will farrow stronger litters, usually will save more of their pigs and be in better shape to feed them than the sow that has had no exercise. The pigs themselves will gain more rapidly, will be found hardier and are much less liable to show losses.

LOOKING OVER AGRICULTURE.

Perhaps the greatest single influence in the interchange of good farm practices and the abandonment of poor ones has been the Farm Bureau Travel Conference, started many years ago as an annual affair by the University of California Agricultural Extension Service and now put on a biennial basis. This is the year for the ninth travel conference. Like its predecessors, it will start from Berkeley; its route this year will be down the coast to Los Angeles, inland to Riverside and San Bernardino Counties, and down the coast again to the south.

May 1 has been chosen as the date of starting, and the tour will last eight days, with seven of them devoted to the study of new agricultural methods as advised by the Agricultural Extension Service. The motor caravan is made up by each farm advisor in the state bringing his car and three farm bureau delegates; other cars with specialists, administrative officials and invited guests will bring the number up to fifty and the enrolment probably will be slightly more than 200.

GETTING RID OF THE EUCALYPTUS.

The eucalyptus is a persistent grower, and cutting down the tree by no means takes its life, as many a farmer has found. If it is desired that the eucalyptus be killed, give each stump a liberal dose of sodium arsenite as soon as the tree is felled. If sucker growth starts later, use a good weed killer, spraying the new growth and the stump after scarring it well with an axe. Without the use of chemicals it is next to impossible to discourage this tree. Certainly the axe and saw will not do it.

CARE OF TURKEY EGGS.

Turkey eggs for hatching should be kept in a dark, cool and dry place, at an even temperature, around 60 degrees. They should be turned each day to prevent the settling of the yolks and are best kept in vertical position, changing ends daily. While eggs have been kept three or even four weeks, it is not good practice to hold them more than two weeks; it requires twenty-eight days for them to incubate.

In selecting eggs for hatching, discard the extra large ones, as they seldom are fertile; the medium-size ones are best. The laying stock should have plenty of lime; porous shelled eggs do not hatch well. See that the hens have plenty of good feed, plenty of water and plenty of exercise. Whether the poults are hatched by hen or incubator makes no difference; the care they get after hatching is of more importance.

SPRING SPRAYING TIME AT HAND.

Spring spraying time is at hand, and the first activity along this line will be the war against the fungus diseases of peaches and apricots. With bud-swelling time already at hand in some districts, it is high time to get busy with Bordeaux applications against apricot brown rot and shot hole fungus. Brown rot is most serious along the coast; shot hole is worst in the interior valleys. When the peach buds begin to swell lime-sulphur should be applied to protect the trees against twig borers and curl leaf. Spraying is insurance against damage. The troubles may not come, but it is a pretty safe bet they will; if they do the loss will cost more than a dozen years of spraying. It doesn't pay to gamble.

BUYING DAIRY CATTLE.

When purchasing dairy cattle, the buyer should protect himself in every possible way against the introduction of diseased stock into his herd. In the first place, it is well to look into the history of the herd from which the animals come. Buy them subject to ninety days' retest for tuberculosis and see that the retest is made. Require the blood test for infectious abortion before you buy, and make provision for a sixty-day retest. Of course it is presumed that the production records will be inspected, or in case of heifers the pedigree should be looked into.

The purchase of a dairy cow is not only of the individual, but of the heifers she later will introduce into the herd. Production must be built up if the dairy is to succeed, and the buying of stock is one of the most important parts of the dairyman's business.

FRENCH ROOTS FOR PEARS.

Use French roots for pears, and be sure you are using them. A few years ago there was a strong tendency toward the Japanese roots, but their susceptibility to disease has led to their abandonment by those who have given the subject careful study. The Bartlett or Winter Nellis are of the French family, but there are others better and more resistant to blight. Quince is good stock, but it must be double worked. In fact, there are those growers who insist on double working their trees. But in any event, be sure it is not Jap stock that is being made the basis of your pear-producing hopes.

PROPOSED ECONOMIC POISON CONTROL.

One of the real fights that is developing in the State Legislature this year is over the proposal of the State Board of Pharmacy to limit the sale of economic poisons in package lots to drug stores or by licensed pharmacists. The opposition to this bill points out that if it be passed, it will be impossible to purchase the needed arsenate of lead and such materials from the seed house; the gardener would have to go to the drug store, where the clerks would not be familiar with the needs of the occasion. The claim is made, too, that prices necessarily would be increased.

The bill should fall of passage, for it puts the gardener or the suburban farmer in a position where he would first have to seek his information for control and then purchase his materials. Now, the supply houses, anxious to make sales, give the needed advice and furnish the materials for the control of the trouble.

WASHING CITRUS TREES.

A practice that, while not entirely new is gaining favor each season in the citrus orchard, is that of washing the trees. Where the trees do not shed their leaves with the arrival of winter, dirt and debris collect, the leaves become dirty and their pores clogged, and the health of the tree is affected. Too, young scale and mealybug are removed if they have not fastened themselves to the bark.

The fruit from groves thus treated has been found of superior quality, and the vigor of the trees is noticeably improved. The water should be applied at from thirty to fifty pounds pressure, sufficient in volume to cleanse the trees, outside and inside. Material costs are low for the treatment, and the results are far more than sufficient to pay for the time and equipment required.

RUNTS NOT ALWAYS SO BORN.

Runts may be born. The new-born sheep or calf may inherit weakness from its parents, or the pig that gets the hind teat may always be a runt. But more often the runt is made, usually through insufficient food and care, and particularly in the first days of its life. Nowhere is this truer than with baby chicks. Overcrowding, chilling in the brooder and lack of feed may give their growth such a severe handicap that they never will recover. With plenty of room, plenty of feed, good ventilation and sunlight,
there will be few runts.

CANKER WORMS AND CATERPILLARS.

Orchardists, particularly prune growers, must be on the lookout right now for canker worms and tent caterpillars. They may appear earlier than expected, and once on hand are more than likely to do damage when fruit is setting. Arsenate of lead will be helpful, if the infestation of either is found serious enough to warrant it.

GEESE AND GANDERS.

Picking males from females in young fowls of any kind is a task beyond most persons. For years there has been a discussion of this subject, particularly as to geese. One farmer insists he has the method: put the fowls in water.
He says that whether six hours old or six years, the ganders will swim with tails high, the geese with tails low.

TEST SPRAY PRESSURE GAUGES.

Be sure, before the spring spraying starts, that the pressure gauge of the spray rig is working properly. Have it tested, and take no chances.
In a recent test of some seventy-five gauges, 70 percent were found to be more than ten pounds off, 45 percent were more than twenty-five pounds off, and some didn't come within 200 pounds of being accurate. In general, gauges read too high; this results in poor pressure and inadequate spraying. When the recording is too low, trouble with the machine is likely to develop when high-pressure work is required.

FERTILIZING SWEET POTATOES.

Both quantity and quality of sweet potatoes will be heightened by the use of fertilizer, and the grower of this or any other truck crop will find that the feeding of the soil will be repaid many times when the crop is harvested. Ammonium sulphate at the rate of 300 pounds per acre will be found a great stimulus to production. Nitrate of soda and nitrate of lime also will help. Soil which is over cropped, and much of that devoted to truck gardens suffers from this, needs fertilizer.

WOUNDS UPON TREES.

Wounds upon trees must heal if the tree is to continue to live, just as certainly as must wounds upon an animal. If tree wounds, whether caused from pruning, scraping with a singletree or cultivator, fail to heal, they should be covered with some material that will exclude air and moisture and prevent the entrance of fungi that will cause decay. A new material, or rather a new form of an old material, has been brought forward in an asphalt emulsion that can be applied cold and that will dry within an hour, qualities which take the difficulty from the operation. Many valuable trees are lost every year from neglect of wounds that could be cared for cheaply and easily.

CULL THE BOARDER COWS.

Now is the time of all times to get rid of the worthless dairy cow. Determine the production, accurately, of every cow in the herd; then figure her cost and strike the balance for each individual. It is better merely to kill and bury a boarder than carry her along at a loss. But now, with fat cows bringing around 8 cents, there is a good opportunity to get rid of them without loss. Replace them with real producers, and many a herd that has not been paying will get out of the red-ink columns to the black.
The real reason that so many poor cows remain in dairy herds in this state, or in other states, is that their owners never have taken the trouble to ascertain the facts regarding production and costs. It is high time this is done.

NATIVE SONS' BIG CLASS INITIATION

THE SAN FRANCISCO PARLORS of the Order of Native Sons of the Golden West will have a joint class initiation, in honor of Grand President James A. Wilson, in the auditorium of Native Sons Building, 414 Mason street, Saturday evening, March 23. There is much interest in the affair, and a big class of candidates is expected. Many entertainment features are being arranged, and a large and enthusiastic gathering of members of the Order is anticipated.

Prizes will be awarded the competing Parlors as follows: First, to the one making the largest numerical gain; second, to the one making the largest percentage gain. Parlors have been divided into classes as nearly equal in membership as possible, and to the Parlor in each group making the largest numerical gain a prize will be awarded. The Parlors have been classified as follows: First class—Rincon No. 72, Stanford No. 76, South San Francisco No. 157, Twin Peaks No. 214, Castro No. 232. Second class—California No. 1, Pacific No. 10, Mission No. 38, San Francisco No. 49, Presidio No. 194, Guadalupe No. 231. Third class—Golden Gate No. 29, El Dorado No. 52, Hesperian No. 137, Alameda No. 154, Sequoia No. 160, Precita No. 187, Marshall No. 202, Dolores No. 208. Fourth

TO VISIT PLACER COUNTY.

Grand President James A. Wilson and Grand First Vice-president Charles L. Dodge were guests of honor at the annual banquet February 2 of Niantic Parlor No. 105 N.S.G.W. Joseph B. Keenan was the toastmaster, and addresses were delivered by Past Grand President Lewis F. Byington, John Reidy, the honor-guests, President Caspar P. Hare and others.

The Parlor has appointed an active committee to make arrangements for a pilgrimage to historic Placer County some week-end during May. Niantic takes a keen interest in the interior counties, and the proposed trip is part of an itinerary that will bring the members in closer touch with the historic sections of the state. Through its president, Niantic is negotiating with Auburn Parlor No. 59 for the Placer County tour.

DELIGHTFUL MUSICAL.

Mrs. J. Emmet Hayden, president Oro Fino Parlor No. 9 N.D.G.W., entertained the members of the Parlor at a delightful musical at her home February 7. In addition to almost the entire membership, D.D.G.P. Elizabeth Richards and Mrs. Mabel Scally were in attendance. Cards and delicious refreshments added to the enjoyment of the evening.

Oro Fino joined La Dorado Parlor No. 236 N.D.G.W. in extending a warm welcome to Grand President Dr. Louise C. Heilbron February 21, the occasion being her official visit. A large class of candidates were installed.

HAPPY EVENING.

Officers of Orinda Parlor No. 56 N.D.G.W., with Rose Tierney Sage as president, were publicly installed by D.D.G.P. Sadie Moyce Blake January 25. The evening marked the first meeting in the new Native Daughter Home Building, 555 Baker street, and gave relatives and friends of the members an opportunity to inspect the structure.

Orinda Gunther Gianuini, retiring past president, was especially honored in the testimonial presented her by the Parlor, because she is the original Orinda named after No. 56. Dancing closed a happy evening. The success of the occasion was due to the untiring efforts of Chairman Gladys Cordy and the newly-installed officers.

COLONIAL PARTY.

Guadalupe Parlor No. 153 N.D.G.W. celebrated its twenty-second institution anniversary with a banquet which was largely attended by members and friends. D.D.G.P. Georgia Nelson was a guest of honor. The tables were beautifully decorated in the Order's colors, red, white and yellow, and a large home-made cake, frosted in those colors, formed the centerpiece.

February 21 the birthday anniversary of George Washington was observed by the Parlor with a colonial party. Many attended in costumes of that period. Dancing and refreshments were enjoyed.

ANNIVERSARY CELEBRATED.

January 19 will long be remembered as an outstanding date in the history of Dolores Parlor No. 169 N.D.G.W., for it was then that the members celebrated the twentieth institution anniversary of the Parlor by dining at a dow-

A color scheme of delicate pink was carried out in the flowers that adorned the tables, the dainty almond baskets and the carnival hats. A huge birthday cake with twenty bright candles was the big hit of the evening and, to the complete surprise of all, an immense basket of beautiful blooms was received from Dolores Parlor No. 208 N.S.G.W., with sincere good wishes for many more birthdays.

A peppy orchestra furnished dance music and entertainment numbers were presented by the more-talented members. D.D.G.P. Agnes McVerry was the honor-guest, and the charter members present included Mayme O'Leary, Nellie Guilfooy, Selma McMullin, Claire Lynch and Emille Lachman. The latter is now affiliated with Sutter Parlor No. 111 of Sacramento, but made the trip from the Capital City to express her high regard for her former Parlor, Dolores. Grand Trustee Evelyn I. Carlson briefly outlined the history of the Parlor, and concluded by presenting a silver fountain pen and pencil to Charter President Mayme O'Leary, now the financial secretary, as tokens of love and esteem from the members. Much credit is due Myrtle Ross and her capable committee for having made the affair an unusual and happy party.

LAST WORD IN CULINARY ART.

February 6, Castro Parlor No. 178 N.D.G.W. celebrated its nineteenth institution birthday with a turkey dinner for the members. Seventy-five enjoyed the feast, which was cooked and served by a committee appointed by the president, and all pronounced it the last word in culinary art. A nominal price was charged, and all over the actual cost went into a fund being raised by the Parlor to help liquidate the debt on the Native Daughter Home; $22 was turned in, making a total of nearly $100 thus far raised.

This was Miss Gabrielle Sandersfield's first night in the chair, and the members gave her a rousing and somewhat hilarious welcome. During the evening Chairman Margaret Griffith was presented with a handsome sofa cushion in appreciation of her efforts in making the dinner a social and financial success.

THIRTY COUPLES WEDDED IN HISTORIC TRINITY COUNTY HOUSE.

A historic dwelling of Trinity County is the Oliver Luddington home, which was built in 1854 and still stands, says the "Blue Lake Advocate." The house was originally of two large rooms made out of whipsaw lumber. These rooms are still a part of the home, which has been added to from time to time.

Thirty couples were married at the same time

In the large front room back in the early '60s. In those days there were a good many White men in this part of the country who were living with Indian women. The United States Government issued an order that the White men should marry their Indian companions, or else the women should go to the Hoopa Indian Reservation.

Thirty White men agreed to marry their Indian companions. By arrangement the thirty couples assembled the same day in this house and Justice of the Peace Carr was summoned. Standing upon a box in the center of the room, and with the thirty couples ranged around the walls, he solemnized the weddings that made it possible for the thirty Indian women to remain with their companionate husbands and escape extradition to the Hoopa Indian Reservation.

THIS YEAR'S STATE FAIR WILL DRAW NATION-WIDE ATTENTION.

Every Californian should take an interest in this year's State Fair, to be held at Sacramento City, August 31 to September 9 (Admission Day), for it will mark the seventy-seventh anniversary of this important institution.

From a modest beginning at San Francisco in 1854, California's annual exposition, reflecting the remarkable growth of the Golden State, has developed into one of America's best. Throughout the East it is referred to as "the world's greatest horticultural show," for no other state of the union is able to assemble such a wide variety of products as those brought together by California's counties.

This year will not only see the greatest of California's state fairs replete with anniversary features, but it will witness a Western States Exposition in connection therewith, with one of the buildings given over entirely to exhibits from neighboring states of the Pacific Slope. It will be a great show—one that will attract the eyes of the entire nation to California.

UNIFORM CODE LIST GROWING.

Eighty-three of the leading communities in California now have in effect the uniform traffic ordinance sponsored by the Automobile Club of Southern California and the State Automobile Association.

Motorists may now drive into most of the principal cities of the state with the knowledge that a standard set of regulations is in effect making for greater safety and easier movement of traffic.

Passing of the California Pioneer

(Confined to Brief Notices of the Demise of Those Men and Women Who Came to California Prior to 1860.)

MRS. RUTH JANE JAMIESON-JOHNSON, native of Wisconsin, 87; came across the plains to California with her parents in 1849 and settled in Sacramento; in the '60s she returned to the East, but after a short visit there came back to this state, via the Isthmus of Panama; died at Eureka, Humboldt County, survived by five children.

And we should never forget what the present generation owes to those men and women who made this country what it is. They found it a wilderness, and established homes, schools, churches and all the accompaniments of civilization. They have left the indelible imprint of their presence upon our life, and for themselves and their works they will always be in the memories of those who have come after them. And the Pioneer Mother is entitled to as much honor and praise as the Pioneer Father, for it was their joint endeavor that established civilization in this county."

Feminine World's Fads and Fancies

PREPARED ESPECIALLY FOR THE GRIZZLY BEAR BY ANNA STOERNER

EARLY SPRING PROMOTION CENTERS interest on the jacket silhouette. It is impossible to say too much about the jacket theme, for it appears in some version or another in practically every collection, and its success in mid-season is impressive enough to warrant the prediction.

Eton jackets are another phase. The brevity of the jacket makes it suitable for wear under the heavy coat and it is equally wearable without the top coat. Dresses of this type emphasize the contrasting color note, contributed by a rose bodice with black skirt and jacket, or a bluet bodice with navy and corn-husk beige skirt and jacket.

This is to be a suit season. In fact, the most important suit season in many years, and this includes the long coat ensemble as well as the shorter finger-tip and hip-length coat. A black or beige cheviot-like woolen ensemble is lined with print and has a matching print frock. Considerable interest is shown in basket weaves and bordered oxford cloths in black or blue, lined with prints and made with sleeveless print frocks.

Another good type is a loosely-woven woolen in tan, gray or medium blue, lined with plain pastel crepe and having a frock of the same color.

Tuxedo collars, intricate seaming and appliques are important, with considerable attention paid to back details.

Skirts are in wrap-around and yoke-top styles, with inverted front pleats. Checks and plaids are destined for the cotton ensembles and gingham frocks.

Characteristic of the wash dresses is the effective arrangement of the pleats in skirts, which range from a single box-pleat at the front to all-around pleating, or a cluster of side pleats at one or both sides of the skirt. Bias binding is an approved trimming, applied at the armholes of sleeveless dresses and in bands on long-sleeved models.

The revival of gingham brings with it a new interest in button trimming on tub frocks. In sheer fabrics, frilling is endorsed. Almost always there is a touch of white introduced in the piping of collar, cuffs and vestee.

Large and small checks and modified plaids are highly regarded as the gingham that will be popular for washable daytime dresses. The combination of white with red, blue, green, lavender, pink and maize is frequently emphasized.

For dressy wash frocks of clever smartness, batistes and dimities, of modernistic prints and imported floral voiles in unique designs, will exceed the fondest hopes of those seeking soft, "youthfulizing" delicacy in frocks.

We will he held breathless by the easy sweeping lines and flashing hues of the silk and cotton pongees, printed silks, piques and imported plain voiles. These will be worn the country over, wherever attractive lines and fresh newness is the word.

Black and white will be emphasized again this spring. Beige will be strong as usual, while chartreuse, Nile green, tomato red, goya red, royal blue, lake blue and mustard are colors which recur constantly in both silk and woolen sports dresses.

In silk dresses for sports wear, the two-piece model is favored, though the one-piece belted type is considered newer and smarter. Monotone flat crepes come in bright colors or grayed shades.

Skirts show all-around box or knife pleats in two-piece models. Front flares are seen mostly in the one-piece frocks. All-over embroidery in decorated effects is a change from prints, and the two-piece dress with embroidered jumper in small scattered pattern is likely to become the favored street dress.

Of the sports type, a two-piece costume with silk skirt and blouse in a lacy worsted is an interesting novelty, as a change from the knitted jumper which, however, continues to be strong.

The lace knit is important in sweaters and is exploited in models for sports wear of lace-lisle, soft angora and silk-and-wool mixtures.

White, with contrasting touches of vivid color, ranks as one of the really important silk fashions for summer. It applies especially to sleeveless sports dresses, giving them a vivacious note, which is considered lacking in all white. Plain white and pastel crepes, shantungs and piques are used for frocks and must be trimmed with touches of vivid colors.

The smartest frock shown at a recent display was of heavy cream white ribbed silk, trimmed with plain brown satin. Accompaniments were a chic hat, bag and shoes of brown to match. Rather unusual color is the element that makes the impressions.

This year will also bring back to the straw hat the best season in many years. Of course, we will see many felts. Ballbuntl is the favored straw. Bakou and sisol, as well as novelty weaves, will be worn, and dipping side lines are popular. The dipping line is attained by tucking the brim and is easily done with felt. Crochets adopt tucks, felt and cut brims for trimmings.

The time has come when every woman will divide her millinery wardrobe as she does her coats and frocks—into suitable types and fabrics to wear at different seasons. This summer will be wholly devoted to straw. Women who like felt for comfort and utility will want straw for their smart spring and summer frocks.

The collarless coats invite the fur or fabric scarfs. The scarf styles are so strong that a tremendous amount of thought is given to them. The neckline is more scarfs and bowknots.

There is evidence of this vogue in the hat and scarf ensemble; where the hat goes the scarf follows.

The evening scarf is shown in varied forms, such as fleus, tiny capelets, multi-colored detached panels and long beaded scarfs to match the gown. Long, narrow scarfs with shaped ends rank high for day wear also.

... president's pin.

Following the meeting cards and dainty refreshments were enjoyed. At this time Past Grand President Catherine E. Gloster, on behalf of No. 159, presented to Grand Trustee Irma Laird, who is also the Parlor's recording secretary, a gift in recognition of the sixteenth anniversary of her marriage to J. R. Laird.

Joint Installation.

Halfmoon Bay—Officers of Vista del Mar and Seaside No. 95 N.S.G.W. were installed at joint public ceremonies January 22. District Deputies Ida M. Mesquite and M. R. Mattei officiated, and Genevieve Deeny and Locke Nelson became the respective presidents. Supervising Deputy Clara A. Gairaud and members of Vendome (San Jose) Parlor, and delegations from Ano Nuevo No. 180 and Pebble Beach No. 230 N.S.G.W. (Pescadero) were in attendance. Refreshments were served at the conclusion of the ceremonies.

Surprise Banquet.

San Juan Bautista—A large crowd witnessed the initiation of two candidates by San Juan Bautista No. 179 February 4 at its meeting-place in the old mission. After the ceremonies a delicious banquet, prepared as a surprise by Miss Wilcox, Mrs. L. Ramponi, Mrs. L. Picetti and Miss Blanche Taix, was greatly enjoyed. The dining-room and the festive-board were beautifully decorated in Valentine favors.

County Charges Entertained.

Oroville—Butte County Past Presidents Association's more popular than cotton or other textile fibers. But in the case of all other household articles, the families reported greater use of cotton than any other textile fiber.

The size of the community seems to make some difference in the quantity of certain articles used, and where a choice between linen was possible a greater proportion of linen articles was used by those in towns or cities of 5,000 population or over than in rural communities. The same trend was also found in the case of income groups. With more money to spend, more household furnishings are bought, and the tendency becomes noticeable to buy more linen or silk or rayon than cotton. In the two lowest income groups the use of cotton increased as much as or more than the use of silk or linen.

"SPINNING DUST."

By Brainerd Beckwith; Wallace Heberd, Publisher, Santa Barbara; Price, $2.50.

This story, illustrated by George A. Grant, concerns Napoleon, "The Man of the Ages." At the height of his career as a conqueror of lands and peoples, he falls desperately in love with a girl, Marie Walewska, who is obsessed with a determination to save Poland, and the great general pledges his assistance, in exchange for her heart. But, a young officer, Henri d'Ornano, comes upon the scene at the commencement of the romance, and in time there is awakened within Marie the real love of her life, for Henri. So, thwarted in love, Napoleon's power as a warrior dwindles into nothingness.

Addressing Marie, when summoning her for the first meeting, alone, with the general, Marshal Duroc expostulates: "Destiny—what can I say? Destiny, Madame, is written in the flow of mighty rivers, in the great, everlasting silence of the hills, in the march of the stars; for there will be an end, sometime a definite end, to all creation. That is the highest, the sureness of Destiny. Yet there are little things close by that we can reach out to, small issues of our lives that we may struggle with—that we are meant to struggle with, to decide. There must be. It is only thus, I think, that God determines what shall be written in the book of us, what big thing of our lives shall have its infinitesimal place in the Destiny that is in the stars. Ah, my child, it is so easy to talk! I know no more about it than you. Circumstance? . . . It does not always seem fair, does it? . . . And yet there is a purpose in all life. You will one day see His purpose in this."—C.M.H.

Native Daughters of the Golden West

CHICO—ANNIE K. BIDWELL NO. 168 was hostess to Chico No. 21 N.S.G.W. at a most successful party February 14. An excellent program, including a short play, "Miss Hetty's Valentine," and a pantomime, "Cinderella Up to Date," was presented. Those participating in the program included the Misses Paul Jean Staton, Dorothy Smith, Mary Alice Coleman, Mildred Tunison, Katherine Oliver, Pearl Skelley, Icel Snader, Josephine Chambers, Alison McClard and Lois Coleman; Mms. Lois Heberle, Frances Srader and Lucy Girdler; Charles Melleno and Howard Tunnison.

Each Native Son was presented with a tiny post heart upon which was found the name of a Native Daughter, his partner at a basket luncheon for which each member of the hostess-Parlor prepared a well-filled dainty basket. The festal board was adorned with hearts, in recognition of Valentine Day, marigolds and pussywillow. During the feast guessing games were enjoyed and there were brief addresses. In charge of the affair was a committee composed of Myrtle Bernardo (chairman), Lucy Girdler, Katherine Oliver and Dorothy Smith. Members of No. 16 are busy sewing garments for the homeless babies and a box will be sent for Easter.

New Home Lauded.

Palo Alto—Grand Vice-president Esther R. Sullivan, as acting grand president, officially visited Palo Alto No. 229 January 21. Other visitors were Grand Secretary Sallie R. Thaler and delegations from Aloha (Oakland), Bonita (Redwood City), Menlo (Menlo Park), Castro (San Francisco) and El Monte (Mountain View) Parlor.

Miss Sullivan expressed regret that Grand President Dr. Louise C. Heilbron, because of an auto accident, was unable to be present. She gave a glowing account of the new Native Daughter Home, stressed the importance of the Memory Garden for Pioneer Women, urged the study of California history and told of the necessity for publicity.

After the presentation of gifts the guests were entertained at a delicious banquet served by Rena Trimble and committee. D.D.G.P. Mary Frances Mitchell has installed the Parlor's officers, with Pearl Bryon as president.

Delights With Songs.

Santa Ana—Officers of Santa Ana No. 235 were installed by D.D.G.P. Lois A. Johnson January 28, Eunice Fox becoming president. Delegations from Lugonia (San Bernardino), Los Angeles, Long Beach and Grace (Fullerton) Parlor witnessed the ceremonies. The Parlor presiderable interest is shown in basket weaves and bordered oxford cloths in black or blue, lined with prints and made with sleeveless print frocks.

Another good type is a loosely-woven woolen in tan, gray or medium blue, lined with plain pastel crepe and having a frock of the same color.

Tuxedo collars, intricate seaming and appliques are important, with considerable attention paid to back details.

Skirts are in wrap-around and yoke-top styles, with inverted front pleats. Checks and plaids are destined for the cotton ensembles and gingham frocks.

Characteristic of the wash dresses is the effective arrangement of the pleats in skirts, which range from a single box-pleat at the front to all-around pleating, or a cluster of side pleats at one or both sides of the skirt. Bias binding is an approved trimming, applied at the armholes of sleeveless dresses and in bands on long-sleeved models.

The revival of gingham brings with it a new interest in button trimming on tub frocks. In sheer fabrics, frilling is endorsed. Almost always there is a touch of white introduced in the piping of collar, cuffs and vestee.

Large and small checks and modified plaids are highly regarded as the gingham that will be popular for washable daytime dresses. The combination of white with red, blue, green, lavender, pink and maize is frequently emphasized.

For dressy wash frocks of clever smartness, batistes and dimities, of modernistic prints and imported floral patterns in unique designs will be grand officers, and District Deputy Johnson presented bouquets to the installed officers.

Inspiring talks were delivered by Grand Trustee Marvel Thomas, District Deputy Johnson, Bertha Hitt and D.D.G.P. Florence Dodson-Schoneman. District Deputy Johnson delighted the assemblage with several beautiful songs. At the meeting's conclusion an able committee, headed by Eva Price, served a hounteous dinner.

The work of the officers, gowned in lovely dresses of pastel shades, was splendidly done. Dainty refreshments were served at the conclusion of the meeting.

Squires Jr. (South San Francisco No. 157), Timothy O'Leary (Utopia No. 270), William James (California No. 1).

At the San Francisco Grand Parlor, if rumors already afloat are founded on facts, unusual interest will be displayed in the selection of officers, and there probably will be a large "flock" of candidates. There is no reason to suspicion, however, but that, following the usual course, Grand First Vice-president Charles L. Dodge will be advanced to Grand President, Grand Second Vice-president John T. Newell to Grand First Vice-president, and Grand Third Vice-president Dr. Frank I. Gonzalez to Grand Second Vice-president.

Grand President James A. Wilson, who will preside at San Francisco, will automatically become the Junior Past Grand President. The Grizzly Bear has communicated with all the probable candidates for Grand Parlor office, and from replies received passes along the following additional information as to candidates:

Grand Secretary—John T. Regan (South San Francisco No. 157), incumbent.

Grand Trustees (seven to be elected)—Irving D. Gibson (Sacramento No. 3), incumbent; Grand Marshal A. W. Garcelon (Arcata No. 20); Frank M. Lane (Fresno No. 25), incumbent; Charles A. Koenig (Golden Gate No. 29), incumbent; Ben Harrison (Arrowhead No. 110), incumbent; Harmon D. Skillin (Castro No. 232), incumbent.

Who the candidates for the generally-contested-for office of Grand Third Vice-president will be, what place will seek this year's Admission Day, September 9, celebration, and what invitations for the 1930 Grand Parlor will be extended, The Grizzly Bear knows not, at this writing.—C.M.H.

February 4 the newly-installed officers, as a part of their program to "put San Diego over big," initiated a class of ten candidates. Four of the initiates are musicians and, with one of the old-timers, have formed an orchestra, known as the "Golden Bear Syncopators." February 11 the entertainment committee, composed of younger members of the Parlor and headed by John Howley, sponsored a Valentine dance which proved one of the most successful social affairs given by the Parlor in some time. The "Syncopators" furnished the music.

In the near future another class of candidates will be ready for initiation, and Grand Trustee Ben Harrison has promised to bring down a team from Arrowhead No. 110 of San Bernardino to exemplify the ritual.

Campaigns for Members Under Way.

Fresno—Grand First Vice-president Charles L. Dodge officially visited Fresno No. 25 January 25. With President Lucius Powers Jr. presiding, the ritual was exemplified by the newly-installed officers. Large delegations were present from Selma No. 107 and Madera No. 130, and after various challenges had been issued and accepted it was agreed to hold a competitive membership campaign in which Fresno is matched against Selma and Madera. At the end of the campaign a joint banquet will be given by the loser or losers, as the case may be. If Fresno loses, Ed. Viator will direct the preparation of the repast, otherwise that honor will go to Joseph Barcroft of Madera.

Fresno also has a contest within its own ranks, between two teams headed by Marshal Max Pollard and Past President C. B. Harkness. The first class initiation of the membership campaign was held February 22. The initiates were entertained with a program arranged by M. E. Griffith and were honor guests at a banquet prepared by Ed. Viator.

Chairman M. E. Griffith of the good of the order has arranged a series of talks, chiefly on California history subjects, for the regular meetings. The first, delivered in two installments, was by Grand Trustee Frank M. Lane, whose subject was "The Explorations of John C. Fremont." February 15 L. H. Sciaroni spoke on "The Evolution of Civilization," and March 15 L. N. Barber is scheduled to talk on "The Life of Father Junipero Serra."

Prettiest Ever.

San Rafael—At the prettiest installation ceremonies ever witnessed here officers of Mount Tamalpais No. 64 and Marinita No. 198 N.D.G.W. were jointly installed February 18 by District Deputies J. S. Rosa Jr. and Ethel Stuhler, C. W. Russell and Bernice Flynn becoming the respective presidents. The girls were gowned in white and carried corsage bouquets, while the boys were attired in duck trousers and white shirts with scarlet ties, and had red carnation boutonnieres. More than 250 members were in attendance. President Flynn of Marinita was presented with a token of love and esteem by the members of that Parlor, and in turn presented Ada Fusel, retiring past president, with an emblematic pin. President Russell, on Mount Tamalpais' behalf, presented a diamond-studded emblematic ring to Charles Soldavini Jr., retiring past president.

A banquet was served at the conclusion of the ceremonies. City Attorney Jordan L. Martinelli was the toastmaster; he paid tribute to the old-timers who have gone before, for their loyalty to Mount Tamalpais in times of adversity, and congratulated the Parlor on its present prosperity. Other speakers were M. G. Soares, retiring president No. 64, who praised the tireless activities of the Parlor's "big five" committee; Bernice Flynn, Chas. Soldavini Jr., C. W. Russell and Irene Griffin. Dancing followed the banquet.

At the March 5 meeting of Mount Tamalpais a class of candidates will be initiated, the ceremonies to be followed by a social in honor of California's early-day mountain stage drivers,

Clarence E. Jarvis, Past Grand President

In Memoriam

EVELYN YOUNG.

To the Officers and Members of Hiawatha Parlor No. 140 Native Daughters of the Golden West—We, your committee appointed to draft resolutions of respect and sympathy to the memory of our beloved sister, Evelyn Young, submit the following:

God, in His infinite wisdom, has seen fit to enter the ranks of Hiawatha Parlor and call to His heavenly home our esteemed and beautiful sister, Evelyn Young.
We loved her most who knew her best. Like her Lord and Master, "She came not into this world to be administered unto, but to administer."

In the passing of our beloved Evelyn, our Parlor not only loses a valuable member, but our community has been deprived of the services of a friend always ready and willing to take part in affairs pertaining to the betterment of city, county and state. Her willing hands were ever ready when called upon for extra work in our Children's Relief Club.

As strays the odor of the fragrance of beautiful flowers after their exquisite bloom has departed, so with us will remain, in memory and association sweet, the influence of her who has passed into the perfect presence of His face.

To her family, who have lost a loving devoted wife and sister, we realize their loss is infinitely greater. Therefore, it be resolved, that we extend to them the sincere sympathy of the Parlor, and may the consoling peace and assurance of His presence be with them in their hour of sorrow, as it is with us, the members of Hiawatha Parlor
Native Daughters of the Golden West.

VIOLA DANIELS,

MAY H. SOUTHERN,

Committee.

Redding, January 21, 1929.

MARY J. SEGALE.

To the Officers and Members of Ruby Parlor No. 46
N.D.G.W.—We, your committee appointed to draft resolutions of regret upon the passing away of our beloved sister, Mary J. Segale, respectfully submit the following:

Resolved, that while we bow in reverent resignation to the will of the Almighty Father, we mourn what seems to be the untimely death of our beloved sister and extend to her loved ones our deepest sympathy.

"Not dead to those who loved her,

Not lost, but gone before,

She lives with us in memory.

And will for evermore."

Resolved, that a copy of these resolutions be spread upon our minutes, that a copy be sent to the bereaved family, and also to The Grizzly Bear Magazine for publication.

LAURA GILLERAN.

To the Officers and Members of San Jose Parlor No. 81
N.D.G.W.—We, your committee appointed to draft resolutions of respect to the memory of our loved sister, Laura Gilliran, submit the following:

Whereas, The angel of death has taken to her heavenly home our beloved sister, Laura Gilliran, of whom we can truly say, "None knew her but to love her, none named her but to praise. The sweet, beautiful memories she has left with us will linger for all time; the influence of her life remain ever before us as a light."

"Her sweet soul, loosed from fleshy bond,
Has entered on a regal road,
All earthly dreams beyond
Deity, the soul of flowers

With newborn qualities and powers."

Resolved, that San Jose Parlor has sustained the loss of a true and loyal member; and be it further resolved, that we extend to the bereaved family in this, their hour of sorrow, our sincere and heartfelt sympathy and commend them to the care of our Heavenly Father, who doeth all things well; be it further resolved, that a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family of our departed sister, a copy be spread upon the minutes of our Parlor, and a copy sent to The Grizzly Bear for publication.

the old-thruers. Special entertainment features will be presented, and as all the members of the committee in charge are of Latin origin no great stretch of the imagination is required to figure out the bill-of-fare. Plans are now being formulated for the observance of the Parlor's forty-fourth institution anniversary.

Progress Commended.

Sulsun—A most enjoyable meeting of Solano No. 39 was held February 5, the honor guest being Grand Third Vice-president Dr. Frank I. Gonzalez who, in the course of a very interesting address, highly commended the progress of the Parlor since its recent reorganization. The ritual was exemplified in an impressive manner by the Parlor team. Following the meeting a banquet was served, and while seated around the festive-board stories were told of Solano of the early days.

Charter Members To Be Guests.

Santa Rosa—Plans are being made by Santa Rosa No. 28 for the observance March 21 of its forty-fifth institution anniversary. Charter members, including the first recording secretary, Justice J. Emmet Seawell of the California Supreme Court, will be honor guests.

January 19, Miss Elizabeth Bruzetti and Lester Knutte (Mount Tamalpais No. 64), both of San Rafael, were united in marriage here, the ceremony being performed by Justice Marvin Vaughn (Santa Rosa No. 28). Betty Formschlag (Santa Rosa No. 217 N.D.G.W.) recently became the bride of Virgil Walker (Santa Rosa No. 28).

Good Suggestion Endorsed.

Placerville—Grand First Vice-president Chas. L. Dodge officially visited Placerville No. 9 February 12, and suggested that an effort be made to have all eligibles in El Dorado County enrolled in the Order. The suggestion was heartily endorsed, and action to that end was planned. Preceding the meeting a turkey supper was served. As guest of No. 9 the Grand First Vice-president was shown the numerous historic sites of the county.

Class Initiation.

Arcata—As the first of a series of joint activities planned by the Humboldt County Parlors, a class initiation, preceded by a procession, was held here February 12. The initiatory team was made up of the following: A. L. Early (Ferndale No. 93), senior past president; S. J. Damon (Ferndale No. 93), junior past president; Len Yocom (Arcata No. 20), president; H. E. Giacomini (Ferndale No. 93), first vice-president; N. J. Lund (Ferndale No. 93), second vice-president; Carl Fancher (Humboldt No. 14), third vice-president; W. H. Braghetti (Humboldt No. 14), marshal; Lee Diedrichsen (Ferndale No. 93), inside sentinel; A. M. Ring (Ferndale No. 93), outside sentinel.

Big Crowd Play Whist.

Ferndale—Ninety-five tables were in operation at a public whist party sponsored by Ferndale No. 93 the latter part of January for the benefit of the social fund. R. A. Grinsell was chairman of the committee.

February 18 the Parlor entertained the members of Onocenta No. 71 N.D.G.W. and their escorts, as well as the women friends of its own members, at a whist party which was concluded with the serving of refreshments. C. H. Rasmussen was chairman of the committee.

To the Officers and Members of Sebastopol Parlor No. 143 N.S.G.W.—We, your committee on resolution of respect to the memory of Nathan W. Harbine, report the following:

CALIFORNIA'S WONDERLAND

CITY AND COUNTY

EUROPE, THROUGH CALIFORNIA EYES

(EARL LEMOINE.)

"NINES, CITY OF BEAUTIFUL PROMENADES and spacious boulevards, was founded by the Phoenicians and, under the Romans, became a flourishing city of Gaul. It had the distinction of being on the aqueduct system and got its water from the River Eure, passing over the famous Pont Du Gard which spans the River Gard. The old French city was the birthplace of Emperor Antoninus. Two of the finest Roman memorials extant are here—the vast stone arena, which has suffered least from time and man, and the Graeco-Roman Temple, called Maison Carree, the most perfect specimen left to the world of a rectangular colonnaded temple of the Corinthian order. The St. Caster Cathedral, founded in the eleventh century, is filled with works of art. "From Nines we motored to the old Feudal town of Uzes, site of the chateau of the dukes of Uzès, the first White men in Congo Africa. The castle dates from the eleventh century, and there is an Episcopal palace of the seventeenth century. Leaving here we drove along the La Vistre and the Gulf of Lions to Narbonne, a famous old town during the historic times of the counts of Toulouse. In time we arrived at the fortified city of Carcassone and, believe me, the poet was right when he said: 'He who hath not seen fair Carcassone hath not seen the world.' It was known to the Phoenicians long before the Roman era. One French tradition claims it was founded by Karkas, eunich of Queen Esther. At different times it was in possession of the Romans, the Franks, the Visigoths and the Saracens. In 1209 it was united to the French kingdom for good, and under Louis IX was so strongly manned that no enemy ever attempted its capture.

"From the tower of the cathedral a fine view of the fort-city may be had. Think of a fort large enough to contain a big church, built by Pope Urban in 1209, and an outdoor theater seating 8,000; it has fifty-two immense towers and seven gates, and 4,200 people dwell in the houses inside. Across the River Ande is the city proper. If one is brave enough to cross the open bastion after dark he may see the ghosts of the Phoenicians, Romans, Visigoths, Franks, Saracens, Frenchmen, Spaniards and Englishmen who fell in the various attacks upon Carcassone. But anyhow, stay until moonlight and witness the superb sight of gleaming slate- and lead-covered towers and the forever charming contour of the immense walls.

"Traveling through Limoux, Alet and Quillan we came in sight of the Mediterranean and, continuing along its shores, we passed almost under the overhanging crags of the mighty Pyrenees. Arriving at the Spanish border, we proceeded from Port Bon to Barcelona, Spain's largest city, whence the boat departs for Mahon, upon the Isle of Minorca, where the beloved founder of California's missions, Junipero Serra, was born; the house of his birth still stands. This little island was also the birthplace of the eminent Spanish physician, Mathieu Orfila, who became a French citizen in 1818 and founded the museum bearing his name.

"Many pleasant days were spent in Barcelona, capital of Catalonia, which is very busy with commercial and industrial activities. The old portion of the city is picturesque, and the cathedral, the noblest Gothic edifice in Spain, treasures many remembrances of Columbus, discoverer of America. We toured the Rambla, one of the oldest streets, lined with shops and trees; visited the waterfront, and viewed the Columbus statue. A very weird sight was beheld when we came to the 'Templo de la Segrada Familia,' or the modern church by the Architect Godi; forty years have already been spent in its construction and it is only one-third finished. Near the city is the celebrated monastery of Montserrat, which appears like a fantastic castle perched high in Catalonian mountains.

"Traveling from here into the 'manana' portion of Spain, we followed the seacoast to Tarragona, whence we started inland, crossing the River Ebro at Mora. The valley of the Ebro is very fertile, hut the farms, with small brick-and-mud houses, are few. Just before entering Saragossa we passed through the village of Los Angeles, and also saw the ground dwellers of Jolan. For centuries these people have lived in rooms dug like cellars in the limestone and clay; the roofs are of sod, with pot-like vents for air and smoke. Journeying toward Madrid, the country grew a little greener. A panorama picture was taken of Allama de Aragon, a quaint village appearing to cling to the hillside.

"The city of Madrid was a surprise, as it is very modern and has little of the romantic Spanish touch, hut there are many interesting sights. The ancient Royal Palace, where Columbus met Ferdinand and Isabella, is exquisitely finished in priceless tile. In the Prado Museum may be seen the works of Velazquez, Murrillo and El Greco, also those of artists from many lands. A visit was paid to Toledo, which sits on the rocks above the Tagus, whose Alcantara bridge, built by the Saracens, spans its rushing waters. This city was the ancient capital of old Castile. Here we saw the famous steel workers who inlay their finished work with gold and silver wires. Interesting places here are the cathedral and Alcazar; the old house of El Greco, now a museum; the old home of Cervantes, who wrote the amazing story of 'Don Quixote,' and an old church built by Samuel Levi, a Jew, in the thirteenth century, the history of which sounds like fiction.

A trip was made to the ancient Moorish stronghold of Granada, at the foot of the high Sierra Mountains. It seemed as if a magician's wand had set us down in a far oriental village and taken our minds back four or five centuries. This was the last position that fell to Spain, and the siege was witnessed by Columbus. Before leaving Madrid we visited, among other places, the Plaza de Cibeles, Calle de Gorka, Paseo de la Castellana and Puerta del Sol. Three strange things were realized in our travels in Spain: the evening meal is served at 9 o'clock, the noon siesta lasts two hours, and we failed to find tamales, chili, etc., known in California as Spanish dishes but, indeed, Mexican.

Leaving Madrid we passed through old Castile, the birthplace of Velasquez, who followed Columbus in the exploration of the New World, and Medina del Campo, where Narvaez, who attempted to overthrow Cortez in 1520, was born. The towns are far between. After passing Palencia and Astudillo we came in sight of the immense Burgos Cathedral and, standing close by, is the castle of the Cid, the D'Artagnan of Spain who flourished in the thirteenth century. Nearing the French border, to the right is the Pyrenees, forming a charming background. Crossing the Ebro at Miranda, we visited Victoria, where Wellington fought a sanguinary battle in 1813; Bilbao, capital of Biscay, from where the bay of that name was viewed; the historic town of Roncesvalles, where Roland, in battle with the Basques in the campaign of Charlemagne, lost his life in the eighth century. Now in the very heart of the western Pyrenees, we went back to the coast and entered San Sebastian, Spain's fashionable watering place. A short drive brought us to Hendaye, whence we departed from Spain and once again entered France. We proceeded to Biarritz, a famous bathing resort, where we will rest a few days and, in next month's travelogue, proceed toward Paris via the valley of the Chateaux.

"THE DIVINE LADY."

Arriving in Los Angeles several days ago under special guard from Europe, a genuine Romney portrait of Lady Hamilton is now reposing on public exhibition in the galleries of the Carthay Circle Theater, where the public may view it during the run of "The Divine Lady," the two-million-dollar First National Vitaphone spectacle based on the famous love affairs of Lady Hamilton, one of the most-sought-after beauties of her time, and whose name will be linked in history forever with Admiral Lord Nelson, hero of the battles of Trafalgar and the Nile. The portrait is owned by the Tilt Galleries of Pasadena and is loaned by special permission to the Carthay Circle Theater, where it may be viewed by the public for the first time this side of the Atlantic Ocean.

When one gazes upon the exquisite rose petal cheeks and the lustrous eyes of Lady Hamilton, it is no trouble to realize why this beautiful girl, born as plain Emma Hart, would soon leave the scullery to become the famous Lady Hamilton who caused one of the greatest court scandals in Europe by reason of her now-famous love conquest of the great English naval hero who left his fame, fortune and wife to live with the woman of his heart.

The comedy attraction at the Carthay Circle Theater is "The Eligible Mr. Bangs," featuring Edward Everett Horton in a typical role. Carl Elinor's concert orchestra is heard playing a fantasy of selections by Rudolf Friml, America's well-known composer.

the great progress the troop, organized less than a year, has made under the leadership of the faithful scoutmaster, B. R. Northrup of Ramona Parlor. The troop is made up of four patrols—Raven, Tiger, Kangaroo and Wolf—each consisting of eight boys, with a patrol leader and an assistant. Officers of the troop, in addition to Northrup, are: Clifford Cowgill, assistant scoutmaster; Frank Van Order, junior assistant scoutmaster; Edward Seely, senior patrol leader. A more-likely appearing lot of boys could not possibly be gotten together than those who compose Ramona Troop; it was a pleasure to see them, to watch their movements, and to hear what they had to say.

The purpose of the "open" gathering was two-fold: to observe the nineteenth anniversary week of the Boy Scout movement in the United States, and to permit the grownups to see just how the troop has developed. Dwight Crittenden, chairman of Ramona Parlor's boy scout committee, presided and briefly outlined the history of the movement, which has accomplished so much good for the youth of the country. After maneuvers, etc., awards were made to the boys as follows:

Special service stripes—Robert Earl, 10 and 20 hours; Edgar Davis, 10 hours; Robert Brooks, 10 hours.

Merit badges—George Lamson, plumbing, scholarship, athletics; Robert Earl, foundry, carpentry, blacksmithing, handicraft; Fred Brauns, foundry, blacksmithing; Clifford Cowgill, chemistry.

Five-year service pin—Frank Van Order.

One year 100 percent bars—Don Russel, John Moore, Fred Brauns, Edward Seely, Allen Forest. Special award—Maurice Maehl, Richard Berg. Ninety-five percent service—Buddy Burke.

Three months or more service—Charles Allen, Robert Earl, Dever English, Chester English, Edgar Davis, Don Russel, Buddy Burke, Fred Brauns, John Moore, Edward Seely.

One month or more service—Richard Brown, Robert Behnke, Jack McGinty, Bob Robinson, Robert Brooks, Austin Casseberry, Phil Eckman, Robert Hughes, Anthony Dorsey, Howard Hunter, Daniel Russel.

At the conclusion of the presentations Grand Second Vice-president John T. Newell commended the troop and its sponsor, and Ramona Parlor served refreshments to the Boy Scouts and all the visitors.—C.M.H.

SCHOOL OF CITIZENSHIP.

A new school of citizenship and public administration, to open March 18, is announced by President R. B. von Klein Smid of the University of Southern California, who advises: "That the profession of public service may receive proper recognition, support and stimulus, the University of Southern California has now effected an administrative organization which correlates the curricula available for such study in its various schools, colleges and affiliated institutions. The university also plans to offer through its new school of citizenship and public administration additional courses designed to meet the needs revealed in the fields of civic interest and public affairs." All instruction will be under the direction of regularly appointed members of the faculty of Southern California.

The new unit will include three co-ordinated divisions: Full-time college students will follow the professional school curricula on the Trojan campus, working toward the degree of bachelor of science in public administration. Part-time and extra-hour students will attend classes held in the Los Angeles Civic Center. An annual summer short course in public administration, held on the S. C. campus, will include lectures by authorities active in public affairs and technical men recognized as experts in the science of government. An additional graduate year curriculum leading to the professional degree of master of science in public administration will be available to both full-time and part-time students.

OLD TIMERS' NIGHT.

Los Angeles Parlor No. 45 N.S.G.W. had a rousing good meeting February 21, when the officers, headed by President Louie Smith, initiated three candidates. Several of the old standbys, among them Henry Brodek, "Teddy Herzog, Al. Metz, D.D.G.P. Al. Cron and Paul Brunette, were in attendance and, along with I. H. Norton, one of the initiates, President Ralph Harbison of Ramona and "Billie" Newell, addressed the gathering. Chairman William Gilkey gave a splendid report on the recent activities of the history and landmarks committee, which is accomplishing a great deal; he was given a rising vote of thanks.

March 14 has been set aside by the Parlor as old-timers' night, and Chairman Walter Fisher of the social committee promises something out of the ordinary in the way of entertainment. March 21 will be initiation night. Plans are developing for a formal ball, to be given some time in April.

UNION STOCK YARDS HAS NEW RECORD.

Receipts of cattle in January of this year were the largest since the establishment of the Los Angeles Union Stock Yards, according to J. A. McNaughton, vice-president and general manager. The total was 20,658, as compared with the previous record of 19,982 cattle received in October 1924.

This new record was made in the face of reduced supplies and smaller receipts at other leading livestock markets. General Manager McNaughton accounts for the increase in Los Angeles being due to the continued growth in population and a resultant increased demand for beef. Receipts of hogs were 29,229, being the largest for that month with but two exceptions.

There has been a rapid increase in the number of livestock trucked into the stock yards from a wide territory. In December 3,514 cattle were brought into the market by motor truck, and in January the total was 6,510 head.

HOMELESS CHILDREN FUND BENEFITS.

Ramona Parlor No. 109 N.S.G.W. resolved itself into a kangaroo court January 25, with Judge L. H. Valentine presiding. Charley Bryant, Manuel Duarte and Frank Pursell were the "culprits" on trial for an offense against the Parlor's dignity, and the antics of the attorneys, as well as the testimony offered, produced much merriment. The jury found the defendants guilty, and then Judge Valentine levied fines against everyone in the room, including himself, thereby enriching the homeless children fund $19.46. Seven additional members became identified with Walter Slosson's "1929 Club" February 15, and among the speakers was Superior Judge Ruhen Schmidt. Several of the Parlor members gathered at the historic Avila adobe February 17 and put in a day at restoration work.

March 15, Ramona will initiate a class of candidates; at that time the last distribution of "1929 Club" pins will be made. March 22 will be old-timers' night; a fish dinner will be served at 6 p. m., to be followed by a program of entertainment; reservations must be made with Secretary John Scott not later than March 20. March 29, delegates to the San Francisco Grand Parlor will be nominated, the election to be held April 5.

ENTHUSIASTIC MEETING ANTICIPATED.

Grand President Dr. Louise C. Heilbron will officially visit Los Angeles Parlor No. 124 N.D.G.W. March 6, when a large class of candidates will be initiated. Supper at the Women's Athletic Club, to which all members of the Order are invited, will precede the meeting, and at the close of the gathering refreshments will be served. The hall will be specially decorated for the occasion, and a largely-attended and enthusiastic meeting is anticipated. Arrangements for the occasion are in charge of Past Grand President Grace S. Stoermer, Miss Grace J. Norton and Grand Trustee Marvel Thomas. March 13, the Parlor will have its monthly card party.

CONSTRUCTION PROGRESSING.

A fifth unit of the buildings that will comprise the new University of California at Los Angeles has been announced by the officials, who recently inspected the new campus and expressed themselves as highly pleased with the progress of construction work.

This unit, to be known as the education building, will cost $450,000. It will be three stories in height, and will conform in architectural design to the four large buildings now about completed. It will house the departments of music, fine arts, education, psychology and other branches of the teacher-training courses.

U. C. L. A. will be housed on the new campus when classes are resumed next fall. Transportation and other incidental problems are approaching solution, and the removal from the present campus will be made with a minimum of friction and delay.

No. 196 N.S.G.W. drew out a big crowd February 22, all the local Parlors being well represented. Officers, with Clarence Riley as president, have been installed by D.D.G.P. Al. Cron.

February 11 two candidates were initiated. Several visitors were in attendance, among them "Gahe" Ruiz of Cahuenga Parlor, and "Les" Schellbach of Glendale Parlor, who delivered "snappy" talks, both impressing on their hearers the necessity for "more co-operation" among the Los Angeles County Parlors.

JOINT INSTALLATION.

Glendale—A large crowd witnessed the joint public installation of officers of Verdugo Parlor No. 240 N.D.G.W. and Glendale Parlor No. 264 N.S.G.W. January 30. Grand Trustee Marvel Thomas and District Deputy Burrel Neighbourhoods officiated, and Hazel Bruschi-Hansen and Dr. Joseph Albert Kleiser became the respective presidents. The El Sereno hallroom was prettily decorated for the occasion, and the ceremonies were most interesting.

During the evening a program was presented, and there were several addresses, among the speakers being Grand Second Vice-president John T. Newell, Grand Trustee Thomas, President Hansen and Virgil Bruschi Jr., brother of Mrs. Hansen. The latter, on behalf of their father, Councilman Virgil Bruschi Sr. of San Diego City, who was also present, presented the newly-installed president of Verdugo Parlor with a remembrance. Visibly affected by the surprise, Mrs. Hansen soon recovered her composure and presided with grace and dignity the balance of the evening. Both Bruschi senior and junior are affiliated with San Diego Parlor No. 108 N.S.G.W.

GETTING READY FOR GRAND PRESIDENT.

Long Beach—A very successful plunkett dinner, attended by 175, was given by Long Beach Parlor No. 154 N.D.G.W. February 7. In charge were the three vice-presidents, with Lillian Lasater as chairman. Five hundred and bridge were played following the dinner.

Rudecinda Parlor No. 230 (San Pedro) will join forces with No. 154 March 7 to receive Grand President Dr. Louise C. Heilbron on the occasion of her official visit. A joint committee representing the two Parlors has been meeting for some time, formulating plans for the occasion. While in Long Beach, Dr. Heilbron will be the house-guest of Secretary Kate McFadyen of Long Beach Parlor.

PERSONAL PARAGRAPHS.

Ed. F. Cohn (Sacramento N.S.) of Sacramento City is here on a visit.

MEMORIAL GROVE DEDICATED

TO PIONEER AND NATIVE SON.

Sacramento—Valentine S. McClatchy (Pacific Parlor No. 10 N.S.G.W.) of San Francisco recently presented to this city of his birth, in honor of his deceased father, James McClatchy, Pioneer of 1849 and founder of the "Sacramento Bee," a park, now known as McClatchy Park.

In tribute to the Pioneer and to the donor of the parksite, the Native Sons and the Native Daughters of the Capital City observed Washington's Birthday, February 22, by dedicating a memorial grove within the park.

NOTED FRUIT TREE IN AMADOR.

Amador County has a tree which produces, according to the "Amador Ledger" of Jackson, oranges, grapefruit and lemons. This has been made possible by grafts, skillfully undertaken. The tree is an attraction of the Prevotoli Brothers' ranch.

GRIZZLY GROWLS

ing orders and suggestions. He is not expensive labor." And he's right, but how?

The Mexican certainly is an important factor in the production of crops. Crops of kids who must be fed, clothed and educated at the general public's expense. Crops of physically-unfit laborers who must be ministered unto and, in numerous instances, wholly supported by the taxpayers.

The Mexican will work under direction, and is certainly not expensive. Which accounts for those identical interests responsible for the Chink, the Jap and the Hindu situations in this state wanting to keep down the bars, so that orders-obeying and cheap Mexican peons can continue to come into California, to the detriment of the state and its citizen-laborers.

There is now, and always will be, sufficient White labor in California to supply all needs. The trouble is, those who want the undesirables object to paying a living wage and insist on supplying living-quarters that even the filthiest of animals would desert. Farmers and other large employers of labor who pay a decent wage, provide substantial food and sanitary living-quarters have no trouble in securing White citizen-laborers in sufficient numbers to meet their every requirement.

District Attorney Buron Fitts of Los Angeles County, in the final address to the jury which convicted a former district attorney of that county and others of conspiracy to bribe, made a splendid plea for law and justice. That address should be read, and thoroughly digested, by every citizen of the United States. Here is an excerpt:

"Let reverence for the law become the religion of our nation. And yet, ladies and gentlemen, we can have no reverence for the law if there are two standards. . . . If we are to have reverence for the law it shall be built up even handed by the courts of justice. Let every man and woman in the nation receive the same square deal from every one in public service. That is the only way that we can have reverence for the law as far as our efforts are concerned in the County of Los Angeles and in the nation at large."

Addressing the student-body of the Sonora union high-school at Sonora, Tuolumne County, recently, Florence Dodson-Schoneman, affiliated with Rudecinda Parlor No. 230 N.D.G.W. of Sau Pedro, said that "the colors of red, green and yellow were not," as generally supposed, "the colors of Spain, but were the official colors of the State of California, chosen by the Legislature in 1894."

The speaker stated, according to the "Union-Democrat" of Sonora, that "the colors were chosen by the state to represent the wine, the olive and the orange, respectively, and were not used in the dresses of the Spanish señoritas, which were made up of soft pastel shades. Pictures and stories showing continued festivities at the ranchos were all wrong. Festivals were held only on regular stated occasions."

PROTECTING FENCE POSTS.

It hardly pays to put fence posts into the ground without giving them some treatment to protect against decay. Perhaps the best material to use is the water-gas-tar-creosote, a by-product of the manufacture of gas and a cheap protection for wood that must come into contact with the soil. This material should be heated to about 190 degrees Fahrenheit, and the posts should be left in it for about three hours to a distance that is above the level of the ground when they are set out or driven. The careful farmer would do well to let the posts cool off in cold creosote over night. Then, after draining, they are ready to use. They will stand for fifteen or twenty years without injury if carefully treated.

THE HAND OF MAN-- A STORY OF THE FORESTS

Southard M. Modry

CHAPTER IV.

THE TREE PARTICULARLY PECULIAR to California, the sequoia sempervirens, or redwood, is the fastest growing of all the state's native trees. It grows in the fog belt, from Monterey Bay north to just across the Oregon State line and seldom extending more than thirty miles land from the coast.

From the lumber companies in this belt came the first practicable plan of reforestation, and they cannot be given too much credit for the great work they have instituted. It is true that any of these companies own their own land, but it is not only a question of economy and continued production which has influenced their great work, but a labor of love and foresight. The eyes of the lumber world have turned toward the Humboldt Redwood Reforestation Association and the lumber companies of the north coast which are assisting Nature in reproducing this species.

The redwood is the only tree in the state which will sprout from a stump in cut-over land and reproduce itself. Nature first showed the way, and it has been the policy of the lumbermen to assist her by replanting in cut-over areas not one, but twenty seedlings for every tree cut down.

The Union Lumber Company of Fort Bragg, Mendocino County, furnished the writer with the following information: This company has a nursery at Fort Bragg in which it raises one and half million seedlings a year. The work was started in 1922. It has found that the redwood is one of the fastest growing of the soft woods, if not the fastest. It grows almost as fast as eucalyptus. A tree will not be good for marketable timber until it reaches the age of seventy years.

About six hundred pounds of seed are gathered annually. The seed is obtained in various ways—from felled seed trees, by climbing trees, and by picking pods from the ground where squirrels knock them preparatory to storing them for the winter. In 1926 one hundred and twenty-five pounds of seed were shipped to New Zealand, and very often seed is shipped to or exchanged with other companies in other parts of the world, but the company has plenty of seed left for its work.

The seeds are planted in seed-beds in the nursery, and then transplanted. When three years old, the seedlings are set out. In 1926, one-half million seedlings were set out on a thousand acres. This is in addition to the small trees remaining after the cut over and the trunks which will sprout again. The trees are planted eight feet apart each way, approximately five hundred to the acre. They are given no cultivation. This plan is working wonderfully, and at least ninety-two percent of the trees are growing.

After cutting, the land is burned over solid, as it has been found that the burning does not injure the standing timber, and life still remains in the roots of the cut trees. This is not true of pines or other conifers.

If the lumbermen of other districts of the Pacific Slope would display the same public spirit, foresight and courage evidenced by the companies in the redwood belt, the future of forestry would be assured. The policy of these companies also includes adequate forest patrols of privately-maintained fire wardens, and an educational program for fire prevention.

Beyond a doubt, if some companies find it profitable to operate in this manner, through proper legislation all companies and individual operators should be compelled to do likewise. If, in the past few years, these companies have been so successful in their program, is there any reason why they alone should bear the burden? Surely, in all fairness to these selfsame companies, a legislative program should be adopted to make reforestation compulsory. State nurseries should be established to assist the small operators, and a plan can easily be worked out whereby all the lands, for the time being at least, in the redwood belt can again be stocked with the fast-growing redwood tree.

Though the redwood problem is fast reaching a solution and it appears for the present it is being adequately taken care of, we must pause to consider that in the pine and fir districts of California, which embrace almost all of the other marketable timber, the situation is just the opposite. This situation must be dealt with a great deal of tact and forbearance, and even though the actions of the lumbermen in the past entitle them to little or no consideration, I am certain today there has been a change in the viewpoint of the pine district operators and that within a short time a situation similar to, but perhaps not as far reaching, as that in the redwood belt may develop.

In the meantime, Mr. Citizen, when you visit the north coast "Help Save the Redwoods!" Don't throw cigarette butts out of a machine. If you build a campfire, put it out with water and cover it with earth, not with dry leaves. Remember, the redwoods are just as much your property as that of the landowner. They represent the natural resources of your state and the future of California. "Be careful with fire. Put every spark out. It pays!"

COMMUNITY ENDEAVOR STRESSED

(MARGARET M. BURKE.)

SANTA BARBARA—ESTABLISHING A new precedent in presenting the work and interests of Native Daughters of the Golden West as carried out in their own community, members of Reina del Mar Parlor No. 126 entertained Dr. Louise C. Heilbron, Grand President, March 5. Turning over written reports, which usually summarize the Grand President the year's activities, the parlor brought its guest in direct contact with the different fields of service which it sponsors and supports.

The first to greet Dr. Heilbron upon arrival was a little child, the adopted daughter of a Santa Barbara family in which she was placed in infancy through the efforts of the child-placement committee. As a gesture of appreciation on the part of her adopted family and of twenty-seven other children and their families whose happiness is the direct result of this committee's work, the little girl presented the Grand President with a beautiful bouquet of flowers. Mrs. H. A. Spreitz, chairman of the homeless children committee for Reina del Mar, accompanied the child.

Upon arrival at the attractive home of Mrs. Dardi, where she was entertained during her stay in Santa Barbara, Dr. Heilbron was informed of the spontaneous treat planned for her and the Native Daughters and the wives of Native Sons that afternoon at the Neighborhood House, the beautiful Spanish building which has been from the ashes of the old adobe that bordered the presidio of early Santa Barbara days furnish health and happiness to the underprivileged of the community.

Since the establishment of the Milk Fund by Reina del Mar in 1917, the Neighborhood House, directed by Mrs. Nancy Winch Emery, has handled the fund, directing the wise expenditure of the money to achieve the greatest good among the undernourished. Hearing of the prospective visit of the Grand President, Mrs. Emery expressed a long-felt desire on her part and the part of the boys and girls who have been beneficiaries of the fund to entertain the sponsors of the Milk Fund. A delightful program, touching in its sincerity and goodwill, was given by these children who, as a result of the start given them through proper nourishment, have become leaders in school and club work as well as living advertisements of the value of such a fund. Piano and vocal solos, group numbers by kindergartners and individual families, and a demonstration of fire making by the Boy Scout who holds the world record, characterized the program, which ended with a grand march past the guest of honor and the dropping of poppies at her feet.

Speaking feelingly of the practical interest which Reina del Mar has taken in social service work, Mrs. Emery thanked the Native Daughters for their sponsorship and continued support since the fund was taken over by the Community Chest. "I always think of the following quotation," she said, "as a fitting expression of the spirit and work of Reina del Mar Parlor:

"He who gives a child a treat
Makes joy bells ring in heaven's street;
He who gives a child a home
Builds palaces in kingdom come."

Milk Fund statistics were briefly summarized for the Grand President and showed that 106 families received milk during the past year. A total of 42,151 pints of milk were fed to 316 children and 32 old people, representing an expenditure of approximately $3200.

"The future lies
With those whose eyes
Are wide to the necessities—
And wider still
With fervent will
To all the possibilities."

Closing her brief talk with these words, Mrs.

Your Easter

(ESTHER CRONE.)

Were you there when my Lord was crucified,
Did you see them nail Him to the tree,
Did you see the sword that pierced His side,
And watch the blood flow out so free?
Did you stay by until darkness fell?
It covered earth and filled the sky.
The forces were turned a-loose from hell,
To watch the God-man faint and die.

When from the cross they took Him down
To lay the body in a new-made grave,
Did you feel the pricks of a thorny crown,
As 'twas flung aside from a brow so brave?
Did you see the soldiers set the seal
Which shut out hopes that did so lately burn,
Left you no comfort, no balm to heal,
You knew not whence to run or turn?

Were you there at break of that glorious day,
To bring sweet spice and weep alone?
Did you find the tomb empty wherein He lay,
Or glimpse the angel that rolled away the stone?
And, face to face, did you meet my Lord—
Was your burden dropped and laid aside?
Did you hear Him speak this loving chord:
"For you it was on Calvary's tree I died."

Emery invited the guests to visit the weaving and home-making wings of the building, where handicapped people are taught to make useful and beautiful articles, and where women and girls may learn to sew and cook.

As a climax to the warm human associations of the day, 115 members of the Parlor and their honored guests gathered for an Italian dinner prepared by Mrs. Joe Raffetto, Mrs. Mary Gandolfo, Miss Eva Raffetto, Parlor members, and Reno Beccio. The banquet hall had been prepared with minute attention to detail and expressed again, through its decorations, the interests of Reina del Mar. There were Spanish dancing figures, reminiscent of Old Spanish Days, GIRL SCOUTS, EAST SIDE SOCIAL CENTER.

Santa Barbara's annual fiesta in which the Native Daughters play an important part. There were tiny dolls in cradles, representing the child placement work. Reproductions of the covered wagon and of an old ox cart formed the centerpieces of the main table, suggesting the regard in which California Pioneers are held by the Parlor which entertains in their honor on Admission Day. A bottle of cream, sent with the compliments of the dairy which supplies the Milk Fund orders, was decorated with California poppies, and poppies also decorated the place cards.

Mrs. Irene Quinn, president of the Parlor, was toastmistress. Mrs. Daisy Prideaux, a member of Ursula Parlor No. 1 of Jackson, Amador County, sang a group of Italian folk songs, accompanied by Miss Anita Cochran. John Gbeno, a newcomer to Santa Barbara, delighted with selections from light Italian opera. M. Morro

CALIFORNIA HAPPENINGS OF FIFTY YEARS AGO

Thomas R. Jones

(COMPILED EXPRESSLY FOR THE GRIZZLY BEAR.)

DURING APRIL 1879 CALIFORNIA WAS in the throes of an intensive campaign over the question of adoption or rejection of the proposed New State Constitution. The "antis" had the most orators, held the most meetings and received the most votes in all the straw balloting. Spellbinders like Henry Edgerton, Creed Haymond and Tom Fitch were addressing enthusiastic meetings nightly throughout the state, and with 146 newspapers supporting and but 46 opposed to it, the opinion was that the new constitution would be rejected by a very large majority of the voters.

Dennis Kearney returned to San Francisco from his stumping tour for the new constitution, and while walking along Market street April 13 was met by Charles Davis, who demanded the return of $2,000 given the Workingmen's Party with the understanding its leaders would oppose the new constitution. Being waived aside, Davis sailed into Kearney and gave him such a severe beating that he became less militant, and delivered but few sand-lot addresses during the remainder of the month.

April showers, with thunder, lightning and hail, were of frequent occurrence during the month, and gave assurance of good crops and business activity throughout the state. The month's rainfall was 2.56 inches, making the total for the season 15.01 inches.

Henry C. Bennett, prominent early-day journalist, died in San Francisco of what was diagnosed as cholera-morbus, from which he had suffered, periodically, for two years. An autopsy showed there was an intestinal abscess, supposedly caused by a grape-seed. In reality, the unfortunate man died of appendicitis, then unknown to the medicos, and his life could probably have been saved by a simple operation.

All Fool's Day, April 1, showed that all the practical jokers had not passed away. One, at Willows, Glenn County, hired a hall in the front of which he placed a placard announcing that two prominent lawyers would discuss the new constitution that evening and that admission was free. A couple of hundred citizens patiently waited for some time for the argument to begin, and then realized they had been fooled.

George Wells, private secretary to James C. Flood, the "bonanza king" of San Francisco, was married in March. Returning this month from the honeymoon, his employer informed him a near-relative was coming to San Francisco to reside and for him to purchase a house in a desirable residential section and to have it suitably furnished; in fact, to carry out the commission as though he was doing it for himself. Wells expended $68,000, and when the bill was presented Flood he drew a check for the amount and presented the home to Wells as a wedding present.

The Anaheim, Orange County, "Gazette" complained of the county board of supervisors. Two of the members, it said, were native Californians of Spanish descent unable to speak English while the third member, who had to do all the English talking, was so illiterate he spelled the word "county" with two "os" and no "u"—"coonty."

MONITORS DO EXCELLENT EXECUTION.

James O'Neill, the actor, portraying the role of "The Savior" in the "Passion Play," was arrested in San Francisco and, under an old ordinance prohibiting sacrilegious plays, fined $50.

A Chinese theater opened at Sacramento April 1 with a troupe of actors imported from China. A drama, with night and day performances, was to run four weeks.

Culp & Co. in San Felipe Valley, San Benito County, owners of a large factory making cigars from California-grown tobacco, came afool of the Federal Government for violation of the revenue laws. Tobacco and cigars valued at $80,000 were seized. The company, it was claimed, had for several years been defrauding the government.

The San Francisco stock market opened in a desultory way April 1, with Ophir at $20 and Sierra Nevada at $42, etc. Rumored developments during the month sent Ophir to $37 and Sierra Nevada to $52, and infused new life in a stagnant market.

Coinage at the United States Mint in San Francisco during April totaled $3,320,000, all in Pacific Coast gold and silver.

Gabriel Salori, a miner, picked up April 1 near Shasta, Shasta County, a boulder which yielded $2,000 in gold.

The Excelsior hydraulic mine at Smartsville Yuba County, installed an electric-light system and April 1 began operating its monitors night and day. April 11 an eight-ton blast of black powder was set off, and it did excellent execution, cracking the bank for acres in extent.

The raising of short horn, or Durham, cattle in California had assumed proportions large enough to warrant the formation of a Short Horn Breeders' Association, which met at San Jose, Santa Clara County, April 8.

Downey, Los Angeles County, was swept by a disastrous fire April 14, a score of business buildings being destroyed with heavy loss.

Fitzgerald Brothers' large livery stable at Gilroy, Santa Clara County, burned April 1. Several other buildings and fifteen horses were also consumed by the flames, causing a $20,000 loss.

A store at Volcano, Amador County, caught fire and two miners rushed in to assist in saving the property. They devoted their attention, first to carrying a pile of grindstones about six feet high, standing against the front wall of the building, into the middle of the street.

The famous ordinance of San Francisco which required the cutting off of the queue of every Chinaman sent to the city and county jail was this month declared unconstitutional by the California Supreme Court as being special legislation. The queue has now almost entirely disappeared by decision of the Chinese themselves.

Wm. H. Wheeler started at Watsonville, Santa Cruz County, publication of what he stated was to be a "live" paper. It proved so much so that April 15, a score of young men rotten-egged him. Wheeler drew a pistol, but a citizen disarmed him and he sought safety in flight. Hundreds of people gathered to witness the racket but, apparently, Wheeler had not a friend among the crowd.

Subsequently, Kusel, editor of the Watsonville "Recorder," published a poem casting reflection on the town, and received a horsewhipping.

FOOTRACE FINANCIALLY DISASTROUS.

The postoffice at Benicia, Solano County, was burglarized April 12. E. A. McDonel Jr., son of the postmaster, noticing that the burglar's track pointed Vallejo-ward, got a horse and a rifle and started in pursuit. Overtaking the culprit, he forced him to walk back to Benicia, where a search revealed he had looted the office of $300 in postage stamps.

A gang of 200 laborers employed at San Francisco in constructing a seawall, struck for an increase in pay from $1.50 to $2 a day. The strike

Nearly the whole population of Los Angeles City turned out April 6 to witness a footrace between Davis and Thompson. The sprinters blided about thirty yards from the goal, but Davis was declared the winner although Thompson claimed a foul.

A footrace at Folsom, Sacramento County, April 14 was financially disastrous to the town's citizens, who bet their money on an import, Lamrock. He was defeated by a local Negro, named Burns, who led from start to finish.

Josiah Bacon of Boston, Massachusetts, in San Francisco on business, was found murdered in the Baldwin hotel. Several days later Dr. Chalfant, a dentist, confessed killing him in a business quarrel.

Paul Rieger, San Francisco merchant, went on a fishing trip to Paper Creek, Marin County. April 25 he was found murdered, and robbed of all of his valuables.

W. F. Casselbohm, first assistant treasurer of San Francisco, committed suicide April 28. He left a note stating he had lost $20,000 of his own and $25,000 of the city's money in unfortunate mining-stock ventures. His act caused a great sensation, as he was a close friend of Alex. Austin who, a few months before, ended his life for the same reason.

THE BIG CITY THAT KNOWS HOW

MORE'N HUNDRED NEW NATIVES

ONE HUNDRED AND NINETEEN CANDIDATES, forming the Grand President James A. Wilson class, presented themselves for initiation into the Order of Native Sons of the Golden West March 23. The candidates came from all the San Francisco Parlors which, through a joint committee, arranged the event. The ritual was splendidly exemplified by the following: President, John Reid (South San Francisco No. 157); senior past president, Joseph Tracy (Twin Peaks No. 214); junior past president, James Karuza (Twin Peaks No. 214); first vice-president, Armen Nielkain (California No. 1); second vice-president, Lloyd J. Doering (South San Francisco No. 157); third vice-president, W. P. Conniff (Pacific No. 10); marshal, T. J. O'Rourke (South San Francisco No. 157); inside sentinel, Clarence Howard (Bret Harte No. 260); organist, C. George Cuthbertson (Castro No. 232).

Following the ceremonies inspiring addresses were delivered by Justice Emmet Seawell (Santa Rosa No. 28) of the California Supreme Court and Grand President Wilson. At the conclusion of his remarks the latter awarded the prizes: First, largest numerical gain, South San Francisco Parlor No. 157, twenty-four candidates. This makes the Parlor the largest in San Francisco and second to Ramona Parlor No. 109 (Los Angeles) in the state. Second, largest percentage gain, Bret Harte Parlor No. 260, nine candidates, 13.23 percent.

All the Parlors were classified according to membership, and a prize, as follows, was awarded the Parlor in each class making the largest numerical gain: Class 1, Castro No. 232, sixteen candidates; class 2, Guadalupe No. 231, fourteen candidates; class 3, Sequoia No. 160, five candidates; class 4, Balboa No. 234, eight candidates.

STATE FLAG IN INAUGURAL PARADE.

During their stay in San Francisco, the young Australian League boys were presented by the Order of Native Sons of the Golden West, through Grand President James A. Wilson, with a beautiful California State (Bear) Flag. The presentation was made at the Galileo high school, in the presence of some 2,500 students, by Past Grand President Lewis F. Byington, who requested that, wherever possible, the flag be displayed in different parts of this country and the world at large to be visited by the boys.

Dated at Washington, D. C., March 4, the following telegram was received by Byington from Major J. J. Simmons, Commander Young Australian League: "Your treasured California Flag proudly carried by our boys from Congress Library round boulevard of Capitol preceding presidential parade. Deemed it proud privilege to carry your emblem at America's great ceremony. Kindly notify those associated with the flag presentation."

INTERESTING SCRAPBOOK.

La Estrella Parlor No. 89 N.D.G.W. was officially visited by Grand President Dr. Louise C. Heilbron February 25. Other visitors included Founder Lily O. Reichling-Dyer, Past Grand President May C. Boldemann, Grand Secretary Sallie R. Thaler, Grand Trustee Evelyn I. Carlson, Grand Outside Sentinel Millie Rock and District Deputy Helen Mann.

Grand President Heilbron commended the officers for their splendid ritual rendition and talked most interestingly on the Order's projects. Founder Dyer spoke of the pioneers and the state's landmarks. An interesting incident was the presentation of a scrapbook, compiled and decorated by Minnie K. Noyes, a charter member of La Estrella, containing photos and clippings of affairs given by the Parlor since its institution thirty-two years ago. Among the many presentations made by the Parlor was a chain of crystal beads to Dr. Heilbron. Dainty refreshments were served.

ARBOR DAY FITTINGLY OBSERVED.

Carrying out an annual custom, Keith Parlor No. 137 N.D.G.W. celebrated Arbor Day by planting March 7 marigold, poppy and larkspur seeds upon the eastern mound of Twin Peaks. The day was in charge of Helen Mann, who was assisted by President Louise Koch, Bertha Mauser and other members of the Parlor.

Rain did not dampen the enthusiasm of the planters and the work of scattering seeds went merrily on. In the evening, at a downtown cafe, the planters recounted events of the day.

TO AID THE CHILDREN.

After listening to an address by Past Grand President Mae Himes Noonan in which she told how much there is to be done for the children, Twin Peaks Parlor No. 185 N.D.G.W. has added another to its long list of committees, that of child welfare. The first visit was made to a San Francisco hospital, and booklets, valentines and candy were given the children. The homeless sewing club had a very successful meeting February 20.

GRIZZLY BEAR CLUB ELECTS.

At the annual meeting of the Grizzly Bear Club, Henry G. W. Dinkelspiel was re-elected president for the thirty-fifth successive year. Superior Judge James G. Conlan was re-elected vice-president, Edward Tietjen secretary and Edward J. Barton treasurer, each for the twentieth year.

The club will keep open house in its spacious clubrooms in Native Son Building during the N.S.G.W. Grand Parlor which will be held in San Francisco next month.

TO TOUR PLACER COUNTY.

A large delegation from Niantic Parlor No. 105 N.S.G.W. will leave San Francisco Saturday afternoon, April 27, to tour Placer County and participate in the dedication of Wells Fargo & Co. office in Auburn the following day. The Wells Fargo Bank of San Francisco has presented a bronze plaque to Auburn Parlor No. 59.

The delegation will leave San Francisco by automobile at 3 o'clock, remain over night at Sacramento, and continue the trip to Auburn early the next morning. It is expected the ceremonies will be over in ample time to allow the San Francisco visitors to return to the Bay region Sunday night.

CALIFORNIA'S WONDERLAND

CITY AND COUNTY

EUROPE, THROUGH CALIFORNIA EYES

(EARL LEMOINE.)

"BARRITZ, WITH ITS LURE FOR ALL tourists, is surely a city for rest and pleasure. A short distance away, at the mouth of the River Nive, is Bayonne, famous as a camp during Napoleon's campaigns in Spain. Both these cities are on the Bay of Biscay, and at this point the water is very quiet and smooth. Leaving the Pyrennes behind, we traveled toward Bordeaux, coming first to Dax, and then Laluque, Rion, Morceaux, Yehoux, and La Mothe on the little Bay of Arcachon. The ride was continuously through a garden of fruits and vines. Crossing the mighty Gironne, we passed through Cadillac, whence came the old Vignes family of Southern California.

"In time we came to Bordeaux, personally known to many of the American soldiers. It is the largest wine-shipping port of the globe and the quaintest we visited in Europe. Being some distance from the war centers of the last 300 years, it has not suffered the loss of its ancient buildings and settings. Many interesting pink brick houses, of peculiar and original design, are to be seen, and it has a majestic waterfront and a wonderful sweep of numerous quays. Nearby is the great cloistered church with ancient ahhey portal of Mosaic. Leaving Bordeaux and traveling through the Dordogne the sight of diversified farming was enjoyed. Quercy and Pen-gord are on the very edge of the hills. Near Sarlet is the valley of the Dordogne, lined with colored rocky cliffs. On the frowning heights above Domme are the castles of Feyrac, Castelnau and Beynac. At Eyzies, above the Vezere, are caves with painted pictures 12,000 years old and prehistoric remains of every description.

"Limoges was our next point of interest and, as usual in the southwest of France, many fine streams were crossed. Several days were spent in Limoges, across from the beautiful chestnut-shaded park of Jourdan, named for Napoleon's trusted marshal. It is a city of parks and of unequalled china. The River Vienne flows lazily past this interesting city, which has a museum of the rarest porcelain and china in the world, some dating back to 1500 B. C. As a town, it flourished under the Romans during the life of Christ. Many fine chateaux, hundreds of years old, are to be seen. Traveling along, we passed through Verneuil, Chahanaïs and Rochefoucauld, then arrived at Anjouleue, ancient seat of the counts of Anjou. Volumes could be penned on the stories of romance centering in this ages-old city. But we must move along, so on through Charente, Cognac, Santes, Tallebourg and, finally, to Rochefort, where we sojourned for a few days.

"Rochefort was the center of the first Huguenot, or Protestant, movement which witnessed the stormiest religious contest in all France. It has an interesting history associated with the founding and settlement of Louisiana and New Orleans, for it was here the D'Ibervilles and the Bienvilles made preparations and secured settlers for their New World projects. At the confluence of the Rivers Boutonne and Charente, it is a city of commerce. A short distance from the mainland is the Isle d'Aix, whence Napoleon embarked for his last home, St. Helena.

"Because of the productiveness and beauty of this section it has for centuries been visited and favored by France's great men. The little town of Tounay-Bontonne, a few miles inland, had a very romantic charm for the writer, because there is the Chateau St. Lauret LeMoine de Serigny, standing in a 7,000-acre forest through which the River Bontonne runs. The first Marquise LeMoine and his wife are buried in a crypt of the little chapel. The foundations of the chateau were laid in 1472. We were most graciously received and heard with much interest the thrilling story of the chateau. We drove over to La Rochelle, Protestant headquarters centuries ago, but today a beach city of numerous attractions. The great towered forts, built more than 600 years ago, still stand. This place was a favorite of Henry IV, who built a marvelous City Hall and parks. A great colored porcelain statue of him surmounts the tower of the court yard.

"Leaving Rochefort and traveling past wonderful farms, we passed through Surgeres and the quaint old town of Niort to Poitiers, on the River Clam. Here it was Diane de Poitiers, charming woman of the courts, was born in 1499; she was the queen of Henry II, over whom she exercised a royal power. This city was the center of many ancient actions during the days of the Gauls. Here Charles Martel, grandfather of Charlemagne, gave the fatal blow to the Saracens from Spain in 732 A. D. in the battle which forever crushed the Mohammedan power in western Europe. From here we proceeded to Tours, where the chateaux of Touraine and La Loire Valleys were visited.

"This interesting city was named Altonas by the Gauls before Christ, but the Romans renamed it Caesardunum; from the fourth century it was known as Turonum, hence the modern name Tours. St. Martin, famous Gallic apostle, lived here, and here Gregory wrote the first history of France. It was the headquarters of the American army during the late war. Its cathedral is, next to Chartres and Bourges, unsurpassed for richness of stained glass and marvelous flamboyant Gothic towers, dating back to the thirteenth century. The City Hall is a gorgeous edifice of stone in late Renaissance style. The place abounds in museums, ancient hotels, parks and mansions dating back hundreds of years. At the Place Grand Marche stands the carrara marble fountain De Beanne, by Bastien in 1510; it is in the form of a pyramid, with a black volcanic stone basin bearing the arms of De Beanne, Lord Semblancey, Louis XII and Anne de Bretagne. Near by is the Chateau du Plessis, built by Louis XI in 1450; here Henry III and Henry IV met and joined forces against the Ligue. The place now belongs to Dr. Edmond Channier, great expert in vaccine. Many joyful hours were spent in Tours by Benjamin Franklin, John Morris and Thomas Jefferson of Revolutionary fame as they journeyed to the castle of Chaumont. To France, this section has always been known as the garden of the kings, as the finest chateaux and estates known to man are still to be seen in all their ancient glory.

"Next month we will visit a few of these masterpieces, as we journey on to Paris."

CO-OPERATION URGED.

Grand President Dr. Louise C. Heilbron paid an official visit to Los Angeles Parlor No. 124 N.D.G.W. March 6, and there was a large outpouring of members of the Order to greet her, among them being Past Grand President Grace S. Stoerner, Grand Trustee Marvel Thomas, District Deputy Florence Dodson-Schoneman, and representatives of Californiana, Long Beach, Rudinda, Santa Ana, Santa Monica Bay, Verdugo, Lugonia, Yosemite and Buena Vista Parlors. Supper at the Women's Athletic Club, with Grace J. Norton, social hostess of the Parlor, in charge, preceded the formal meeting.

At the meeting-place, the officers of No. 124 appeared gowned in white and carrying arm bouquets of sweetpeas in pastel shades. President Flora Holy presided, and nineteen candidates were received into the fold. Among the reports presented was one by Annie L. Adair, secretary of the local homeless children committee, in the course of which she stated $3,000 had been sent to the central committee.

Grand President Heilbron, when introduced by President Holy, paid high tribute to the Parlor, its officers and active workers. She dwelt at length on the Order's accomplishments in the past and its future activities, and urged the necessity for co-operation in all things sponsored by the Order. Following Dr. Heilbron's instructive and enlightening address, fine talks were made by Past Grand President Stoerner, District Deputy Schoneman and Grand Trustee Thomas. On behalf of the Parlor, President Holy presented the Grand President with a gift of silver, and numerous other presentations were made.

Los Angeles will have a theater benefit for the Parlor's Loyalty Pledge fund at the President, April 15, when Leo Carrillo will appear in "The Bad Man." Grand Trustee Marvel Thomas has this in charge, and all Natives and their friends are invited to co-operate. Other features on the Parlor's April program include: 3rd, "pot luck" dinner at 6:30, followed by meeting; 10th, card party, Mrs. Douglas chairman; 24th, sport dance.

BENEFIT FOR UNFORTUNATE.

One of the largest attended and most enthusiastic meetings of Los Angeles Parlor No. 45 N.S.G.W. in some time was the old-timers' night of March 14. Representatives of all surrounding Parlors came to see and hear the fun—and were not disappointed. Among those who participated in the evening's festivities were the following, all past presidents of No. 45: Tom Golding, who presided, Herbert Holtz, Ray Lemoine, Joe Lyon, Henry Brodek, John McGonigle, Earl Lemoine, Al Cron, Ronald Ross, Dick Fryer, Howard Bell, Howard Bentley and Grand Second

HALL OF FAME

(SENATOR JAMES D. PHELAN.)

A funeral dirge we daily hear,
"The Passing of a Pioneer,"
Brave man of other days, alone,
Above his grave there is no stone!
Do Californians jubilate
Only themselves to decorate?
The Nation asks beneath the dome
That Pioneers may find a home;
And led by Love, the master's art
A shade of glory might impart.
State founders they, their high emprise
Horizon-hungry, reached the skies!
Shall recreant State and scion both,
Dishonor them, nor keep their oath?
Shall mere effusion now suffice
For men who gave to us their life?
What is it stumbling souls lack
That Pioneers receive a "whack?"
Behold a peerless orator—
Who won by words the Civil War,
And trekked the plains in a palace car,
Bepedestaled in corridor!
Spare California's great and good
A monument "Ingratitude!"
Nor idly stamp on History's page
A spurned and wasted heritage!

(The above came to The Grizzly Bear from Senator James D. Phelan of San Francisco, affiliated with Pacific Parlor No. 10 N.S.G.W., with this notation: "California should so provide that at least one of the two figures to be placed in the National Hall of Fame at Washington, D. C., will be a Pioneer, or represent the pioneer period, the most historic era in the state's history. Marshall, Sutter, Fremont, Sloat, Stockton, Bidwell, Broderick, Coleman, Winn, Burnett, Lick and others have been suggested, with Fremont and Marshall in the lead." The State Legislature selected as California's representatives in the National Hall of Fame, Junipero Serra and Thomas Starr King. Senator Phelan believes a "mistake was made by the Legislature in not honoring a Pioneer in selecting the representatives." It is "Never too late to mend," he says.—Editor.)

SPRING SHOPPING! THE VERY WORDS have a magic about them that stirs the heart of every woman. The combination of spring and of shopping is almost irresistible, and it is at this season that our enthusiasm is most likely to lead us astray in the bewildering array that the shops present. In the outstanding features of the spring styles, first of all come the prints, gay in designs and colors. The printed silk suits are casual in character and loosely fitted, with soft scarfs and easy lines. Red and black continues to be one of the smartest of all color combinations. The bodice and part of the coat lining are in the red print, while the long coat and skirt are in the black. The use of reversed prints in both dresses and suits is a continuation of one of the great successes of last season.

Sports materials and printed sheer silks for formal afternoon and evening wear are the principal features of the new showings. Vivid stripes and modernistic patterns are sponsored for the beach, and small allover designs in rich colors are used for the little jackets and sets. Sometimes a heavy silk basket weave is used for the latter, to excellent effect.

Polkadots are also liked, and these are usually printed on heavy flat crepe. Many wash silks and easily laundered novelties like shirting and jacquards are also included in the collections of sports silk. Striped shirtings are brought forward for sleeveless dresses and tend toward bold effects relieved by white.

Keeping in step with the "white with colors," somewhat more exclusive are series of jacquard silks which have been brought out in an effort to find a smart successor for that old-time favorite, Chinese damask. Little allover patterns, woven in self-color, are featured and sometimes sports motifs such as tennis racquets or golf bags are utilized for these.

A big "white" season is expected this summer, and the pastel tints in the new color lists have taken on a very definite "opaque" character, so that their effect is much brighter than the familiar delicate shades.

Cottons have arrived and will be with us all summer. They are so carefully styled as to vie with dresses developed in silks. Cottons, especially piques, receive their most general expression in sleeveless frocks, alone, or worn with the matching jackets of three-quarters or seven-eighths lengths. Occasional flares are introduced in the skirts, but as a rule the skirt is pleated at front or sides.

Yellow is the outstanding color in all fabrics, in addition to pale green, pale blue and white. Pique in yellow, green and white is a favorite for the sleeveless dresses.

Often a velveteen jacket, exactly matching the color of the cotton frock, completes the costume, otherwise it emphasizes some little detail of the dress. Chartreuse, or almond green, is one of the smartest velveteen jackets to be worn with the chic cotton frock.

Gingham is another cotton to be used this season. Calico coats are stitched in all-over fashion, a detail which is also carried out in matching hats, handbags and even footwear.

The gingham handbag is receiving quite a response, as are the various plain, embroidered, and printed linens.

Where popularity seems to be running hand in hand with cottons, some of the most effective beach and sports fashion are of heavy Irish or sheer handkerchief linen.

Color is as important in a hat as in a frock, and every hat should match either the frock or the coat. A hat should be the keynote of a costume. In fact, a hat should be chosen not merely as a smart accessory, but even more as a flattering frame for the face. It may make or ruin all the rest.

It is better for the woman who must economize to buy a simple, inexpensive frock and an expensive hat, for the average cheap hat looks it and after a few wearings it loses its shape and its trimness.

Every season there is a new trend in the mode. There are changes in the size of the brims, the crowns are higher or lower, or the hats are placed a trifle differently upon the head, and these details count toward making the chic of the hat. Each season one must learn all over again how to wear the latest model. A hat must be handled with care at all times.

Often a woman treats a hat like a stepchild. She pulls it on and off by the brim instead of by the crown, puts powder-covered fingers all over it, throws it upon a bed or a chair, or into a box or closet with other things piled upon it. A hat should be brushed and carefully placed upon its stand or placed into a drawer, for a hat is one of the most fragile articles of an entire wardrobe.

Shoes are now being made with felt lining, apparently with the view of supplying women with a means of discarding hose altogether. Yet the fact that the lining cannot be changed and washed as easily as socks, would seem to indicate that that type of shoe will gain popular favor with only a certain few.

Preparations for the skin are designed to simulate both sun-tan and sun-burn. That these preparations are to be applied to legs as well as arms and faces is a matter of common knowledge. Thus one may expect a vogue of painted or stained legs. Whether in city or country or at the seaside, the logical result is bare legs with socks.

Socks will be one of the chief items for active sports. In no previous season has there been so many styles in socks to choose from, to say nothing of the charming colors that either match or contrast with the leading sports shades.

NATION'S FIRST LADY REMEMBERED BY N.D.

The Order of Native Daughters of the Golden West saw to it that, when Herbert Hoover was inaugurated as President of the United States, his wife, Mrs. Lou Henry Hoover, was not overlooked. Dr. Louise C. Heilbron of Sacramento, Grand President of the Order, forwarded to her a specially-designed California souvenir, illustrated here, accompanied by the following letter:

"March 2, 1929.

"Mrs. Herbert Hoover,

"White House,

"Washington, D. C.

"Dear Mrs. Hoover:

"It is a great pleasure and honor to extend to you the Greetings of fifteen thousand Native California Women, and trust that as you are a Native of our Glorious State of California you may find it possible to be linked with our Fraternity, the Native Daughters of the Golden West, as one of its members.

"Our next Grand Parlor will convene in Santa Cruz this coming June—the third week—and should you be in California during that time we would be very happy to initiate you into our Fraternity. We are banded together for love of Home—devotion to our Flag—veneration to our Pioneers—and with an abiding faith in the existence of God.

"Sincerely trust that the little token of esteem sent to you from our Fraternity may be appreciated.

"May your reign as First Lady of the Land—Our President's Wife—be the happiest and most worthwhile of your whole life.

"With every good wish, believe me,

"Most Fraternally Yours,

"LOUISE C. HEILBRON,

"Grand President,

"Native Daughters

"Golden West."

The flags of the souvenir are of the best silk, with metal spears. The bear is of hand-carved, poplar wood. Attached to the pedestal is a gold plate designed after the seal of the nation, and the following inscription: "Presented to Lou Henry Hoover by the Native Daughters of the Golden West."

Some of the exclusive footwear shops have been featuring chiffon lilies in delicate shades and even in shades that might be termed "bright," such as decided blues and greens, and believe that these resort colors may take for spring.

Featuring reptile shoes and bags for spring as the correct supplements to the tailored suits, fashion has smiled on the scaly side of life. There must be a shoe for every venture of the day. Just now we have the bluejay blue, the particular blue in spring shoes.

Importance of black in afternoon costumes has promoted the idea for coral jewelry, as it is so effective on black. We find the chokers, opera length necklaces, button or drop earrings and bracelets. Dyed slippers of the same coral shade are worn with the black frock.

"Life without love is a flower without fragrance."—Richard Garnett.

Native Sons of the Golden West

GRAND PRESIDENT JAMES A. WILSON of San Francisco, on behalf of the Order of Native Sons of the Golden West, presented President Herbert Hoover with a silk California State (Bear) Flag March 5, the presentation being made by Congressman Arthur M. Free (Observatory No. 177). In acknowledgment, he received the following letter, dated The White House, Washington, March 5, 1929:

"Thank you very much indeed for your letter of February 20. I was, of course, greatly pleased to receive the beautiful silk flag of California. Please accept for yourself and be good enough to express to all the members of the Grand Parlor my grateful appreciation of your kind thought in presenting it to me."

Grand Secretary John T. Regan also received a letter, dated March 6, which says:

"Through you I want to thank the members of the Native Sons of the Golden West for the California State Flag which was presented to me on your behalf by Congressman Arthur M. Free. I shall always prize this token of esteem from the Native Sons of the state of my adoption."

"Yours faithfully,

"HERBERT HOOVER."

Open-Air Assembly Planned.

Auburn—At the March meeting of Fred H. Greely Assembly No. 6 Past Presidents Association it was decided to hold the annual open-air assembly and class initiation of 1929 at a place about four miles from Nevada City on the road to Downieville. The date was left open, to be specified at the assembly's April meeting in Lincoln. All the Parlor of California North are invited to attend and present candidates for initiation; those of Downieville and Sierra City already have neophytes in waiting. Invitations will also be extended to the officers of the Grand Parlor and of the Past Presidents General Assembly. Past presidents of Hydraulic No. 56 (Nevada City) and Quartz No. 58 (Grass Valley) compose the arrangements committee.

P. W. Smith was toastmaster at the banquet served by Auburn No. 59 in honor of the assembly's visit, and responses were made by Governor Charles Miller, Past Grand President Fred H. Greely, District Deputy William Hibbard, O. H. Fuller of Grass Valley, L. T. Sinnott of Marysville and Dr. C. W. Chapman of Nevada City. The drill team of the assembly went to Chico March 28 to conduct a class initiation for Chico No. 21.

Initiation in New Quarters.

Madera—Madera No. 130 celebrated the opening of its new quarters by the initiation of a class of five candidates March 4, the ritual being exemplified by the officers of Fresno No. 25, with President Lucius Powers Jr. presiding. A banquet was served by a committee headed by Past President J. Wesley Smith of Madera, and Grand Trustee Frank M. Lane and Joseph Barcroft, one of the initiates, delivered addresses.

To Have Own Home.

Salinas—Santa Lucia No. 97 has acquired, through purchase, a 50x50 lot improved with a two-story brick building which is to be altered to contain commodious clubrooms and a lodge-room. Prior to consummating the deal, the Parlor was visited by Grand President James A. Wilson, Grand Second Vice-president John T. Newell and Grand Secretary John T. Regan, who approved the plan and congratulated No. 97 on its progressiveness.

Monument for Early-Day Hero.

San Diego—Dedication of a monument over the remains of Albert Smith, who played an important part in the recapture of San Diego after it had been abandoned by the Americans in 1846, will take place at an early date, according to District Deputy Albert V. Mayrhofer of San Diego No. 108.

The monument, in Bennington Cemetery, Point Loma, is a huge granite boulder taken from Mission Gorge. It carries a plaque with the following inscription: "Albert Smith, civilian, spiked guns at Fort Stockton. Raised American Flag under fire in 1846. Dedicated by San Diego Parlor, Native Daughters and Sons of the Golden West."

Anniversary Banquet.

Stockton—The banquet in observance of the forty-seventh institution anniversary of Stockton No. 7 March 11 was largely attended by members and friends of the Parlor. Law T. Freitas was the toastmaster, and the chief speaker was D. W. Tullock, who gave a brief history of the Mother Lode. Reminiscences were related by George Catts, C. W. Oser, Frank Lieginger, A. L. Levinsky, Ed. Payton, O. H. Eccleston, W. C. Neumiller, George McNoble and Past Grand President Hubert R. McNoble.

After the banquet the Parlor met in regular session, with old-timers in the chairs. The pre-ventorium committee reported the $1,000 for the swimming tank had been raised. During the evening flowers were presented by Joaquin No. 5 and Caliz de Oro No. 206 N.D.G.W.

Grand Trustee Visits.

Downieville—Grand Trustee Irving D. Gibson officially visited Downieville No. 92 and Golden Nugget No. 94 (Sierra City) in joint session here February 25. Accompanying him were several of the standbys of Nevada City and Grass Valley.

Following the meeting a banquet was served. R. L. P. Bigelow presiding as toastmaster. Grand Trustee Gibson spoke on the Order's high principles and aims, and Dr. C. W. Chapman, charter member Hydraulic No. 56 (Nevada City) gave a splendid talk on the perpetuation and restoration of California's historic landmarks.

Moonlight Picnic.

Oakland—The next big gala event in store for Fruitvale No. 252 and its friends is a moonlight picnic, billed for Saturday evening, April 6, at a local amusement park well equipped for the purpose. Fine music for dancing will be provided and no effort will be spared to make this a long-to-be-remembered event. The arrangements committee is composed of Melvin Klemick (chairman), Jos. O. Levy, Arthur J. Cleu, Wm. Dombrink, Del Nave, Thos. King and Al. Valkman.

During the past few months the officers of the Parlor have visited the Parlors at Vallejo and Suisun and exemplified the ritual for classes of candidates.

Many Visitors Entertained.

San Bernardino—Arrowhead No. 110 entertained a large number of visitors February 27, including delegations from Hollywood No. 196 (Los Angeles), Sepulveda No. 263 (San Pedro) and Glendale No. 264. Several candidates were initiated, the ritual being exemplified by Glendale's officers, headed by President Dr. Joseph Albert Kleiser. Preceding the meeting supper was served, and following it a good program was presented.

Led by Grand Trustee Ben Harrison, Arrowhead's members attended in force the function of Santa Monica Bay No. 247 (Ocean Park) March 25, and they will be among those present at the "big" time billed by Sepulveda No. 263 (San Pedro) for April 5.

Joint Counties Outing.

Sacramento—Plans for the fourth annual joint outing of the Sacramento and San Joaquin Counties Parlor of Native Sons and Native Daughters have been perfected, and it is hoped to exceed the successes of past years. An old fashioned harbecue will be served and there will be dancing, baseball and an extensive program. April 28 is the date, and Elk Grove the place.

The arrangements committee consists of Mel Longshore (general chairman), W. Thisby (general secretary), W. Strong, H. L. Drennon, I. Neely, G. Scully, Walter Martin, C. Wulff and R. L. Poston.

Exhibitions of Manly Art.

San Rafael—Mount Tamalpais No. 64 substantially increased its membership March 4 by the initiation of a large class of candidates. Following the ceremonies a number of local sporting celebrities gave exhibitions of the manly art. The feature was a contest for fistic honors between two of the "Big Five," M. E. Soares and Charlie Zapelli; Charlie, using his head and feet to great advantage, declared himself victor and placed the laurels upon his own brow.

A sumptuous banquet was served, at which Lester Knutte presided. Among the speakers were District Deputy J. S. Rosa, who praised the ritual team for the very impressive rendition of the ritual; Al. O'Connor, captain of the state traffic police; County Surveyor Rodney Messner and Councilman Jos. P. Williams. President C. W. Russell announced the Parlor will soon receive an invitation from one of the prominent San Francisco Parlor to exemplify the ritual.

Humboldters To Dance.

Ferndale—As a start for the summer's activities the central committee of the Humboldt County Parlor—Humboldt No. 11 (Eureka), Arcata No. 20, Ferndale No. 93 and Fortuna No. 218—will sponsor a dance in this city April 13. Plans are progressing also for a series of baseball games between teams representing the four Parlor.

The work of installing markers above the graves of the deceased members of Ferndale No. 93 in the local cemeteries has been completed. The markers are of concrete, with the letters "N.S.G.W." in gold.

Caravan to Historic Spots.

Merced—April 21, Yosemite No. 24 will conduct its second annual caravan to the historic spots of Mariposa County. True M. Fowler is in charge of the arrangements. Mariposa will be the main objective, and there the Mariposa County Court House will be marked with a plaque.

The plaque, to be imbedded in a pyramid of quartz from the famous mines of the county, will be worded to the effect that the historic structure was built in 1854 and has since been in continuous use.

President Congratulated.

San Jose—Of the innumerable congratulatory messages received by President Herbert Hoover none was more appropriate than that of Observatory No. 177, which read:

"Sincere congratulations to you, President Hoover. As members of a loyal patriotic fraternity—the Native Sons of the Golden West—an institution of California, the thirty-first state admitted into our union, we wish you the best of health, great success and increased prosperity during your term of office."

The four local Parlor of Native Sons and Native Daughters joined in observing Arbor Day by planting two redwood trees to the memory of California's Pioneer Fathers and Mothers. Addresses were delivered by District Attorney Fred L. Thomas; Dr. Henry Meade Bland, California's poet laureate; Mamie Pierce-Carmichael, Past Grand President N.D.G.W.; F. E. Caton, president Santa Clara County Pioneer Society, and Mrs. George Smith. Clara Gairaud favored with several appropriate vocal selections. The general arrangements committee included: James Payne, chairman; W. A. Katen, Ed. Haley, San Jose No. 22 N.S.G.W.; A. B. Langford, A. C. Hansen, Ed. Distel, Observatory No. 177 N.S.G.W.; Mms. Dora Reeve, Georgie Shannon, Ed. Distel, Emma Rutan, San Jose No. 81 N.D.G.W.; Tillie Brobaska, Clara Gairaud, Mamie Carmichael, Vendome No. 100 N.D.G.W.

Flags Presented School.

San Leandro—The local high school is now the possessor of two handsome silk flags—the Flag of the United States of America and the California State (Bear) Flag—presented by Estudillo No. 223 February 27. Judge W. J. Gaunon made the presentation address for the Parlor, and for the school the flags were accepted by Ellanora Briggs, representing the girls, and Dudley Darneal, representing the boys.

Back to Stay.

Vallejo—Vallejo No. 77 recently entertained the largest gathering of Native Sons ever assembled in this city. Among the number were Grand President James A. Wilson, Grand First Vice-president Charles L. Dodge, Grand Secretary John T. Regan, Grand Trustees Charles A. Koenig, Richard M. Hamb and Harmon D. Skillin, Grand Inside Sentinel Arthur J. Cleu, Grand Outside Sentinel Joseph Clavo and delegations from Fruitvale, Napa, Saint Helena, Calistoga and Solano Parlor.

Dinner was served, a program was presented, and two candidates were initiated. The occasion was a most successful one, and President F. Segoria of No. 77 declares that Vallejo "has come back to stay."

Past Presidents Install.

Stockton—San Joaquin Assembly No. 7 Past Presidents Association installed officers March 1, Senior Past Governor C. J. Frerichs presiding and Clyde H. Gregg becoming governor. H. Canale, retiring governor, reviewed the work of the past year and thanked the members for their co-operation.

FIFTY-SECOND NATIVE SONS GRAND PARLOR

ARRANGEMENTS FOR THE FIFTY-SECOND Grand Parlor of the Order of Native Sons of the Golden West, which will be in session at San Francisco the week of May 20, are progressing nicely. They are in charge of a joint committee of representatives from all the twenty-eight Subordinate Parlors of San Francisco, of which Grand Trustee Charles A. Koenig is the active general chairman, Grand President James A. Wilson the honorary chairman, and Grand Secretary John T. Regan the honorary secretary.

The Grand Parlor sessions will be held in the auditorium of Native Sons Building, and three days—Monday, May 20, Wednesday and Friday—will be devoted to business of the Order. The progress of the closing Grand-Parlor year will be reviewed, and plans will be outlined for carrying on during the approaching year.

Members of the Grand Parlor, as well as accompanying guests, are assured plenty of attractive entertainment, for, like the Bay City, the San Francisco Parlors "know how." The tentative program of main events provides for:

Monday evening, reception, entertainment and dance at Native Sons Building.

Tuesday, all-day auto ride around San Francisco and down the peninsula, with a barbecue at noon. In the evening, supervised by guides of the San Francisco Police Department, a trip through Chinatown, to include witnessing a performance at the Chinese theater.

Wednesday afternoon, the womenfolk will be specially entertained. In the evening, the grand hall.

Thursday will be devoted to a boat ride around San Francisco Bay. An orchestra will provide music for dancing, and lunch will be served. In the evening, a banquet for the Grand Parlor, and a theater party for the womenfolk.

Friday, being the last day of the Grand Parlor, the womenfolk will be specially entertained.

The general committee's registration subcommittee, George W. Schonfeld chairman, will be on band Sunday, May 19, to register the Grand Parlor members and guests, and present them with their badges, instructions, etc. Indications are that the San Francisco Grand Parlor will be the largest attended in the Order's history.

Some new "hats" were thrown into the Grand-Parlor-office "ring" since the last issue of The Grizzly Bear, and, following election of delegates by Subordinate Parlors during this month (April), it would not be surprising if there be a veritable deluge of said "hats," for, "old man rumor," who keeps rolling along, says there are to be numerous seekers for all the Grand Parlor offices, excepting the "upper" ones.

The Grizzly Bear has communicated with many "suspicioned" candidates, and from answers received up to the time of closing this issue presents the following lineup for Grand Parlor offices:

Grand Second Vice-president—Grand Third Vice-president Dr. Frank I. Gonzalez (Pacific No. 10).

Grand Secretary—John T. Regan (South San Francisco No. 157), incumbent.

Grand Treasurer—John E. McDougald (California No. 1), incumbent.

Grand Marshal—Grand Inside Sentinel Arthur J. Cleu (Fruitvale No. 252).

Grand Inside Sentinel—Grand Outside Sentinel Joseph Clavo (Vallejo No. 77).

Grand Outside Sentinel—Horace J. Leavitt (Mount Bally No. 87) and Dr. Joseph A. Kleiser (Glendale No. 264).

Grand Trustees (seven to be selected)—Irving D. Gibson (Sacramento No. 3), incumbent; Grand Marshal A. W. Garcelon (Arcata No. 20); Frank M. Lane (Fresno No. 25), incumbent; Charles A. Koenig (Golden Gate No. 29), incumbent; J. Hartley Russell (Stanford No. 76), incumbent; Ben Harrison (Arrowhead No. 110), incumbent; Harmon D. Skillin (Castro No. 232), incumbent.

The Junior Past Grand President will go, automatically, to Grand President James A. Wilson, who will preside throughout the San Francisco Grand Parlor.

So far as The Grizzly Bear knows, no places have, as yet, been announced as seeking either this year's Admission Day (September 9) celebration or next year's Grand Parlor—two "good bets" for progressive communities. There is considerable talk to the effect that the Admission Day festivities should be held at Sacramento, in conjunction with the Seventy-fifth Annual State Fair, for which elaborate preparations are being made. That, however, is "up to" the Capital City Natives.—C.M.H.

played several accordion solos, and Victor Janssens entertained at the piano.

Among the honored guests who were introduced by the toastmistress were Sam J. Stanwood, member of Santa Barbara Parlor No. 116 N.S.G.W. and president of the Old Spanish Days organization; Miss Delina De la Guerra, honorary chairman of Old Spanish Days, who extended the hospitality of the famous De la Guerra home to the Native Daughters for their receptions during the fiesta; Miss Gertrude Hovey, new director of Girl Scouts in Santa Barbara; Miss D. Regina Moorhead, director of the Eastside Social Center, and Miss Lydia Scudelari, staff worker; Judge Weston E. Learned, newly-elected president of Santa Barbara Parlor of Native Sons; George A. Black, president of the newly-organized Grizzly Bear Club in Santa Barbara; Julius Delwiche, president of the board of directors of the East side Social Center; Mrs. William Vick and Henry G. Meyers, district deputy grand presidents, respectively, of the Native Sons and the Native Daughters.

H. F. Nicklin presented the work of the Eastside Social Center, which serves as an interpretative bureau for the foreign born in Santa Barbara, seeking to americanize them through bringing them in contact with American customs and institutions and training adults and children through clubs and classes. Nine girl scouts from the Eastside Social Center troop, which is led by Miss Moorhead and Miss Scudelari, served the dinner. They were called to the speakers' table at the close of the evening, to be formally introduced to the Grand President, who presented them with souvenirs of the evening in appreciation of their services.

From the banquet hall the Native Daughters adjourned to the lodge-room for formal inspection of their ritual. The evening closed with a clever account of Reina del Mar's response to the Loyalty Pledge appeal by President Quinn, who recounted in rhyme the various methods used by the members to earn their individual contributions.

Native Daughters of the Golden West

A FEW MONTHS AGO GRAND PRESIDENT Dr. Louise C. Heilbron launched a plan, devised by Past Grand President Grace S. Stoermer, for liquidating this year the debt on the Native Daughter Home in San Francisco. Each member was asked to earn, through her own efforts, the sum of five dollars to be placed as a Loyalty Pledge for the mortgage fund.

Throughout the Southland the response to the Grand President's suggestion has been encouraging, but with the 1929 Grand Parlor only a few months in the future many pledges remain to be filled. Native Daughters throughout the state must feel the challenge of the Loyalty Pledge within the next few weeks if the goal for the year, a beautiful home cleared of debt, is to be realized within the stated period.

The price of loyalty among the Parlors which have taken the challenge of the Grand President literally has proved not a price but a delightful privilege, bringing Native Daughters into intimate and happy contacts, developing hidden talents and resources, and bringing the satisfaction of a worth-while goal nearly attained.

Reina del Mar Parlor No. 126 of Santa Barbara within the next few weeks will complete a one hundred percent response to the Loyalty Pledge. Under the presidency of Miss Vera Pecheco, last fall the Parlor voted to have a standing committee to plan the activities from month to month to give greatest emphasis to the loyalty project. District Deputy Mrs. William Vick, Miss Pecheco, Mrs. Harry Meyers and Mrs. John Mitchell constituted this committee, which has continued its efforts under the present regime of Mrs. Irene Quinn.

William Vick of Santa Barbara No. 116 N.S.G.W. initiated the campaign by earning and presenting to the Parlor the amount of his wife's pledge as a token of interest in and appreciation for the move. In turn, Mrs. Vick has given her time to making jams and jellies to furnish the pledge of a bed-ridden member who has given many years of service and loyalty to the Parlor.

Ways and means by which the social, culinary and avocational talents of members might be turned to account were uncovered by the finance committee and have met an enthusiastic re-

MONDAY, JUNE 17, THE FORTY-third Grand Parlor of the Order of Native Daughters of the Golden West will convene in the City of Santa Cruz, with Grand President Dr. Louise C. Heilbron presiding. Subordinate Parlors will elect their delegates to the annual gathering the first meeting in May.

Arrangements for the care and the entertainment of the Grand Parlor are in charge of Santa Cruz Parlor No. 26, which has appointed a general committee with Past Grand President Stella Finkeldey as chairman. Sub-committees to handle the various details have been designated, as follows:

Executive—Stella Finkeldey (chairman), May L. Williamson, Anna M. Linscott, Edith K. Dodge, Edna Mosher, Leona Geyer, Pearl Reid, Evelyn Smith, June Lindsay, Elsie Sayre.

Reception—Anna M. Linscott (chairman), May L. Williamson, Edith K. Dodge, Ysabel Anthony, Mary E. Severio, Myrtle Richey, Stella Finkeldey, Irene Tait, June Lindsay.

Program—Grace DeL. Williamson (chairman), Alice Halsey, Arista Mellor, Marjorie Whiting, Mary Williams, Margaret Williams.

Housing—Evelyn Smith (chairman), Anita Triplett, Melba McKenna, Alberta McCormick, Marjorie Dellamonica, Elsie Sayre, Florence McCormick.

Auto Trip—Mary Ryder (chairman), Clara L. Hammer, Marjorie Brunjes, Mary Cassidy, Rose Harris, Lucille Clements, Vivian Rice, Alta Macaulay, Laura Griffin.

Grand Ball—Edna Mosher (chairman), Grace Andrews, Leona Geyer, Gertrude Johansen, Trella Jensen, Paula Frapwell, Marjorie Sheerin, Alice Daniels, Mildred Richey, Edith W. Kilfoyl.

Finance—Pearl Reid (chairman), Elsie Sayre, May L. Williamson, Leona Geyer, Evelyn Smith, sponse. For the most part, the money has been earned among friends outside the Parlor, each member utilizing her individual contacts so that money-raising schemes have not drawn continually from within the Parlor.

One of the first enterprises undertaken was a large card party in Elderly Court where the Misses Vera Pecheco, Elisa Bottiani, Inez Sharpe and Edith Rovane more than realized the amount of their combined pledges. Mrs. Frances Harrison Warren soon after her marriage invited the board of officers to hold their monthly dinner meeting in her home, instead of at one of the hotels as is customary. Cashing in on their culinary art, Mrs. John Mitchell, Mrs. Harry M. Woods Jr. and Miss Cora Senkenberg conducted very successful cake sales, while Mrs. Paul Miller has been taking orders for lemon pies and Miss Christine Moller has been selling fruit cake. Miss Marian Arroqui took advantage of the shortage of hotel rooms during a large convention and rented a room in her home to fill her pledge.

Several hours of secretarial work for the Hotel Men's Association met the pledge of Miss Lydia Scudelari. Mrs. Mollie Hollow, Miss Elizabeth Dodge, Anna M. Linscott, Edna Mosher, Alice Daniels.

Refreshments and Musical Numbers—Marie Pratchner (chairman), Elsie Sayre, Thelma Witney, Irene Tait, Edith Whidden, Katherine Wise, Margaret Martin, Louise O'Connor.

Registration—Irene Tait (chairman), Florence McCormick, Myrtle Richey, Alta Macaulay, Mary Ryder, Evelyn Horton, Phair Morrissey.

Printing—Lenora Geyer (chairman), Alberta McCormick, Edith Whidden, Verle Van Gorder, Marie Pratchner, Bobby Smith.

Decoration—Jennie M. Helms (chairman), Louise O'Connor, Margaret Martin, Myrtle Richey, Ella Huddleson, R. Belle Rountree, Theresa Foster, Ethel McFadden, Josephine Grellman.

The Grizzly Bear has communicated with all those rumored as possible candidates for the several Grand Parlor offices, and from responses received announces these:

Grand Vice-president—Grand Marshal Estelle M. Evans and Florence Danforth-Boyle (Gold of Ophi No. 190).

Grand Secretary—Sallie R. Thaler, incumbent.

Grand Marshal—Grand Trustee Evelyn I. Carlson and Grand Trustee Marvel Thomas.

Grand Organist—Minna Kane-Horn, incumbent.

Grand Trustees (seven to be selected)—Ethel Van Vleck (Marguerite No. 12); Irma Laird (Aituras No. 159), incumbent.

Of course, there will be many other candidates, but these are the only ones who supplied The Grizzly Bear with the requested information up to the time of this issue going to press.—C.M.H.

abath Hollow and Miss Elizabeth Martin were among those giving bridge teas to secure the amount of their pledges. Home-grown tomatoes sold at bargain prices met the pledge of Mrs. Edna McCormick, while tatted pillowcases secured Mrs. Lydia Brady's five dollars. Musical talent was turned to good account by Miss Lena Aliverti and Miss Ida Vizzolini, who sang and played over the radio. The price of a dressmaker saved by home work filled the pledge of Irene Williams. A plate supper preceding a regular meeting was served by Mrs. Mae Spreitz, Mrs. Josephine Lillibridge and Miss Marjorie Hester.

In this way the pledges are being met with an ease which insures a one hundred percent response from the more than one hundred members of Reina del Mar. A card party sponsored by the Parlor as a whole furnished the pledges of members who, through illness or other unavoidable circumstances, could not personally earn five dollars. The price of loyalty is lost in the satisfaction of accomplishment. Failure to fulfill the Loyalty Pledge will mean a goal deferred, a failure to keep faith with Grand Parlor leaders. Reina del Mar offers its happy experiences in meeting the pledge as a challenge to all the Parlors of the Northland and the Southland to redouble their efforts to complete the Loyalty Pledge by June.—ANNA E. McCAUGHEY, Supervising District Deputy Grand President.

Home Parlor Receives Grand President.

San Diego—Grand President Dr. Louise C. Heilbron officially visited her home-Parlor, San Diego No. 208, March 9. At a dinner preceding the meeting the table decorations, arranged by a committee headed by Chairman Martha Klindt, featured a replica of San Diego Mission, the first of California's historic mission structures.

Alice H. Damarus, sister of the Grand President, presided at the Parlor meeting, when two candidates were initiated. Dr. Heilbron gave an interesting and instructive address on the work of the Order, at the conclusion of which Past President Rosina M. Hertzbrun presented her, on the Parlor's behalf, with an appropriate gift. Other splendid talks were given by Florence Dodson-Schonenman, chairman Grand Parlor Landmarks Committee; Annie L. Adair, in charge of the homeless children work in the south; Grand Trustee Marvel Thomas and Past Grand President Grace S. Stoermer. Among the many other visitors were delegations from Verdugo No. 240 (Glendale) and Los Angeles No. 124. At the meeting's close orange sherbet and wafers were served. Music for the evening was provided by Sisters Farwell (piano) and Hill (violin).

Shortly after Lent, San Diego will sponsor a bridge and five-hundred party. Owing to the inclement weather the dedication of the Albert Smith monument at Point Loma, arranged as a feature for Grand President Heilbron's visit, was postponed indefinitely.

Courtesy.

Mariposa—Grand Trustee May F. Givens March 8 addressed the local high school on "Courtesy, From a Woman's Viewpoint." The address was so well received that the plan, originated by Mrs. Givens, in presenting the fundamental principles of courtesy was adopted by the school for future presentation of the subject.

Has Basketball Team.

Oroville—Gold of Ophir No. 190 now has a basketball team, known as the "Oroville Nuggets," composed of Bernice Renfrow, Mae Slissman, Wilda McClung, Pauline Washburn, Florence Danforth-Boyle and Mae Mitchell. At a game full of thrills March 8 the "Nuggets" defeated the Business Girls' team with a score of 22 to 9. Argonaut No. 8 N.S.G.W. members turned out a hundred percent to witness the game and supported the girls to a finish.

Loyal Support Needed.

Oakland—Grand President Dr. Louise C. Heilbron, accompanied by Grand Secretary Sallie R. Thaler and District Deputy Helen Ring, officially visited Argonaut No. 166 February 26. Four candidates were initiated. Dr. Heilbron told of the many activities undertaken by the Order to further the interest of California, and complimented the officers on the manner in which they conducted the ritualistic ceremonies. Secretary Mary E. Brusie, a member of No. 166, spoke on the homeless children work.

March 10 President Ella Freitas, Evelyn Belterive and Esther Bowen attended a breakfast at the Native Daughter Home in San Francisco. They told of the work being done by the home committee and stressed the need for loyal support on the part of all members. Argonaut is planning a bridge tea for the afternoon of April 20.

Demonstration of Fraternal Spirit.

Fullerton—Grand President Dr. Louise C. Heilbron officially visited Grace No. 242 and Santa Ana No. 235 jointly March 11. The meeting was preceded by a dinner partaken of by more than one hundred members and guests. Among the guests were Past Grand President Grace S. Stoerner, Grand Trustee Marvel Thomas, District Deputies Lois Johnson, Daisy Hansen, Nellie Cline and Genevieve Hiskey, and visiting delegations from eight southland Parlor. The joint meeting, which was concluded with delicious refreshments, was a wonderful demonstration of the fraternal spirit existing between the two hostess Parlors.

Grand President Heilbron, in the gracious manner which has endeared her to the Order, favored the large assemblage with an enlivened and interesting address on the Order's projects, and complimented the hostess Parlors on their splendid work and condition. At the conclusion of her remarks Dr. Heilbron was presented with a silver spoon on behalf of Nos. 242 and 235, Miss Callya Sparks making the presentation address. The opening and closing ceremonies were conducted by Santa Ana, while the ritual was exemplified by Grace, eleven candidates being received into membership.

Ritual Faultlessly Exemplified.

Grass Valley—More than a hundred members of Manzanita No. 29, reinforced by several from Laurel No. 6 (Nevada City), gathered February 19 to greet Grand President Dr. Louise C. Heilbron, the occasion being her official visit. She was accompanied by Grand Trustee Sadie Brainard. At a supper which preceded the meeting the high school orchestra, directed by Nettie Packer, entertained the banqueters.

The officers of the Parlor faultlessly exemplified the ritual and were praised by the Grand President in the course of a splendid address in which she outlined the great work the Order is engaged in. At the meeting's conclusion a collation was served and there was a program consisting of addresses by Grand President Heilbron, Past Grand President Allison F. Watt and Grand Trustee Brainard, a piano solo by Anthea Locklin and a piano duet by Reta Beloud and Esther Fuller. Several presentations were made.

NATIVE DAUGHTER NEWS

The Parlor joined with the students of the Grass Valley high school in observing Arbor Day. A splendid program, arranged by Annie Conlin, was presented and four trees were planted at the school grounds. Among the speakers were President Bertha Fuller, Past Grand President Allison F. Watt and Principal J. B. Underwood.

Worthy Cause.

Pescadero—Ano Nuevo No. 180 will give a card party Saturday night, April 27, for the benefit of the loyalty pledge fund. Many beautiful prizes will be awarded. Admission, including refreshments, is but 50 cents. A large attendance is requested, as the cause is a worthy one.

Grand President Dr. Louise C. Heilbron will officially visit the Parlor April 22. Elizabeth Frey will be the presiding officer.

Invitation Accepted.

Chico—At its March 14 meeting Annie K. Bidwell No. 168 enthusiastically accepted an invitation from Gold of Ophir No. 190 (Oroville) to attend the spring party April 3. This big annual event is held alternately in the two cities. To fill vacancies, Anna Skelly was installed as first vice-president and Pearl Skelly as organist.

Saint Patrick's Day approaching, the banquet table for the social hour was ornamented with clay pipes, shamrocks, green and white streamers and bowls of marigolds. Laura Eads, Nellie Long and Belle Murray made up the hostess committee.

Grand President Inspires.

San Bernardino—The itinerary of Grand President Dr. Louise C. Heilbron brought her to Lugonia No. 241 March 13. At 7 p. m. seventy-five members and guests welcomed her at a banquet, the tables for which were beautifully decorated in keeping with Saint Patrick's Day. Trailers of smilax, down the length of the three long tables, gave the color note for tall green candles and the small green favor candles at each place, also green nut cups. As places were taken the ceiling lights were extinguished and the candles were lighted. Baskets of daffodils and ferns were also used. Dr. Heilbron, Grand Trustee Marvel Thomas and District Deputy Daisy Hanseu were special guests of honor, and the Parlor was delighted to also have with it a number of members from Parlors in Fullerton, Santa Ana, Long Beach, San Pedro and Glendale.

Following the dinner all gathered in the meeting place, where three candidates were initiated. Dr. Heilbron's address was an inspiration. She emphasized the fact that members of the Order must themselves first be sold one hundred percent on the projects of the Order before prospective members can be interested. As a souvenir of her visit, Lugonia presented the Grand President with a silver relish fork and a butter knife.

Easter Box for Kiddies.

Antioch—Officers of Antioch No. 223 and General Winn No. 32 N.S.G.W. were jointly installed by District Deputies Nellie Nicholson and Clarence Palmer February 26. Visitors were present from Martinez, Pittsburg and Byron. A delicious Italian supper, prepared by Mary Ross and a capable committee, was enjoyed.

The sewing club of No. 223 has completed a wonderful Easter box for the homeless children—dresses, rompers, slips, bonnets, jackets and hooties. The hope-chest benefit for the Native Daughter Home, in charge of Olive Barkley and a committee, is progressing encouragingly.

Nation's Heroes' Birthdays Observed.

Middletown—Washington's Birthday was observed by Clear Lake No. 135 with a unique and jolly party, all members appearing in colonial costumes. Twenty pioneer women were present as invited guests. A nice program was followed

Prizes for Artistry.

Bleher—Officers of Mount Lassen No. 215 have been installed by Marie Walsh. Edna Moore, the new president, plans a busy term. Valentine Day was observed with an appropriate program. Material for making valentines was provided and prizes were given for the most artistic. Refreshments were served.

Ornamental Shrub Planted.

Placerville—Thirty of the members of Marguerite No. 12 met March 9 at the home of Jessie L. Stevens and in recognition of Arbor Day planted an ornamental shrub. Following a delightful program delicious refreshments were served. Under the guidance of President Agnes Schiff the Parlor is making good progress, many applications for membership being received.

Charmingly Entertained.

Oroville—Butte County Past Presidents Association No. 5 was charmingly entertained March 1 at the home of Ellice La Voy, which was beautifully decorated with feathery araca. Mrs. La Voy was assisted in entertaining by her sister, Maybell Burns. For high score at cards prizes went to Margaret Hudspeth and Myrtle Bernardo.

Edith Campbell presented each of them with a bouquet of pink carnations and gave an interesting talk. A very entertaining program followed. # A BIT O' FARMING

PREPARED EXPRESSLY FOR THE GRIZZLY BEAR BY M. H. ELLIS

CONGRESS IS TO TACKLE THE PROBLEM of agricultural relief again, in a special session called by President Herbert Hoover for the purpose. What Congress will do or what special measures the president may advise, remain to be seen. Past Congresses have talked much; they have done little. There is little reason to believe this Congress will do more, unless some real plan is furnished by the administration, backed by enough power to put the program over. Meanwhile, agriculture waits.

And while they wait, the farmers of the country are wondering what sort of man President Hoover has selected for his secretary of agriculture. Arthur Hyde, former governor of Missouri, is hardly known outside that state. That is no disqualification, of course. He is not a farmer; he is a lawyer. That, too, may be no disqualification. The farmers of the United States are not at all particular where the promised farm relief originates, whether in the mind of a lawyer or a farmer, an engineer or a college professor. All they want is action.

Governor Hyde was known in Missouri as a friend to agriculture; he was often on record as stating his position in that regard. Missouri farmers were satisfied with his administration. He has the reputation of being direct and honest, of stating his views clearly and forcefully. There is a great deal of skepticism, in California at least, as to his appointment; there is a grave doubt as to whether his Middle Western ideas of farming and farm relief will apply to California conditions. President Hoover has a reputation for picking the right men; it is to be hoped the right man is at the helm at this time, which may be the most crucial in the history of American agriculture.

For farm relief has been promised; as a man of his word and a leader of a party, the president cannot but do something along this line. The new secretary should play an important part in the legislation that results. California will watch the progress of the movement with an interest that is more than keen; it is an interest that is shown by the drowning man in the slow progress of his rescuers.

ONE AID TO FARM RELIEF.

Fair protection to American-grown products must be the backbone of any farm relief measure. The almond and walnut industries are making a valiant fight to get duties that will enable them to continue in business at a profit. There is not much fresh fruit such as California produces imported into the United States; and at first thought it may not appear that the deciduous grower has much of an interest in the tariff fight. But he has. A real and vital interest.

If bananas are permitted to come into the United States without duty, every grower in California and in every other state must suffer. We import about three and a third billion pounds of fruit every year, and more than 90 percent of that fruit is bananas. We export only about two billion pounds of fruit a year. Bananas are not a cheap food; in calories they cost more than many fruits grown in the United States, and they lack the fruit juices, fruit acids and vitamins. Produced by peon labor, bananas furnish an unfair competition; if a tariff forces up the price, the American consumer can turn to his own fruits, with profit to his pocketbook and to his stomach.

FOOT AND MOUTH DISEASE.

Prompt and efficient measures, born of the bitter experience of five years ago, promptly controlled the outbreak of foot and mouth disease in California this year. We have learned the lesson of control, through eradication, and have learned it thoroughly. Two outbreaks, the first causing a terrific economic loss and the second a threat that might easily have done so, should teach the second lesson just as effectively—prevention.

Twice, this most dreaded of all animal diseases has been introduced into the state, threatening the very existence of the livestock industry, through the feeding of garbage of ships from foreign ports. The responsibility should be clearly established; there should be no further menace from this source.

TAKE CARE OF FARM TREES.

There is no greater asset to a farm, aside from its soil and water supply, than its trees. And where there are good trees, they should be cared for; where there are none, they should be planted. Among the things that can be done for a tree is careful pruning. The branches need not be cut back unless it is desired to shape the tree, but broken branches should be as carefully removed as in a fruit tree. Wounds should be treated. Cavities should be cleaned, scraped, disinfected and filled with cement. Vines should be removed from the branches and from the trunks. Sunlight is important to tree growth, and English ivy, roses or grapevines are apt to take more of the sunlight than they should. Heavy foliage from a vine will kill a tree quickly. It costs money to replace large and beautiful trees.

THE SHEEP INDUSTRY.

The early part of March brought a real scare to the sheepmen of California. With a rainfall so deficient that feed was failing, milk lambs began to fall rapidly below the standard of quality necessary for shipment East. It required very little investigation to find that most sheep producers in the state are overstocked; and overstocking usually means over-grazing and poor range. Prices in the last few years have led to rapid expansion of flocks and now, unless there is a sharp curtailment, there is bound to be trouble.

Pastures cannot hold out forever beneath the feet of twice as much stock as they should carry. Cattlemen have found that they cannot graze too heavily; sheepmen must learn the same lesson. Right now is the time to retrench, to cut down the flocks; whether or not the grower likes the idea, he will have to come to it, and that shortly.

CULTIVATION FOR APRIL.

Trees under most California conditions require little cultivation in April. The major part of any cultivation program for this month will be for irrigation, in case the soil gets too dry. But be sure the soil is too dry. The auger will tell the story. When water is applied, do a good job. A light irrigation wets only the surface; the water does not spread down evenly through the soil.

If there is no irrigating to be done, then there is no use working the soil, except in the case of weeds. Weeds rob the soil of water, and should be kept down, religiously. This done, there is no need for further cultivation. It costs money to run cultivating machinery through the orchard; the only possible good that can be done is in removing weeds, or at irrigation time. Continuous cultivation will do nothing toward moisture conservation; it does damage in turning over the soil under the rays of the sun.

WALNUTS NEED WATER.

Rains during March greatly helped the agricultural situation in the state, but there is a false sense of security bred of an inch of rain. Soils that were dry were wetted down to depths varying with the locality and soil type. But there are some trees that still need water. Foremost of these is the walnut. This nut makes its size growth by the middle of June, and unless the soil is kept in good shape down through the root area, small sizes will result. The soil auger is the only reliable adviser in this case.

ERADICATING CHICKEN LICE.

No living thing thrives if attacked by parasites. Proper functioning of the plant or animal cannot continue if parasites are supported from the vigor of the host. This is particularly true in the case of fowls; when there are lice on the hens the egg production will fall away, the hens will get out of condition and the poultryman will write his balance in red ink.

There are two controls that will answer the purpose in the case of chicken lice. Sodium fluoride, applied by pinches under the wings, around the neck, at the vent, on the back and on the breast, will rid the fowls of lice. Or put Black Leaf 40 in an oil can and let a stream run along the roosts an hour before the chickens go to roost. Repeat the treatment in ten days and there will be no lice.

OIL SPRAYS IN CITRUS.

The season is past when oil spray may be used safely in the citrus grove. After February 1 it is better policy to use some other spray, if one is needed. For instance, if red spider shows up, try 2 or 3 percent lime sulphur, or even sulphur dust. Oil is more effective, but experience in the past few years has shown that it is better to take a chance with a less-effective remedy than to try to use oil. Heavy drop of fruit is likely to result, especially in valencia groves.

TRELLIS CONCORD GRAPES.

The Concord grape is growing in popularity in California, but its comparatively recent accession to favor finds a dearth of knowledge as to its treatment. It is a better plan, however, to trellis the vines, rather than to stake them. As with other varieties, run the wires with the wind, and there will be less whipping of leaves and blowing off of blossoms. The two-wire trellis is satisfactory.

PREPARING SPRAYS.

The day has gone when the fruitgrower will find it profitable to prepare the ingredients for his sprays. He will find it easier, better and cheaper to buy the spray materials ready mixed, needing nothing but water for dilution. In some large orchards, where scientific knowledge and experience are abundant, the sprays are mixed, perhaps with some saving. But the small grower will find he can get better results from ready-mixed sprays, purchased from a reliable dealer, than he can by buying the ingredients and mixing them himself. It is difficult to get the proper proportions, and some sprays are hard to mix. This is an age of specialization and here is one case where the specialist can be profitably employed.

GET THE DENTIST FOR PIGS.

At least one hog raiser in the state has found it profitable to begin early on the teeth of pigs. He goes over the litters when they are about twenty-four hours old, and with a light pair of snub-nosed pliers nips off the sharp points of their long teeth. This is done to prevent injury to the sow's udder and teats. Where pigs have teeth that hurt the mother, she becomes restless and often refuses to let the offenders suckle. The result is undernourished pigs, making poor growth.

WATCH THE GREEN FEED.

While green feed right now is plentiful, it is going to get scarcer as the summer approaches. Sometimes there is a tendency to try to get along during the lean seasons without using much green feed. But the chicks must have it, so must the older fowls. Nutritional roup may result. See that the flock has all the green feed its members need, put about one-tenth by weight of alfalfa meal in the mash, or feed a pound of cod liver or fish oil to each 100 pounds of mash. The fowls must have Vitamin A, and green feed is the means of giving it to them.

WOOD EATING HORSES.

When horses show a tendency to gnaw their feed boxes, or to try to make a meal from a convenient fence post, there is something wrong, either with the diet or with the horse itself. First of all, look to the diet, and be sure that the grain fed is not moldy. See that the horse is fed and watered regularly, that it has plenty of salt, that it is well groomed, has plenty of exercise and that the water is good. Feed grain in wide, shallow boxes, so that the horse must take its time in eating. If the appetite for timmer still prevails, look to the teeth; if they are bad, call the veterinarian.

CALVES IN THE DAIRY.

The practice followed by most dairying in vealing their calves as soon after birth as possible is one that opens a wide avenue for waste. Of course, if the cow was bred only for the purpose of freshening her, and the sire used was a scrub, the best possible plan is to get rid of the calf. On the other hand, where a good bull is used, it will be found profitable in most cases to raise the promising looking heifers.

The cost of rearing a heifer calf to her first freshening is around $125. This is less by far than most dairymen pay for cows to replace losses in their herds. There should be only good bulls in the herd, and from good producing stock. If this be true, the heifer calves from the best cows of the herd are valuable assets, worth too much to the dairyman to be led to the butcher.

PLANTS MUST BE FED.

The use of fertilizers long ago passed the experimental stage. Every farmer believes in fertilization; some think only they cannot afford it. Properly applied, fertilizers will be found to pay big interest on the money invested in them. And emphasis should be laid on "properly." A Mississippi agronomist points out that an automobile needs water, oil and gasoline. If all three are not supplied in the proper quantity, the car will go only as far as the least supply furnished of the three. He points out that feeding plants is similar; they have certain nutritional needs which must be filled. To give one needed element without supplying another does little good. The needs must be ascertained, and supplied.

SUMMER COVER CROP.

Summer cover crops may be found to be a distinct advantage in districts troubled with June drop of fruit, whether deciduous or citrus. This presupposes, of course, an abundant supply of water, for cover crops drain the soil even more heavily than a sporadic stand of weeds. The growth of the cover crop keeps the soil temperature low, and has been found effective in preventing the dropping of fruit from the trees. Early April is a good time to plant, although a bit late in the warmer parts of the state. But before planting a summer cover crop this year check up on the available water supply. Water may be scarce this summer.

THIN FRUIT FOR QUALITY.

Quantity of fruit produced is a far less important consideration than the quality. Small fruit brings low prices, and the returns from a large crop may be on the minus side; the thinned orchard with large sizes, even with less tonnage, will be more likely to show a profit. But with the thinning properly done, the tonnage will not be less, even though the number of fruits is. Peaches should be thinned so that the fruits are from four to six inches apart. Apricots should be at least an inch apart when mature. These two should be thinned as soon as frost danger is over; it takes a toll from the tree to grow the superfluous fruit even one day. Thin apples one to a spur, six inches apart, after the June drop is over.

WORLD'S LONGEST HIGHWAY BRIDGE.

San Mateo (San Mateo County)—The world's longest highway bridge, from this city to Mount Eden, Alameda County, was dedicated and opened to traffic March 2. The bridge, which cost $7,500,000, is 7.1 miles in length over water and, with approaches, aggregates 12 miles. Construction was commenced in December 1927. The bridge, a toll affair, is a private enterprise.

At Native Sons Hall, 134 West Seventeenth street, April 5, Los Angeles will sponsor a ball for the benefit of M. J. McGowan, a member of the Parlor who has become almost totally blind. In his palmier days, "Mac" contributed liberally toward carrying on, and is in every way deserving. Good music will be provided, and admission is a dollar a couple. There should be a liberal response, both from those who do and those who do not care to dance.

RECEPTION FOR N.D. GRAND PRESIDENT.

Elaborate entertainment of Grand President Dr. Louise C. Heffron, Past Grand President Grace S. Stoermer and Grand Trustee Marvel Thomas was extended by members of Californiana Parlor No. 247 N.D.G.W., March 12, at eleven a. m., with a reception in the foyer of the Garden Court. Trustee Mary Foy was chairman of the reception and her assisting committee included Mms. Arthur Wright, president; William Kirkley Chambers, A. O. Evans, Leland Ather-ton Irish, William Behm, C. E. Noerenberg, Ruth Baffie Parris, Augusta Corbit, Isabella Joushin Granz, Gertrude Joushin Tuttle, C. W. Decker, W. T. Hearst, Herman Edward Hertz, Dana Cox, Edward H. Anthony, Ysabel Del Valle Gram, Harry C. Bendley, John P. Burrow, Charles Jacobson, Alice Fitzgerald Bowers, C. Stamps, Olive Waite Lopez, Minnie E. Smith Loos, Pauline Shindler O'Neill, Frederick Rose, Mildred Duffy, and the Misses Mariana Etchemendy, Madeline Etchemendy, Elizabeth Quinn and Anna C. Roeder.

At high noon members and guests went to the lower lounge, where a buffet breakfast was served, with Isabella Joushin Granz, chairman of hospitality, and her committee presiding. Peach blossoms, other flowers and beautiful corsages for the guests added a festive note to the formal initiation of twenty candidates into Californiana. These ceremonies were held in the ballroom, with one hundred and ninety-four present.

Californiana has planned many events, the first to be a formal banquet and ball at the Biltmore April 26 for all Native Sons and Native Daughters and their friends. Tickets, $5 per person. Elaborate plans are being made by the arrangements committee, President Mrs. Arthur Wright chairman, for entertainment features, including fascinating dancers and singers, and decorations. This promises to be one of the most colorful social events of the year.

BIRTHDAYS OBSERVED.

Long Beach—Grand President Dr. Louise C. Heilbron officially visited Long Beach Parlor No. 154 and Rudecinda Parlor No. 230 N.D.G.W. in joint session here March 7. She was accompanied by Past Grand President Grace S. Stoermer, Grand Trustee Marvel Thomas, District Deputies Nellie Cline and Ida Gilman. The occasion was one of the largest attended and most brilliant in the histories of the Parlors. Rudecinda's officers, headed by President Anna Spickler, conducted the opening ceremonies, and Long Beach's officers, headed by President Julia Arborn, exemplified the ritual, three candidates being initiated. Grand President Heilbron's address was much appreciated, and at its conclusion she was presented with a gift.

The banquet following the ceremonies was in observance of the twenty-second institution anniversary of No. 154 (organized February 19, 1907), and the fourth of No. 230, organized March 7, 1925. The banquet-room and tables were elaborately decorated, miniature covered wagons being used as place cards. Two large birthday cakes adorned the center of the guest table. Julia Arborn was the toastmistress and among the many speakers were Dr. Heilbron, District Deputy Florence Dodson-Schoneman, Grace Norton, Eunice Fox, Hazel Hansen, Rita Smith, Grand Trustee Marvel Thomas and Past Grand President Stoermer.

The thimble club of Long Beach No. 154 had a luncheon, followed by cards, at the home of Bertha Hitt, March 14. Nellie Whittings entertained the club at her home March 28. The Parlor will give a bunco party April 4. Lucretia Coates is chairman of the arrangements committee.

TO SPONSOR MEMORY GARDEN.

Ocean Park—Large delegations from all the southland Parlors attended the March 4 meeting of Santa Monica Bay Parlor No. 245 N.D.G.W., the occasion being the official visit of Grand President Dr. Louise C. Heilbron. With President Rita Smith presiding, two candidates were initiated.

In an inspiring address, Dr. Heilbron told of the wonderful progress of the Order, and her outline of its aims was an inspiration to all. Brief remarks were made by Grand Trustee Marvel Thomas and District Deputy Florence Dodson-Schoneman. Refreshments were served, the tables being beautifully decorated with mission arches and spring flowers; in the archways were tiny dolls dressed as belles of the latter days.

In the near future Santa Monica Bay will plant a tree to the memory of the Pioneer Mothers at Inspiration Point, Santa Monica Palisades, and will sponsor a memory garden in the near vicinity. El Camino sewing club of the Parlor meets the last Monday of each month at 2823½ Main street, Ocean Park; tea and cake are served by the hostess of the day; all visitors welcome. A loge dance will be given at Rendezvous ballroom, Santa Monica, at 8 p. m. April 10; Willett Biscailuz chairman.

WINS BOWLING CHAMPIONSHIP.

Hopkins will conduct the meeting, and Joseph A. Brannen will have charge of a special program. Past presidents of the Parlor include Ramon D. Sepulveda, James H. Dodson Sr., James H. Dodson Jr., William A. Reuter, Edwin E. Baldwin, William F. Durr, Willard Buchanan, Clyde H. Foote and Stanley A. Wheeler. Headed by President Hopkins, officers and members of No. 263 have been visiting other Parlors in the southland in recent weeks.

Sepulveda is now the proud possessor of a silver trophy, emblematic of the championship of the San Pedro Fraternal Bowling League. The large cup, appropriately engraved, was won after four months of competition with five other teams mustered from lodge and fraternal organizations. M. A. Beunett acted as captain of the Parlor's ten-pin team. The winning bowling team at the end of the season was entertained with a "victory dinner" at the home of Harry E. Fairall, chairman of No. 263's athletic committee.

The Flag of the United States of America and the California State (Bear) Flag are now in the vicinity of the South Pole, having been presented by Sepulveda to Commander Richard E. Byrd of the Byrd Antarctic expedition, which sailed October 11 from San Pedro aboard the giant Norwegian whaling ship "C. A. Larsen."

"GENE'S" NIGHT BRINGS 'EM OUT.

Ocean Park—Undersheriff Eugene Biscailuz night at Santa Monica Bay Parlor No. 267 N.S.G.W. brought out a large crowd March 25, and many compliments were handed "Gene." There was a note of sadness at the enthusiastic gathering, however, when Police Chief Clarence Webb, president of the Parlor, announced that late in the afternoon District Deputy Eldred L. Meyer, who had planned and made most of the arrangements for the festivities, had been called to San Francisco by the sudden death of his mother, Mrs. L. C. Meyer.

Brief addresses were made by Grand Second Vice-president John T. Newell, Grand Trustee Ben Harrison, District Deputies Burrell D. Neighbors, Albert Cron and Albert V. Mayrhofer, Earl LeMoine and Undersheriff Biscailuz. Jack Curtis was master of ceremonies, and under his direction an attractive program was presented, followed by refreshments. Parlors represented at the gathering included Los Angeles No. 45, San Diego No. 108, Ramona No. 109 (Los Angeles), Arrowhead No. 110 (San Bernardino), Hollywood No. 196, Sepulveda No. 263 (San Pedro) and Glendale No. 264.

Santa Monica Bay is forging ahead, and Secretary John Smith declares it well on the way to achieving its place in the "Native Sun sun." Candidates are initiated at every meeting, and applications are coming in regularly. "Hospitality reigns here," is the Parlor's motto.

CARD PARTY AT GLENDALE.

Glendale—Verdugo Parlor No. 240 N.D.G.W. received an official visit March 12 from Grand President Dr. Louise C. Heilbron. At the dinner which preceded the meeting the color scheme was the customary yellow of the Order and the place cards were in the shape of poppies. Other guests included Grand Trustee Marvel Thomas, Past Grand President Grace S. Stoerner and representatives of neighboring Parlors. Following the supper five candidates were initiated and Dr. Heilbron gave an impressive talk on the Native Daughter Home and the redwoods.

Verdugo will give a card party at the California hotel April 5 to which all Natives and their friends are invited. This will be the second of a series to run through July, and at the end of the play the high score holder will receive a worthwhile prize. President Hazel Hansen announces that April 9 Laurance L. Hill of the Security Bank will address the Parlor on early Los Angeles history. The meeting for this pleasurable and instructive occasion will be open to all Natives and their friends.

ANNIVERSARY BANQUET.

Accompanied by a delegation from Arrowhead No. 110 N.S.G.W. (San Bernardino), Grand Trustee Ben Harrison visited Hollywood Parlor No. 196 N.S.G.W. March 18 and highly complimented the officers for the excellent manner in which they exemplified the ritual. Other speakers of the evening were Grand Second Vice-president John T. Newell; Guy Hale, Bob Brazelton, Charlie Daley and J. W. Jasper of Arrowhead; Les Schellbach of Glendale and Henry G. Bodkin of No. 196.

Hollywood sent a message of congratulation to President Herbert Hoover, and received the following reply, addressed to Secretary Ed Reilly: "The President has asked me to convey to you, and through you to your associates, his deep appreciation of your kind telegram of congratulation and good wishes. Your confidence and expressions of encouragement are most helpful."

Hollywood will have its institution anniversary banquet at the Hollywood Athletic Club April 17. The arrangements committee includes: Henry G. Bodkin (chairman), Superior Judge Joseph P. Sproul, Edward B. Lovie, Superior Judge Samuel R. Blake, William Hortenstein, Harold Thomas, Edward F. Black, Albert C. Boschke, Ferdinand Youell and Lee Owens.

ANNIVERSARY GREAT PUBLIC WORK.

April 26, San Pedro residents will observe the thirtieth anniversary of the beginning of work on its breakwater. On that date President William McKinley, sitting in his office in the White House at Washington, D. C., pressed an electric button which released the first hopperful of rock to go into the great wall, now 2.11 miles in length. Ramon D. Sepulveda, first president of Sepulveda Parlor No. 263 N.S.G.W., fired a cannon from Point Fermin as the rock fell into place.

The San Pedro breakwater was the first important part of the Federal Government's work, which later led to the development of Los Angeles Harbor. Work was begun at San Pedro only after a long period of lobbying and congressional maneuvers at Washington, in which the late Senator Stephen M. White, affiliated with Ramona Parlor No. 109 N.S.G.W., and Collis P. Huntington played leading parts, opposing each other.

WORLD'S HIGHEST DAM.

Pacoima Dam, near San Fernando, said to be the highest dam in the world, was formally dedicated to public use February 26. It was built by Los Angeles County, at a cost of $2,500,000, as part of the water conservation program, and drains twenty-five square miles in the Sierra Madre Mountains.

The dam is 365 feet high, 660 feet long at the top and 100 feet thick at the bottom. Its construction involved the excavating of 87,000 yards of rock and the placing of 225,000 yards of concrete. It has a maximum stress of 600 pounds to the square inch.

MEMBERSHIP DRIVE UNDER WAY.

Long Beach—Officers of Long Beach Parlor No. 239 N.S.G.W. were installed March 14 by District Deputy William A. Reuter, Frank Joy Hart becoming president. A membership drive has been inaugurated and nine applications, the first result of the effort, were presented at this meeting. During the year the Parlor will sponsor a program of local civic improvements and betterments.

“Joy” Silent
HYDRAULIC

FOR OVERHEAD VALVE MOTOR

HOW IT WORKS: Oil in chamber C flows around plunger D, automatically maintaining a column of oil to take the blow from the cam; a shock absorber for the valve.

A revolutionary invention based on an old, established principle! Absolutely eliminates valve noise in the most efficient type of motor ever designed! Your motor need never be “NOISY!”

The JOY HYDRAULIC PUSH RODS eliminate the necessity of outside push rod clearance. So simple in construction and operation they outlast the life of a car.

To install, simply remove the regular push rods—replace with JOY HYDRAULICS—just a few moments’ job—and the trick is done! Then a SILENT MOTOR FOREVER!

ORDER NATIVE SONS GOLDEN WEST

DISTINGUISHED, ABOVE ALL, FOR LOYALTY

James A. Wilson

GRAND PRESIDENT.

"IN THE YEAR 1890 THE WRITER of this article was standing upon the sidewalks of San Francisco viewing a parade of the Native Sons of the Golden West. The Order was celebrating the fortieth anniversary of the admission of California into the Sisterhood of States, September 9, 1850.

"As I viewed that wonderful parade, with its colorful portrayal of our State's history, there was brought vividly to my mind the wonderfully romantic story clustering around California—a vision of her matchless beauty of mountain, valley and ocean shore, and a glimpse of her boundless resources.

"Then and there was kindled in my heart the desire to join the fraternity which was to perpetuate the memory of our Pioneer ancestors and the glory of our fair State. With the desire came the opportunity, for, in the section of the city where I lived, a Parlor of Native Sons had been organized and was flourishing. It had taken its name from that old historic landmark, Rincon Hill, and it was in Rincon Parlor, No. 72, that I sought membership and was initiated, October 24, 1890.

"And now, when the Fifty-second Session of the Grand Parlor convenes in San Francisco, May 20, 1929, I shall have the pleasure and the honor to preside over its deliberations as the Grand President of our beloved fraternity.

"In looking back over my many years of membership in the fraternity, I cannot fail to recall the inspiring lessons of patriotism taught within its council chambers and to realize how much it has done to advance good citizenship.

"We are taught that the Order was conceived in Loyalty and was born under the Stars and Stripes; that its principles are Friendship, Loyalty and Charity; that it endeavors to perpetuate in the minds and hearts of all Californians the memories of the days of '49 and those deeds performed by that mighty race of men and women who fronted and pioneered over the trails and the roads leading into California.

"The Order of Native Sons of the Golden West is a patriotic, as well as a beneficial, organization, and is distinguished, above all others, for its loyalty to American institutions and its love of the Flag of the United States of America. It welcomes all sons of California who are loyal and of good character, regardless of creed or political beliefs.

"During the past fifty-two years the Order has met every obligation to its sick and needy members. It has also spent thousands of dollars in helping to restore missions, placing tablets upon historical landmarks throughout the State, and erecting and assisting in the erection of monuments to the memory of the early Pioneers, among whom are General A. M. Winn, Founder of the Order; Father Junipero Serra, Founder of the California missions; Rear Admiral Sloat; Admiral Farragut; Commodore Stockton, at Mare Island Navy Yard; Senator Stephen M. White, a deceased member of Ramona Parlor tain two fellowships at the University of California for study and research concerning the early history of the Pacific Coast. Furthermore, it aims:

"To arouse and strengthen loyalty to and love for State and Nation;

"To elevate and improve the manhood on which the destiny of the country depends;

"To assist in the development of the wonderful natural resources of California;

"To conserve the waters, protect the forests, improve the rivers and harbors, and beautify the cities and towns;

"To collect, make known and preserve the romantic history of the State;

"To provide homes for California's homeless children, regardless of race, creed or color;

"To keep this land, bordering on the waters of the Pacific Ocean, a paradise for the American Citizen, by keeping from its shores all undesirable persons of foreign nations.

"The Native Sons of the Golden West are inspired by the constitution and laws of the United States, and have pledged themselves to promote the best interests of California and the United States.

"A son of California is proud of his nativity, not because he claims superior rights to men born beyond the confines of California, but because he is, by birthright, deeply interested in the material upbuilding of the State of California and remembers what a glorious heritage has been bequeathed to him by the Pioneers.

"In conclusion, let me say that among the membership of the Order of Native Sons of the Golden West are some of the best and leading citizens of this land, men who, in private life as well as in public affairs, have risen to the highest positions in their communities, the state and the nation. The whole world today, both in nations and fraternities, is looking for leaders—men who are able to combine the spirit of goodwill and patriotism—that spirit of patriotism which prompts a man in his daily rounds of duty to serve his fellowmen, his state and his nation.

"If you have caught the spirit of this patriotic Order, if your heart beats with love and pride for California, if you want to have a part in moulding the destiny of this great State, if you desire to help safeguard the welfare of your birthplace, if you want to work with men who make Love of Country and of State synonymous with Love of Home and of Family, if you want to keep California first, your duty is to JOIN NOW THE ORDER OF NATIVE SONS OF THE GOLDEN WEST."

No. 109, at Los Angeles; the Bear Flag Parity, at Sonoma, and the Donner Party, at Truckee. The Donner monument and the eleven acres of land surrounding it were deeded to the State of California by the Native Sons, August 18, 1928.

Seventy-Fifth Year

IT is a year of opportunity which this store is making notable in the history of San Francisco. Looking back seventy-five years to the early fifties, before even a railroad connected the Golden West to the thriving East, we see a young city topped by seven hills, a little store on Sacramento Street known as the Dry Goods Shop of Davidson and Lane, and a young French lad in his 'teens. The lad is Raphael Weill, whose strong, lovable, friendly personality early dominated the business which afterwards became The White House.

AMID the ever-changing panorama of history, styles and social customs since 1854, it has been the ambition of this store to play an all-important part in the lives of the people of the Bay district.

ITS most valuable contribution to gracious living has been its ability to provide the best merchandise obtainable in the markets of the world at the fairest possible prices—maintaining at all times its slogan of Style, Quality, Value and Service.

TO you, Native Sons and Daughters of this great State, whose loyal patronage has made possible the growth and success of

The White House, we extend a sincere welcome.

SAN FRANCISCO PLANS ELABORATE ENTERTAINMENT FOR N. S. GRAND PARLOR

Eugene H. O'Donnell

SAN FRANCISCO'S NATIVE SONS, through the Extension of the Order Committee, have completed arrangements for the entertainment of delegates and visitors to the Fifty-second Grand Parlor of the Order of Native Sons of the Golden West which convenes in San Francisco, May 20. The Extension of the Order Committee, composed of representatives from all the twenty-eight San Francisco Subordinate Parlors, is striving to make this the greatest of all Grand Parlors, and intends to furnish entertainment that will be hard for future Grand Parlor cities to equal. Grand Trustee Charles A. Koenig (Golden Gate No. 29) is the active general chairman, Grand President James A. Wilson (Rincon No. 72) the honorary chairman and Grand Secretary John T. Regan (South San Francisco No. 157) the honorary secretary in charge of Grand Parlor arrangements, while Joseph Rose (Marshall No. 202) is chairman of the Extension of the Order Committee.

CHARLES A. KOENIG,
Grand Trustee, and General Chairman
Grand Parlor Committee.

San Francisco, through her Native Sons, is prepared to maintain her reputation as "The City That Knows How" and to lavish hospitality on all the delegates. Ever since, at Redding last year, they were awarded the Fifty-second Grand Parlor, San Francisco's Native Sons have been looking forward to its convening. The committee feels that if any delegate goes home from this year's Grand Parlor dissatisfied, it will be because he is tired out from one continual round of pleasure or else is physically unable to enjoy himself. A perusal of the following program will substantiate this statement:

Delegates will begin arriving Sunday, May 19, and will be taken to the Registration Committee, who will be stationed on the main floor of Native Sons Building, 430 Mason street. There they will register and secure their hotel accommodations, souvenir badges, and tickets for the various features of entertainment.

FRIENDSHIP

(EDGAR A. GUEST.)

Riches come and riches go,
Stocks that rise can tumble low,
Through the fingers fortunes slip,
Storms may wreck the stoutest ship.
Only friendships tried and true
Surely last a lifetime through.

On this old terrestrial ball
Up we climb and down we fall,
By mysterious ways and strange
Fads and whims and fancies change,
But the faithful friends we make
Cling to us for friendship's sake.

Work for money, work for place,
To your duty set your face,
Play the neighbor, play the man,
Brave life's battle best you can,
But remember to the end,
He is blessed who has a friend.

Misers clinging to their gold
Find life's journey bleak and cold,
Men who rise by strength alone
Soon or late are overthrown,
But when storms and trials sweep,
Friends are all a man can keep.

—Exchange.

SAN FRANCISCO OF TODAY

GREETINGS TO MEMBERS OF THE Native Sons Grand Parlor! San Francisco—The City the World Loves—is proud to have you hold your annual meeting in this city, discovered by Don Gaspar de Portola and his little band of followers in 1769. This will be no historical sketch of the city by the Golden Gate. Your editor requested a 2,500-word story of San Francisco today. "Omit the historical," he said, "the boys and girls should know their history."

"The story of San Francisco, where to go, what to see and everything worth while about today," were ye editor's order. "But don't overlook pertinent facts," he added. It cannot be done. So a tabloid of San Francisco will be herewith presented.

Why is San Francisco the beloved city of the world? One reason is because of its climate. We have cool summers and warm winters. It's never hot enough to complain and never cold enough to freeze. The mean temperature for 20 years for December, January and February was 50.8 degrees; for June, July and August, 56.5 degrees. You who come from the interior and today is the highest in the United States, $2,845 per person in 1928. Now, here are a few facts compiled by the San Francisco Chamber of Commerce. They are facts, not fancies:

Sixty-nine percent of our population is native White; 27 percent foreign born White; all other makes up the difference. Principal groups of foreign White are Italian, German, Irish, English and Canadian.

In 1928 there were 252,043 registered voters in San Francisco.

Our form of government is city and county combined, with mayor and board of eighteen supervisors.

The birth rate is 12.28 per thousand; death rate, 12.45 per thousand; infant mortality rate in 1928 was 45 per thousand in live births, which is the lowest of all large cities.

School enrollment, 1928, was 102,173. There are 104 public schools and about 100 private schools. In addition there are several degree

The 1927 figures (latest by United States Census Department) showed 2,086 industrial plants in San Francisco, with 42,078 wage earners, drawing down the handsome total of $61,108,185, while the value of the industrial production was $437,925,582. So much for industrial San Francisco. Now a word for the San Francisco Bay District: There are 3,743 plants; 97,731 wage earners; $138,918,174 paid in wages, and the value of products, $1,133,476,038.

As for retail and wholesale business, there has been but one census of retail and wholesale trade taken in the United States, which was in 1926, for fourteen cities only. San Francisco was one of these.

Now let us turn our attention for a moment to San Francisco Bay and the Port of San Francisco—the premier port of the Pacific and the second port in the United States, ranking next to New York. The Golden Gate connects the Pacific Ocean and San Francisco Bay—an inland body of water 450 square miles that can accommodate the navies of the world. At the upper end of the bay the Sacramento which, with the San Joaquin River, opens up a great inland empire to the bay.

of the state and from the south, bring along your overcoats. You know San Francisco.

San Francisco is a city of 756,188 souls. This population has come steadily. There has never been a boom here. There never was a time when San Francisco real estate was given away, and the prospects are that there will never be such a time.

San Francisco land is valuable. Its industrial establishments are built on a sound foundation. Wages have always been high. Living conditions have always been the best. The per capita wealth of the inhabitants has always been high institutions, and some of the best-known universities and colleges within commuting distance.

At the end of 1928 there were 53,781 dwellings; 10,660 apartment houses with accommodations for 112,782 families; 13,425 flats with accommodations for 26,850 families, and 1,600 hotels with accommodations for approximately 100,000 persons.

Assessed valuation in 1928 was $1,055,867,698, and property is assessed here at 50 percent of its true value. The tax rate for 1928-1929 is $3.96 per $100 assessed value; this is the city and county combined rate.

San Francisco Harbor has some 15 miles of berthing space; 45 modern piers; docking facilities to accommodate the largest vessels; berthing space for 190 vessels 400 feet long, which can berth at one time; cargo capacity of the berths exceeds more than 700,000 tons; a belt line railroad connecting piers and warehouses. This belt line is 54 miles long, equipped with cars, cranes, derricks and aials. The harbor and belt line are operated by the State of California and, according to government officials, San Francisco is one of the best and most efficiently managed harbors in the country.

In 1928 a total of 7,555 vessels, with a net registered tonnage of 18,100,440 tons, entered this port. This is an increase of 510 vessels and 1,223,609 tons more than entered the port in 1927.

Exports during 1928 were valued at $201,440,402 and imports at $198,301,326, or a total business through the port of $399,741,728. The total value of all water-borne commerce, including foreign and domestic trade, in 1927 was $2,172,264,433. Figures for 1928 have not been compiled by the government at the time this is written (April 20, 1929).

Speaking of the Port of San Francisco, Samuel S. Sandberg of Los Angeles, commissioner of the United States Shipping Board, says: "One-fifth of the entire foreign trade of the Pacific Coast in 1927 was handled by San Francisco. This included 31 percent of the import tonnage and 17 percent of the export tonnage passing through all Pacific Coast ports. The imports in 1927 were over 1,380,000 tons, while the export movement in 1927 was over 2,260,000 tons, an increase of 63 percent.

"The combined imports and exports in long tons during the period from 1922 to 1927, inclusive, to world ports has increased 123 percent, while trade between the Pacific Coast ports and the European ports has shown an increase of almost 80 percent during the same period.

"During the fiscal year 1927, the total carriage of Pacific Coast imports and exports amounted to over 14,800,000 long tons, of which the dry cargo was 60 percent of the total.

"The foregoing figures of tonnage movement are significant and portray a future for San Francisco and the entire West Coast that warrants careful investigation and, in my judgment, vigorous action by our shipping interests so that they will receive their full share of the monetary profit that is sure to come."

With the foregoing picture of facts, figures and dollars and cents before one, it is easy to see that San Francisco should be the financial center, for the banks and investment houses make the wheels of commerce turn smoothly. San Francisco leads every city west of Chicago in bank clearings, bank debits, resources and deposits, and is second only to New York in transactions over the stock exchange. San Francisco also leads the West as an insurance center. It is the headquarters of the Twelfth Federal Reserve District, has the third largest bank in the United States and nine of its banks are among the first 100 in the nation. Bank debits 1928:

New York City .....	$500,210,862,000
Chicago .....	51,162,395,000
Philadelphia .....	25,678,011,000
Boston .....	25,267,896,000
San Francisco .....	18,384,202,000

In 1928, San Francisco's bank clearings totaled $11,491,219,374, ranking fifth to New York, Chicago, Philadelphia and Boston, in the order named. Transactions over the San Francisco Stock Exchange in 1928 totaled $1,991,833,089.

Now that you have the business of San Francisco of today out of the way, it might be just as well to remind you of a few other interesting facts:

"San Francisco has only one drawback," wrote Rudyard Kipling, "'tis hard to leave."

Lovers of attractive and quaint shops will enjoy San Francisco, there being scores of these establishments conducted by Americans, French, Germans, Chinese, Japanese, Italians and right on through the alphabet. And, of course, you will want to visit Chinatown again. No matter how often you go there, you'll always find something new and interesting.

Restaurants and hotels of San Francisco you know. Good things to eat have been provided by successive generations of chefs who have achieved fame. You can have your meals dished out a la American, French, Spanish, Italian.

HUNTINGTON FALLS,
Man-made attraction of Golden Gate Park. The water is pumped by windmills.

Hungarian, Chinese, Japanese, Russian or what-not, according to your taste.

Of theaters there are scores, and seats can be had from ten cents up.

As for out-of-door recreation, here in San Francisco is where you can have your pick, whether it be baseball, football, tennis, bowling, races, swimming or many of the special pastimes provided by the park and athletic commissioners.

San Francisco has golf courses enough to take care of thousands. Of the eight links in the city, two are municipal, which opens the way for all classes of players to indulge in their favorite pastime without delay or inconvenience. Some of the courses are pronounced equal to any in the country.

For those preferring the great outdoors and the "wilds," there is Golden Gate Park with its 1,013 acres, four miles long and a half-mile wide, filled with forests, lakes, streams, waterfalls, gardens, playgrounds and homelike reservations for domiciled wild animals. This park is all man-made and is one of the most magnificent in the country. There are miles of fine driveways, paths and bridle-paths, and acres of thick woods and beautiful lawns and valleys. Nine baseball diamonds, a dozen tennis courts, a complete children's playground, a thirty-acre stadium with trotting speedway sixty feet wide and a mile around, football and track stadium, are some of the outstanding features of the great park.

A few blocks from the business district is Chinatown—the largest colony of Chinese outside of China, grouped within an area of some twenty square blocks. Here you find joss houses, shops, emporiums, bazaars and food shops. The telephone exchange is "all Chinese," hello-girls, numbers, etc. Only, the operators call by name in most instances, instead of by number.

North Beach, or the Italian district, is just north and northeast of Chinatown. On the edge of the Latin quarter is Fisherman's Wharf, where sightseers can spend an interesting hour watching the fishermen as they unload launch after launch of fresh fish of all species and crabs by the thousands.

Mission Dolores, founded by Padre Junipero Serra in 1776, is in the center of the city and easily reached by automobile and street cars, and in easy walking distance from the centrally located hotels.

See San Francisco's Civic Center, with its City Hall, Auditorium, Library and State Building.

Within easy reach of San Francisco are Muir Woods, Mount Tamalpais, Berkeley, Oakland, Alameda, Palo Alto and Stanford University.

Telling Native Sons and Native Daughters of the Golden West about San Francisco is perhaps as foolish as introducing brothers and sisters. San Francisco has played such a big part in your organization that you know the city, perhaps, better than most San Franciscans know it.

San Francisco welcomes you, and the San Francisco Chamber of Commerce extends to each of you an invitation to let us serve you during your convention here.

AUTOS MAKE BIG GAIN.

Automobile registrations in California for the first three months of this year showed an increase of 133,898 over the same period last year, and fees increased nearly $1,100,000.

Collections by the State Division of Motor Vehicles up to March 31 amounted to $8,144,457.60, as compared with collections of $7,294,792.25 in 1928.

LOS ANGELES TAKES PLACE IN THE SUN

(PUBLICITY DEPARTMENT, LOS ANGELES CHAMBER COMMERCE.)

CROWING FROM THE OPEN FIELDS of the watershed off the Sierra Nevada, the little Mexican village on the Los Angeles River has taken its place among the capital cities of the world. Los Angeles' metropolitan area has become the greatest industrial center on the Pacific Coast. The atmosphere of the "old" California is very prominent in the architecture and the plan of the streets. The climate affords a year-round playground for the three and a half million people in California South, with nearly a million pleasure cars. Instead of the proverbial saying, "taking legs and walking off," the people of the southland literally get on wheels and see the many scenic points of interest in the mountains and on the Pacific Coast. Paved highways, that make Caesar's Appian Way system look like a bunch of cowpaths leading to a waterhole, honeycomb the entire southern half of the state.

Forest lands that have never been entered by roads lie within a few days' hike back into the High Sierras from Los Angeles. Good highways lead into the heart of the forest lands, and several mountain lakes perched in the mountain tops are within three hours' driving distance from the city. Two notable ones, Arrowhead and Big Bear, are connected with a wide boulevard along the crest of the San Bernardino Mountains. A clear view of the plain leading to the ocean and some of the Channel group of islands, Catalina most often, can be seen from this road. On the other side of the range the Mojave Desert is always clearly visible and many of the colors of the desert are perceptible at sunset and sunrise.

Here the automobile reaches its fullest use. Week-ends find nearly the entire population "on wheels," so to speak, headed for some camping spot along the ocean or back in the mountains or out in the desert. Incidentally, to explode a popular fallacy, the desert of California South does not hold the terrors generally attributed to it. Good roads cross and re-cross it, while strung along these at convenient points are service stations and eating places. As a rule, people of California South go to the desert during the winter months, since winters in the desert are pleasantly warm and the night chilly enough to make the air exhilarating. The love of the desert—its appalling vastness, its glorious sunsets, properly policed and protected by forest rangers—those picturesque guardians of the public domain.

Of all the sports enjoyed the year around in Los Angeles County, golf is the most patronized. There are more than fifty golf courses in the metropolitan area. Every community in this section maintains one or more courses of the "pay-as-you-enter" type. There are, in addition to these, many privately-owned golf courses usually appended to some sort of a club. Country clubs, beach clubs and several mountain resorts maintain courses. One can play with the scent of the salt air in his nostrils or drive over the of the cities of the nation shows that the Los Angeles district has gained in most of the field of industrial activity. The largest increase to the year 1927, when the government figures were taken, was in the motion-picture industry. There was an increase of $15,000,000, and this figure antedates the inception of the "talkie." Other notable increases range from $3,500,000 in newspaper and periodical publication to $5,500,000 in bread and baking products output. The gain in the number of new industries was 1 percent, and the gain in the number of wage earners 14.5 percent. New fields are being opened by the merchants and manufacturers for the extension of their markets into the bordering states and the Middle West.

Since the start of the development of Los Angeles Harbor in 1871 the growth of the volume of business handled by the harbor official has been little short of phenomenal. From negligible, unimportant fishing settlement, the harbor of Los Angeles has taken its place among the leaders of the world. It is closely connected with the Long Beach Channel and it is practically one harbor. It is served by five railroads to handle the transcontinental traffic and especially the trade with the Western states.

Los Angeles City and County have expended about $25,000,000 in the improvement, and the Federal Government has put $10,544,000 into the development. Now the Los Angeles-Long Beach Harbor stands first in the nation in intercoastal commerce, sixth in foreign tonnage and second in export tonnage. It is one of the nation's youngest harbors, but it has taken its place with the leaders, and in point of years it is only a baby.

A hinterland filled with a vast wealth of raw materials; a climate that materially lowers building costs and raises the efficiency of labor growing markets both at home and abroad; excellent rail, water and highway transportation facilities, an abundance of cheap hydro-electric energy as well as natural gas and crude oil—all these have combined to make Metropolitan Los Angeles a city of tremendous industrial importance.

Industrial plants have been locating in Los Angeles at the rate of approximately 300 a year or one for every working day. In addition, 10 branch warehouses and wholesale stocks were opened in the city last year. It is estimated that these new industries, when in full operation will give employment to 7,500 persons and add some $12,000,000 to the local payroll.

Despite the encroachments on available agricultural lands by these great commercial and industrial expansions and the county's growth in port in the Sierras. Others prefer the odor of the orange blossoms and eucalyptus trees.

Beach sports and swimming are an all-year pastime in the vicinity of Los Angeles, for the temperature of the water remains at 65 degrees the year around. Swimmers of the more venturesome type enjoy the breakers crashing on the coast. The numerous bays and inlets in the county furnish good places for the less-daring swimmer. Trapeze and other athletic equipment have been built on the beaches by the Los Angeles City Playground Department for public use. Some of the far-famed beach resorts of the Los Angeles district are at Santa Monica, Ocean Park, Venice, Playa Del Rey, Manhattan, Hermosa, Redondo, Long Beach, Seal Beach, Huntington Beach, Newport and Balboa. Most of these places have club accommodations.

The new Los Angeles City Hall is the pride of the people of the state's metropolis and does credit to the architect who planned it. The city is governed by the mayor-council system.

The recent federal census of the manufactures its carpet of wildflowers which spring up following the winter rains, and the clearness of its air—soon gets into one's blood.

The long coastline of the Pacific affords myriad places to camp over the week-end. Here one can find miles of sparkling beaches or rugged headlands on which to pitch camp. The Coast highway, connecting Canada with Mexico, runs along the ocean in California South. Driving along this superb stretch of pavement, one cannot help being impressed by the great numbers of gay-colored tents dotting the beaches.

Or, tiring of desert and seashore, one can camp high in the mountains among the pine trees, on the shore of some crystal lake or along a turbulent mountain stream. Countless roads lead into these mountain fastnesses which are population, Los Angeles County continues to lead all counties of the nation, according to census figures, in the production of agricultural products. Last year it produced a total of $95,052,518 worth of products, divided as follows: field crops, $9,242,456; truck crops, $11,481,804; livestock, $26,489,062; fruits and nuts, $45,839,152.

These, briefly, are the facts about the commercial and industrial sides of Los Angeles County life. It presents, perhaps, a greater opportunity for almost any line of endeavor than any other part of the country. It is growing, and is its great back country which comprises the eleven Western states, and its foreign trade territory comprising the nations of the Pacific, which dwell two-thirds of the world's population.

As for employment, people contemplating residence here are advised to come prepared financially as they would in going to any large city or section new to them. A period of time used ally elapses in going to any new section before suitable employment is found. Many come expecting to find employment immediately. In many cases they do, or have employment provided for in advance. There is keen competition for positions, as so many people desire to make Los Angeles County their permanent home. Los Angeles County is not unlike any other region in the matter of employment. In fact, its industrial and commercial expansion rapidly absorbs the unemployed. You should come prepared for joying the full life that is to be found only in such a rural environment. And in doing so, they have not sacrificed any of the advantages known to the city dweller in other parts of the country. Electricity, gas, sewers and good domestic water supply are available in all tracts of this kind.

While many newcomers are developing these small farms as home places only, without thought of income, others are making substantial return in addition to supplying their own needs in the way of fruits, vegetables and poultry products. On tracts of three to five acres in extent, where ample finances are available for a start, many families are making a sustaining income and profit from their activity.

the period of readjustment always necessary in taking up residence in any new locality.

Los Angeles County offers a unique opportunity in its "small farms" tracts of one-half to five acres in extent surrounding Los Angeles City on every side. Because of the ideal living conditions they insure, the small farms have become an important factor in the social advancement of this area, and thousands of families have successfully built up their little places and are en-

When the objective is beauty and comfort in home surroundings, together with the supplying of the family table with produce, then one can follow his own bent in the development of these small places and be assured of beneficent natural advantages in furthering the success of his plantings. However, if an income from the care of the small farm is desired, certain combinations of crops and livestock have been found best adapted to such intensive effort. From three to five acres is considered the smallest unit from which one can expect to secure independence.

The small farm offers a challenge to the ingenuity, initiative and energy of its operator, and is not merely a place to live but an opportunity for inspiration and maintenance of health and happiness, as well as a source of financial gain. Those who have developed them have found the environment that is so desirable, a life that is all the more pleasant because it is being lived in California South.

TREES FOR ROADSIDE PLANTINGS— NATIVE VARIETIES USUALLY BEST

Oak trees, of which there are species native to nearly all parts of the country, are more generally used for roadside planting than any other kind of tree, says the Federal Agricultural Department's public roads bureau. Maples are next in importance for a large part of the country, but as the most-used species are not well adapted for the purpose, the selection must be carefully made.

For the cooler dry regions the most promising trees are green ash, common locust, hackberry, thornless honey-locust and poplars, with box-elder, willows and poplars for the extremes of cold and drought. In warm, dry climates the eucalyptus or gums, the palms, the Jerusalem thorn and the mesquite are good.

Only thrifty, vigorous trees, with healthy foliage, look well along country roads. To secure this type for any location it is usually best to select native varieties, although trees from localities with similar growing conditions are frequently satisfactory.

GENERAL SUTTER SOLD SITE PRESENT CITY MARYSVILLE

Among the old records in Yuba County, says the "Sutter County Farmer" of Yuba City, is one hearing date of January 1850, wherein General John A. Sutter sold the present site of Marysville to Charles Covillaud, Jose Ramirez, Theodore Sicard and John Thompson.

The boundaries were the Yuba and Feather Rivers, with a line drawn across the country or the north between the two rivers. The price was $10,000. Stephen J. Field, afterwards Justice of the United States Supreme Court, drew up the deed.

BY no means is it a difficult task to respond to a request for some expression on the future of our great state. Whatever is said, or may have been said, about our enthusiastic praise of California, to the end that we were inclined to be super-indulgent, has only served the good purpose of proving our claims, once our critics were given the opportunity to visit or, better still, live among us.

Distance, as measured by miles, is rapidly being reduced to a most astonishing minimum as related to time. There is no longer any "Far West," when the Easterner talks about the Pacific Coast states. Communication is instantaneous.

Surely we are not boasting when we accept with pride and due acknowledgment the statements from some of the foremost educators of the country, who say that California has the lead over other states in public schools; that the modern educational methods offered by California schools and colleges surpass those of other states because of natural advantages which have been properly applied. The greatest compliment that could be paid to any community.

We could scarcely be justly accused of boasting when we repeat the statement of a recent visitor who represents one of the largest chemical organizations in the world and who is negotiating the purchase of property for a manufacturing plant to cover several acres, when he expressed his preference for Los Angeles in the following few words: "The most pleasant community to live in we know of . . . the most attractive power rates . . . actual savings in transportation to our new markets sufficient to pay a good part of attractive dividend."

With reverence let us pay respect to the memory of our Fathers who saw and believed in the future of this land we now enjoy and who stood diligently beside their responsibilities under hardships which we now speak of as romance, but which, after all, took brave hearts and, many times, heroic courage we know little of.

CALIFORNIA HAPPENINGS OF FIFTY YEARS AGO

Thomas R. Jones

(COMPILED EXPRESSLY FOR THE GRIZZLY BEAR.)

THE ELECTION OF MAY 7, 1879, TO decide the fate of California's New Constitution, proved one of the great ballot-box surprises which the state occasionally experiences. Political doers of the time predicted it would be rejected by a large majority, but just the reverse resulted. The vote was: 77,959 for, 67,134 against; majority for, 10,825. It was a case where the country downed the city, for while every city excepting Los Angeles was against the New Constitution, the country precincts were invariably for it, many giving it an almost-unanimous vote. As usual, dire calamities predicted by both pros and cons did not materialize, and soon were forgotten.

The politicians began organizing for the next contest, and everybody went about their tasks as usual. An Irishman at Nevada City, Nevada County, settled a dispute as to the merits of the New Constitution by stating to a coterie of voters on election day: "It makes no difference any way, bejabbers, for if it carries that — President Hayes will veto it."

The adoption of the New Constitution infused new life into the Workingmen's party, and the Democrats began flirting with it, but the leaders were adamant. A new party, called the New Constitution party, was launched by the San Francisco "Chronicle" and a coterie of political hacks, who claimed the necessity of the hour was that the New Constitution should be kept in the hands of its friends. For a short time the idea was popular, and the new party appeared to be rapidly gaining adherents until Dennis Kearney threw a chilling douche over it by dubbing it the "Honorable Bilks," and that name stuck.

A municipal election at Redwood City, San Mateo County, May 5 gave the Workingmen's party its first defeat, the Citizen's ticket winning by 100 majority. But Nevada City, Nevada County, encouraged the Workingmen, the election there going in favor of that party.

The month was the coldest May on record in the state since 1849. There was a frost May 16, and showers fell for four days during the month, registering 1.15 inches of rainfall.

Mining companies' dividends fell this month to $446,000, compared with $2,556,000 paid during May 1878.

Statistics showed that during the month

6,245 people came into the state by sea and by land, and 3,406 departed.

PIGEONS IMPORTED FROM IOWA.

Work of sinking an artesian well at the Norris Grant (now North Sacramento) in Sacramento County stopped this month, at a depth of 2,147 feet, with not a drop of water in sight. The well was in soapstone for nearly its entire depth.

A broken whetstone, found at Donner Lake, Nevada County, with the initials "J. F. R." cut upon its side was believed to have been owned by James Frazier Reed, originator of the "Donner Party" in 1846, who became a prominent citizen of Santa Clara County.

A six-pound shad, caught in the Sacramento River near Courtland, Sacramento County, was declared by a citizen who purchased it and had never before partaken of that species of fish, a "bone-anza."

The month was one of the greatest picnic seasons yet experienced in California. Never before were the wild flowers more plentiful nor the grass greener, due to the ample April showers. Practically every organization in the state, religious, fraternal and civic, had an excursion and a day in the woods.

A picnic of the Sarsfield Guard, a military company of San Francisco, at San Jose, Santa Clara County, May 28, was declared a disgrace to California manhood. The captain, members of the company and a majority of the accompanying hoodlums got drunk, and fights were numerous. Wm. Henry was pushed off the train and killed. San Jose expressed the hope the guard would never come there again.

Owing to so many gun clubs of the state holding pigeon shoots, those birds became very scarce and soared to such a high price that supplies were being brought in from Iowa. A Sacramento City club substituted bats for pigeons, and a trap was specially designed to toss them into the air. The supply came principally from the City Water Works building, whence the bats came forth at night to fly to the Yolo marshes for their mosquito meal. When the Southern Pacific Company began burning oil in its engines the smoke, when crossing the marshes, killed the mosquitoes, and with the loss of their food supply the bats disappeared.

Frances Murphy, national temperance advocate, opened a crusade in San Francisco, and through his efforts 5,000 people signed the roll and took the temperance pledge.

"LUCKY" BALDWIN TAKEN IN.

At Oroville, Butte County, a baseball club called the "Blue Stockings" was organized among the young women of the town. They played a match game and the editor of the "Mercury," reporting it, said: "The members of the club did not reveal the name inspiration. The shortstop, a schoolteacher, raised a rumpus by catching, in her excitement, a fly with her apron instead of with her hands."

About October 1, 1878, a party registering as R. Sevenoaks of London, England, became a guest of the Baldwin hotel in San Francisco. He immediately sought an introduction to "Lucky" Baldwin, the proprietor, and, representing himself to be the scion of an English lord, soon became a crony of Baldwin's. Sierra Nevada mining stock was selling then near its top price of $250 a share. The Englishman expressed a desire to invest, and as "Lucky" was a "bull" in the market he advised doing so. A letter of credit, issued by the Bank of England for $25,000, was handed to Baldwin, with a request to buy 100 shares, and on the strength of the security he bought, and carried in the account with his broker, the 100 shares. The stock now began to steadily decline, but the Englishman manifested no desire to close the deal, and "Lucky" was too considerate of his feelings to insist on his doing so. When the debacle came in November and Sierra Nevada dropped like a plummet to $40 a share, "Lucky" thought it was time for his English friend to cover. Making inquiry for him, he found he had been non est for a week. Man and baggage were gone, whence, nobody knew, and a cable to the Bank of England brought back information that he was unknown there and that the letter of credit was a forgery. The police, after some months of search, found him living in a waterfront hotel under a different cognomen and eating one meal a day owing to his financial condition. What to charge him with was now a question. There had been no exchange of property; the letter of credit could not be proven a forgery unless a witness from the Bank of England in London was brought to San Francisco to testify; "Lucky" had accepted it as a deposit, and it

"WE'RE GRANDPARENTS NOW"

EVERYBODY LOVES A BABY! IF FATE is unkind and the stork has been unwise in his allotments, too generous with some families and unmindful of others, there remains the inspiration and the right to seek a child who needs what the disappointed ones have to give. When one studies the records of a child-placing society or the court recordings of adoption proceedings between natural parents and foster parents, one realizes that there are thousands of well-balanced, intelligent, hearty, affectionate, moral men and women who do not choose to go on living indefinitely without children, and if a husband and wife are happy together and are able financially to assume the responsibility of rearing children, there seems to be no good reason why they should be denied the blessed companionship of a child. No matter how pretentious their home may be, how perfect in its appointments; whether they own an expensive auto and are free to come and go and satisfy all material whims, the time will come sooner or later when the man and woman will face the fact that their lives are incomplete, that in the mad rush for new thrills and the unusual experiences they have overlooked the most lovely and interesting thing in the world—the companionship of a child.

There may be many misgivings, to be sure, when they start their quest—those childless couples; they may follow a dozen disappointing leads after they have made up their minds to look for the right child, and they may meet many discouragements in getting possession of great joy in the constantly increasing number of foster parents who are finding real comfort and companionship in the children who were taken for adoption when they were from two months to six years of age and are now sixteen, eighteen and twenty years old. There have been disappointments too—not all have been blessings unalloyed—but this was not always due entirely to lack in the child, and the proportion of failures decreases as the proofs of success increase.

In the mail during this nineteenth year of the committee's existence there have come invitations to graduating exercises of children placed in infancy by this organization. With one there came the following letter:

ONE OF "OUR" GRANDCHILDREN.

"Committee on Homeless Children of Native Sons and Native Daughters—Dear Friends: I thought you would be interested to know that the little boy we adopted through your organization fourteen years ago is now completing his high school course very creditably. He has grown to be large and strong, of fine physique, and is considered one of the superior boys in our community. I am sending you an invitation to his graduating exercises and his picture so that you may judge for yourselves.

"We truly have never regretted having taken him into our hearts. There have been few problems. He always has been of robust health and has been dependable at all times. He is graduating at the age of eighteen on a good, solid course of study. He will take a course in Berkeley in commercial work in the near future. Rearing our son has brought only happiness and satisfaction to us both. Sincerely and gratefully yours, Mrs. R."

Your secretary remembers the day, as though it were yesterday, that she took this little fellow to his new home—the six hours on the train, when he would look up into her face with a little who-are-you-anyway sort of quizzical expression; the meeting of the foster parents at the station; and as we drove to their home, the glances that flashed between them which seemed to say "I'm satisfied, aren't you?" and, thank God, the boy never has given them cause to change that first impression of him, or done aught to cloud that light of contentment in their eyes.

Another mother writes under date of January 1929 about her daughter who went to her when a small child:

"Dear Miss Brusie: You have not heard from us for quite a long time, and I wonder if you will be interested to know that we have built a new home in — and have been settled in it since August. We shall be glad to have you come and see us when you are in this vicinity.

"Our daughter C. is nearly as tall as I and weighs almost as much. Last night, when she was ready to go to a party, daddy and I agreed that she looked quite beautiful and (alas!) quite young-ladyish. She is a very sweet, lovable daughter and a comfort to us. Of course, there are times when she is not such a comfort, but there are only a few of us who are perfect all of the time. She makes her school grades regularly and is doing quite well. The same is true of her music. She keeps at it and really is eager to take lessons.

"She has an interesting circle of friends here and they do have the happiest times! I often think of the day in your office when you told us that you had sat in that chair for fourteen years (I believe you said) and now you have checked off several more since then, and I am sure that you and your organization have accomplished much good. I should love to bring C. in to see you all some day, if I could manage it without embarrassment for her. Affectionately yours, B."

Into our office there came during the last year a beautiful girl of eighteen. I use the adjective thoughtfully. Beauty of mind and soul showed in the girl's face and eclipsed the beauty of red-brown wavy hair and soft brown eyes, and clear unpainted skin—a girl that hundreds would have given all of their earthly possessions for the satisfaction of knowing that the lovely creature was the result of their example and training. When one listened to the foster mother as she related the various complicated situations or differences of opinion and how they had been met, there was again a little prayer of gratitude in the worker's heart to the Heavenly Father and a thank you, almost stifled because of its intensity, to the woman who had been, through all the seventeen years, an understanding mother. Yes, perhaps father came in for his share of appreciation too, but he didn't happen to be there to hear it.

a child when once they find him. They may even go so far as to accept a child from his natural parents and then, before they have awakened to the necessity of legal proceedings, find that the parents want their child returned. They may have been spared this tragedy by having put themselves in the hands of a licensed child-placing agency whose business it is to protect them, as well as the child and the natural parents, a society that will be honest in giving to foster parents the child's full history and in pointing out to them what they have a reasonable right to expect will be the child's development under the right environment.

These childless couples may succeed in finding the right child, for whom they "Wouldn't take a million;" the "Only child in the State of California;" "Nothing we could change him for"—and right in the midst of their happiness complete there may come flooding over them anxieties and fears as to how the child is going to "turn out." Misgivings may overwhelm them as they study the wonderful workings of a child's mind and heart and soul, and realize as never before the seriousness of their self-appointed duty, the real need for wisdom and understanding and guidance.

Having for years listened to the many expressed hopes and fears and quandaries that come to foster parents, in the same degree that they come to conscientious natural parents, as the child approaches the trying age of adolescence, the Native Sons and the Native Daughters Homeless Children Committee is experiencing

SAN FRANCISCO'S NATIVE SON PARLORS

(CLARENCE M. HUNT.)

THE ORDER OF NATIVE SONS OF THE Golden West owes its origin to one of the strongest feelings implanted in the human breast—pride of nativity, love for the place of birth. It is essentially and practically a California organization, membership being confined to White males born within the state. It owes no allegiance, save where the Flag of the United States of America shall ever wave.

The Founder of the Order, General Andrew Mayer Winn, was not a native Californian, but a Pioneer. He was not eligible to membership, but was made an honorary member—the only person ever so honored by the Order. He suggested that native Californians in San Francisco join in the celebration, in 1875, of the ninety-ninth anniversary of the independence of the United States of America, and from that gathering sprang the Order, which was formally launched as a patriotic and fraternal society July 11, 1875.

San Francisco was the birthplace and is the membership-stronghold of the Order, and so, The Grizzly Bear requested a brief history of each of the twenty-eight Subordinate Parlors of that city for publication in this Fifty-second Grand Parlor number. All did not respond; from those that complied with the request the following information was received:

CALIFORNIA.

California No. 1, the father-Parlor of the Order, was organized July 11, 1875, John A. Steinbach acting as the first president and Charles H. Smith, now a member of Ramona Parlor No. 109 of Los Angeles, as the first secretary. At that time there was no Grand Parlor. One hundred and twenty members signed the charter roll, and eleven of them still retain their membership in the Parlor: Grand Treasurer John E. McDougald, Ellis Bloch, William H. Staniels, William M. Josephi, John R. Matches, Past Grand President John H. Grady, James B. Stovall, Alfred Gilbert, Aaron Heringhi, Adolph C. Lutgens and Edwin L. Meyer.

March 28, 1876, articles of incorporation were filed with the secretary of the state and the organization was known as "Native Sons of the Golden West." Later on, because of their love for their native state, the members selected the name California Parlor. Holding their meetings in the parlors of the members' homes, the designation "parlor," instead of "lodge," was given.

At the present time California has a membership of 428 and assets of $25,307. Its officers are: John J. Slattery, president; Rudolph F. Fassler, junior past president; Armen Nishkian, first vice-president; Louis J. Palmini, second vice-president; Paul L. Dumont, third vice-president; Ellis A. Blackman, recording secretary; B. F. At the present time Golden Gate has a membership of 300 and assets of $16,000. Its officers are: P. Edwin Jones, president; Fred Perazzo, junior past president; Ralph Young, first vice-president; Reginald J. Crowley, second vice-

At the present time San Francisco has assets of $14,000. Dentler was the first president and D. B. Carn the first secretary. "El dorado" is Spanish for "the gold-fields," the quest and goal of the Pioneers, hence the name.

Abraham Ruef was the first president and Charles H. Kaufman the first secretary. The Parlor was named after the only landmark in the southern section of San Francisco, "Rincon Hill," which, at the height of its glory, was the abiding-place of nearly all of the Pioneers prominent in the public life of the city.

THE HAND OF MAN--- A STORY OF THE FORESTS

Southard M. Modry

CHAPTER V.

ONCE UPON A TIME, WHEN THIS OLD world was considerably younger than it is today and peopled by many strange and gruesome creatures, among which were monstrous many-headed, fire-breathing beasts called dragons, there lived a prince whose dominions were terrorized by several of these monsters and they laid in waste the countryside and devoured the most valiant of his soldiers. The prince, although exceedingly brave and resourceful, was powerless to destroy the beasts and, knowing it was impossible for mere human beings to overcome the scourge, decided to enlist the aid of the queen of the fairies. After a long, arduous journey he finally arrived before her castle and was conducted into her presence. Her majesty, immediately perceiving the bravery and the intelligence of the good prince, presented him with a magical sword which no living creature could withstand and, returning to his kingdom, he met and slew the dragons. Naturally, as a result of his conquest the prince married a "sweet mamma" and they lived happily ever afterwards.

Of course, you do not believe in dragons, and the world is not now peopled with good fairies. Most of us are prone to disregard the stories learned at mother's knee, and we face the future armed only with knowledge accumulated later on. We have no brave knights today to go forth armed with sword and shield to battle for the good of humanity. Fairy tales are things belonging to childhood that grownups discard as soon as they face the real battle for existence.

Nevertheless, we are going forward with the idea that dragons still exist, and each year lay in waste thousands of acres of magnificent forests. And the good princes are a reality too, and number in their ranks that handful of men who are devoting their lives to the cause of forestry, namely, the personnel of the Federal and the State Forest Services and those few individuals who, like the knights of old, are ever to the fore in a good cause. And the good fairies are also here, if we only call on them. As a matter of fact, each of us can be a good fairy and bring lasting credit to the state and ourselves by co-operating with the Federal Government and the State Forestry Board in the battle against the demon, fire.

In the year 1927, 702,034 acres of land were burned over by fires that caused damage in the sum of $1,000,034. Almost one-half of those fires were caused by cigars and cigarettes, which careless people threw upon the dry grass, usually from moving vehicles. Did you ever, on a dry summer's day, throw a lighted cigarette upon the dry grass and see how fast the fire spread?

If you want to be a good fairy, if you want to help your fellowmen, if you want to preserve the natural resources of the state, please practice a little self-restraint when discarding your butts and snipes. Throw them into your automobile, instead of out on to the highway. Just think, 1,048 fires were caused by careless folks in 1927. They should be ashamed of themselves.

In the same year, 443 fires were caused by careless people burning brush, negligent lumbermen caused 105, careless railroads 107, malicious criminal incendiaries 187, and careless campers 85. With the exercise of ordinary care, at least 90 percent of those fires could have been prevented, together with the tremendous amount of damage caused and the expenditure of approximately $150,000 to fight them.

According to these figures, furnished by the State Board of Forestry and the United States Forest Service, but 36 fires were caused by lightning. Old Dame Nature occasionally forgets herself and loses her temper, and the result is a fire started by lightning. Ordinarily such fires are not so disastrous as those caused by man, because of the fact that lightning ignites only dead timber. If the lumber companies will eliminate the risk, by felling the dead trees upon their properties, the damage by fires of this origin will be practically nil.

You can readily see who are the dragons' most consistent allies. Why not turn over a new leaf this year and, when you go on a vacation, see that the members of your party practice the simple rules laid down by the Forest Service for the protection of the woodlands? Pass the word along to friends and acquaintances. Now is the time for action. Remember the old maxim, "The road to ruin is paved with good intentions." Without co-operation, the Federal and the State Governments are powerless.

The Native Sons of the Golden West can do more in forest protection in one year than the combined efforts of the United States Forestry Service, the State Board, the lumbermen's association and kindred organizations. Let us start right now to slay the dragons! Let us take up the challenge of the good men of the Forest Service and see if we can cut the fire loss of $1,000,034 in 1927 to less than $100,000 in 1929. No matter where you are throughout the length and breadth of this great state, preach fire protection. Let us issue an automobile sticker, worded something like this: "SAVE THE FORESTS! Native Sons of the Golden West. I CARRY A RECEPTACLE FOR CIGARETTE AND CIGAR BUTTS—DO YOU?" See that these stickers get on every machine possible. Now is the time to put over a campaign to save the forests that will bear the best results, and bring lasting credit to our Order and ourselves.

Many of the lumber companies, especially the pine belt, are still using antiquated types equipment, such as wood-burning boilers, engine and locomotives, without safety devices to prevent the escape of flaming cinders and sparks. The companies themselves should co-operate and remove the cause, either by junking machines of this type or equipping them with proper safety appliances.

There is no law on the statute books compelling railroads to keep their rights-of-way clear of dry grass, brush, debris or other inflammable material. Many roads, for their own protection during the summer dispose of this risk by burning. Others do not. The proper kind of legislation would remove all danger from this source. Most railroads would undoubtedly appreciate legislation of this character, in order to protect themselves from the carelessness of competitor.

In the past year a number of disastrous fires were started by irresponsible derelicts who, in most cases, either had a grievance against lumbermen or wanted to secure employment for themselves in fighting fires. These conscienceless rascals should be prosecuted to the full extent of the law. Unfortunately, at the present time the laws themselves are inadequate.

If a man breaks into a bakery to steal a loaf of bread, he may be sentenced to state prison for almost his natural life, according to the degree of the crime. If a fiend ignites a forest fire which may destroy property running into thousands of dollars, endangers human life and permanently impoverishes the land, he can be found guilty only of a misdemeanor and sentenced to but six months in the county jail. It is difficult for me to reconcile my ideas with those of the gentlemen who meet at Sacramento for the purpose of legislating for the citizens of this great state. Especially so when we consider an incendiary is one of the most difficult of all criminals to apprehend.

Let me reiterate here: when you go on the vacation this year don't leave the camp fire burning when you break camp. Put it out, and be sure it is out. Throw water over it and bury the ashes with soil, not leaves and debris. Why be a careless camper?

Brother Native Sons if we, as citizens, in 1927 do our duty, it may be we can set an example to the backward interests in this state, with the result that we can shame them into correcting the abuses that have existed for years, and still exist.

Let all of us be soldiers in the cause of forestry. Let us promulgate the doctrine of forest preservation from Siskiyou to Mexico, from Truckee to the Golden Gate. Let the clarion resound throughout the whole state, the old ways must go. We have been negligent and careless too long; now is the time to call a halt and if our citizens need educating, let the Native Sons of the Golden West, who hold their state most dear, take the lead. "THESE ARE YOUR FORESTS, DON'T BURN THEM!"

Convention Greetings to the Native Sons

A BIT O' FARMING

PREPARED EXPRESSLY FOR THE GRIZZLY BEAR BY M. H. ELLIS

WHAT WAS REPORTED TO HAVE been the severest and one of the most disastrous frosts in the history of the California deciduous fruit industry, and one that at first was declared to have caused losses of more than fifty millions of dollars, has developed, on the other hand, to have been a frost that, while it destroyed a large percentage of the fruit set on the trees, will actually result in a gain of more than ten millions of dollars in receipts for the year 1929.

There is no gainsaying that the frost was severe, and that it took a vast amount from the year's tonnage. But there will be fruit enough to meet all demands, and with estimates now at hand showing definitely what tonnage may be expected, and basing the returns on such crops on the basis of what was received for them in years of equal production, it appears quite certain that somewhere between $10,000,000 and $15,000,000 more will be received for the 1929 deciduous fruit crops than was paid to growers for the 1928 crop.

There is no doubt that some individual growers will be hard hit. In some instances their crops were practically wiped out. But this was more the fault of the grower than the weather conditions. Many times it has been pointed out that there is danger in the one-crop plan; never before has this lesson been so pointed. The diversified farm, hit hard though it may have been in one or two of its lines, still will receive profits from its others, profits that will be enough larger, because of the conditions, to make up for the losses in its lines that suffer, in all probability.

Another benefit that is bound to accrue from the situation: The crop will be light, in tonnage; holdover packs and stocks should be cleaned out and when the growers start next year with a normal tonnage, co-operative marketing associations and commercial dealers should have no burden of unsold goods. Having cleaned the slate of holdover, and with the experience that has been gained in the handling of surpluses, there is reason to believe that in the future there will be no holdover from year to year, whatever other conditions may prevail.

So, taking it from every point of view save that of the farmer who has persistently refused to diversify his farming operations, the frost this year is going to mean more profits to the deciduous fruit industry of California. The tonnage will be larger than was indicated by the first reports of the frost; prices will be good. What at first was declared to have been disaster, appears now to have been a blessing.

FARM BUREAU ON TOUR.

The Agricultural Extension Service starts its ninth farm bureau traveling conference down the coast from Berkeley on the first day of May, enroute to Los Angeles, San Bernardino, Riverside and Orange Counties, through Santa Cruz, Monterey, San Luis Obispo and Santa Barbara. The object is not to see agriculture, as such, but to study the results of work carried along according to the recommendations of the Agricultural Extension Service. The interchange of ideas and the better understanding engendered among 150 farmers from all parts of the state make it a worth-while venture from this, if from no other, point of view. When these delegates report to their farm bureaus, the knowledge gained will be disseminated widely.

PRESERVING EGGS.

Eggs to be preserved for future use should be put down while strictly fresh and clean. They should be infertile, of course, but freshness and cleanliness are even more important. Fertile eggs, if put down each day, will be as satisfactory as infertile, for the process stops germination. One part of waterglass to ten parts of water is the solution best for preserving eggs. This solution should be placed in an earthen vessel, set in a cool place and kept covered. Plain water may be added to replace any that evaporates. Eggs put down while prices are low will save and make money when prices increase.

CONSERVATION OF WATER.

In most parts of California this year there is a deficiency in rainfall, notwithstanding the fact that late spring rains came when most needed and did much benefit. But indications are that the supply of irrigation water will be none too plentiful as a result; steps should be taken to conserve that supply as much as possible.

An over-supply of irrigation water not only wastes water someone else may need, but leaches plant food from the soil, injures the trees and, in some districts, tends to bring the water table up to a dangerous proximity to the surface. On the other hand, heavy pumping in many districts has lowered the water table to a level that makes pumping more costly. The soil auger is the only safe guide in irrigation; it saves its price many times over in the course of a year and leads to better quality and stronger trees.

TOBACCO FOR TURKEYS.

In feeding tobacco to prevent worms in turkeys, it will be found best to pulverize or grind the leaves and mix them in the mash in the proportion of about one pound of tobacco to fifty of the mash. An occasional dose of epsom salts will be found to be helpful. Strict sanitation is necessary with turkeys, particularly with poults. If cleanliness is the watchword, and the ground over which they travel is not infected, blackhead is little to be feared. If the birds are kept free from worms, they are less likely to get other diseases.

WOODLOTS AND WINDBREAKS.

There is a definite place for a woodlot on the California farm. In addition to furnishing wood for fuel and other farm uses, the woodlots make a fine place for the children to play in the summer and for the family to rest in midday. Where there are winds that hother in summer or winter, the woodlot may easily take the form of a windbreak.

In Orange County it has been conclusively proved that windbreaks increase production and the quality of the fruit. A quarter-acre woodlot will cost not more than $10 or $15 a year to maintain; it will return more than that in fuel and in comfort, if the proper trees are planted. This is one of the aids to farm relief that is too good to overlook.

BERRY THINNING OF GRAPES.

Thinning the berries on the grape clusters is a practice that may be followed profitably in some districts, and it may be entirely unnecessary in others. If the grapes normally attain good size and color and the clusters are not too compact, there is little to be gained by thinning. If, however, in the case of colored grapes such as tokays, the color is poor, the bunches are too compact and the berries too small, it may be well to remove part of the cluster.

This may be done by either cutting off a portion of the end of the central stem, or by nipping a bit from the end and some of the branch stems. As some of the berries naturally fall from crowding and undernourishment, the loss in number of berries will not be as great as may seem at first. The cost would be about $5 to $15 an acre, which is likely to be more than repaid where conditions warrant the practice.

WATER ON TOMATOES.

Frequently the tomato vines may grow well and have every appearance of health, blossoms will appear and a crop seems certain, and then the fruit will refuse to set. In most cases the trouble is due to too much water at the blossoming period, although too high fertility may cause the difficulty. Withhold the water during the blossoming period, even to the point where the vines seem to be suffering. Then the fruit will set.

The best practice is to bring the vines along as rapidly as possible until the blossoms begin to appear. Then dry them off. After the fruit has set, they may be watered again. But beware of excessive irrigation at any time. Conditions vary with localities, and the best practice usually is that followed in a community in a case of this kind.

SIZE OF EGGS.

Pullets forced to an early maturity will have a tendency to lay small eggs for a longer time than those which come naturally to the laying point. There is a definite relationship between the vigor of a bird and the size of the eggs she lays. Scanty feed, a deficient ration or one that is unbalanced, disease or parasites, and poorly housed fowls bring small eggs. Some strains, of course, have a tendency toward small sizes in eggs, others have the tendency in the opposite direction. If the poultryman breeds his own chicks, he should select his breeding stock with this in mind.

THE CUCUMBER BEETLE.

Watermelons, pumpkins and squash, as well as the vegetable for which it is named, may be troubled with the cucumber beetle. It is too late in the season to give advice as to planting, which should be with a liberal hand sowing the seed. Early preventive measures are too late. But if the beetle is on hand, calcium arsenate one part and gypsum twenty parts, applied as a

PROTECTING TREES.

Rabbits in the summer time, when green feed is scarce, and at almost any other time as well, show a great liking for the bark of trees. Many the grower who has lost numbers of young trees from this cause. If the danger appears, a poison paint is most likely to stop depredations. Dissolve one ounce of strychnine in three quarts of boiling water and dissolve half a pound of laundry starch in one pint of cold water. Stir the starch solution into the strychnine and boil it clear. Then add six ounces of glycerine and stir thoroughly. After it is cool paint the trees with a brush, and while the rabbits may enjoy the feed they will not be likely to need another.

WATER WALNUTS NOW.

With the blooming stage over in the walnut districts, water should be liberally applied so as to size the nuts up as much as possible. Walnuts make most of their growth during the first six weeks after they have set, and the trees should have plenty of water during that period. While the trees are in bloom, it is doubtful practice to irrigate. There is a strong suspicion that too much water at that time prevents the setting of the nuts. Tests have demonstrated that water applied shortly after the blossoming stage will bring the nuts along to size almost as rapidly as though applied in the winter.

SPRAYING FOR JUNE DROP.

In some districts of the state there has arisen a practice of spraying to prevent "June drop." This practice will prove successful if it comes as a result of the peach twig borer or some similar pest; if it is the "drop" that regularly occurs in some districts during the early summer, no spray will help. Perhaps one of the best preventives is a summer cover crop, if there is sufficient water for irrigation to see both the trees and the cover crop through. A good cover crop will reduce the soil temperatures and will be quite likely to overcome the distaste of the tree for a part of its burden at the advent of hot weather.

WATCH THE RED SPIDER.

When the red spider first appears is the time to get in the work of control. Extreme vigilance is necessary, and spraying with a highly refined oil around the first of June is about the best remedy known for this destructive insect. If it is possible to avoid, do not spray within a month of picking, for oil cuts the bloom on the fruit and injures the keeping quality. Both sides of the leaves should be well drenched with the spray. The orchard must be well supplied with moisture, or the battle against the red spider will be one hard to win.

THINNING OLIVES FOR SIZE.

Thinning of olives on the trees will increase the size of the fruits remaining, if the job is done well and accomplished early, before the fruit approaches maturity. Another benefit that will result, if experiments carried on in the Sacramento Valley are to be taken at their face value, is the regularity of crop. The olive tree is known as a bearer in alternate years. This probably is due to overbearing one year, with a consequent off year while the tree recuperates. If the load is lightened, the tree will come through each season with a good load of fruit.

DEMOLITION OF LANDMARK RECALLS DAYS OF MURRIETTA.

Chronicling the passing of another landmark of the days of 1849 at Mokelumne Hill, Calaveras County, the "Calaveras Project" of San Andrea ssays: "In the early days the building was known as Shear's saloon and gambling hall. Josiah O'Bright, a picturesque '49er with white hair and whiskers and intelligent features, who was a later occupant of this store, used to relate some early day exciting episodes that occurred in Mokelumne Hill. One of his stories concerning this historic building was about a gambling game in the building that ended very dramatically:

"On this eventful evening the men were bravely expressing their opinions of, and what ought to be done about, Joaquin Murrietta's bold lawlessness. Joaquin, unknown to the group of gamblers and self-constituted judges of what ought to be done with the famous outlaw, was peacefully playing in the game. Thousands of dollars in gold lay on the table. One player in particular boasted, 'I'd like to see this bandit just once. I'd make short work of him.'"

"The game calmly continued for a few seconds when, like a bolt of thunder from a clear sky, Joaquin arose, gun in hand, and shouted 'You want to see Joaquin Murrietta? Here he is. Now take me!' Everyone sat paralyzed while the bandit scooped up the gold, taking all that did not fall on the floor, backed out the door and was away on his horse before the braggers could find either their guns or speech."

"Thus another historical and romantic old building that could, if given the power of speech, relate wonderful tales of chivalry and villainy that characterized the famous Mother Lode has passed unto the great beyond."

Feminine World's Fads and Fancies

PREPARED ESPECIALLY FOR THE GRIZZLY BEAR BY ANNA STOERMER

THE WOMAN WHO MAKES HER OWN dresses chooses the style she wants and from experience knows what is flattering to her. She buys the material she loves, and admires the color she prefers. She can always have the newest styles. Experience in buying has taught her to know the soft feel of wool and the smoothness of real silk. She knows her own type and what is needed to bring out her own best points.

Interest centers at neck and hips for spring fashions, with plain and printed silks, crepe satins, plain and fancy woolsens and a triumphant use of satin and taffeta.

Cottons come into their own. They are chic. The smart woman has changed gingham from apron fabric into the newest sports fabric. Gingham heads the list. Checks are very smart anyway, and that makes gingham of the utmost importance. From it are made frocks and suits with sleeveless blouses of white linen.

Calico, with its brilliant primitive colors, is extremely becoming to the dusky beauty of the smart woman whose skin is tanned by the sun. White pique makes many of the little sleeveless tennis dresses.

There is a new wide wale pique that might be called cotton corduroy. These chic frocks are seen in endless variety in cotton gabardine as well as pique. In fact, they are the backbone of the smart summer wardrobe for out-of-town or resort wear, accompanied by gay jackets, fancy belts, scarfs, turbans and bags. In accessories, it is smart to match the bag and scarf, or the scarf and cardigan.

Hats vary in size from the close to the one that shades the eyes. In general, hats promise to grow a hrim of shoulder width for summer.

Socks matching the sweater are worn over silk or lisle stockings.

For travel, the greatest difficulty is the varying climate. One must have a tweed coat worn over a tweed cardigan suit, two crepe dresses with jackets, and two evening dresses with one evening wrap, also leather-heeled calfskin oxfords, strap shoes, kid pumps, dyed crepe slippers for evening, a little light straw and a felt hat, a handbag that will hold everything, an umbrella to fit the suitcase and luggage marked so as to be easily picked out in crowded places. This completes a perfect traveling wardrobe.

Lingerie follows the line of the frock with which it is worn. For the frock of princess lines, there is the sheath-like chemise and slips; for the flared frock, underwear is designed with the side circular flare. The straight-line dress and the backless evening gown both have their complements in lingerie. The materials used are crepe-de-chine and satin. They are untrimmed, or trimmed with alencon lace in cocoa or ecru. The colors used are white, apricot, pink, peach and champagne, to harmonize with the sun-tanned complexions.

Sleeping garments go in ensembles with jackets either long or short, in styles tailored or lace trimmed. The nightgown ensemble has a long matching coat, and the pajama suit is cut with points around the bottom of the wide trousers and the coat.

Ruffles and lace trim lingerie for children and juniors. Even the most youthful has her choice of dainty accessories for practical or ornamental purposes.

Something new this season! Children are wearing hats, and how just like mother. Tuscan braids, with wide red belting ribbon band and streamers, are offered in the off-the-brow contour. A panama sailor is trimmed with a red and white ribbon, matching the triangular scarf.

The "gob" silhouette for the small girl is made in blue ombre crochet with matching color ribbon on the crown tip. Tricorne types and narrow brimmed cloches with diminutive ears and bows of straw are emphasized for juniors.

There are colorful mottled straws and plaided effects in sailor shapes, and also wide brimmed cloches. These plaids of many colors will please the younger set.

There has never been a time in millinery when the hat and the scarf were as closely associated. Most of these scarfs are made by hand. For the summer sports hats, the triangle of the scarf is tied about the hat and the rest used for the scarf itself.

A black ballbuntl will have a scarf trim of white linen, and is also trimmed with white pique. The linen-and-cotton trim is the new note in decoration for the summer sports hat of straw. Of course, the knitted togs are most attractive for sports wear.

FEW CHANGES IN TEXTILES USED FOR MEN'S CLOTHING.

While fashion dictates shorter or longer skirts or sleeves, slender or draped silhouettes for women, men apparently adhere more or less constantly to the same sort of suits, overcoats and other garments that they have worn for half a century. Even in the textile fibers used for their clothing men change very little, apparently, in comparison with very noticeable changes that are taking place in the materials women prefer at the present time.

Colorful underwear, it is true, may catch the fancy of the youthful male, but it is generally made of the same textile fiber, chiefly cotton, that he has worn since childhood. In socks only is there any real departure from tradition in men's clothing; silk and rayon socks are replacing to some extent the cotton or wool socks in their everyday wearing apparel.

In the course of a study of the textile fibers being used in the home in 1927, as compared with 1922, recently completed by the Federal Agricultural Department's home economics bureau, information was received from 675 men.

Almost without exception all reported no change in textile fibers used in their suits, extra trousers, work shirts, dress or office shirts, nightshirts and pajamas during this five-year period. For such garments as union suits, undershirts, drawers and bath robes the men reported either no change in textile fiber or no use of that particular garment.

However, 454 men, using more silk and rayon socks in 1927 than in 1922, gave reasons for making this change. About 38 percent of these reasons came under "style," meaning more appropriate, more attractive, or less bulky; 23 percent said "comfort," meaning more comfortable, a preference for the feel of silk, or more suitable for a given climate.

BOOK REVIEWS

"ROSE OF LOS ANGELES."

By John B. T. Campbell; Tribune Press, Inc., Los Angeles, Publishers; Price, $3.00.

"Rose of Los Angeles," a historical romance by John B. T. Campbell, author of "Whence Came These Women," etc., has recently appeared in book form and should prove particularly interesting to Native Sons, Native Daughters and Pioneers.

The characters are real men and women under their true names, and the foundation of the story is the great harbor fight between San Pedro and Santa Monica which marked the beginning of Los Angeles as a metropolitan city. Senator "Steve" White, Collis P. Huntington, Tom Gibbon, Frank Wiggins, "Lucky" Baldwin, Senator Cornelius Cole and scores of famous men and women of California South are the "folks" in the book.

Through dramatic historical events runs the tumultuous love story of "Rose of Los Angeles," the most famous beauty of her day, whose romance became entwined with the making of a city.

The success already achieved by "Rose of Los Angeles" as the "best seller" on the Pacific Coast, promises great impetus to the campaign "to collect, make known and preserve the romantic history of California."

HISTORIC PRINTING PRESS TO FUNCTION AT STATE FAIR.

An old Franklin press, brought "around the Horn" in 1848 and used in publishing the newspaper which first announced the discovery of gold in California by James W. Marshall at Coloma, El Dorado County, will again be put into service at California's seventy-fifth annual (diamond) State Fair and Western States Exposition in Sacramento the first week of September.

Sam Brannan, pioneer California newspaperman, installed the press in the office of the "Alta California" in San Francisco, the second newspaper established in this state. In the issue in which the discovery of gold was announced, only a brief paragraph was devoted to that memorable event. After serving its time at the "Alta California," the old press was taken to a number of mining towns.

It is proposed to set up a replica of the page which announced the gold discovery and to distribute the facsimiles among State Fair visitors as souvenirs.

HIGHWAYS NOW DESIGNED FOR SAFER AND SPEEDIER TRAVEL.

Newer designs in motor cars, busses and trucks, together with the more liberal speed laws in the majority of states have presented new problems in highway construction for highway engineers to solve, according to the Federal Agricultural Department's public roads bureau. The new vehicles demand that highways be designed for safer and speedier operation.

To meet this demand, highway engineers are planning roads with better grades and alignments than existed some ten years ago. The roads have wider and smoother pavements and easier curves. The curves are super-elevated and widened. Roads are developed to afford greater sight distances on both horizontal and vertical curves. Guard rails are more substantial, and better protection at railway crossings is provided.

Further demands are made upon the highway engineer today by the dawning appreciation of natural beauty on the part of the general public. Highways must not only be travelable, but they must also be pleasing to the eye. The engineer develops road locations so as to bring out the natural beauty of the locality. This is particularly noticeable in the new road locations developed by engineers in the national parks and national forests.

They are making use of short tunnels and half-tunnel sections under picturesque overhanging cliffs and along precipitous canyon walls. Formerly it was the custom to blast away these irreplaceable landmarks, destroying fine scenes and leaving ugly wounds which took years to heal.

Much can be done during the construction of highways to preserve and enhance their natural beauty by intelligent clearing of the right-of-way so as to save desirable trees, by development of vistas of outstanding magnificence, and in building bridges and culverts to harmonize with the general character of the landscape. After the road is built much can be done by intelligent planting, with due care to avoid obstruction to view of intersecting roads, unnecessary interference with the cultivation of adjacent farm land, and use of plantings foreign to the natural character of the locality.

PUBLIC SAFETY COMMITTEE WILL LESSEN PREVENTABLE ACCIDENTS.

Co-ordination of the various groups promoting traffic safety in the state through the California Committee on Public Safety will, it is believed, start California on the road to leadership in the protection of life, limb and property along its highways. There are more than thirty representative bodies, all state-wide in their function, from which this committee is drawn, and from the intensive program outlined confidence is expressed that the toll of preventable accidents will be greatly reduced.

One of the activities of this committee will be directed toward uniformity and interpretation in the enforcement of traffic regulation. Under existing conditions it is possible for a motorist to be arrested in one place for doing exactly the thing countenanced or encouraged in some other communities. The same situation is true with respect to fines and penalties. These vary to an extreme degree in different localities, bringing confusion to motorists and enforcement officers alike.

Used Cars Scrapped—For every three new cars purchased by the motoring public during 1928, two used cars were scrapped.

ALL MOTORISTS OF FUTURE

WILL BE EXPERT DRIVERS.

Athletic training the younger generations are now receiving will bring about the making of generations of better and better motor-car drivers. In the opinion of many scientists. The motor car has been in use as a pleasure and commercial vehicle a quarter of a century, and in that time millions of people have had to learn to operate both passenger cars and trucks, with the result that now there are numberless expert drivers.

"This generation, that has had to acquire its motor-car driving skill, will undoubtedly pass on to the newer generations some of the qualities that go to make a real expert as well as safe driver," says an authority. "That this is so, is evidenced by the fact that for generations man has transmitted to posterity many, if not all, of his own qualities.

"It has been said by scientists that persons who learn to drive when already past their youth may make good drivers, but the chances are against it for the reason that after middle age the mental and physical reflexes are less rapid. Mental alertness and instantaneous muscular reactions are frequently the price of safety.

"The athletic activities of the growing generations in California are aiding to rear both a mentally and physically alert race. Besides all this, most members of the rising generations are developing a 'motoring sense' that the older generations had no opportunity to develop.

"Children nowadays learn all about motor cars at a very early age. In fact, they babble about them almost before they begin to go to school. Riding in them from their earliest perceptive age they naturally develop an 'automobile consciousness' that was not possible in their elders.

"Many of these growing youngsters, born in automobiles, one might almost say, learn to drive as soon as they can think. In fact, most of them nowadays learn to drive, in theory at least, long before they learn their letters. And many of them learn to drive a motor car without a single lesson, seemingly having been born with the ability to do so."

COUNTRY'S 1928 AUTO REGISTRATION
CONSIDERABLY IN EXCESS OF 1927.

The registration of motor vehicles in the United States in 1928 showed a gain of 5.9 percent, totaling 24,493,124 or an increase of 1,359,883 compared with the figures for the preceding year, according to the Federal Agricultural Department bureau of public roads. The figures include passenger automobiles, taxis, busses, motor trucks and road tractors. In addition, 148,169 trailers and 117,946 motorcycles were registered.

Estimating the population of the United States in 1928 at 120,013,000, there now is one motor vehicle for every five persons in the United States, one for every family.

New York headed the list for 1928 with 2,083,942 vehicles registered. California was second with 1,799,890.

From the owners of 24,493,124 motor vehicles there was collected during 1928 in license fees, registration fees, permit charges, fines, etc., the sum of $322,630,025. This is $21,568,893 more than was collected in 1927.

STATE GAS TAX AVERAGES LOW.

Although California motorists consume more gasoline than do those of any other state of the union, they do not have to pay the average rate of gasoline taxes throughout the country. This varies from 2 cents to 5 cents a gallon in the different states with an average of $.0311 a gallon.

Thirteen states have a 2 cents tax, fourteen 3 cents, one 3½ cents, twelve 4 cents, and six 5 cents a gallon.

For Balking Distributor—One drop of oil upon the breaker-arm of the distributor on an auto will, in most instances, eliminate the difficulty of the points.

Important Adjunct—The tool kit is one of the most important adjuncts to perfect motoring that a car owner can carry along on his trips.

"Joy" Silent HYDRAULIC PUSH RODS

FOR OVERHEAD VALVE MOTOR

HOW IT WORKS: Oil in chamber C flows around plunger D, automatically maintaining a column of oil to take the blow from the cam; a shock absorber for the valve.

A revolutionary invention based on an old, established principle! Absolutely eliminates valve noise in the most efficient type of motor ever designed! Your motor need never be "NOISY!"

The JOY HYDRAULIC PUSH RODS eliminate the necessity of outside push rod clearance. So simple in construction and operation they outlast the life of a car. To install, simply remove the regular push rods—replace with JOY HYDRAULICS—just a few moments' job—and the trick is done! Then a SILENT MOTOR FOREVER!

MOTORDOM, BIG CONSUMER,

AIDS ALL LINES BUSINESS.

The automotive industry's contributions to business are tremendous. According to figures for 1928, automotive freight totaled 3,600,000 carloads, while nearly 11,000,000,000 gallons of gasoline and nearly 500,000 gallons of oil were required for motor-vehicle operation.

The industry used 85 percent of the rubber, 60 percent of the plate glass, 12 percent of the copper and 15 percent of the iron and steel used in this country.

The year's value of rubber tires for replacements was $67,000,000, and parts, accessories and service equipment sold during the year were worth $95,000,000.

SCIENTIFIC TRAFFIC SURVEY

STATE HIGHWAY SYSTEM.

Beginning May 1, the State Department of Public Works will launch a scientific engineering and economic study of the California highway system, with a view to determining what roads should be included in the present system as essential to state-wide highway development.

The survey is to include routes not now in the system which carry a large volume of state traffic, routes which might relieve heavy traffic along present state highways, or routes which might serve as important interstate links.

A report on this study is to be filed with the 1931 Legislature as a basis for considering future additions to the state highway systems, and the authorization for the survey provides that no new roads shall be added unless justified by this study.

RECKLESSNESS CAUSES ACCIDENTS.

Impatience and reckless speed on the part of automobile drivers is shown to be a prominent cause of accidents at grade crossings in a recent report of the California Railroad Commission. This analysis reveals that approximately 27 percent of the grade crossing accidents during the past three years have resulted from vehicles running into standing or moving trains.

MODERN HOBBO PREFERS AUTO.

The modern hobo is responsible for a large number of automobile thefts, according to a check made in one of the larger Eastern cities. It is declared that the hobo of the present day has abandoned the old practice of riding the brake-rods of railroad trains and now steps into the best looking car he can find parked along the curb and drives himself to the next city in which he wants to stop. He abandons the car in that city and repeats the performance when he wishes to make another move.

CALIFORNIA WILL GET SHARE

VAST ARMY AUTO VACATIONISTS.

More than forty-five million people will take vacation motor tours in America this year. They will spend the staggering sum of three and a half billion dollars along the open road. California and the West will receive an even greater share than ever this year of the motoring hegira and its trail of tourist dollars.

The estimate of the tremendous proportions of the 1929 vacation season travel movement by motor car is the result of a nation-wide survey conducted through those whose work brings them closest to the plans and needs of the motor tourist.

Fatalities Increase—The total number of auto accident fatalities in the nation during 1928 is placed at 27,000—a 5 percent increase over 1927.

CAMPAIGN FOR BETTER JUDGES

WILBUR CURTIS

AS A PART of a concerted effort to insure the election of better judges, the candidacy of Wilbur C. Curtis, local attorney, for judge of the Los Angeles municipal court is sponsored by several hundred leading citizens, including more than two hundred lawyers.

Mr. Curtis has been a resident of Los Angeles for fifteen years and has practiced law continuously since 1922, when he was admitted to the bar following a three-year course and post-graduate work at the U. S. C. College of Law.

In 1922, he was elected a member of the Republican County Central Committee and has subsequently been twice re-elected, having been extremely active as a campaign speaker on numerous issues and particularly on behalf of civic improvements. He is a member of the Los Angeles County Bar Association and during 1928 was secretary of the sub-section of the State Bar on Commission for Settlement of Personal Injury Claims.

His platform is one of strict law enforcement and protection of individual constitutional rights. He particularly promises fair and courteous treatment to automobile drivers in the traffic courts.—Advertisement.

HEALTH

M. F. FOSTER, Opt.D., D.C.

Walking is one of the finest exercises for health, and morning is the best time to walk. People do not walk enough these automobile-days; they ride, even for a block. The old adage, "Moth and rust were made for things not used," is true, and the legs will wither and grow weak if not employed.

When going for a walk, don't go hobbling along thinking of aches and pains; throw the shoulders back and breathe deeply. No use being out in the fresh air, if you are not going to inhale some of it; and it is impossible to breathe deeply with the chin between the knees. Stride out as though a certain destination must be reached in a given time. Forget about feet. Look for the beauties of nature, and deep breathing will be automatic.

Stop and listen to the song of a bird perched upon a swaying twig. Note the quality of voice; watch the throat swell as the lower notes are taken. He flies! rising, lowering, flapping his wings, then sailing, singing as he goes. It sure makes one want to sail away with him, from sheer joy of living. People who go waddling or limping around this old earth are only half alive. The legs, when properly used, form pumps to circulate blood through the body, carrying food to wornout tissue and taking away the toxins from overeating and lack of oxygen.

If the automobile must be used, drive out to where there is a mountain to climb or a canyon to explore. We of California are supremely blest with the most beautiful mountains in these United States, and they can be climbed all the year. While climbing or exploring, inspect the architecture and the landscape gardening—there is none finer—designed by the Supreme Architect and planted by the King of Gardeners. Many valuable lessons may be learned from the tiny inhabitants of the great outdoors, if we hut open our eyes to see and ears to hear, while taking life-giving draughts of fresh air.

From the summit of any mountain, behold the wonderful panorama of hill and vale, of cloud and sky; then take inventory of aches and pains, to find they have greatly diminished. You may feel sort of sore and stiff the next day, showing how many muscles had been loafing. But an increased supply of pep will be sufficient reward for the exertion put forth.

School Bonds—Crescent City, Del Norte County, has voted $150,000 bonds for a new grammar school.

CO-OPERATION EXEMPLIFIED

BY PAST PRESIDENTS ASSOCIATION.

Chico (Butte County)—With the drill team of Fred H. Greely Assembly No. 6 Past Presidents Association putting on the work, Chico Parlor No. 21 N.S.G.W. added six new names to its roster-roll March 28, and Argonaut Parlor No. 8 N.S.G.W. (Oroville) added two. The past presidents then met and received into membership B. F. Hudspeth and E. L. Henry.

Following these ceremonies there was a banquet at which goodfellowship prevailed. Past Grand President Fred H. Greely of Marysville, the oldest and best-liked Native Son in the Sacramento Valley, addressed the gathering, telling of the Order's activities since its inception—and no one can do it better than "Fred."

Chico Parlor recognizes Past Presidents Assembly No. 6 as a wonderful thing for the Subordinate Parlors of the Sacramento Valley. It never refuses to respond to a call, and its members give their time, and often travel hundreds of miles at night, to assist in building up the Order. That's co-operation, and more co-operation.—G.H.A.

Safety Conference—The Pacific Safety Congress will be in session at Los Angeles City, May 15-17.

Water Carnival—Stockton, San Joaquin County, will stage its third annual Water Carnival, May 25 and 26.

GRIZZLY GROWLS

(CLARENCE M. HUNT.)

THERE IS BEFORE THE CALIFORNIA Legislature a resolution declaring Mexican "immigration is very undesirable" and that representations made to the Federal Congress that Mexican labor is necessary were "neither facts nor the will of California farmers," and favoring federal action looking to the exclusion of Mexicans from the United States.

What the fate of the resolution will be, who knows? Probably it will go the same route as the proposed law which, if adopted, would have prohibited the employment of aliens on public works. For the same "interests" which brought about that law's defeat are in hearty favor of unrestricted Mexican immigration.

Because the "interests" profit from cheap Mexican labor, they want the peons from across the border to have free access to this country. And as a result, thousands of substantial American citizens in California cannot find employment. The Mexicans should be shut out, for the good of the state and the country, and thousands of them already here, wholly or partially public charges, should be deported.

The federal commissioner of reclamation publicly declared March 4 that construction contracts for the Boulder Dam project cannot possibly be let for more than a year. He said:

"It is necessary to emphasize this in order to correct the general impression which seems to prevail that a large construction force is to be organized at once."

"In order to get something out of any organization or any business," says the "Trinity Journal" of Weaverville, "we must first put something into it—our interest, if nothing more. And if there is the proper team-work, most any organization can be made efficient."

"Farmers of California," declares G. H. Hecke, head of the State Agricultural Department, "have no intention of reopening the Oriental exclusion question." Glad to hear it. And the farmers will be wise if they never have any such intention, much less make any attempt to reopen the question.

"A bond issue is not an easy way to get something for nothing," well says the California Taxpayers' Association. "A bond is a mortgage. You must pay the interest and the principal of a bond just as you do that of a mortgage on a house. Bonds cost money. For example, for every dollar borrowed on a 5 percent serial bond issue running for twenty years, you pay back $1.525. If the bond runs for forty years at the same rate of interest, for every dollar that you borrow you pay back $2.025. . . .

"It is well to think twice before you vote for any bond issue when you know you have to pay $2 in interest and principal for every dollar you borrow."

Anyone hit by reckless, careless or drunken auto drivers has an exceedingly small chance of ever getting a dollar's compensation from the guilty owner.

That's the reason the Commonwealth Club of San Francisco is urging the State Legislature to pass a law (Senate Bill 863) making it compulsory for every operator of a motor vehicle to carry liability insurance. Such a law is needed, to protect human life, and it should be rigidly enforced.

In a report just filed with Governor C. C. Young, the state director of public health says that Jap births in California are decreasing—that in 1921 eight of every 100 children born in the state were Japs, while the ratio today is 3.4 percent.

That's good news, but a sufficient number have already been born, and the quantity still continues upward—2,833 in 1928 compared to 2,442 in 1921, the peak year,—although the ratio shows a drop, to make things mighty interesting for the Whites when, in a few more years now, thousands of these "American-citizen" Japs come of voting age.

"We need to get away from the craze for rapid wealth and to stop measuring the standard of a man by his money."—Thomas A. Edison.

DISCOVERY OF FAMOUS BIG TREES

FRESNO—AT A RECENT MEETING of Fresno Parlor No. 25 N.S.G.W., Emory Ratcliffe of the Fresno State College spoke on "Big Trees," in the course of which he dealt mostly with history. In part, he said:

"To those of us living here almost under the shadow of the big trees the date of their discovery and to whom credit for the discovery is due are more than matters of mere academic interest. Various claimants have been put forward and various dates given. The discoverer of some particular grove has in some cases claimed the honor of being the discoverer of the big trees, not knowing that his discovery had been antedated by someone else in some other part of the state.

"For a long time John Bidwell supposed himself to have been the first White man to see one of the big trees. For a long time John Bidwell was given the honor. Cleland, in his 'History of California, American Period,' accords Bidwell the honor and sets the date as some time in October 1841. There is no doubt but that Bidwell did see one or more of the trees of the Calaveras Grove October 31, 1841, but his discovery was antedated by eight years by members of the famous Walker party that crossed the mountains near the headwaters of the Merced or a little farther north.

"Joe Walker was sent out from north of Great Salt Lake by Captain Bonneville to explore the country to the west of the lake. The diarist of the party was Lucas Leonard, who kept what seems to be a very good account of the progress of the party and made many interesting observations of things seen along the route. Leonard's diary was published in 1839 in book form, some three years after his return to his old home in Clearfield County, Pennsylvania. The book was entitled 'Narrative of the Adventures of Lucas Leonard Written by Himself.'

"Part of the entry for October 30, 1833, which sums up the experiences of the 29th and the 30th, reads: 'Along the base of this mountain it is quite romantic—the soil is very productive—the timber is immensely large and plentiful, the game such as deer, elk, grizzly bear and antelope is remarkably plentiful. From the mountain out to the plains, a distance varying from 10 to 20 miles, the timber stands as thick as it could grow and the land is well watered by a number of small streams rising here and there among the mountains. In the last two days' traveling we have found some trees of the redwood species incredibly large—some which measured from 16 to 18 fathoms around the trunk at the height of a man's head from the ground.'

"This description fits exactly the big trees as to species and size (96 to 108 feet in circumference) and the location as given in my other references of the 'narrative' shows the party to have been most likely in the Calaveras Grove during October 29 and 30 of 1833. October 29, 1833, may be accepted as the date of discovery.

"This discovery was not known to Californians, or, if so, was forgotten, as the gold diggers knew nothing of it, and it was after the discovery of gold that the various groves were located.

"Major Burney, first sheriff of Mariposa County after its organization, discovered some trees of the Mariposa Grove in October 1849, though the main grove was not discovered until June 1856, when Galen Clark and Milton Noun came upon it.

"The Calaveras Grove was re-discovered by A. T. Doud of Murphey's Camp in 1852. The Giant Forest was discovered in 1854. By 1860 the locations of the most important groves were known."

Yes; give me a land with a grave in each spot
And names in the graves that shall not be forgot;
Yes; give me the land of the wreck and the tomb—

There is grandeur in graves, there is glory in gloom,

For out of the gloom future brightness is born.
As after the night comes the sunrise of morn;
And the graves of the dead with the grass overgrown

May yet form the footstool of liberty's throne,
And each single wreck in the warpath of night
Shall yet be a rock in the temple of right.

Native Daughters of the Golden West

SANTA CRUZ NO. 26 IS GETTING ITS plans for the entertainment of the Forty-third Grand Parlor of the Order of Native Daughters of the Golden West in shape. A large committee, headed by Past Grand President Stella Finkeldey, has the arrangements in charge. The Grand Parlor convenes at Santa Cruz City, Monday, June 17, and Grand President Dr. Louise C. Heilbron will preside throughout the deliberations.

Among proposed features of entertainment are a fine musical program Monday night, the grand ball Tuesday night, exemplification of the ritual Wednesday night, and installation of the newly-chosen Grand Parlor officers Thursday night. It is also planned to take the Grand Parlor members on a trip to the Big Basin. "We thought best not to crowd in too much entertainment," writes Secretary May L. Williamson of Santa Cruz Parlor to The Grizzly Bear, "for many of the visitors will want to have time for the beach."

Some new candidates for Grand Parlor office have shied their hats into the ring and, following the election of delegates by Subordinate Parlor during May, the list will be considerably augmented.

From responses received up to the time of this issue going to press (April 20), The Grizzly Bear announces the following candidates:

Grand Vice-president—Florence Danforth-Boyle (Gold of Ophir No. 190) of Oroville, and Grand Marshal Estelle M. Evans (Antioch No. 223) of Antioch.

Grand Secretary—Sallie R. Thaler (Aloha No. 106) of Oakland, incumbent.

Grand Marshal—Grand Trustee Marvel Thomas (Los Angeles No. 124) of Los Angeles, and Evelyn I. Carlson (Dolores No. 169) of San Francisco.

Grand Outside Sentinel—Edna Briggs (La Bandera No. 110) of Sacramento.

Grand Organist—Minna Kane-Horn (Eschscholtzia No. 112) of Etna, incumbent.

Grand Trustees (seven to be selected)—Ethel Van Vleck (Marguerite No. 12) of Placerville; Irma Laird (Alturas No. 159) of Alturas, incumbent; Ethel Stuhr (Marinita No. 198) of San Rafael; Grand Inside Sentinel Melissa B. Wilson (Mary E. Bell No. 224) of Dixon; Eldora McCarty (Palo Alto No. 229) of Turlock, incumbent.—C.M.H.

Forty-second Anniversary.

Stockton—Joaquin No. 5 celebrated its forty-second institution anniversary April 9, having as guests of honor four charter members—Past Grand President Carrie Roesch-Durham, Mrs. Isabella Stockwell, Miss Hannah Gray and Miss Clara Stier. President Edna Gormsen presided. Gertrude Reynolds Mills gave a delightful recitation and a skit, "Dame Fashion," was participated in by Mrs. Dio Buthenuth, Tillie Bona, Eva Bona, Elizabeth Baker, Vera Johnson, Hazel Forward, Lottie Boyd, Abbie Brown, Mae Driscoll, Theresa Costa and Lois Lea. A delicious turkey dinner was enjoyed at prettily-appointed tables, the color scheme being carried out in pastel shades; large baskets of flowers and greenery were placed about the room. On the Parlor's behalf President Gormsen presented the charter members with gifts and each pleasantly responded. Arrangements for the delightful evening were made by the following committee: Mms. Mary Ricker and Hattie Corr and Miss Irene Tefft.

April 23 the Parlor had as its guest of honor Grand President Dr. Louise C. Heilbron. Plans are under way for a whist party at Native Sons Hall May 28.

Services in Good Cause Volunteered.

Alturas—At the April 4 meeting of Alturas No. 159 the officers, all youthful members of the Parlor, initiated a candidate with letter-perfect ritual ceremony. Plans were discussed whereby the Parlor might register a 100 percent fulfillment of the Loyalty Pledge at the Santa Cruz Grand Parlor.

The committee for the establishment of a night school reported through the Modoc County school superintendent, the chairman, outlining the necessary steps. It appearing that, before state aid may be had, a school must be organized and maintained, members of the Parlor who are licensed teachers volunteered their services without remuneration.

Sons Entertain.

Chico—Members of Annie K. Bidwell No. 168 were guests April 11 of Chico No. 21 N.S.G.W. at a dancing party. The hall was prettily decorated and the informal affair proved most delightful.

Interesting and Educational.

San Bernardino—Lugonia No. 241 was entertained April 10 with a most interesting and educational talk by Mrs. George W. Beattie, who traced the history of the establishment and the growth of the Spanish mission system in North and South America. She pointed out that, contrary to the general supposition, Spain's primary motive in establishing the mission was the desire for protection against invasion by the English and the Russians, rather than for religious reasons.

Mrs. Beattie then pictured the growth of the local mission, San Bernardino Asistencia, and told of the progress of the plans for its restoration. Preceding the meeting the Parlor sponsored a supper, under the chairmanship of Cleo Clark Jones, which was enjoyed by 150.

Four Parlors Join for Visit.

Sacramento—Grand President Dr. Louise C. Heilbron officially visited the four local Parlors—Califa No. 22, La Bandera No. 110, Sutter No. 111 and Coloma No. 212—at a joint meeting April 5. Among the large number in attendance were: Grand Vice-president Esther R. Sullivan, Grand Secretary Sallie R. Thaler, Grand Marshal Estelle Evans, Grand Trustees Anna Mixon, Armstrong, Sadie Brainard and Evelyn Carlson, Grand Inside Sentinel Melissa B. Wilson, Past Grand Presidents Ema Gett, Alison F. Watt, Addie L. Mosher, Mary E. Bell, Olive Bedford-Matlock, Sue J. Irwin, Mamie G. Peyton and Dr. Eva R. Rasmussen.

A team selected from the four Parlors, with Ruth McDonald of Coloma as president, exemplified the ritual, and gifts were presented all the grand officers and also to District Deputies Edna R. Briggs and Ruth McDonald. Past Grand President Gett was general chairman of the affair and Florence E. Dell of Sutter Parlor headed the decoration committee. Hollyhocks were used profusely in adorning the meeting-place and a variety of spring blossoms beautified the banquet-room.

Getting Results.

San Jose—Vendome No. 100 had an Easter card party April 3, with Mrs. Clara Gairaud as chairman, and April 13 the young girls of the Parlor sponsored a loyalty dancing party to raise their pledges for the Native Daughter Home. Miss Marie Bush headed the arrangements committee.

Mrs. Gairaud, supervising deputy of San Mateo County and a member of the Grand Parlor Publicity Committee, is visiting and talking in Parlors in behalf of the Loyalty Pledge, at the request of Grand President Dr. Louise C. Heilbron, Past Grand President Bertha A. Briggs, chairman of the publicity committee, and Past Grand President Grace S. Stoermer. She is being enthusiastically received and getting good results.

Tells of Early Day Romance.

Fullerton—Grace No. 242 had an open meeting April 18, when Florence Dodson-Schoneman, chairman of the Grand Parlor History and Landmarks Committee, told of the "Romance of Early California." She was accompanied by Marybelle Chapman, who presented a program of old California songs. A spanish dinner was served.

April 9 the Parlor's sewing club had an all-day meeting at the Placentia home of Mrs. Arthur Edwards, and April 23 a benefit card party was held at the Valencia home of Mrs. Louise Tadlock.

Traveler Showered.

Modesto—Grand President Dr. Louise C. Heilbron officially visited Oakdale No. 125 and Mor-ada No. 199 in joint session here April 10.
Among the many visitors were Past Grand President Mamie G. Peyton, Grand Trustees Eldora
McCarthy, Mae Givens, Sadie Brainard and Anna
Mixon-Armstrong, and delegations from Merced, Mariposa, Hollister, Sacramento, Manteca, Stockton and Sonora. With President Susan Sullivan of Morada presiding, two candidates were initiated.

Grand President Heilbron gave an interesting talk on the work of the Order, and brief remarks were made by the other grand officers.
Morada voted $100 for the Loyalty Pledge.
President Addie Fowler of Oakdale presented a gift to Dr. Heilbron on behalf of that Parlor, and Ella Halford performed a like service for Morada. Third Vice-president Ethel Mathiasen, who is leaving with her mother for a six-month visit to Denmark, was presented with a shower of handkerchiefs cleverly arranged, Lena Brow-der making the presentation on Morada's behalf.
As an appropriate farewell Mrs. Clarice McHenry sang "Til We Meet Again."

Preceding the meeting a dinner was served.
The tables were beautifully decorated with lilacs and purple iris, with lavender favors. As Grand President Heilbron entered the banquet-room all sang "Smiles." Mrs. McHenry rendered several selections during the feast, and Margaret Roberts gave two readings. The social committee, headed by Pauline Handley, served refreshments at the meeting's close.

Prosperous.

San Jose—Guided by President Dora Reeves,
San Jose No. 81 is enjoying a very prosperous spring term. Each month a birthday party, for the birthday girls of that month, proves enjoyable. An afternoon whist, held every two weeks, nets goodly sums for the treasury. Two large classes of candidates have recently been initiated, and the sewing club is flourishing and accomplishing much.

Events scheduled for May are: Bundle party,
Claire Borchers, chairman; Mother's Day observance, Genevieve Eplar, chairman; evening whist, Nettie Richmond, chairman.

World Travelers Honor Guests.

Hollister—Past, President Gladys Darling entertained a group of Copa de Oro No. 105 members April 13 at a pleasing bridge party in honor of Annie Smith, Ida Green and Itha Brown, members of the Parlor who depart April 30 for a trip around the world. Dainty suitcases formed the placecards, and the refreshment tables were

Native Sons of the Golden West

MARTINEZ—IN HONOR OF GRAND First Vice-president Charles L. Dodge, the combined Parlors of Native Sons—General Winn No. 32 (Antioch), Mount Diablo No. 101 (Martinez), Byron No. 170, Carquinez No. 205 (Crockett), Richmond No. 217, Concord No. 245 and Diamond No. 246 (Pittsburg)—and Native Daughters—Stirling No. 146 (Pittsburg), Richmond No. 147, Donner No. 193 (Byron), Las Juntas No. 221 (Martinez), Antioch No. 223 and Carquinez No. 234 (Crockett)—of Contra Costa County are making elaborate plans for "Dodge Night," to be staged in Martinez the evening of May 11.

Membership drives are under way in all the Parlors and class initiations will be held by both Orders. The Native Sons' ceremonies will be conducted in Masonic Hall, with the team of Fruitvale No. 252 (Oakland) exemplifying the ritual. The Native Daughters' ceremonies will be conducted in Pythian Castle, with a team composed of past presidents from the Contra Costa County Parlors exemplifying the ritual.

Following these ceremonies there will be a joint gathering at Masonic Hall. A select program will be presented, there will be addresses by prominent speakers, and refreshments will be served. A. P. Wright, president Mount Diablo No. 101 N.S.G.W., and Grand Marshal Estelle Evans, recording secretary Antioch No. 223 N.D.G.W., chairmen of the joint committee, are making every effort to have this one big night and, on behalf of the Contra Costa County Parlors, extend an invitation to all members of both Orders to participate.

Court House Dedication During Fiesta.

Santa Barbara—Dedication of Santa Barbara County's handsome new court house will be the opening event of this year's Old Spanish Days Fiesta, to be staged August 14, 15, 16 and 17. In the evening there will be public speaking, music and fireworks. The second day will be devoted to a historical pageant, depicting the history of Santa Barbara, and the succeeding two days will be given over to various fiesta attractions.

The Santa Barbara County Board of Supervisors has delegated to Santa Barbara No. 116 the honor of arranging for the dedication of the structure. At its April 15 meeting the board appointed the following to act with the Parlor in making the arrangements: Supervisor S. J. Stanwood, Past President George A. Black, William Mooser and L. Deming Tilton. The Parlor has named as an executive committee these past presidents: H. G. Myers, U. Lopez, G. G. Leslie, W. B. Metcalf, O. H. O'Neill, Robert Curran, Edson A. Smith, J. C. Freeman, L. F. Ruiz, A. T. Eaves, M. A. Botello, J. B. Saxby, A. B. Silva, H. C. Sweetser, J. P. McCaughey, P. G. Sweetser, Clifford Rizer and George A. Black.

The Parlor will request the grand officers to officiate at the dedication ceremonies, and will have a prominent part in the fiesta events. An invitation is to be extended to all Natives to visit Santa Barbara during the fiesta.

Rarin' To Go.

Eureka—Humboldt No. 14 initiated nine candidates April 8, a hot chicken dinner following the ceremonies, which were largely attended. The Parlor has set as its membership-goal ten initiates each and every month.

The Humboldt County Parlors—Humboldt No. 14, Arcata No. 20, Ferndale No. 93 and Fortuna No. 218—have organized a baseball league, the opening games to be played in May. All Parlors report their teams in tip-top shape and rarin' to go. Ferndale was the league champion in 1928.

The Humboldt County Central Committee, made up of representatives from the four Parlors, reports a nice profit from the poppy dance given under its auspices at Ferndale April 13.

Faithful Servant Remembered.

Sacramento—The fifty-first anniversary of Sacramento No. 3, instituted March 22, 1878, was observed with an old-timers' night April 11 at which President Henry Whittipen presided. The honored guest of the evening was Grand President James A. Wilson, who delivered an address.

The evening's surprise was the presentation by the Parlor of an emblem to Thomas W. McAuliffe, for thirty-four years a faithful trustee. A large crowd enjoyed the entertainment and the banquet which followed.

Generosity Commended.

Castroville—Gabilan No. 132 presented the Castroville union school with $347.86, which was used to beautify the school grounds by purchasing and setting out shrubs and trees. "The Parlor deserves high commendation for its generosity," declared James Force, superintendent Monterey County schools.

Membership Standing Largest Parlors.

San Francisco—Grand Secretary John T. Regan reports the standing of the Subordinate Parlors having a membership of over 400 January 1, 1929, as follows, together with their membership figures April 19, 1929:

Inter-City Meet Success.

Calistoga—The Napa-Solano Counties inter-city meeting here April 15 under the auspices of Calistoga No. 86 was a decided success. Led by the crack drum and bugle corps of Napa No. 62, 150 members marched through the streets of this historic town and then enjoyed an Italian dinner, prepared under the supervision of First Vice-president J. B. Ratto.

After a brief meeting Calistoga's grand old man, Charles Butler, as impresario, staged an entertainment of class and variety with exclusively home talent. Perhaps the three boxing matches were most enjoyed, for the gang had a lot of fun rooting for their favorites. As one visitor from Vallejo No. 77 put it, "This affair benefited the inner and the outer man."

School Dedicated.

Tracy—Grand President James A. Wilson, assisted by Past Grand Presidents Hubert R. McNoble and Fletcher A. Cutler, Grand First Vice-president Charles L. Dodge, Grand Third Vice-president Frank I. Gonzalez, Grand Secretary John T. Regan, Grand Trustees Frank M. Lane, Richard M. Hamb, Charles A. Koenig and Irving D. Gibson, and Grand Inside Sentinel Arthur Cleu, dedicated the Jefferson grammar school April 7. The ceremonies were under the joint auspices of Tracy No. 186 and El Pescadero No. 82 N.D.G.W., Recording Secretary R. J. Marracini of the former being chairman of the day.

Addresses were delivered by Grand President James A. Wilson, Past Grand President Fletcher A. Cutler, School Trustees R. J. Marracini and William Schlossman, and Harry Bessac, superintendent San Joaquin County schools. El Pescadero presented the school with an early-California painting, and Tracy presented a set of silk flags. The school students entertained with a splendid musical program and a playlet entitled "Our United States."

Ritual Contest.

San Rafael—Following initiation April 5 Mount Tamalpais No. 64 served a banquet at which District Deputy J. S. Rosa complimented the Parlor on its activities and the members for their interest. May 6 a ritual contest between the regular officers and the past presidents will be held, and the event is being looked forward to with a great deal of interest.

Forty-first Anniversary.

Oakland—The forty-first anniversary of the institution of Piedmont No. 120 was celebrated with a largely attended banquet March 21. Speakers of the evening were past Grand President Lewis F. Byington, Judge Lincoln S. Church and W. H. L. Hynes. An extensive entertainment program was presented.

Overflow Meeting.

Stockton—Stockton No. 7 had an overflow meeting April 15, the occasion being a visit from Grand President James A. Wilson, who was accompanied by Grand Secretary John T. Regan, Grand Trustee Charles A. Koenig and Grand Trustee Harmon D. Skillin. On arrival, the visitors were entertained at dinner by Past Grand President Hubert R. McNoble and William C. Neumiller of the Board of Control.

Commendable Undertaking.

Etna—Etna No. 192 is to undertake the restoration of Crystal Creek cemetery, commencing with 1852 the burial place of many Siskiyou County Pioneers, but practically abandoned in the '70s. As a result of neglect, the place has become a veritable jungle, some of the graves being pierced by forest trees two feet in diameter.

The Parlor plans to clear the land, erect an attractive fence, replace the headstones and, so far as possible, restore the inscriptions. G. W. Smith and L. E. Buchner comprise the committee in charge.

Wants Forest Primeval Saved.

Santa Cruz—Santa Cruz No. 90 is engaged in a vigorous campaign to have California take over, as a part of the state park system now being formulated, Butano Forest, primeval and grand, just over the Santa Cruz County line in San Mateo County.

Ten Initiated.

Elk Grove—In honor of Grand President James A. Wilson, the Sacramento County Parlor had a get-together meeting with Elk Grove No. 41, April 12. There was a large attendance, and ten candidates were initiated, the ritual being splendidly exemplified by a team from John A. Sutter Assembly No. 10 Past Presidents Association composed of the following:

James J. Longshore (Sacramento No. 3), president; Arthur H. Criss (Sunset No. 26), junior past president; Joseph L. Knowles (Sutter Fort No. 241), senior past president; Walter Martin (Elk Grove No. 41), first vice-president; Edward L. Keuchler (Sunset No. 26), second vice-president; M. E. Greer (Sunset No. 26), third vice-president; M. W. Longshore (Sacramento No. 3), marshal; C. C. Wachman (Elk Grove No. 41), inside sentinel; Grand Trustee Irving D. Gibson (Sacramento No. 3), organist.

After the meeting a turkey banquet was served. James J. Longshore was the toastmaster and among the speakers were Grand President James A. Wilson, Grand First Vice-president Charles L. Dodge, Grand Secretary John T. Regan and Grand Trustee Irving D. Gibson. Among those present was Frank H. Conn, financial secretary Sunset No. 26 (Sacramento), who attended a similar get-together function at Elk Grove a quarter-century ago, April 8, 1904.

Reforestation Talk Illustrated.

Lincoln—With members present from Colusa, Marysville, Yuba City, Oroville, Auhurn, Grass Valley and Nevada City, and visitors from San Francisco, Roseville and Sacramento, Fred H. Greely Assembly No. 6 Past Presidents Association met here April 17 with Silver Star No. 63.

At supper, presided over by President George Dauels of the Parlor, addresses were delivered by Past Grand President Fred H. Greely, Governor Charles Miller, District Deputy W. H. Hihbard, L. T. Sinnott, L. Urbs, J. J. Longshore, Dr. C. W. Chapman, P. W. Smith, Peter Delay, J. West and R. L. P. Bigelow, supervisor of the Tahoe National Forest, who illustrated his talk on reforestation with stereopticon slides.

To Observe Decoration Day.

Ferndale—Ferndale No. 93 has appointed R. A. Grusell, C. H. Rasmussen and E. P. Calanchini a committee to arrange for the proper observance of Decoration Day. The Parlor's horseshoe team defeated the W.O.Ws. April 16, making the second victory over this team. It is hoped to have a Native Son Horseshoe League soon. S. J. Damon is manager of the Parlor's baseball team again this year; he piloted the Ferndalers through a perfect season last year and hopes to win the 1929 pennant.

N.S. SUPERVISOR DEAD.

Sutter City (Sutter County)—John Ahlf, chairman of the Sutter County Board of Supervisors, died April 13 survived by a wife and a daughter. He was born at Colusa in 1861 and was affiliated with Sutter Parlor No. 261 N.S.G.W.

Big Bridge Contract—The Southern Pacific has let the contract for the construction of a $12,000,000 bridge across Suisun Bay, between Martinez, Contra Costa County, and Benicia, Solano County. Two years will be required to build the structure.

SHE MEASURES THE HEAT

The Modern Woman runs her home as a business.

Each material phase of family life has its "cost sheet" as a part of the family budget.

Just as she measures the flour, the shortening and other ingredients used in making a cake, she measures the heat for her kitchen range.

Modern gas ranges enable you to measure the heat just as accurately as you measure baking powder, flour, sugar or salt.

"WE'RE GRANDPARENTS NOW"

March 16, 1929, there came the notice of the marriage of our "Charles," of his position with a big corporation, of their honeymoon to Salt Lake, and of their new home in California to which they will return. Another letter from happy parents, dated September 1925, read:

"Dear Friends: You will be glad to hear from us, I know. E. was married November 13, 1923. Her husband is a fine young man of twenty-three years, sober, industrious, and his people are very kind to our daughter and have accepted her as their own. They own their home and an automobile and we feel that they will be happy.

ANOTHER OF "OUR" GRANDCHILDREN.

We would be glad to see you when over this way." And this daughter wrote later, December 1927:

"Dear Miss Brusie: My folks showed me your letter. I am not the same little girl that you brought up to the country twelve years ago, the little girl who made herself at home and almost from the minute she arrived called everything

'ours,' and called 'Hello, Daddie,' to the Jap that was out in the orchard. I have a fine husband and a darling little baby girl almost four months old, and we are very happy. I shall see you when we come down."

Here is a letter dated October 12, 1927, from a boy who was put in our custody when four years old and who has kept in touch with this office for seventeen years:

"Dear Miss Brusie: We are writing a few lines to let you know that we are well. The baby is just fine and has been creeping for the last two months. She weighs twenty-one pounds at ten months and she is sure cute. I wish you could see her. I think the world of her and she sure likes me. When I go by the house with the horses, and she is out on the porch, she tries her best to talk to me, and she has the nicest kind of a mother. I have fifty-eight acres of orchard and vineyard to look after and that keeps me busy, but the man I have been working for for the past three years is very good to us. I will close for this time. Yours truly, Mr. and Mrs. ———"

So, you see, we're all grandparents now, and can we ask for much more, now really, than the knowledge that, as the years go on, our babies—our boys and girls—have reached manhood and womanhood, have taken advantage of opportunities offered, have been a comfort to the parents who chose them, and have married and are bringing healthy little Californians into the world?

TO MOVE A TREE.

It happens many times that a large tree is to be moved, for some reason. This is not an impossible task, by any means, and while it requires work, there is no need to lose years of growth in a fruit tree or a shade tree. First find out something of the root system, and then dig a trench around the tree, large enough for a man to work in. A tree twelve feet in height would require a trench leaving four feet square of dirt upon the roots. Build a box about the dirt, cut the roots cleanly off and tip the tree over, boarding up the bottom. Block and tackle may be rigged to get the tree out, and it can be hauled upon a stone boat or a low wagon. To plant, dig the hole two feet larger in each direction than the box containing roots and dirt. Fill the extra two feet at the bottom with good top soil, slide the tree in and, reversing the process, remove the boards. Fill in around the sides, using plenty of water. The growth will be checked, of course, but not seriously.

CLEAN THE WATER POOL.

If the water garden has not already been given its spring cleaning, it is now high time. Drain the water and clean out the dirt. Put the lilies in new pots or boxes; if flowers are desired give them plenty of root room, with good loam and half-rotted cow manure. Water lilies and other aquatic plants may be secured from the nurseryman. Don't forget goldfish; they add much to the water garden and require little time or care.

could be withdrawn at any time; the accused had not obtained any funds through misrepresentation, and while "Lucky" was out at the present value of Sierra Nevada stock about $20,000 his friend could not be held as criminally to blame.

SALMON FISHERMEN QUARREL.

Memorial Day, May 30, was fittingly observed throughout the state, the exercises being under the auspices of the Grand Army of the Republic.

Mrs. Mary Josephine Young of Sacramento City was admitted to the practice of law by the California Supreme Court, May 13. She was the first native daughter to practice law in this state.

A monument erected to the memory of William Watt was unveiled May 8 at the Grass Valley cemetery. Thousands of Nevada County citizens, and many others from all parts of the state, assembled to honor the memory of "Billy" Watt. A large procession, headed by the Knights Templar, proceeded to the cemetery, where Judge E. W. Roberts delivered the eulogy. The monument was a granite shaft, thirty-four feet high.

D. B. James of Visalia, Tulare County, invented a prismoidal railway, and gave an exhibition there of a handcar running along a one-track railway.

Ice houses along the Central Pacific railroad in the Sierra Nevada had stored for summer use 50,000 tons of ice.

The salmon fishing industry along the Sacramento River up to Courtland, Sacramento County, was in the hands of Italians and Greeks. May 8 war broke out between opposition fishermen and the Italians, and about fifty of the latter, incensed at the others for selling at 25 cents a salmon regardless of size, raided their rendezvous near Antioch, Contra Costa County, and threw overboard hundreds of fish and also the nets. At Rio Vista, Solano County, they attempted to land, but were driven off. They then rowed away, threatening further reprisals. The Greeks, in complete control of the Collinsville, Solano County, cannery, were not bothered. The result of this disturbance was the formation of a Fishermen's Protective Association, with 200 members, to regulate the industry. They pledged themselves not to sell salmon for less than 50 cents a fish; limited shipments to the San Francisco market to three times a week so as to keep prices uniform and to allow no increase of boats. Salmon is now selling for 40 cents a pound, and a 50-cent salmon of fifty years ago would today retail, if of the average weight then caught, for $16.

An unusual number of suicides, murders and fatal accidents, averaging one a day, occurred during the month. The unfortunates were of both sexes and of various nationalities, ages and occupations.

Mrs. F. Sulzberger, following a quarrel with her husband, a Sutter County farmer, took her 4-year-old daughter into the woods and hung her from a rafter and then banged herself from an adjoining one.

VIGILANTES EMPLOY NOOSE.

L. Langheim, a Contra Costa County farmer, took his two children into the orchard May 19 and, after knocking them senseless with a club, cut their throats with a scythe. He then went into the house and blew his head off with a shotgun.

B. Largomarsino, old-time Stockton, San Joaquin County, resident, committed bari-kari May 13 by slashing open his abdomen with a razor.

John Kraemer was killed by a cave-in at his Omega, Nevada County, mine. Edward Center, a Shasta County miner, was drowned in a shaft. B. H. Bartlett, a mining-ditch tender of Dutch Flat, Placer County, fell from a bridge into the ditch and was drowned.

John Donovan of Wheatland, Yuba County, attempting to ford a small creek in gum boots, stuck in the quicksand and was drowned.

William and Thomas Yocum, convicted in the Kern County district court of killing two miners of that county in 1878, were granted a new trial by the California Supreme Court and a change of venue to Fresno County. May 28 about seventy-five masked men forcibly entered the county jail at Bakersfield and disposed of the Yocums via the noose route. Departing, the leader of the vigilantes handed the jailer this note, for the Kern County sheriff: "The supreme court of Kern County has rendered its decision and from it there is no appeal."

Attempting to enter a home in New York Township, Nevada County, Joe Valentine was shot and killed by 13-year-old Alice Gerbet.

In a dispute over the one-dollar stake in a gambling game, Charles Readinger murdered James Keefe at Williams, Colusa County.

Henry Churchill of Marysville, Yuba County, harpooning drift wood in the Yuba River, upset the boat and was drowned.

Wm. Jabine, Pioneer of El Dorado County and member of the first board of supervisors, wandered from his Placerville home and two weeks later was found, dead, near Coloma.

A Mexican named Ballers caught Ed Phipps, Amador County character known as "Sailor Jack," attempting to set fire to his cabin near the Kennedy mine and cleaved Phipps' head in two with an ax.

SAN DIEGO WILL ACQUIRE STATE'S MOST IMPORTANT LANDMARK.

San Diego—Presidio Hill, the birthplace of Christianity on the Pacific Coast, has been acquired by George W. Marston, who has announced his intention of deeding the property to San Diego City. The area is to be laid out in shrubbery and parkways, and a museum, for the housing of historic documents and relics, will be constructed.

Presidio Hill overlooks San Diego Old Town. It was here, in 1769, that the Cross was first raised upon California soil, by Father Junipero Serra, who founded a chain of missions extending up the coast from San Diego to Sonoma.

THE BIG CITY THAT KNOWS HOW

NATIVE SON PAST GRAND FETED

SEVERAL PROMINENT MEMBERS OF the Order of Native Sons of the Golden West tendered Past Grand President Dr. Charles W. Decker a banquet at the Elks Club, April 1, in commemoration of his seventy-fourth birthday. Dr. Decker was born at Sutterville, Sacramento County, March 31, 1855. His father reached Sacramento City from New Orleans, around Cape Horn, in January of 1850, and opened a hotel there; afterwards he built at Sutterville one of the first breweries in California North, and well known through all the mining counties. Later on the Decker family came to San Francisco, where Charles attended the historic Lincoln school on Fifth street from which were graduated many of the now-prominent men of the state. He has for years served on the board of directors of the Lincoln School Alumni Association, and for a number of years was also a member of the San Francisco Board of Education.

Dr. Decker joined the Order of Native Sons in July 1876, shortly after its organization, and in 1886 was elected Grand President. No more enthusiastic or loyal son of California has ever held an office in the Grand Parlor. During his term as Grand President he instituted twenty-two Subordinate Parlors, namely, those from Yerba Buena No. 84 to and including Niantic No. 105, and visited every section of California in the interest of the Order at his own expense, no funds being provided by the Grand Parlor in those days for the traveling expenses of grand officers. The passing years have not abated the zeal or chilled the warmth of Dr. Decker's love for the Order and its members. He is present at every recurrent session of the Grand Parlor and at every patriotic celebration participated in by the Order. Every movement for the good of California has his earnest and hearty support.

Those present at the banquet to extend fraternal greetings to Past Grand President Decker, recalling the past and wishing him the blessings of the future, included: Past Grand Presidents Lewis F. Byington, who presided as toastmaster, "Dean" John H. Grady, Judge Frank H. Dunne, George D. Clark, Daniel A. Ryan, Judge John F. Davis, William P. Cauby, William J. Hayes and Edward J. Lynch.

Colonel Frank M. Marston (California No. 1), who prepared and read some verse covering the life of Dr. Decker; Louis K. Hagenkamp (Rincon No. 72); R. R. Veale (General Winn No. 32), for thirty-five years sheriff of Contra Costa County; Louis Nonnermann (South San Francisco No. 157), E. B. Gallagher (Precita No. 187), Dan J. Wren (Precita No. 187), Charles W. Decker Jr. (Palo Alto No. 216), William D. Hynes (Stanford No. 76), Charles D. Steiger (Stanford No. 76), Joseph B. Keenan (Niantic No. 105) and Joseph Clement (Precita No. 187).

ANNIVERSARY CELEBRATED.

Alta Parlor No. 3 N.D.G.W. celebrated its forty-second institution anniversary with a dinner at the Native Daughter Home, the tables being decorated in spring blossoms. Mrs. A. F. Cosgrove, the president, was the toastmistress and forty charter members were in attendance. A program of addresses, recitations and vocal numbers was presented.

TWENTIETH ANNIVERSARY.

Linda Rosa Parlor No. 170 N.D.G.W. celebrated the twentieth anniversary of the institution of the Parlor with a banquet at the Native Daughter Home. In addition to several grand officers, sixty-five members attended. A delicious menu was served, and the tables were beautifully decorated.

Addresses were made by guests and members, and several selections were rendered by the Parlor's quartet—Lena Huber, Emily Taylor, Annie Daley and Amelia Anthes—accompanied by Gertrude Koenig. Full credit for the successful affair belongs to Emily Taylor.

SPLENDID NATIVE SON GOES ON.

Michael James McGovern, one of the hardest-working and best-thought-of members of the Order of Native Sons of the Golden West, died at his San Francisco home April 2. He was born at Gilroy, Santa Clara County, March 29, 1873, and was affiliated with Castro Parlor No. 232.

Deceased not only took an active interest in local Native Son affairs but, as a frequent delegate to the Grand Parlor from Castro, he was identified with some of the most important committees.

TO PROMOTE VICTORY HIGHWAY TRAVEL.

Organized to make effective a program of joint action to promote motor tourist travel, the Victory Highway Advisory Council is preparing to launch a campaign for further improvement of this transcontinental route to California North and to exploit its advantages to the westward-bound army of motor tourists. Formation of the council by a group of San Francisco Bay region and Sacramento Valley civic leaders is announced by the California State Automobile Association, western headquarters for the Victory Highway Association, following a meeting in Sacramento sponsored by the two organizations.

Over this main route of travel from the East and Middle West is coming an increasing flow of motor travel, and it is pointed out that maximum benefit to this state can be secured only through a concerted effort to maintain the highway at a high standard of improvement and to exploit it where promotion will be most effective. The campaign is planned as the season of motor travel is getting under way and as highway improvement work is beginning in various states along the route.

FEDERAL GOVERNMENT ADDS TO LASSEN VOLCANIC NATIONAL PARK.

During 1928 the area of the national park system was enlarged to 12,113.5 square miles, an increase of nearly 200 square miles, through the addition of lands to existing parks and the establishment of new ones, according to a March 23 statement of the Federal Interior Department.

Lassen Volcanic National Park, in California North, was enlarged by the addition of thirty-nine miles of interesting volcanic territory through congressional enactment. Further legislation gave authority to consolidate or acquire alienated lands within the exterior boundaries of the park.

FIFTY-SECOND N.S.G.W. GRAND PARLOR

(CLARENCE M. HUNT.)

THE FIFTY-SECOND GRAND PARLOR of the Order of Native Sons of the Golden West will convene in the Auditorium of Native Sons Building, 430 Mason street, Monday, May 20. Grand President James A. Wilson will preside, and at the close of the Grand Parlor will be installed as Junior Past Grand President. Sessions will be held Monday, Wednesday and Friday, the intervening days, Tuesday and Thursday, being given over to pleasure.

San Francisco was the meeting-place of the First and Second Grand Parlors, in 1878 and 1879, and since that formative time in the Order's history two additional Grand Parlors have been held there, in 1883, when John H. Grady of San Francisco, dean of the Past Grand Presidents, presided, and in 1915, the year of the great Panama-Pacific International Exposition.

The reading of reports of various grand officers and committees will take up considerable of the Grand Parlor's time. That of Grand Secretary John T. Regan will show the membership of the Order January 1, 1929, to have been 25,348. His report will also show:

*Connection with Order severed.

This would, it is claimed, apply to a majority of those entering from Mexico. The committee members are Valentine S. McClatchy (Pacific No. 10), Senator James D. Phelan (Pacific No. 10) and William Stanton (Rincon No. 72).

Among the numerous resolutions certain to be introduced will be two pertaining to forestry and reforestation, and one proposing to abolish the Home Industry Committee of the Grand Parlor.

CANDIDATES FOR OFFICE.

The big office-fight at this Grand Parlor, it mation obtained from the parties concerned, The Grizzly Bear presents this line-up of Grand Parlor office-candidates:

Grand President—Grand First Vice-president Charles L. Dodge (Carquinez No. 205) of Martinez.

Grand First Vice-president—Grand Second Vice-president John T. Newell (Los Angeles No. 45) of Los Angeles.

Grand Second Vice-president—Grand Third Vice-president Dr. Frank I. Gonzalez (Pacific No. 10) of San Francisco.

Grand Third Vice-president—Grand Trustee Richard M. Hamb (Piedmont No. 120) of Oakland.

Grand Secretary—John T. Regan (South San Francisco No. 157), incumbent, of San Francisco.

Grand Treasurer—John E. McDougald (California No. 1), incumbent, of San Francisco.

Grand Marshal—Grand Inside Sentinel Arthur J. Cleu (Fruitvale No. 252) of Oakland.

Grand Inside Sentinel—Grand Outside Sentinel Joseph Clavo (Vallejo No. 77) of Vallejo.

Grand Outside Sentinel—Horace J. Leavitt (Mount Bally No. 87) of Weaverville; Fred H. Nickelson (South San Francisco No. 157) of San Francisco, and Dr. Joseph A. Kleiser (Glendale No. 264) of Glendale.

Grand Trustees (seven to be selected)—Irving D. Gibson (Sacramento No. 3), incumbent, of Sacramento; Grand Marshal A. W. Garcelon (Arcata No. 20) of Arcata; Frank M. Lane (Fresno No. 25), incumbent, of Fresno; Charles A. Koenig (Golden Gate No. 29), incumbent, of San Francisco; J. Hartley Russell (Stanford No. 76), incumbent, of San Francisco; Ben Harrison (Arrowhead No. 110), incumbent, of San Bernardino; Harmon D. Skillin (Castro No. 232), incumbent, of San Francisco.

The Grand Organist and the Historiographer, also members of the Grand Parlor official family, are appointive, by the Grand President.

Yosemite Parlor No. 24 informs The Grizzly Bear that it will ask for the Fifty-third (1930) Grand Parlor for its home-city, Merced. And there are rumors to the effect that both Monterey and Stockton will be in the field for next year's gathering.

The consensus of opinion appears to be that this year's Admission Day, September 9, statewide celebration should be held at Sacramento, in conjunction with the Seventy-fifth Annual State Fair. It has been suggested, too, that the celebration should be held at the State Fair grounds, the racetrack providing the route of march for the parade—an excellent suggestion. If the Sacramento delegation ask for, they will unquestionably receive, the celebration.

EUROPE, THROUGH CALIFORNIA EYES

(EARL LEMOINE.)

"MANY DAYS WERE SPENT VISITING various chateaux of the Loire, most of which are situated in the region known as Touraine, from the standpoints of architecture, history and romance the most famous valley of the world and, due to fertility of soil and mildness of climate, called the garden of France.

"Luynes, built in the fifteenth century and known as the castle with the pepper-box towers, is reached by a long flight of winding stone steps leading to an immense court surrounded with fine masonry of basalt rock and marble. Langeais, built in 1460 by order of Louis XI, has its original drawbridge; here, in 1491, Charles VII was married to Anne of Brittany; the apartments are furnished in fine Gothic style. Villandry, in style Renaissance, is in the midst of charming gardens; it has a 900-year-old barracks used by Napoleon, now a museum with many Spanish and French masterpieces.

"Chenonceaux has a style all its own and was called a masterpiece by America's greatest architect, Stanford White. A portion of the building rests upon arches spanning the River Cher. It was given by Henri II to Diane de Poitiers who, in turn, gave it to Catherine de Medicis. A great gallery crossing the river and known as the promenade was designed by Philibert Delorme. A formal 900-acre French garden, together with wonderful stables, are included in this great estate.

"Admirably situated on terraces dominating the Nahon Valley is Valencay, in 1805 the property of Prince Talleyrand, but in 1808 it became the residence of Ferdinand VII of Spain, de-throned by Napoleon. In the Indre Valley stands Usse, beautiful fifteenth century mansion with a highly decorated Gothic chapel.

"Azay-le-Rideau is a charming production of purest Renaissance. The River Indre completely surrounds it and forms the moat. It was built by Berthelot for Frances I. Niches, colonnades, friezes, arabesques and bas-reliefs are charming, and the writer kept his cinema going at top speed. The main staircase is famed for the carved oddities in marble. Near by is Montbazou, built in 1150.

"Loches, an interesting little city of ancient houses and quaint inns, has many attractions. Topping a great rocky hill is the Renaissance castle of Francis I. The old Roman keep, finished during the life of William the Conqueror, is a gigantic stone fortress 200 feet high. In its dungeons Louis XI incarcerated such famous prisoners as the Duc de Alecon, Cardinal La Balere and Ludovic, famous Moor who decorated the cell walls with verses bewailing his sad fate. The writer descended seventy feet and went through a tunnel, discovered eleven years ago, leading to a garden supposed to be 1,100 years old.

"The castle of Chinon, situated in a wooded valley on the River Vienne, has a beautiful background of rolling hills. This fortress, covering about twenty acres, is made up of three great buildings—the Chateaux du Milleu, Saint Georges and du Coudray. A portion of this castle was built during the Roman period. In the grand salle is where Charles VII received Joan of Arc. A small wing of the fortress is now owned by Adalbert Chevalier, an interpreter on General Pershing's staff and a great lover of the Americans. As tokens of friendship he presented the writer eight Roman coins, nearly 2,000 years old, and a 450-year-old key.

"Saumur sets like a pedestal upon the hills above the River Loire and occupies a commanding position above that town. In the ninth century the ancient keep was manned by the Franks, who bore the assaults of the Normans. Foulques Nerra rebuilt it into a strong Feudal fortress in the tenth century, and the castle was finished in the thirteenth century. In turn, it was the residence of Charles VII, Duc de Brittany, Duc de Anjou, King Rene, Queen Isabelle of Lorraine, and many American soldiers during the late war. In Angers, on the Maine, is a powerful fortress of stern aspect started by Phillippe Auguste and finished by Louis IV. It has seventeen big towers, enbaised in stone twenty-one feet thick. In the interior of the castle is a fifteenth-century chapel and a turreted building in which King Rene of Sicily was born. From one to two divisions of American troops were encamped here at all times during the late war.

"Le Lude Chateau was begun in 1355 and finished in 1475. The LeMoine family occupied it for nearly a century, through the marriage of Thomas LeMoine to Marie, daughter of Robert de Orange. In 1419 it was lost to the English, who kept 1,200 soldiers in its spacious apartments for eight years. The first building was constructed by the Duc de Anjou in 1030.

"Ambolse is a superb castle which reflects its elegant roof-line in the placid waters of the Loire. The huge ramparts are covered with trees and flowers. At one corner is an enormous round tower with a spiral stone roadway up which Charles V of Spain rode to visit Francis I in 1539. The main chateau is a white Renaissance pile, and in the court may be seen the wrought-iron balcony from which 1,500 Huguenot soldiers, who had attempted to seize Francis II, were hanged. Under a slab at the portal is buried Leonardi da Vinci, painter of 'Mona Louisa.'

"A drive through the tree-shaded lanes, past cliff houses, some 900 years old, built in sandstone above the river, brought us to one of the world's most heroic cities, Blois, and the magic spell of the sinister dramas of the sixteenth century were recalled by that splendid castle of the Valois, Louis XII, Francis I, Henri III and Catherine de Medici. Each of these great rulers, all masters of the building art, added a wing, stair or hall to the structure, which today stands as a monument to the masons, hammer and trowel.

"We will rest a day or so and then proceed to Paris, passing enroute some historic spots worthy of mention."

"THE IRON MASK" WILL SOON CLOSE.

To work in the same picture for four weeks without meeting, and to see each other for the first time in the darkness of a night scene, was the unique experience of Marguerite de la Motte and Dorothy Revier, who play the two leading feminine roles in Douglas Fairbanks' "The Iron Mask," now nearing the close of its long run at the Fox Carthay Circle Theater.

Miss de la Motte and Miss Revier have been friends for years, and had anticipated with much pleasure working together for the first time in the same company. But their parts as Constance and Milady de Winter called them to different scenes at different hours. For the first month during production of the picture they did not even see each other. But during the fifth week of work they met for the first time, during the making of night scenes on the streets of the ancient French village of St. Germain, and renewed their old friendship in a darkness so intense they could barely see each other.

"The Iron Mask," a sequel to Fairbanks' first story of Alexander Dumas' seventeenth-century heroes, "The Three Musketeers," will close May 7 at the Fox Carthay Circle Theater, and will be succeeded the 8th by John Ford's new production, "The Black Watch," a picturization of Talbot Mundy's stirring tale of adventure and romance, "King of the Khyber Rifles." Victor McLaglen is in the stellar role, with a notable supporting cast.

TITLE COMPANY'S NAME CHANGING.

J. B. Webber, president of the J. B. Webber Title Insurance Company, and several members of the board of directors including Chas. C. Chapman, Isidore B. Dockweiler, A. H. Voigt, S. J. Chapman, Frank R. Strong and T. R. Hudson were recent guests of G. D. Robertson at the Realty Board lunch.

Webber was introduced to the realtors by Mason Case, president of the Realty Board. He very briefly referred to the extra service now given by the J. B. Webber Title Insurance Company, and informed the realtors that the company's name was being changed to National Title Insurance Company to meet the ever-increasing demands for its services and to keep pace with its expansion policy.

Selling watches and making them

De Neve officially presided, with appropriate ceremonies of the time, at Los Angeles' birth as a city and bestowed the name El Pueblo de Nuestra Señora la Reina. Little did he know, at that time, that the little pueblo was to become one of the truly great cities of the world.

The dinner-dance will mark the inaugural affair to be given annually by this group and is elaborate in its plan. It is to be a rose-and-gold ball, with dinner served at 7. Early California costumes, spanish shawls and formal present-day evening wear will mark a colorful event. Reservations are coming in rapidly. During the evening an elaborate program will be presented, among those to appear being Leo Carrillo, Otto Ploetz, Laurie Gregory Nicholson, Alma Real and Gabriel Ruiz.

Honoring the members of Californiana who are working on the rose-and-gold ball committee, President Wright entertained over a hundred guests at her home April 18. She was assisted by Mms. Harry Leigh Bentley, A. O. Evans, Adelaide McGregor, T. G. Duffy, Charles Jacobson, Isabelle Del Valle Cram, William Behm, Augusta Corbit, C. E. Noerenberg, and Miss Florence N. Steinike.

BENEFIT SUCCESSFUL.

Los Angeles Parlor No. 45 N.S.G.W. had as guests April 18 the officers of Glendale Parlor No. 264, who conducted the initiatory ceremonies. Refreshments were served and there were many interesting talks by visitors and members. The dance sponsored by the Parlor for the benefit of Matthew J. McGowan, who is to make his future home with relatives in Alhany, Alameda County, was a great success.

Los Angeles will initiate a class of candidates May 16, and May 30 a rally for the delegates to the San Francisco Grand Parlor will be featured.

ENTRANCE GATE FOR NEW CAMPUS.

A striking ornamental and utilitarian adjunct to the new campus of the University of California at Los Angeles, costing approximately $50,000, will be presented the university. It will consist of an arched gateway admitting to the southern entrance of the campus on the Stone Canyon road, and a circle of benches from which a broad walk and stairway will give approach to the main buildings of the university.

The gateway and walk will be constructed of ornamental brick and cement. The stair and walk will be 273 feet long by 24 feet wide, and will eventually be the main thoroughfare connecting Royce Hall, the administration building and other main buildings with the athletic field

PLANNING BARBECUE.

The card party of Los Angeles Parlor No. 124 N.D.G.W. April 10 under the supervision of Edith Douglas was a decided success. A novelty program was introduced and was very pleasing. Mr. Douglas favored with two vocal numbers, accompanied at the piano by Pearle K. Dwinelle, and two little children contributed dancing numbers and recitations. The sports dance of April 24, Daisy Voigt chairman, was much enjoyed. Ruth Ruiz is planning a barbecue for the Parlor at Campo de Cahuenga, Universal City.

Los Angeles' calendar for May includes: Initiation and election Santa Cruz Grand Parlor delegates, the 1st; card party, the 8th; "pot luck" dinner under the supervision of Grace J. Norton, social hostess, the 15th, at 6:30 p. m.

ANNIVERSARY BANQUET.

Hollywood Parlor No. 196 N.S.G.W. observed the thirty-third anniversary of its institution with a banquet at the Hollywood Athletic Club April 17. A program of entertainment was presented, and Dr. J. A. Kleiser, president Glendale Parlor No. 264, favored with a vocal selection.

Superior Judge Joseph P. Sproul was the toastmaster and as an innovation had each one present introduce himself, give the name of his Parlor and the year he affiliated with the Order. Speakers of the evening included Past Grand President Herman C. Lichtenherger, Carlin G. Smith, Superior Judge Samuel R. Blake, Ed. Lovie, Grand Second Vice-president John T. Newell, Arthur A. Schmidt, Arthur C. Davis and Past Grand President William I. Traeger. During the evening Toastmaster Sproul, on the Parlor's behalf, presented a past president's ring to Carl Riley.

TO DEDICATE MEMORY GARDEN.

Long Beach—The bunco party of Long Beach Parlor No. 154 N.D.G.W. April 3 was well attended and everyone had a good time. Charlotte Wharton won high prize. April 11 the thimble club had a covered-dish luncheon and card party at the home of Fannie McPherson, and April 25 the club was entertained at the home of Lillian Lasater.

At a date to be announced later, the Parlor will dedicate a memory garden to the Pioneer Mothers in Recreation Park, the Long Beach City Council having set aside a plot of ground for the purpose.

PLANNING ANNIVERSARY CELEBRATION.

Ramona Parlor No. 109 N.S.G.W. is planning a celebration of its institution anniversary in June, and is taking a postcard vote of its members to ascertain if the majority want an open-air "stag" affair or an indoor function to which the womenfolks will be invited. If the "staggers" predominate, the affair will be held the 9th, otherwise the 8th.

With past presidents filling the stations, Ramona will initiate a class of candidates May 10, and May 31 the San Francisco Grand Parlor delegates will report and officers for the July-January term will be nominated.

a grandpa, a native daughter having been born April 11 to his daughter, Mrs. Ruth Travilla.

A native son arrived April 8 at the home of Audrey Thomas (Ramona N.S.). The youngster's granddaddy is Marshal Charles R. Thomas (Ramona N.S.).

Annie L. Adair and Mary K. Corcoran (both Los Angeles N.D.) were at Escondido, San Diego County, last month in the interest of the homeless children, and visited San Luis Rey Mission, which has been restored.

Herman C. Lichtenberger (Past Grand President N.S.), who had the misfortune to fall from a street-car and break his collarbone, is well on the road to complete recovery. He contemplates departing on a European trip early in June.

CHARITY BOX ENRICHED.

San Pedro—Sepulveda Parlor No. 263 N.S.G.W. had many visitors, including a delegation of fifty from Arrowhead Parlor No. 110 (San Bernardino), April 5, the occasion being past presidents' night. Preceding the meeting a fish supper was served.

Ramon D. Sepulveda, for whom the Parlor was named, presided, and Edwin E. Baldwin conducted the "good of the order" and, incidentally, collected quite a tidy sum for the charity box. Among the numerous speakers of the evening were Grand Second Vice-president John T. Newell and Grand Trustee Ben Harrison.

GENEROUS CONTRIBUTION.

Long Beach—Long Beach Parlor No. 239 N.S.G.W. initiated a class of seven candidates April 11, the ritual being admirably rendered by the officers of Ramona Parlor No. 109, headed by President Ralph I. Harbison. Among the many visitors in attendance were Grand Second Vice-president John T. Newell, who delivered an address. Refreshments were served at the meeting's close.

The homeless children fund of the Native Sons and the Native Daughters has been enriched $500, a friend of Judge Percy Hight, trustee of the Parlor, having contributed that amount. Long Beach is now meeting in Patriotic Hall of the City Hall the second and fourth Thursdays.

ACCOMPLISH MUCH; PLAN MORE.

Ocean Park—El Camino Real Club, the sewing circle of Santa Monica Bay Parlor No. 245 N.D.G.W., had as hostess March 25 Marie Barnes. Work was started on a quilt which, when completed, will be sent to the homeless children committee in Los Angeles.

Although in existence only since September of last year, the members have accomplished much, and plan to do more in the future. Officers of the club are: Rita Smith, founder; Katherine Worsham, president; Marie Barnes, secretary; Anna Pierce, treasurer.

THE DEATH RECORD.

John Henry Penprase, father of Edward A. Penprase (Ramona N.S.), died March 25.

John L. Dillin, father of Frank Dillin (Los Angeles N.S.), died April 2, at the age of 70.

Joseph R. Seaman, affiliated with Ramona Parlor No. 109 N.S.G.W., died April 6, survived by a wife. He was born at Los Angeles, June 26, 1873.

Miss Charlotte Virginia Baily, sister of Jack C. Baily (Ramona N.S.), passed away April 15. Oscar Bayer, affiliated with Ramona Parlor No. 109 N.S.G.W., died April 16, survived by a wife. He was born at Palmdale, Los Angeles County, September 8, 1897.

Judge Waldo Marvin York, father of Appellate Judge John M. York (Hollywood N.S.), died April 17. He was a native of Maine, aged 83; for thirteen years he served Los Angeles County as a superior court judge.

Charles E. Sebastian, father of Dr. Charles F. Sebastian (Ramona N.S.), died April 17. He was a native of Missouri, aged 56; he served Los Angeles City both as mayor and police chief.

Andrew A. Dumler, affiliated with Los Angeles Parlor No. 45 N.S.G.W., died suddenly at La Junta, Colorado, April 19, survived by a

ONE OF COUNTRY'S LARGEST.

Taking rank as one of the ten largest banks in America, a $600,000,000 institution came into existence at the close of business March 30 under the name Security-First National Bank of Los Angeles. It represents a consolidation of the Los Angeles-First National Trust & Savings Bank and the Security Trust & Savings Bank, two of the oldest and foremost banks in California. It has a capital account of $50,000,000. With the oldest of the component banks founded in 1875, the Security-First National traces its history back to the days when Los Angeles was still much of a frontier town struggling with its law and order problems. J. F. Sartori, formerly president of the Security, is president of the bank and chairman of its executive committee. Sartori, who organized the Security Bank in 1889, has been a bank executive in California South for more than forty years, is a former president of the savings bank division of the American Bankers Association and has served for five terms as president of the Los Angeles Clearing House Association.

In addition to numerous branches in the metropolitan area of Los Angeles, the Security-First National Bank operates in communities from Fresno to Imperial Valley.

"WILDERNESS" IN LOS ANGELES COUNTY.

Solitude is not difficult to find, even in a county of nearly 2,000,000 people. Although it might seem impossible, in this modern age, to withdraw from the hectic civilization with which Los Angeles County abounds, Professor William J. Miller of the geology department of the University of California at Los Angeles had the experience recently of traveling three days almost in the heart of the county without seeing another human being. During that time he traveled an average of more than twenty miles a day on foot, without retracing his course, and did not once encounter another person.

He was traversing sections of the San Gabriel Mountains in search of specimens from which he proposes to make a study of the peculiar geology of the district. He accumulated upwards of 600 pieces of rock and from these he will endeavor to discover new facts with relation to the characteristic formations in the region.

The result of one of Professor Miller's studies, "The Geology of Deep Spring Valley," has just been published in the "Journal of Geology." Deep Spring Valley is one of the most remarkable desert basins in California, and various conflicting ideas have been expressed in regard to the origin of this and other valleys of the Basin Range province. Dr. Miller points out that Deep Spring Valley very clearly owes its origin to faulting, whose dislocation has been comparatively recent.

When the Optimist Club held its district convention in Glendale the last of April, it had for a toastmaster a prominent member of the Order of Native Sons of the Golden West, Lieutenant-Colonel Warren Bradley Bovard, affiliated with Ramona Parlor No. 109. As third vice-president of the Optimist International, Colonel Bovard has been proclaimed an executive among the business and professional leaders of the world, and as past president of the Los Angeles Optimist Club he is closely identified with California business. Colonel Bovard's election into the Optimist Club was merited by his holding the office of comptroller of the University of Southern California since 1920 and that of vice-president of the same institution since 1927, and also his being a director of the California Bank, thus keeping in constant contact with Western progress. Colonel Bovard's efforts on the Los Angeles Park Commission, on which he has served since 1923, have made him an outstanding local figure known for his staunch fight to make every possible development of the natural beauties of California, and to emphasize the value of parks to a city. Other betterment work sponsored by Colonel Bovard is under the direction of the Better America Federation, of which he is a member. The Los Angeles Breakfast Club, which does much for the advancement of city and state among world notables, has Colonel Bovard's name on its roster, as does the American Legion, official organization of world war veterans.

During the world war, Colonel Bovard served as major with the air service, and with the general staff corps at Washington, D. C. Having assisted his nation during the war, he returned to his native state and was associated with Governor Stephens of California as executive secretary.

Not only in the business world has Colonel Bovard been recognized, but he was also honored by the youth of the state at the University of Southern California, where he was made a member of Skull and Dagger, the exclusive organization which chooses only those who have served the university in an outstanding way. He is a member of Sigma Chi, national social fraternity, and is thus affiliated with the university students throughout the country, who will be the leaders of tomorrow.

SOME VERY CONSTRUCTIVE WORK ACCOMPLISHED BY ORDER NATIVE DAUGHTERS

Dr. Louise C. Heilbron
(GRAND PRESIDENT.)

BEGINNING WITH JUNE 17TH, in the City of Santa Cruz, the closing of another year in the growth and history of the Order of Native Daughters of the Golden West will be enacted. The delegates from the Subordinate Parlors will assemble and, with due deliberation and consideration, will legislate for the future welfare of our beloved Order.

"The closing year has found the members quite active and, as a culmination of their labors, some very constructive work has been accomplished. This has only been possible through the combined efforts of all Subordinate Parlors throughout the state.

"After assuming the responsibilities and duties incumbent as Grand President, I attended, shortly after the close of last Grand Parlor, a meeting of the Grand Parlor Home Committee. At this very important gathering plans were outlined by which every member of the Order could be of service, by assisting to eliminate the indebtedness against the building, which was then under construction.

"At that meeting it was voted to send a circular letter to every Subordinate Parlor in the state. The letter, sent out by the sub-finance committee of the Home Committee, asked that each member of the Order contribute, through loyalty and service to the Order, a Loyalty Pledge: the pledge to be the sum of five dollars, and that all the members would be allowed until June 1, 1929, to earn the same, and that contributions might be earned at any time, and in any way the members desired; the money received by the Grand Secretary to be placed in a special fund, to be called the Loyalty Fund.

"Had these pledges been received as a free-will offering, as a personal contribution to the Home, the total mortgages, both the first and the second, could have been cancelled at the coming Grand Parlor. It was only with the thought and desire to have each member of the Order consider herself a personal owner in the Home that the Loyalty Pledge was sponsored. It was not necessary nor compulsory for any member to assume the responsibility of loyalty or service for the cancellation of the indebtedness. Every dollar received for the Loyalty Fund will decrease the total indebtedness just one dollar. The support that has been received will not be definitely known until the Loyalty Pledge finance report is given to the Grand Parlor delegates.

"Shortly after the New Year, January 12th to be exact, the realization of a dream of many years came true, and the Native Daughters' New Home was dedicated.

"To Past Grand President Dr. Mariana Bertola of San Francisco, the esteemed chairman of the Home Committee, is due the greatest credit, for only by her untiring efforts was it possible to complete the building in so short a time. At all times the different members of the Home Committee were most loyal, and each and every one has rendered to the Order valuable service. Yet, to the chairman, Dr. Bertola, must the greatest credit and due recognition and appreciation be given.

"The dedication ceremonies were very impressive and interesting, and while every member of the Order was invited, the New Home could not accommodate all who came to do honor to the Home Committee and to receive a wonderful surprise when viewing the interior of the building. Dr. Bertola was a delightful chairman of the dedication ceremonies, and all who were present heard the wondrous story: How, from a small beginning, a few sisters, members of the Order who desired to be of service to less-fortunate members, formed a Board of Relief; then the work increased, and a small Home was bought by the pioneer workers, those sisters who had labored for others; and so on, until a complete resume, from the small beginning until the final completion and realization of their long-wished-for dream. It was all interesting.

"And so, the largest and most worth-while project of the Order, the New Home, was dedicated. Our one big gift to ourselves! It stands at 555 Baker street, San Francisco, a beautiful building costing over $100,000. A credit to our Order, a monument to those sisters who pioneered, as a testimony of love and affection for the Order. Of great value to the City of San Francisco, as well as to the State of California.

"As a Home, in contrast with homes of other women's organizations, it compares most favorably. 'From small acorns, big oaks grow,' and certainly this has proven true when one reads, hears and knows the detailed history of the New Native Daughter Home.

DR. LOUISE C. HEILBRON OF SACRAMENTO.
GRAND PRESIDENT N.D.G.W.

"Much progress has been made this last year throughout the state, from Savers Bar to San Diego. Suitable tablets have been dedicated. We, as Native Daughters, are realizing more and more that it depends upon our individual and collective efforts as members of the Order whether the future posterity of this state shall know its history, and that it rests with us whether historical landmarks shall be suitably marked so that generations to follow will definitely know the earliest history and romance of our glorious State of California.

"As Grand President, with the thought of keeping our splendid Order interested in civic affairs, and assisting in a small way civically by beautifying some public park, plaza or school yard, each Subordinate Parlor was asked to sponsor a Memory Garden of old-fashioned flowers, the flowers of yesterday, and to dedicate the same to the Pioneer Mothers.

"Not alone will we have the pleasure of seeing these Memory Gardens of old-fashioned flowers, but we will enjoy their fragrance and, by retrospectively, realize in a small measure just how much thought and personal care our Pioneer Mothers freely gave, and how deep a love and appreciation of flowers they must have had to have carried the plants and the seeds from their homes in the Middle West or the Far East, in order to beautify their new homes in this great West, which was to be the glorious State of California.

"Then the outdoor Christmas tree, which each Subordinate Parlor was asked to sponsor, came as an appeal with the usual Christmas message sent by the Grand President. Many of the Parlors of the state have planted trees, or have had trees given them for future care; or, in some instances, they will use a tree which the Parlor has previously planted. So, in the years to come in God's great outdoors many future generations will enjoy the evergreen trees through the year, but during the Christmas holidays these trees will be decorated and illuminated for the pleasure and enjoyment of young and old alike.

"The Memory Gardens and the outdoor Christmas trees may not be big projects, but we must admit that they represent constructive work, and civically give each Subordinate Parlor some good publicity which reflects much good for the entire Order. The San Francisco Parlors' Memory Garden will be located in wonderful Golden Gate Park, the most perfect setting of all Memory Gardens, in that it will be the garden in front of the old log cabin where the California Pioneer Womans Association meets—a truly beautiful tribute to our Pioneer Mothers. It was dedicated May 14.

"Good publicity, and an unlimited amount, is essential to the future growth of our Order. We have our official organ, The Grizzly Bear, and all Parlors should send news items at least every two months to the same. We should use our local newspapers, so that the people in different municipalities are made cognizant of the activities of the local Parlors. This last year we have been fortunate, as an Order, in being able to utilize the radio for publicity work. Three broadcasting stations have given of their time for our Order. This form of publicity allows every member of the Order, the interested public of California, and all listeners in the opportunity to hear and know of the work being accomplished. To this end, regular programs should be broadcast. To Mrs. Clara Gairand, one of the Grand Parlor Committee on Publicity, is due great credit for a large portion of the broadcasting from San Jose. To keep abreast of the times, and with progress and advancement, our Order must be alert and use the radio as a publicity medium.

"Splendid assistance is given to the disabled veterans by our Order. The State committee, through its splendid chairman, Past Grand President Stella Finkeldey of Santa Cruz, has had wonderful co-operation from practically every Parlor. Perhaps no one Parlor does more active work than El Monte No. 205 of Mountain View, yet there are many Parlors which contribute each month toward assisting the disabled veterans. Not alone does our Order bring cheer to the veterans confined in California hospitals, but we also send cheer to Federal Government hospitals located in other states.

"During this Grand Parlor we will complete final plans for the purchase of our Memorial Redwood Grove. The state chairman of the fund, Past Grand President Anna Monroe of Ferndale, will render her report, and before the close of 1929 our Order, after placing the necessary monument bearing all the names of those in whose honor contributions have been given the fund, will dedicate the grove with appropriate ceremony and will present this grove to the State of California for perpetual care.

"And those gigantic sequoias will stand not alone for the enjoyment of generations and generations of Californians, but for the millions of strangers who will pass along the Redwood highway, either while entering or leaving our golden State of California.

"The work of the Central Committee for Homeless Children is our most humanitarian work, and we are justly proud as Native Daughters that, as an Order, and jointly with the Native Sons, we have found homes for more than 3,700 children. Besides saving thousands of dollars for the taxpayers of California, we realize that thousands of people have been made happy by the linking of the homeless child with the childless home.

"We receive our greatest happiness and highest commendations from this wonderful work. The child is the state's greatest asset, and our Order is building for better manhood and womanhood and for a better people State of California. Who knows, but among these children which we have helped to be legally adopted, some of our future statesmen, musicians, scientists, or perhaps great corporation presidents, may blossom forth.

"There is not a member of the Order of Native Daughters of the Golden West but is happy to assist, in some way, the Central Committee. The sewing clubs among the different Parlor memberships which are sending layettes every month, three months, or once a year, represent hours spent in a labor of love for the homeless child, to say nothing of the toys sent at Christmas time, which are wisely distributed by our queenly secretary, Miss Mary Brusie of Argonaut Parlor No. 166, Oakland, and her efficient helpers. 'Suffer little children to come unto Me, for of such is the Kingdom of Heaven.'

"Educationally, we are assisting. Our Mills College scholarship was awarded this year to Janet Sampson of Grass Valley, a member of Manzinita Parlor No. 29, Grass Valley. This young lady is grateful to the Native Daughters for the opportunity given her to attend the college by awarding her the Native Daughter scholarship.

"At this coming Grand Parlor our state chairman on scholarships, Past Grand President Sue J. Irwin of Berkeley, expects to announce the names of the two young sisters who will be awarded the university scholarships. Let us also consider plans at that Grand Parlor by which other scholarships may be made available.

"Youth is the life of the world, and youth needs education, and our Order, to be ever pushing forward, must assist by increasing our scholarships as time advances.

THE HOME BEAUTIFUL

Dr. Mariana Bertola

(PAST GRAND PRESIDENT, CHAIRMAN
GRAND PARLOR N.D.G.W. HOME COM.)

INTEREST IN THE BEAUTIFUL NEW Native Daughter Home in San Francisco continues to grow. One woman, a member of the Order, said "I love it more and more, every time I see it. Its beauty entrances me and rests me while I look at it!" A distinguished gentleman, speaking of our Home at another organization's luncheon, said "The Native Daughters have a beautiful home dedicated to a noble purpose; it is also of economic value to the community."

Over three thousand people have visited the Home. All expressed surprise at its completeness. The court garden especially commands admiration. The president's assembly of the California Federation of Women's Clubs had a luncheon there, and wrote a letter of appreciation, expressing pleasure in viewing the building.

The following Subordinate Parlors have had dinners there: Alta No. 3, La Estrella No. 89, Linda Rosa No. 170, Orinda No. 56, Buena Vista No. 68, Mission No. 227, Encinal No. 156, Aloha No. 106. Among the many who have given private luncheons are Mrs. Osborne, Dr. Bertola, Mrs. Thomas Conny, Mrs. Eaislen. The Catholic ladies gave a Sunday breakfast. A dance under the auspices of our young members was held May 18.

The Subordinate Parlors which meet in the fine new auditorium are: Orinda No. 56, Buena Vista No. 68, Sans Souci No. 96, Darina No. 114, Golden State No. 50 and Bret Harte No. 282.

The breakfasts, held the second Sunday of every month, are a great success. The one in April was presided over by Past Grand President Genevieve Baker and Mrs. May Barry. It was the largest breakfast yet served. Miss Barker of the Oakland playgrounds was the speaker, and Past Grand President Addie L. Mosher gave the prayer.

Mother's Day, May 12, was presided over by Past Grand President Mary E. Bell and Mrs. Minnie Dobbin, the latter giving the prayer. Judge Goodell and Supervisor Emmet Hayden were the speakers. Both were enthusiastic over the Home, the former speaking specially of the

"A resume of the year's work would be incomplete without a few words relative to membership. Ours is the most worth-while of all women's organizations in the State of California, and our membership should be the largest.

"If each member of our Order will sell herself, by good salesmanship, the projects of the Order one hundred percent, we will, as a result, increase our membership one hundred percent.

"There are hundreds, yes thousands, of native-born California women who should be enrolled in our ranks, and who have not been approached or, if approached, have not been talked to on selling terms to join our Order.

"We must carry on, and to do so we must increase our membership! Increased membership means more Subordinate Parlors. Thus far no new parlors have been instituted this year, but quite a number are tentatively outlined. We are hoping that there may be some very definite work accomplished, so that we may welcome, at the Santa Cruz Grand Parlor, delegates from several newly-instituted parlors."

striking beauty of the auditorium and the foyer leading to it. Grand President Dr. Louise C. Heilbron paid a tribute to Mother's Day, and said that Harriet Lee proposed the day in 1903.

The breakfast June 9 will be conducted by Past Grand President Emma Gruber-Foley and Miss Elizabeth Douglass. It is necessary that reservations be made at least two days ahead of the date. Since my last article in The Grizzly Bear the following donations have been made to the Home:

COQUETTE

(RUTH HARWOOD.)

The mountain is coqueting, it is true,
For at her base
She wears a scarf of mist,
And round her face
A veil of amethyst
Half hiding her and yet half showing through.

I think she must be flirting with the sun
To see the flush
That radiates her cheek;
The rosy blush
That makes her seem so meek,
I'm sure is but the ruse by which he's won.

NORTHERN ORGANIZATION TO POINT OUT PLACES OF INTEREST.

Sacramento City—The Trails of '49 Association was organized here April 27, with Hilliard E. Welch, Past Grand President N.S.G.W., as the president.

One of the association's first acts will be to place highway signs throughout California North, calling attention of tourists to historic and scenic points of interest.

GREATER SANTA MONICA

THE ROMANTIC PAST--THE THROBBING PRESENT

Virgil B. Gillespie

SANTA MONICA BAY REGION INCLUDES portions of four famous land grants: Malibu, stretching along the coast for twenty-two miles to the north; Boca de Santa Monica, including the mouth of Santa Monica Canyon; San Vicente y Santa Monica, with an ocean frontage of a mile and a half and extending four miles back from the coast, covering an area of 40,000 acres; and La Ballona rancho. This territory includes some of the most valuable farm lands in Los Angeles County; the mountains and many wells supplying water where it is needed, while large sections do not even require irrigation.

Santa Monica Bay proper, extending from Point Vicente to Point Dume, includes an area of 25,000 square miles, and is as deep as ten miles in places. The waters of the bay are unusually calm because the force of the waves is broken by seaward islands and the deep recesses of the shore line. The bay is surrounded by striking scenery; Point Dume rises at the north to a height of two hundred feet, while back of it the Santa Monica ranges rise sharply from the ocean to a height of two thousand feet, then slope gradually into the palisades and fall to the sand dunes and the Ballona lagoon, only to rise again in the low, rolling hills along the southern rim of the bay.

The valleys close to the coast and the Santa Monica mountains were once the homes of Indians of whose existence we know little except for the skeletons, weapons and odd implements discovered in caves and mounds on the Malibu ranch. These Indians, described by explorers in the seventeenth century as being of good form and active in type, roamed the country hunting small game, gathering fruits, grasses and berries, and fishing on the seashore with nets.

Shells, which were particularly abundant where Ocean Park now stands, were gathered by these people as their prize possession and used as money. The Indians were still the only people inhabiting this region long after the cities of Los Angeles and San Gabriel had begun to be settled.

There is a Spanish legend which plays a part in the naming of Santa Monica, and while not authenticated, is accounted for as follows:

Two Spanish soldiers were granted furloughs to explore the new territory. One day they came upon two clear, sparkling springs near the ocean. After refreshing themselves with the water, and while they were absorbed in viewing the beautiful scenery, one said, "And what shall we call this spot, brother?" Straightway came the answer, "We will call it Santa Monica, for the springs resemble the tears the good Santa Monica shed for her erring son." The legend of record until 1827, when a petition for a grant known as San Vicente y Santa Monica was made by Don Francisco Sepulveda and Augustin Machado. The springs mentioned in the legend were included in this grant.

The first land grant in this vicinity was known as Topanga Malibu, given to Don Jose Bartolomeo Tapia in 1805, and included many inaccessible wildernesses, canyons and mountains which were the setting of romantic stories of smuggling, murders, robberies and hidden treasures. For about three-quarters of a century after this first settlement on the Malibu ranch, the entire region was inhabited by grant owners, each of whom maintained his own community on which the simple pastoral life was led. This life was not an uninteresting one, however, concerned as it was with the raising of the necessary supplies, the grazing of cattle and sheep, the necessity of guarding against encroachers, both man and beast, and the constant disputes given the tract known as San Vicente y Santa Monica. Much litigation arose over the boundaries of this grant and was not settled until taken to the United States courts in 1881.

Ysidro Reyes and Francisco Marquez soon afterwards were given a provisional grant to lands in Santa Monica Canyon which were known as "Boca de Santa Monica," or the mouth of Santa Monica. Dispute also arose over the boundaries of this grant and was only settled in 1882, when 6,565 acres of the lands were confirmed by the courts to Reyes and Marquez. Part of this area was still owned in 1908 by descendants of the original grantees and members of their families were living on the land. This was an exception to the general rule, for most of the grants passed out of the hands of the original owners long before they could realize upon the marvelous increase in land values.

In 1839 a company composed of Augustin and Ygnacio Machado, Felipe and Tomas Talamantes, was granted the rich and verdant fields and pastures known as "La Ballena," or the whale. The haciendas of the Machados were among the best examples of early adobe homes in California and as late as 1908 one of the buildings was being used as a storehouse. La Ballona rancho, as it was later called, was confirmed to the Machados in 1873 and was at once divided among the members of the family. Ocean Park is now standing on land originally belonging to this rancho.

Until 1870, Santa Monica Bay region had not been influenced by the influx of Americans; the original ranchos had remained intact and but few Americans had been able to obtain land holdings. Santa Monica Canyon was the only attraction on the entire coast at this time, and in the summer of 1872 a hotel was opened, a coach line established, and Santa Monica's life as a resort town begun.

In September 1872 Jose del Carmen Sepulveda and others sold the San Vicente and Santa Monica y San Vicente ranches to Robert S. Baker, later of the firm of Baker and Jones, which was so influential in the development of Santa Monica.

The American invasion continued. In January 1875 it was learned that Senator John P. Jones of Nevada State had purchased two-thirds interest in the San Vicente rancho for the sum of $150,000 and a railroad was assured, for the senator was enormously rich and known to have railroad ambitions. Soon after, the Los Angeles and Independence Railroad was organized. It was originally intended that the road should terminate at Independence, where its owner had large mining interests, but it never reached beyond Los Angeles. Construction was immediately begun and a wharf was started near the present foot of Colorado street. It was seven-hundred feet in length and reached a depth of thirty feet at low tide, providing a depot and warehouse at its terminus, and costing approximately $45,000.

The founder of this railroad, Hon. John Percival Jones, acquired a public school education and grew to manhood in Cleveland, Ohio. When news of the gold discovery in California reached him, he set out in a small vessel, with several other youths, for the "Golden State." After encountering numerous hardships, he arrived in San Francisco in the spring of 1850. For many years thereafter he sought his fortune as a typical California miner. In 1863 he was elected a member of the California State Legislature and continued to serve in that office until 1868. He later became a resident of Nevada State, and a member of the United States Senate in March 1873, continuing to serve in that august assemblage for thirty years.

Meanwhile, Messrs. Jones and Baker were laying out a beautiful townsite extending from the bluff back to Twenty-sixth street, and from Montana avenue on the north to Railroad street on the south. The plan included a plaza, blocks for hotels, public buildings, parks, schools, a university and young ladies' seminary. The present Hotel Miramar stands on one of the original hotel sites. All of this activity attracted wide attention, and on July 15, 1875, the day announced for the sale of lots in the new town, many hundreds of people gathered from all over Southern California and several parties arrived by steamer from San Francisco. In less than three months from the day the first lot was sold in Santa Monica, six hundred fifteen lots ranging in price from $75 to $500 were sold by the land company, one hundred nineteen shops and

Santa Monica goes back to a holy woman born in Africa about 332 A.D. She was married to a man of irascible temper at an early age and had two sons, one of whom, Augustine, refused to be baptized into the church and entered upon a life of immorality. Santa Monica prayed long and fervently, with many tears, for the reforming of her "prodigal son" but all in vain, until one day he became seriously ill and was healed by his mother's prayers. This so touched his hardened heart that he turned from his evil ways and became a devout believer, later achieving the name of "Great Augustine."

The name "Santa Monica" does not appear on over boundaries. After passing through a number of hands, the Malibu grant was finally sold to Frederick H. Rindge, who had come to California for his health. He added much property to this grant from time to time and, during the many years he spent in Santa Monica, was connected with numerous public-spirited and progressive enterprises. He was one of the originators of the Ocean Park Y. M. C. A. Company, which was instrumental in the founding of the town of Ocean Park.

No further settlement took place in this district until 1827, when Francisco Sepulveda and Augustin Machado petitioned for land and were houses had been erected, the water from the San Vicente springs had been collected into two large reservoirs and was being distributed at the rate of half a million gallons per day.

In October, the train of the Los Angeles and Independence Railroad left Santa Monica for Los Angeles and in the same month the coast steamers began to make regular stops at the new wharf. In this rapid growth the need of schools and churches was not overlooked. A mass meeting was held at which the school district was created, including San Vicente, Santa Monica and Malibu ranchos, and a portion of the Ballona grant. The district boasted seventy-two school children. A tax of $5,000 was voted for a schoolhouse, which was completed in the fall and opened to an attendance of one hundred sixteen children. In the meantime, however, the children had not lacked educational facilities. The Santa Monica Academy and Mrs. Frink's private school offered efficient and thorough courses of instruction.

The first church service was held in September 1875, when a Presbyterian Sunday-school was formed and met at the home of W. D. Vawter. One month later, in October, the Methodist Church of Santa Monica held its first service in rink, offering the most complete and up-to-date resort accommodations on the coast.

The Santa Monica clay heds first came into notice in May 1877, when four thousand feet of clay pipe was burned and sold for an irrigation system then being constructed near San Gabriel. This pipe proved so satisfactory that soon many and larger orders were being placed, necessitating the building of a clay pipe factory.

A lawn tennis club was formed and a tournament of the Southern California Tennis Association amateurs was held in which members from various Southern California towns competed. In 1878 the clubhouse was finished and two fine courts completed. It was here that the annual tournaments of the association were held, and it was here that two Santa Monica women achieved fame for themselves and their town: Miss Marion Jones, who won the Pacific Coast championship in 1897 and the national championship at Philadelphia in 1900, and Miss May Sutton who, after winning various minor honors, won the international championship in 1905.

By 1877 the railroad question had become a vital one. The L. A. & I. Railroad was unable to cope with the competition from the Southern Pacific Railroad, which had a line to San Pedro.

through the means of his good paper for the growth and advancement of the town as a center of commerce, announced December 19, 1878, that his paper would be omitted for a week on account of Christmas. The next issue of the paper was published January 5, 1887.

The opening of the next decade looked extremely gloomy for Santa Monica. Population and property values had decreased almost unbelievably. But Santa Monica had a location of natural beauty and many advantages which still gave her an impregnable position as a summer resort. The summer of 1885 proved a prosperous one, with hotels and cottages full and many tents in use on the beach.

Three changes took place in 1886. In January, it was rumored that the Santa Fe, or Atlantic & Pacific Railroad as it was then called, would build a line to South Santa Monica, later known as Ocean Park, and would there construct a wharf long enough to accommodate the largest vessels. The company also was to build a three-story hotel on its reservation. In view of this report, real estate activity took on new life and many people invested in South Santa Monica property. This project did not materialize, and the investors were left high and dry. The Hotel a room above a hardware store. Both churches built their own places of worship the following year. The Episcopal Church held its first service in Santa Monica in 1876, on Easter Sunday. Meetings were held in a public hall, a regular church edifice not being erected until 1888. The Catholic Church celebrated its first mass in July 1877, holding services thereafter irregularly until 1885, when the first Catholic Church was dedicated.

In April 1876 the first bathhouse was opened, and a pavilion was built on the beach by Jones and Baker. In June, a ring tournament was held between teams representing the native Californians and the Americans. This was carried out with fitting costumes and decorations, and large crowds gathered to witness the display of excellent horsemanship. The following year a new bathhouse was erected on the beach by the L. A. & I. Railroad and was fully equipped with plunge, steam baths, billiard room and skating Senator Jones, who had spent a million dollars on the little road from Santa Monica to Los Angeles and had operated it for some time at a loss, offered to sell it at cost to the people of Los Angeles County. Meetings were held and plans discussed with this in view, but no decision was reached. At last, announcement was made in June that the L. A. & I. Railroad had been sold to the Central Pacific, which road already had large holdings in Southern California. As a result of the ensuing increase in freight rates, both steamer and rail, traffic fell off and only two small steamers continued to make irregular stops at Santa Monica. This was the first of a series of blows to the dream of its citizens that Santa Monica would become the commercial center of the southland. Many people moved away, business dropped off, mortgages were foreclosed, and business houses sold out to satisfy their creditors. The editor of the "Outlook," L. T. Fisher, who had striven so valiantly and well Arcadia was built about this time with beautifully improved grounds and many unusual features, becoming the center of Santa Monica's social life. In November, the town of Santa Monica was incorporated, and the boundaries fixed as: "From the northern corner of Montana avenue and Seventeenth street, east along the northerly line of Seventeenth street to the boundary line between San Vicente and La Ballona, thence west to the south line of Lucas tract; thence to the Pacific Ocean." With these changes, a new campaign of public improvements was entered upon and a new era of growth introduced.

W. D. Vawter was granted a franchise to build the first streetcar line, and on June 19, 1887, its first car ran over the Ocean avenue line. When completed, the line extended from the southern limits of the city to the Soldiers' Home. W. D. Vawter was one of the first set-

CALIFORNIA HAPPENINGS OF FIFTY YEARS AGO

Thomas R. Jones

(COMPILED EXPRESSLY FOR THE GRIZZLY BEAR.)

JUNE 1879 WAS A GREAT CONVENTION month in California, four state conventions being held in preparation for one of the most strenuous political campaigns ever fought in the state. The Workingmen started, with a gathering at San Francisco, June 3, at which William F. White of Santa Cruz was nominated for governor. Dennis Kearney ruled the convention. The San Francisco Workingmen nominated I. S. Kalloch, a Baptist minister, for mayor of that city. While attracting little attention at the time, the nomination was fraught with momentous events of the future.

The Republicans had a harmonious and enthusiastic convention at Sacramento City beginning June 7, and nominated George C. Perkins of San Francisco for governor.

The New Constitution party, popularly called by its opponents the "H. Bs.", in convention at Sacramento, June 25, nominated Hugh J. Glenn of Colusa for governor.

The Democrats met in convention at Sacramento, June 30, and it was a turbulent gathering from start to finish. No nominations were made this month.

In addition to nominating candidates for governor, the Workingmen, Republicans and New Constitutionalists nominated candidates for every office to be filled at the approaching state election.

One of the campaign humors was a card published by Dr. Nohle Martin, prominent politician of Placer County residing at Dutch Flat. He said he would not accept a nomination for any office from any party, and that contrary rumors were false. He extended a standing invitation to any citizen to kick him in the seat of his pants if he ever again ran for office.

There was a placer discovery excitement at San Diego City, gold being found on the bay shore near the United States Barracks. An old prospector, panning dirt there, was making nearly an ounce a day. Shortly after the news got out the whole beach was staked off by locators.

Wm. J. King, representing himself to be a horse trainer giving exhibitions throughout the state, mulcted the susceptible businessmen of Vallejo, Solano County, out of over a thousand dollars.

Joe Murphy, minstrel, starring the state with a company of singing artists in a play called "The Blacksmith of Kerry," made a horseshoe and shod a horse upon the stage, bringing down the house with his artistic work.

The San Francisco Board of Supervisors, in a cleanup of that city's Chinatown, found nineteen lepers, and deported them to China.

CHINKS ARRIVE IN DROVES.

The El Dorado Jockey Club had a two-day meet at Placerville, El Dorado County. "Cordwood John" was the champion trotter of Hangtown.

A reunion of Nevada County Pioneers was held at a grove midway between Grass Valley and Nevada City, June 5. Seven thousand came from all over California and also from Nevada State and had an enjoyable time.

A special train, carrying a hundred excursionists from every state of the nation calling themselves the Yosemite Valley Sunday-school excursion, arrived June 4. A chapel had been built in the valley for their use, and they proposed to make annual visits.

United States Fish Commissioner Livingston arrived June 9 and brought along a supply of lobsters, black bass, eels, etc., for propagation. The eels were dropped into the Sacramento River, the black bass went to several mountain lakes, and the lobsters were placed in San Francisco Bay.

The Redheads, a hasehall club, was organized at Sacramento City, with Albert Elkus as president and Ike Trainor as secretary. A defi to play any blonde or brunette club in the state was issued.

June 1 was a very hot day, it being 108 at Woodland, Yolo County. Showers fell the 16th, adding .15 inch to the season's rainfall of 17.31. C. C. Redington, working on a Yolo County ranch, died of sunstroke June 29.

Henry A. Canfield, the real estate stormy petrel of Sacramento City, was found guilty of manslaughter for killing Colonel English in a land dispute in 1878 and sent to San Quentin for five years.

A potato blight made its appearance and did $20,000 damage to the crop of murphys in San Mateo County.

A steamer arrived from China June 1 with 873 Chinks, and 1,036 more came in via steamer the 16th. Report had it that an additional 1,600 were ready and anxious to come as soon as ships could bring them.

An epidemic of scarlet fever caused the schools of Pasadena, Los Angeles County, to close, and an epidemic of measles at Moore's Flat, Nevada County, caused that school to be closed.

The Cozzens and Wing warehouse at San Jose, Santa Clara County, containing 1,500 tons of hay and 7,000 cases of coaloil, burned June 9. Estimated loss, $40,000.

The Oroville and La Porte stage was stopped by a masked man near Forbestown, Butte County. The express box was taken, but the passengers were not molested.

NEW INVENTION CREATES INTEREST.

Mary Laurence, at San Diego, saved a child from a wild steer by throwing her shawl over the charging steer's head.

The Western Electric Light Company, in San Francisco, was experimenting with electricity to reduce rebellious ores.

Barth Lanergan, wealthy San Jose, Santa Clara County, citizen, was knocked into a creek by a horse he was taking to water and drowned.

A 6-year-old lad named Henderson, at Modesto, Stanislaus County, ran onto a ferryboat at such speed June 5 he could not stop himself, went overboard, and was drowned.

The 7-year-old daughter of Michael Wilson fell into a well at Chinese Camp, Tuolumne County, June 16, and was drowned.

Louis Stone, 13 years old, died at Gridley, Butte County, June 26, as the result of getting his leg caught under a pump lever.

Con. O'Meara, prominent marksman of Sacramento City, was accidentally killed while dove hunting June 23.

John A. McDougald, wholesale merchant of Stockton, San Joaquin County, was accidentally killed June 12 while hunting in Calaveras County, near Murphys.

His team running away while enroute to the Pioneers' picnic, the 8-year-old daughter of A. W. Herring was killed near Nevada City, Nevada County.

Francisco Cota, 4 years old, was fatally scalded at Santa Barbara City when his sister accidentally spilled a kettle of boiling lard over him.

The new invention, the telephone, was coming more and more into every-day use. F. B. Rae, chief Western Union operator at Sacramento City, arranged for a telephone concert at his

THE HAND OF MAN-- A STORY OF THE FORESTS

Southard M. Modry

CHAPTER VI.

NATURE IS KIND TO HER CHILDREN. When forest lands are cut over, she covers them with a protective robe of brush until the seeds of the forest plants sprout and the young trees are well on their way to maturity. But for the interference of man in many districts, Nature might possibly replace his ravages and, in years to come, the cutover areas would return to forest production.

"Unfortunately, the meddling 'Hand of Man' interferes with the process of Nature. It is the custom of many lumber companies to burn over cutover lands to dispose of the slash in order to protect the adjacent forest from fires originating on cutover lands. The methods of burning usually resorted to are spot-burning and light- or broadcast-burning. Spot burning is burning of the slash where it lays, while light-burning is burning in the same manner before the fire season. Both systems do irreparable damage to the land."

"In broadcast-burning many fires get out of control, and the results are forest fires of dangerous dimensions which are extremely difficult to fight because usually in thickly-timbered districts. The same is true, only in a slightly lesser degree, where light-burning is practiced. The constant danger of these methods of burning is the spreading of fires to virgin timber and, in the past, they have constituted the principal cause of the denudation of watersheds."

"The natural tendency of most businessmen seems to be to cut down overhead as much as possible, and the lumbermen throughout the United States have carried this tendency to extremes. To such an extent, as a matter of fact, they have forgotten the old maxim, 'A stitch in time saves nine.'"

"In burning cutover lands in many instances the fires are not properly controlled, though a little foresight and commonsense would protect thousands of acres of adjacent virgin timber and save it from the demon, fire. Dollars and cents figure up rapidly in the expense accounts of most of the lumber companies, in all probability, and evidently fire protection is an expense which is not accorded very much consideration. If they would take into consideration as assets the value of the timber yearly destroyed and deliberately wasted, they would give the subject more serious consideration."

"There is no California industry so free from public restriction as that of lumbering. And the lumber companies owe the people of the state, if not themselves, at least the duty of protecting territories in which they operate from the demon, fire. Some lumbermen are trying to improve conditions; others feel they are obligated to neither the people nor the state. Some lumber companies can afford to practice re-forestation and run their businesses profitably, while others cannot even protect their lands from fire."

"Surely the time for an accounting is approaching, when men in this industry who have to consideration of the rights of others will be compelled to observe obligations to so use their lands that others may not suffer."

"The purpose of these articles in The Grizzly Bear is to convey to citizens at least a cursory knowledge of forestry conditions in California. But the motive goes even deeper than that: The good men who are giving their lives in the cause of forestry are such a pitiful few, compared to the rapaciousness of many of the lumber companies, that we hope to sow dragon's teeth even in the ranks of the lumbermen themselves, with the hope that even from their ranks may spring all-armed warriors in the cause of forestry, even as Minerva sprang full-armed from the brain of Jupiter."

"If we can bring to the attention of the people of California the long-neglected cause of forestry, and in that way stiffen the backbone of many of the jelly-fish state legislators, the future of the magnificent timber lands will be assured."

"Each year the feathered folk sing a dirge over a parcel of forest land which, just previously, was a stand of age-old virgin timber, but today is a fruitless desert. Every summer season the demon, fire, aided in the majority of cases by the carelessness and negligence of citizens, devours in its insatiable maw portions of the state's finest timber lands."

"Lumbermen themselves are not the least of the malefactors. They do not want legislation to keep them within the bounds of reason. Standing timber is an asset to them, but the protection of that asset appears to be a liability which many of them do not care to shoulder—and they apparently have even a lesser consideration for the future of the lands cut over."

"We owe the state and our fellow-citizens a patriotic duty—to give the cause of forestry serious consideration."

FORMER CALIFORNIA GOVERNOR'S HOPES FOR FORESTS ARE HIGHER.

The following letter was received by Southard M. Modry from George C. Pardee, former governor of California, chairman of the State Board of Forestry, and affiliated with Oakland Parlor No. 50 N.S.G.W.:

"Mr. Southard M. Modry, San Francisco, California—Dear Sir: Thank you for the copy of The Grizzly Bear containing your 'The Hand of Man,' which I have read with deep interest and great appreciation. You are right when you chide 'the men who forget.' But what about those who deliberately set fire to the cover-grass, brush, trees—on our watersheds, and thus destroy what you very properly call the 'sponge' that 'holds the moisture after the rain and snow, preventing the waters from rushing down to the rivers and carrying with them the soil and alluvium, and thus leaving the mountains bare rock, where even grass will not grow.'"

"It is the city-folk, fire-ignorant and, therefore, fire-careless, to whom your monument to the 'men who forget' should be erected. But what can we do with those rural-folk who advocate 'light-burning,' which destroys, at the best, forest seeds and seedlings, with which Nature would replace the trees that lightning-set fires, old age, insect infestation and other natural causes destroy? And what can we do with those who set out fires for the purpose of destroying, in the interest of grazing, the brush fields with which Nature covers areas formerly clothed with destroyed forests?"

"Both the 'light-burners' and the brush incendiaries are, of course, quite sure that they are doing no injury, but, on the contrary, are improving on Nature's methods of conserving watershed-cover. But the worst of offenders are those—there are, I am glad to say, fewer of them than there were—who, with axe-succeeding fire, destroy the remnants of the forests they leave and the brush which endeavors to cover the scars and serve as a protection for the seeds and seedlings that would, protected from fire, finally restore the destroyed forests."

"Not a few times, in the last thirty years, have I almost despaired of there being any success in preventing the final destruction of Northern California's forest, leaving us in the same condition as Southern California is in. My hopes are higher, now that our Order of the Native Sons of the Golden West has come to the rescue of our remaining forest-remnants. And I congratulate you on being the leader in that movement in our Order."

"With kind regards and best wishes, very truly yours, GEO. C. PARDEE."

home June 1, and had sixteen receivers placed in the Marysville, Yuba County, office and a like number in the Red Bluff, Tehama County, office for listeners to hear a quartet at Sacramento sing an olio of songs. To the wonder of those listening, the voices were distinct.

Henry Ivy was hanged June 20 at Mariposa, Mariposa County, for a murder committed in 1878 over a land dispute.

A mysterious crime was committed near Wheatland, Yuba County, the night of June 6, and neither the cause nor the perpetrator was ever discovered. Cora Heslep, aged 19, and Ida Dunn, aged 18, were asleep in the same bed at the home of a farmer named Wm. Roddie, who with his wife occupied an adjoining room. The next morning the girls were found with their skulls fractured by blows from an iron bar. Detectives spent some time following every clue, but got no results.

FIFTY-SECOND N. S. G. W. GRAND PARLOR

(CLARENCE M. HUNT.)

CHARLES L. DODGE, TREASURER OF Contra Costa County affiliated with Carquinez Parlor No. 205 (Crockett), was installed as Grand President of the Order of Native Sons of the Golden West, just preceding the close of the Fifty-second Grand Parlor, in session in the auditorium of Native Sons Building, San Francisco, May 20, 22 and 24. Addressing the members of the Grand Parlor, following his induction into office, he said:

"You have conferred on me an especial honor, and while, in assuming for a short time the office of Grand President of the Order of Native Sons of the Golden West I am filled with pride, I am not unmindful of the duties and responsibilities such a stewardship enjoins. It would be futile to attempt at this time to express the deep appreciation and honor I feel in assuming this office. It is my hope that I can, in some small way, show that appreciation in continued service and in the furtherance of the noble principles to which our Order is dedicated. And when my term is ended, my hope is that I shall have so performed the duties of the office that not only will the brothers say, 'He did his best,' but also will add, 'and he succeeded in accomplishing something'—something to which, in looking back on my term as Grand President, I can point with pride; something which will prove my worthiness for this trust.

"Associated with the Grand Parlor for many years, one cannot but be impressed by the faithful services rendered by the brothers who return year after year to these sessions and give of their time and talents to keep alive sentiment and traditions and to preserve the memory of the romantic history of California—a romantic history which grows nearer and dearer to the members of our Order after attendance at each succeeding Grand Parlor; which grows nearer and dearer with associations and knowledge. Too often in life we find that that old adage, 'Familiarity breeds contempt,' is true. But you members of the Grand Parlor know, as I know, that familiarity with the history of California inspires honor and affection for our pioneer forefathers and loyalty and patriotism for our home and country.

"You must know, of course, that I have looked forward to this year for a long time past; that for the past three years I have known this day would come. I hope you brothers believe that, in seeking this position, I was at all times actuated not only because of the honor which it means to me, but also by the feeling that I could in some way benefit the members of this organization in a material way. And by material way I mean the furtherance of those things to which the Order is dedicated.

"First, I wish to express my appreciation to the members of the Grand Parlor who have extended kind wishes and have given personal assurance of readiness and willingness to aid in carrying out the program I have outlined for this administration. I am now asking each of you—when you return to your home-Parlors and make a report of this session—to carry a personal message from me to all the brothers and to ask them to co-operate to the fullest extent of their ability with their local Parlor, the grand officers and myself.

"I feel it is my good fortune to have assisting me one of the finest boards of grand officers ever to serve. I sincerely hope that they will fulfill this promise, which means so much to the presiding officer. During years of service on the board of grand officers I have always been impressed by the tireless work, the unflinching loyalty, the endless fund of talent and inspiration given by the board members to the grand president. All I ask of my board is, that they do as well as have those of the past, and I shall thank them from the bottom of my heart.

"Like all Native Sons of the Golden West I have, since my initiation into this Order, been impressed with the early history of California. Therefore, during my term I shall endeavor to further the historical work now being carried on by the Grand Parlor and lend what assistance I may to the fellowships now supported by the Grand Parlor. In this connection we hope to be able to bring before the entire public the facts relating to historical research. It is my belief that we have failed to receive proper recognition, by those not connected with the Order, for the work being done. This, I hope, we can remedy.

"It is my belief that there should be greater knowledge among the members of this Order of the fundamental history of our state, and particularly of the formative period, immediately

"The organization is now fifty-two years old, and it stands upon as sound a financial basis as any organization in existence. The Parlors throughout the state are, generally, in a sound financial condition. I feel that in the past there has been some charity on the part of the visiting grand officers in not insisting on complete examination of the books of the Parlors, but they are to be requested to investigate thoroughly the financial condition of each Parlor and to be ready at all time to co-operate in solving any problem facing the Parlor. I appreciate that in practically every instance the finances are in the hands of men of ability and experience, and that assistance from the grand officers is not necessary, but often cases arise in which a grand officer can be a great help. Therefore, I shall stress a closer co-operation on the part of the financial officers and the visiting grand officers, for in this day of finances organizations are often rated in a community by their financial standing; that is, an organization conducted on a sound business basis commands the respect of everyone in the community. I wish to bring before the community the fact that the Native Sons are at all time financially responsible.

"The work of providing homes for homeless children is now so deeply entwined with our organization that to speak of 'homeless children' immediately brings to mind the Native Sons of the Golden West. To me, as to all Native Sons and to everybody else, this work is one of the most cherished things in our Order. I feel that the bit we might do, and the work connected therewith, is more in the nature of a privilege than a duty. The work now, as it has always been, is in the hands of capable, conscientious and able people. I shall at all time attempt to do everything within my power to foster this work and to bring about a greater realization, on the part of the people, of the results being gained by our committees. One of the great problems, of course, in connection with this work is the raising of funds to pay the current expenses and, in support of this duty of the Native Sons, I shall hold myself ready to assist at all times in making a success of events given to raise these funds.

"One of the chief problems, if not the greatest problem, confronting an incoming Grand President in this age of changing social conditions and general unrest is to keep up the membership of the organization and to increase it correspondingly. This problem has been one of great importance to our organization, feeling as we do that it is not advantageous as a general rule to procure members by the 'high pressure' sales system. Therefore, we have been attempting to have the brothers themselves do the organizing work.

"This has worked out admirably as far as the standard of the members is concerned, but we have not grown by leaps and bounds, as you all well know. We should continue the plan inaugurated by my predecessor, Junior Past Grand President James A. Wilson, which appeals to me as being one of the best suggested in some time. Therefore, during my term in office, or until January 1, 1930, each member of a Parlor who brings in a new member will be given a $2.50 gold-piece or its equivalent.

"In certain sections of the state, after consultation with the local Parlors and following a general survey of the conditions, if it seems advisable we will do some field work. Just how far this is to be carried, will depend wholly on the conditions existing in a locality and the results obtained from our first efforts. The fact you must understand, though, is that without co-preceding and succeeding the discovery of gold. The apathetic interest is due, perhaps, to inability to procure a comprehensive, readable and complete history of that period. I believe if there was published such a book, to be sold at a reasonable figure, it would create greater interest in our Order.

"It shall be my policy to pay particular attention to the Landmarks Committee work. This I believe to be one of the important features of the Order that should be fostered. In this connection, too, I shall attempt to enlist the aid of all Subordinate Parlors in marking places of local interest, particularly those which have played a part in the early history of a particular vicinity. In this way I hope to bring to light some of the innumerable hits of romantic history hidden throughout the state. To this end, I shall ask the members of each Parlor to instigate campaigns in their respective communities to mark in appropriate ways places of historical interest.

operation—and by that I mean unqualified and unequivocal co-operation—on the part of all brothers. It will be impossible to carry out my plan of increasing the membership of this Order.

"Incidental to the membership question, I have been impressed with the results gained in Parlor having an interest in athletics. As a general rule, I might say a universal rule, the Parlor active in basketball, baseball and football have a growing and live membership, and take places in their communities which bring recognition to and respect for the Order. A great number of the brothers have been quite active in the athletic features of the organization for years past. During my term of office I intend to co-operate with them in every manner which, to me, seems advantageous for our Order and which will have a tendency to bring about better social relations between the members of the different Parlor and will result in more information to the public concerning our Order. I feel that this activity is a potent vehicle by which to bring before the public the facts concerning our existence and activities. Clean sportsmanship and high-class competitors are uniformly found in teams composed of Native Sons. That fact has been a source of great pride, and I hope to be able to increase this activity and interest.

"California, situated as it is, has been fortunate in having natural resources of such tremendous value and of such ease of acquisition that a tendency on our part to be wasteful of these heritages is too prevalent. Conservatism is to us a new word, but conservation is one of the greatest questions confronting the economical and political situation of the state. It should be our effort to teach and foster conservation of resources. I shall at all times endeavor to keep up the interest of all members of this Order in all matters pertaining to the conservation of resources. Therefore, I will ask that each member of this Order consider it his personal duty to be interested in all manner of legislation wherein the resources of our state are involved, and to study the matter intelligently to the end that posterity may enjoy some of the privileges which have been our blessings."

PROCEEDINGS

The Fifty-second Grand Parlor was presided over by Grand President James A. Wilson. The reports of grand officers and committees dealt largely with matters which heretofore have been given publicity in The Grizzly Bear. The report of Grand President Wilson disclosed the fact that he was a very busy man, and contained some excellent recommendations, particularly those referring to membership, and the time and place for holding the Grand Parlor. Briefly quoting from his report:

"The purpose of this [the Grove of Memory] organization is to perpetuate the memory of those members of our Order in San Francisco who, during the world war, made the supreme sacrifice for humanity. In Golden Gate Park, San Francisco, a beautiful grove of redwood trees has been set aside as a living monument to the memory of the thirty-nine members who lost their lives during the late war. In this grove there is a twenty-two-ton flint boulder bearing an ornamental bronze plaque inscribed with the name of each hero."

"This [the Past Presidents] association is composed of members who have passed through the chairs of their respective Parlor—men who are well skilled in the ritual and laws of our Order. Their aim is to encourage interest in all matters and measures essential to the Order; they promote and judge ritualistic contests among the officers of the various Parlor and they have a select ritualistic team ready to assist any Parlor to initiate its candidates. There are now nine Past Presidents Assemblies in California, two of them organized during the year 1928, and I believe they should all be encouraged in the work they are performing."

"I cannot resist this opportunity to thank the Grand Secretary, John T. Regan, and his able assistants, Harold Regan and Miss Eva Digges, for the splendid co-operation I received from them during my term as Grand President. John T. Regan needs no word of praise from me; his work in the Order for years proves his ability to conduct the office of Grand Secretary in a most businesslike manner."

"It has been my pleasure many times during the past year to visit the headquarters of the central Committee on Homeless Children and in these visits I was received in the most cordial manner. . . . In this movement every Parlor of our Order is duty-bound to do something for the benefit of the homeless children fund, and if our members could only realize the importance of this noble work, I feel sure that they would respond freely to the cause."

"The Grizzly Bear Magazine is a medium of publicity among our members and the public. It is the official organ of the Native Sons and should be properly supported by the entire membership of our Order. It has many interesting articles dealing with the early history of California, farming industries and numerous miscellaneous subjects. All functions of the grand officers are published in its columns as well as the activities of the various Parlor of the Native Sons and Native Daughters."

"During my eleven years of active service as a grand officer, I have tried to merit the confidence reposed in me by the delegates, and at this time desire to express my sincere thanks and appreciation to them for having elevated me to the station of Grand President, also to the grand officers and to the members of the Order who made my visits and duties a pleasure. . . . I am indeed thankful that the Order has been free from religious and political strife, and that harmony has prevailed among the grand officers and members."

A summary of what transpired during the three-day session of the Grand Parlor follows:

CHANGES IN CEREMONIALS.

The Grand Parlor opening ceremonies were amended by striking out that portion calling for advancing of the signs.

All signs used in Subordinate Parlor during the opening ceremonies and the ritual exemplification were abolished, and a few slight changes in the wording of the ritual charges were made.

Article VI, Section 4, amended by providing that the financial secretary shall "notify all members when three months in arrears and monthly thereafter until their suspension; keep a list of all delinquent members on his desk for the benefit of the lapsation committee and the members."

The amendment also legalizes "any life membership heretofore granted by any Parlor."

CALIFORNIA'S WONDERLAND

CITY AND COUNTY

EUROPE, THROUGH CALIFORNIA EYES

(EARL LEMOINE.)

"NOW ON THE LAST LEG OF OUR European trip, every day finds us closer to Paris. Stopping at Chateau Chambord, visited this towering mansion of stone, pronounced by architects the peer of all Renaissance types. It was begun in 1523 by Francis I, who employed 1,800 men for fifteen years, but was not finished until 1549. It is famous for the grand stair—in which two parties may go up and down at the same time and never meet. The lantern at the top of the stair tower may be seen for forty-five miles.

"Oreleans, the next stop, was the residence of Caesar, 52 B. C. It was here the Gauls stopped the rush of Attila, the Hun, in 451 A. D., and in 1429 Joan of Arc drove the English from here and saved France. At Chartres, city of Medieval houses and grand churches, is Notre Dame Cathedral, one of the finest Gothic piles in France.

"Over a shaded boulevard we drove to Paris, city of light, freedom and tolerance, as carefree as San Francisco was before the 1906 fire. Its shops are marvelous. The Isle de St. Louis is the oldest spot in Paris. Here the Rue Cardinal LeMoine crosses the Seine at Pont Tournelle. Following this street we came to the college built by the cardinal in 1188; in the thirteenth century it became a Scottish school. Near by is the Pantheon, now a museum, the palace and famous garden of Luxembourg and Gobelins' ancient tapestry mill. An interesting thing about Paris is that the streets bear the names of every nation's famous men, including Wilson and Coolidge.

"The next places of interest were the institute of the great humanitarian, Pasteur; Invalides, where rests the military genius, Napoleon, under a dome which sheds a weird gray-blue light at all times, and the Eiffel Tower, the lights from which showed Colonel Lindbergh his way to Paris. Not including the Bois de Boulogne, which contains 2,000 acres, Paris has thirty parks. The Palais du Trocadero, where the American Legion held its last meeting, was studied with interest; the immense structure was built and named by Napoleon following a battle won in Spain.

"Down the Ave Kleber we came to the Arc de Triomphe, the largest edifice of its kind in the world, erected by Napoleon in 1806; it is a fifth again as large as the one built by Caesar in Rome; under this towering stone arch the American soldiers passed in triumph twice during the world war. The Royal Palace, built by Cardinal Richelieu during the reign of Louis XIII, was the abode, in 1830, of Louis Philippe, last of the French kings. Place de La Concorde is the largest square of its kind on the globe; in the center stands Cleopatra's needle. Paris has thirty-seven bridges. At one end of Concorde bridge is the Chamber of Deputies and at the other end the Marine Palace.

"Up the Rue Royal is the Greek-style church, Madeleine, built by Napoleon. To the right is the great garden of the Tuileries where, in 1793, Louis XIV, Marie Antoinette, Robespierre and others were executed. Here, also, Montgolfiere sent up the first balloon, in 1783. The Louvre is, without doubt, the world's largest building. Its wings and center, covering forty-eight acres, are 2,010 feet long and 1,080 feet wide. The first portion of the building was begun by Pierre Lescot in 1541. Here is housed the rarest and most-complete collection of ancient and modern objects in existence. The National Library, conceded the richest in the world, contains 3,600,000 volumes; Charles V was the first collector.

"In the center of Place Vendome is a spiral column 150 feet high, crowned with a statue of Napoleon. It is made of 1,200 Austrian and Russian cannon captured by the great general in 1805. The Grand Opera Building, built by Garnier, 1862-1874, is conceded to be the most magnificent in existence. Covering over three acres, it cost $20,000,000 to construct, its onyx staircase alone costing nearly $1,000,000. The white marble church, Sacre Coeur, rests on the Butte Montmartre.

"Volumes could be written of this city of nations, with its hundreds of churches, a dozen large depots, many entry arches, and thousands of bronze and marble statues. Of the latter, the one that appealed to the writer was given by the schoolchildren of the United States in 1900 and depicts Lafayette as an officer in the American army.

"Nearly a month was spent, night and day, attempting to see the many wonders of this city of light and gayety, and the visit will never be forgotten. The Moulin Rouge, with its apache dances, underground haunts, artists' quarters, wine cellars, etc.; the boat ride down the Seine, and the trip down the sewers, the water in which is continuously purified, were of particular interest. We met many American friends, among them several from California. Many suburban trips were taken, including:

"Versailles, and the Golden Palace which contains the hall of mirrors where the peace treaty was signed at the close of the recent world war. The great building is of Neo Classic style and can accommodate 10,000 people. Statues by all the great sculptors adorn the grounds. The Trianon Palace, near by, was once the home of Marie Antoinette. The Sunday we visited here 100,000 people were on the grounds, and the guide said 11,000 of them were Americans. Fontainebleau, favorite palace of Napoleon, sets in a forest fifty miles in circumference, containing 42,500 acres, and is regarded as one of the most beautiful in the world. The foundations for this great chateau were laid in 1162 and it was finished in the sixteenth century. The most historic portion of the structure is the court Cheval Blanc, where Napoleon bid adieu to his guards after his abdication, and where, also, was pronounced the divorce from Josephine. Returning to Paris, we visited Chateau Malmalson, which Napoleon gave to Josephine. While covering only about three acres, it is handsomely appointed, the decorations and furnishings being the most exquisite known to art.

"Leaving Paris, we drove through the green valleys and hills of Brittany to Cherbourg, passing enroute Mantes, Evreux, Lisieux and Caen, whence comes the beautiful stone. The limited train which runs over this 230-mile stretch is the fastest in the world, at times attaining ninety-three miles an hour. At Cherbourg, we embarked for Quebec and in time reached Sorel, Canada, where the people of the writer's father were visited at the old home, built in 1726. From here we proceeded to New Orleans, the last home of my father before he came West in the '70s. Then crossing the country's biggest state, Texas, we eventually entered California, the land of sunshine, fruits and flowers, finally landing in dear old Los Angeles.

"Goodbye to all The Grizzly Bear's readers. You have indeed been tolerant with me and my writings. In conclusion, let me say that, if you take a trip abroad a little friendship shown wherever you visit will always carry you through."

TITLE COMPANY UNDER NEW NAME.

In keeping with its ever-increasing business and its expansion policy, the J. B. Webber Title Insurance Company is now under a new and broader name, National Title Insurance Company, by decree of the Superior Court of California, entered at Los Angeles April 22.

There will be no change in officers, J. B. Webber remaining president; John G. Mott, Frank R. Strong, S. J. Chapman, vice-presidents; A. H. Voigt, treasurer; T. R. Hudson, secretary; Ingall W. Bull, assistant secretary. These, with W. J. Boyle Sr., Chas. C. Chapman, Isidore B. Dockweiler, Wm. A. Ryon, C. E. Toberman, Dwight Whiting and Gilbert S. Wright, are the directors.

The service given by this company to its many policyholders has received much favorable comment. Its "short time escrow" service has become very popular and is much in demand.

LA MESA CLUB ENTERTAINS.

La Mesa Club, named after "Batalla de la Mesa," and organized to promote and cement friendship between the native and the adopted sons and daughters of California and to create a better understanding of California traditions, had an open meeting at its clubrooms in the Central Manufacturing District, May 18. President J. A. McNaughton presided, and among the many in attendance were: State Surveyor General W. S. Kingsbury, William J. Hunsaker, Isidore B. Dockweiler, Superior Judges William T. Aggeler and Fletcher Bowron, Judge Rex B. Goodcell, Adolfo G. Rivera, secretary of La Mesa Club, representing the Native Sons; President Flora Holy of Los Angeles Parlor, Grand Trustee Marvel Thomas, Miss Ruth Ruiz, representing the Native Daughters; Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Wiley, descendants of the "Jayhawker" party.

Major John H. Dockweiler presented an instructive historical review, "Secularization of California Missions," followed by reminiscences of the days that were, in which all the old-

THE BIG CITY THAT KNOWS HOW

NATIVE SONS PROVE ADMIRABLE HOSTS

SAN FRANCISCO'S NATIVE SONS, in their entertainment of the Fifty-second N.S.G.W. Grand Parlor the week of May 20, proved conclusively that they, too, "know how." A grand parlor sub-committee—Grand Trustee Charles A. Koenig chairman—of the San Francisco Extension of the Order Committee, of which Joseph Rose is chairman, had charge of the several pleasure-events, each one of which was admirably handled and proved most enjoyable.

Every entertainment feature was carried out exactly as outlined in detail in The Grizzly Bear for May. And one thing which must not be overlooked is the fact that there were no tire-some waits, each event being started promptly at the designated time.

At the grand ball, Grand President and Mrs. James A. Wilson led the grand march, which was participated in by 446 couples. It was an imposing sight.

Harry W. Gaetjen was the toastmaster at the Palace Hotel banquet. With Grand Trustee J. Hartley Russell accompanying at the piano, Michael P. Brennan and Emmet Dorman were heard, respectively, in vocal and violin solos. The speakers, and their subjects, included:

"San Francisco," Mayor James Rolph Jr.; "California," Past Grand President Daniel A. Ryan; "Pioneer Fathers and Mothers," Historiographer George H. Barron; presentation of emblematic watchfow to Grand President James A. Wilson, Junior Past Grand President Judge Charles A. Thompson; "Our Order," Grand President Wilson; "Loyalty to Country, State and Flag," Past Grand President Lewis F. Byington; "Future of Our Order," Past Grand President Judge Fletcher A. Cutler. The program was broadcast over KPO, and while the delicious menu was being discussed an orchestra favored with several selections.—C.M.H.

Miss Rebecca Kimball and Mrs. S. Kroder, charter members, spoke of the old times, and the following junior members presented a delightful program: President Dorothy Finn, Miss G. McDonough, Mrs. G. Nelson, Miss K. A. Reilly, Miss Clara Nolan, Miss Eleanor McDonald, Miss Helen Gerdes and Mrs. Black. The evening closed with all singing "I Love You, California," accompanied at the piano by Organist Clara Nolan.

MOTHERS HONOR GUESTS.

Mother's Day was observed by Orinda Parlor No. 56 N.D.G.W. with a banquet at the Native Daughter Home May 9. Guests of honor included the following mothers of members: Charlotte Gunther, Kate Britschgi, Ida Cordy, Blanche Foppiano, Myrtle Curtis, Ottilie Otten, Fannie Munter, Margaret Stewart, Margaret Mancuso, Mary Buse, Emma Carr, Isabel Joseph, Anna Weder, Rose Leone, Mary Bailey. District Deputy Sadie Blake was also a guest of the occasion.

SUCCESSFUL WHIST.

Guadalupe Parlor No. 153 N.D.G.W. had a very successful whist party May 2. The proceeds are to be used to purchase several new drums for the Parlor's fast-growing drum corps.

CHILDREN PAID MAY DAY VISIT.

At the nineteenth anniversary banquet of Twin Peaks No. 185 N.D.G.W. the tables were prettily decorated with vari-colored favors. District Deputy Elizabeth Muller and Organizer Delia Koneitzki were honor guests. Several of the talented members entertained and dancing was enjoyed. The child welfare committee of the Parlor paid a May Day visit to the children in the tubercular ward of San Francisco hospital and presented candy and maypole favors.

April 26 members of the Parlor had the pleasure of witnessing the judging of essays of six girls in No. 185's unit in a flag contest. Those members interested in homeless children sewing work were entertained at the home of Secretary Merle Sandell. Many pleasant evenings have been spent in this work, and a wonderful collection of baby clothes is soon to be turned over to the Homeless Children Central Committee.

N.S. PAST GRAND'S DAUGHTER WEDS.

Miss Mary Davis, daughter of Judge John F. Davis, Past Grand President N.S.G.W., recently became the bride of Leland Stanford Lathrop Jr. at the Davis Masonic-avenue home. Mrs. Walter Paul Busher and Miss Janet Davis, sisters of the bride, were, respectively, matron-of-honor and maid-of-honor. Heher Tilden was the bestman. The couple will make their home in San Francisco.

CLAIMS DISTINCTION.

Mrs. George J. Bucknall of 2845 Green street claims the distinction of being the first child of American parentage born in San Francisco—April 1, 1845. She remembers well the big celebration held in San Francisco late in October, 1850, when news of California's admission to statehood, September 9, 1850, was received.

SIXTIETH ANNIVERSARY IMPORTANT EVENT IN CALIFORNIA HISTORY.

May 10 was the sixtieth anniversary of connection of the East with the West by railroad. On that date, 1869, at Promontory, Utah, the Central Pacific, now part of the Southern Pacific System, was joined to the Union Pacific.

The event was celebrated by Governor Leland Stanford of California driving with a silver hammer a golden spike into a laurel tie at Promontory Point. The Central Pacific had been built east from Sacramento, and the Union Pacific west from Omaha, Nebraska.

MARYSVILLE BUTTES CAME INTO EXISTENCE MILLIONS YEARS AGO.

The Marysville Buttes, a jagged circle of hills and crags rising out of the level floor of the Sacramento Valley between the river and the City of Marysville to a height of 2,100 feet above sea level, came into existence quite recently in geological history somewhat like a tumor on the earth's surface. Such are the conclusions of Howell Williams, graduate student at the University of California, Berkeley, specializing in volcanoes, living and dead.

Williams says the Buttes probably came into existence after the end of the Miocene, or beginning of the Pliocene, epoch, perhaps 5,000,000 years ago. This fact is established by the disruption of the Sutter formation of the Sacramento Valley during the arising of the Buttes, showing that this strata was laid down before the Buttes appeared. The Sutter formation was laid down about the time mentioned.

The Buttes first came into existence as a dome-shaped hill pushed up from the valley floor by the intrusion of molten rock beneath the surface. This hill may have reached a height of 7,000 or 8,000 feet above sea level. This pushed-up lava hardened, and with the passage of centuries the soil pushed up on top of it was washed away, leaving exposed the andesite porphyry or hardened lava.

Later there came another intrusion of lava beneath the surface, and then eruptions of steam and broken rock similar to those witnessed recently at Mount Lassen. This eruption threw up a cone around the hardened lava and spread ash and volcanic matter for miles around. Once again rains began to wash away the newly-formed hill, and in the course of more centuries its height was lowered from perhaps 5,000 feet above sea level to the present height of some 2,132 feet.

Williams also made an estimate of how hot the ejected lava rock became during the eruption which helped to form the Marysville Buttes, and determined that the temperature of the rock thrown out was never higher than 1,470 degrees Fahrenheit while in the ground, and probably less than 1,110 degrees after it was thrown into the air, otherwise it would not appear as it does today.

MARKING OF HISTORIC SITES

FEATURE OF WESTERN PICNIC.

Fresno City—Five thousand people attended the western picnic staged by Fresno Parlor No. 25 N.S.G.W. at Millerton, the first government-seat of Fresno County, April 28. During the day markers were placed at the following historic sites:

First Fresno County Court House, erected in 1866 by Charles P. Converse, contractor, for $22,736.50. Abandoned in September 1874, when Fresno City became the county seat.

Camp Barhour, built in 1851, at the time of the Indian war. Named for Colonel G. W. Barhour, one of the United States Indian Commissioners.

Place where a treaty with sixteen Indian tribes was signed, April 29, 1851.

Fort Miller, established May 26, 1851. Named for Major Albert L. Miller, commanding United States troops at Benicia, California.

Fort Miller Hospital, erected with other fort buildings in 1852-1854. The first public-school class in Fresno County was opened in the west wing of this building Monday, March 19, 1860, with eleven pupils, for a term of three months.

A barbecue was served at noon, and then followed a rodeo. The committee in charge of the day was: L. A. Winchell (chairman), Grand Trustee Frank M. Lane, Charles Harkness, M. E. Griffith and W. Guard.

PLACER COUNTY LANDMARK

OF 1852 MARKED WITH PLAQUE.

Auhuru (Placer County)—A plaque marking the site of the early-day Wells Fargo office in this city was unveiled April 28 under the auspices of Auhurn Parlor No. 59 N.S.G.W. The plaque's inscription reads: "This plaque is dedicated to the Pioneers of California by Auhurn Parlor No. 59 N.S.G.W., Auhurn, April 28, 1929."

Past Grand President Lewis F. Byington was the principal speaker, and said that there can be no duplication of the scenes presented in the gold days of California. The walls of the Auhurn Wells Fargo office have been standing since 1852.

GOOD HORSES IN DEMAND.

With the decline in the number of horses on farms still showing no signs of stopping, and with prices taking an upward trend in the past two years, those who have stuck to the production of horses may find themselves in a favorable position. Last year the number of horses had dropped to about the level of 1890 and the breeding industry showed little signs of revival, despite the fact that the low mark in prices seems to have been set in 1925. Tractors have come to stay in American agriculture, but there always will be an economic place for the horse on the farm. The outlook right now is good, if the horses are good.

STATE PLACES ADDITIONAL OBLIGATIONS ON AUTO OWNERS.

Measures affecting motor-vehicle owners passed by the State Legislature and approved by the governor include:

Any motor-car owner, not having paid a court judgment against him within fifteen days after it is finally rendered, will have both his operator's license and registration certificate revoked. These may not be re-obtained by the owner until he has satisfied the judgment. A certified copy of the judgment, furnished to the chief of the division of motor vehicles, will constitute cause for revocation. Provisions of the act apply only to judgments over $100.

Persons applying for operators' or chauffeurs' licenses must furnish proof of ability to respond in damage suits. Operators and chauffeurs will be required to respond to such damage limits as $5,000 for the death or injury of one person, $10,000 for the death or injury of two or more persons in a single accident, and $1,000 for property damages.

Making the state and its political subdivisions liable for negligence on the part of its officers in pursuit of their duties.

Making it a misdemeanor for any person to drive an automobile after his license has been revoked.

Making the owner of a motor vehicle liable for the negligence of any persons driving his car with his consent.

Exempting firemen and policemen from personal liability in accidents while answering an emergency call.

These measures, it is contended, accomplish, indirectly, compulsory liability insurance, by increasing the owner's responsibility for accidents.

CAREFUL DRIVING NECESSARY TO LESSEN ENORMOUS LOSSES.

One automobile out of every four is involved in a fatal or serious personal injury during its lifetime, and each of the others is involved in at least two accidents resulting in property damage. These estimates, made by insurance actuaries from records in all parts of the country, indicate the necessity for careful and cautious driving at all times.

Approximately 2,000,000 motor cars pass out of existence every year. The average period of their lives is seven years. A little figuring on this basis indicates the enormous number of deaths, injuries and property losses accruing through the operation of the 24,000,000 motor vehicles now in use throughout the United States.

Automobiles have reached a higher degree of efficiency and safety than have the persons who drive them, according to a safety conference recently held in the East. It was brought out that while the automobile manufacturer has been concentrating his energies toward safety, in the final analysis the safety problem today is up to the driver.

TWO MORE CITIES COME IN.

Fort Bragg, Mendocino County, and Healdsburg, Sonoma County, have adopted the uniform traffic ordinance. These make a total of ninety-two cities in California which regulate traffic under the standard set of regulations contained in this ordinance, thus facilitating traffic and promoting public safety.

Shriners To Gather—The Order of the Mystic Shrine will have a national reunion at Los Angeles, June 4-6.

REGRINDING OF CYLINDERS COR-*RECTS MANY AUTO TROUBLES.

Motor troubles, such as lack of power, spark plugs continually fouled, smoky exhaust, and excessive amount of oil and gas used, dilution of oil in the crankcase and piston slap—all indicate wear on the cylinder, according to the free emergency road service of the California State Automobile Association.

Cylinder wear is caused by friction between the piston and its rings and the cylinder walls, aided by minute particles of dust that are drawn in with the air through the carburetor. Also, the acute angularity of the comparatively short connecting rods tends to make this wear.

Fitting special piston rings will sometimes help remedy some of this trouble, but a round ring cannot be expected to fit an oval hole, and the only sure cure for this condition is to have the cylinder reground and to fit into it oversize piston and rings. Regrinding cylinders has a desirable effect on the power of a motor, in that it restores the motor to its normal condition.

The small increase in bore will not noticeably increase the power, but the fact that the cylinders are put in the condition in which they left the factory very often accounts for what car owners claim to be a noticeable increase in power.

SAFETY CAMPAIGN EFFECTIVE.

Effective results of the California Committee on Public Safety campaign to promote statewide traffic safety is reported from many quarters. Co-ordination of the various groups working to reduce the traffic accident toll is the purpose of the committee, which has been organized by representatives of state departments having to do with traffic problems, the California
State Automobile Association, the Automobile Club of Southern California, organizations of county traffic officials and other state-wide organizations.

In view of the growing total of traffic accidents, the safety group is urging all motorists to join the state-wide campaign to protect life, limb and property on street and highway.

HOW MANY?

How many automobiles will be in use in California in 1939? This interesting speculation is suggested by the heavy increase in motor vehicles during the past ten years in the state.

At the close of 1918 there were 393,864 registrations in the state; at the close of 1928, 1,859,432. This was an increase of 372 percent for that ten-year period.

The smallest increase in any one of these years was 5 percent, in 1927. The largest, 26 percent, in 1919. The average yearly increase was 15.5 percent.

BIG INCREASE IN CONSUMPTION.

According to the State Board of Equalization, California collected in gas taxes during the first three months of this year $8,546,778, an increase of 14 percent over the amount collected for the same period in 1928. The first three months of 1929, 287,770,305 gallons of gas were consumed; the first three months of 1928, 251,105,- 567 gallons.

PRODUCTION RECORDS BROKEN.

Automobile production in the United States during the first three months in 1929 reached the highest level in history, according to an announcement of the Federal Reserve Board, being 50 percent larger than in the first quarter of 1928, and 25 percent greater than in the similar period of any previous year.

BETTER ROADS SOON.

The Federal Government, through the United States Forest Service, will spend $10,000 for road construction in San Marcos Pass, Santa Barbara County, and $25,000 for a road from Hemet to the San Jacinto Mountains in Riverside County.

SUGGESTIONS FOR MOTORISTS MAKING MOUNTAIN TRIPS.

Mountain roads are now carrying their summer burden of traffic, and many inexperienced motorists essay trips into the higher reaches. For driving roads with many turns and long grades, the public safety department of the Automobile Club of Southern California issues the following summary of suggestions:

Shift gears at the bottom of the grade before starting up, if possible.

Take no chances on the down grade if you don't know the road. Shift gears to first or second speed and let compression hold back the car.

The practice of keeping a car in high and using the brakes on the down grade should be discouraged. If the brakes give way, the motorist is without protection.

In parking a car on the up grade leave the gears engaged in low speed after having turned off the engine. If parking on the down grade, leave it in reverse. Some drivers carry a piece of wood or a rock large enough to block the wheels on a steep grade.

Keep well to the right, and sound your horn on the turns.

Check the water in the radiator frequently. Have the crankcase full of good fresh oil before starting.

Don't throw a car into neutral and coast on the grades. It is not only extremely dangerous, but unlawful.

NEW PLUGS FOR OLD.

The point of a spark plug actually wears out. This is in addition to the cracking of the porcelain as a result of age. The point that comes down from the center of the plug, which is one that carries the high tension positive current, will appear to be eaten away. Plugs at 10,000 miles often will show so much wear at the points that the gaps will be much too wide for perfect firing at low car speeds. The points can be brought closer together, but since the wear is uneven there is danger of not getting the right clearance. The safer plan is to install new plugs.

GASOLINE PRESSURE SYSTEMS.

Gasoline pressure systems give very little trouble, but there are two places which must be constantly watched: the filling cap and the check valve on the pump. Always see that the filling cap is screwed down extra tight, and watch the pressure gauge to see if the check valve is leaking air. If it is, a few squirts of gasoline may be all that is necessary to clear it of dust.

DOWN ON THE FARM

Illustrating the plight of the farmer, Representative Louis Ludlow of Indiana, speaking on the farm relief bill in the National House of Representatives April 25, made use of the following lines which, he said, originated somewhere in Kentucky:

Down on the farm, 'bout half-past 4,
I slip on my pants and sneak out of the door.
Out of the yard I run like the dickens
To milk 10 cows and feed the chickens,
Clean out the barn, curry Nancy and Jiggs,
Separate the cream, and slop all the pigs,
Work two hours, then eat like a Turk,
And, by heck, I'm ready for a full day's work.

Then I grease the wagon and put on the rack,
Throw a jug of water in an old grain sack,
Hitch up the horses, hustle down the lane,
Must get the hay in, for it looks like rain.
Look over yonder! Sure as I'm born,
Cattle on the rampage and cows in the corn!
Start across the meadow, run a mile or two,
Heaving like I'm windbroke, get wet clear through.
Get back to the horses, then for recompense
Nancy gets straddle the barbed wire fence.
Joints all a-aching and muscles in a jerk,
I'm fit as a fiddle for a full day's work.

Work all summer till winter is nigh,
Then figure up the books and heave a big sigh.
Worked all year, didn't make a thing;
Got less cash now than I had last spring.
Now, some people tell us that there aint no hell,
But they never farmed, so they can't tell.
When spring rolls 'round I take another chance,
While the fringe grows longer on my old gray pants.
Give my s'penders a hitch, my belt another jerk,
And, by heck, I'm ready for a full year's work.

CALIFORNIA'S GROWING POPULATION ESTIMATED BY STATE CONTROLLER.

At the end of January 1928, California had a population of 5,466,104, according to State Controller Ray L. Riley. This is an increase of 67,647 over the previous year, and an increase of 2,039,243 since the 1920 Federal Government census, when the state's population was 3,426,861. The estimate is based on property valuations.

Riley says that 4,399,569 of the population are city dwellers, and the balance, about 19 per cent, reside in rural districts. His estimates for cities of the state with a population over 20,000 follow:

Los Angeles, 1,343,923; San Francisco, 698,963; Oakland, 312,449; Long Beach, 139,467; San Diego, 125,194; Sacramento, 101,376; Pasadena, 85,469; Berkeley, 82,351; Fresno, 72,616; San Jose, 56,377; Santa Monica, 53,604; Stockton, 49,635; Santa Barbara, 42,368; San Bernardino, 41,237; Alameda, 38,844; Santa Ana, 34,692; Riverside, 31,484; Bakersfield, 29,552; Vallejo, 22,382; Richmond, 21,145.

GIRDLING OF GRAPES.

Girdling of grapevines to increase the size of berries is a practice hardly to be recommended, and one fraught with peril to the vine. It is sure to be weakening to the vine itself, and unless handled by an expert, is likely to cause great trouble. Grape currants must be girdled to get production, as must also some other shy bearers, but the ordinary varieties of table, juice and raisin grapes will not receive benefits in proportion to the expense involved and the risk taken.

SUDAN GRASS PASTURE.

Sudan grass is gaining prestige as a forage crop. It makes good growth in the summer with little water, and will stand close cropping. One of its principal good points is that it furnishes pastures when other grasses begin to dry up. It is a warm-weather crop, and grows best in the summer. It should not be fed after frosting, as it is a sorghum. However, frosted sudan grass may be put in the silo and fed without danger to the cattle.

CO-OPERATIVE MARKETING.

Five results may be expected from a properly organized and efficiently conducted co-operative marketing concern: stabilized prices, savings in marketing, improved quality by influencing productive practices, premiums for individual producers with superior products, and unified action on economic and legislative problems.

A BIT O' FARMING

PREPARED EXPRESSLY FOR THE GRIZZLY BEAR BY M. H. ELLIS

A PLAN HAS APPEARED IN THE SAN Joaquin Valley which is designed to take the destructive element out of competition in the raisin-grape industry and to stabilize it to the profit of producer. Surely, anything that works to this end is much to be desired; does this plan work to that end? The answer appears, on the surface, to be yes, emphatically. If a corporation, be it named stabilization board or anything else, can actually control the crop, feed it to packers, independent as well as co-operative, and store what cannot be sold, for disposal in other ways, then it appears that corporation may be a blessing to the raisin industry. Surplus fruit would be used in by-products plans; some of it might be disposed of to dairymen for feed. A small holdover, in a year such as this, would be a big aid in keeping prices where buying would be regular and planting would not be stimulated too much.

If part of the funds of the farm-relief law are allocated to California to finance such a plan, it gives promise of success. The basic price of 3½ cents for Thompson Seedless and 4 cents for Muscats, stepped up half a cent each year during the three-year contract, would give assurance of reasonable profit for the thrifty grower. For the farmer who prefers to gamble rather than to have his income fixed, the plan probably has little appeal. The grower who is tired of uncertain profits and more certain losses, should welcome the idea and support it.

The signing up of the growers, of course, is the first difficult step. Yet were they to consider what might have happened without organization, they would be quicker in their support. California cannot continue to market an increasing crop of grapes, table, raisin and juice, without facing squarely the problem of the disposal of the crop. This plan suggests thought and shows evidences of having been conceived after careful deliberation. Given the moral and financial support of the Federal Government it should work, if the growers do their part.

MEDITERRANEAN FRUIT FLY.

No such pest has threatened the fruit industry of the sub-tropical belt of the United States as now has appeared in Florida. Already the fruit has been stripped from the trees in orchards of thousands of acres in a desperate attempt to eradicate the pest. Given no host-fruit, the authorities there argue, the fly must die. This logic is good, but there is a question as to whether it can be carried out.

Florida abounds with trees bearing wild fruits, trees in swamps that are almost impossible to reach, and bearing fruit that makes a perfect host for the pest. While it is pointed out that New Zealand eradicated the pest, it must be remembered that New Zealand has practical isolation of its fruit districts. Florida joins other states that furnish plenty of host-fruits; these states join others, and California is at the end of the chain.

The disaster that would follow the introduction of the fruit fly here is hard to imagine. A solution might be to permit Florida to market her fruits only in states not susceptible to damage from the pest. In the meantime, the western states must pull together for a strict quarantine, or a California fruit industry of a hundred million dollars a year may be practically wiped out.

MUST INCREASE PRODUCTION.

It has been said that a dairy cow that does not produce 200 pounds of butterfat in a year is a liability rather than an asset. She is all of that, and unless the dairyman who has a lower production begins at once to build up his herd, he is going to be sifted out in the sieve of competition. The cow that makes but 175 pounds of fat in twelve months is going to show a loss of about $15. This loss grows larger by $15 for every additional 25 pounds; the 125-pound cow is likely to show figures on the wrong side of the book by about $50.

There are several things the dairyman can do. He can get a good pure-bred sire of known production pedigree, and use him in his herd. He can raise the cows from this bull and his best milkers, and be assured of increased production. He can test his cows, and cull those that are losing him money. He can feed according to production and save money by that practice. It stands to reason that the dairyman with the 250-pound herd will endure competition; the one with the 150-pound herd must surely fail. Increased production is the only key to increased profit in the dairy business.

SUMMER POULTRY PRACTICES.

With the advent of warm weather changes should be made in the practices of the poultryman, if he lives in the valleys where high temperatures prevail. Cut down the grain, feed more mash; in the mash introduce about 20 percent bran to cut down the protein. This will avoid forcing and heating in the fowls. Gather the eggs twice a day and store them at once in a cool place. Fertile eggs start incubation rapidly in hot weather; the egg check will be better if the eggs have not been overheated before the candler gets them. Most important of all, is to furnish the fowls plenty of water. The needs for water increase with the rise of the thermometer; the water containers are apt to be empty. Water is cheap, but it is essential and should not be overlooked.

STUDY IRRIGATION PROBLEM.

Every farmer should study his irrigation problem and be sure of his ground before he begins putting water upon his soil. Sandy soils require quick, light irrigation to prevent the penetration of moisture below root depth, where it is wasted. In districts where the water table is high, the practice should be similar. In heavy soils, where there is no danger of rising water table, the method must be different.

But the point is that water costs money, whether it is purchased or pumped, and the farmer should know just what he is doing when he irrigates. Over-irrigation may waste water, it may cause heavy damage to the soil and trees by bringing the water table near the surface, and it always costs money to irrigate. Lack of water, on the other hand, also may cause damage. Knowledge of requirements is the only safe guide.

KEEP THE TOMATOES COMING.

Force the tomatoes with the coming of temperatures that permit it. Keep the plants coming along at a rapid rate, so that when the blossoming time comes they will have attained good size. If tomatoes are watered when the bloom starts, the set is quite likely to be poor, and caution must be used to prevent stimulation through irrigation at that time. Strong vegetative growth in midsummer, following heavy watering, will more than likely cause blossom shedding. When the blossoms start, let the soil dry right up to the wilting point. After the crop is set, water again may be applied to force the size of the fruit.

CONTROL OF GRAIN SMUT.

There is a decided difference in the smut of barley and that of wheat. The covered smut of barley is entirely distinct from the smut or stinking bunt of wheat. The latter is almost perfectly controlled by the use of copper carbonate dust. Barley smut is but imperfectly controlled by that means. However, fair control of covered smut of barley may be obtained by the use of copper carbonate dust, although better results follow the sulphate of copper or bluestone solution treatment. Considering the ease of application, the germination and the degree of control, the dusting with copper carbonate is perhaps more satisfactory in most of the barley districts of the state.

AVOID FIRE LOSSES.

It would appear that enough has been said and written in the last few years to impress the state and its residents with the necessity of being careful with fire in the summer. Yet the fact remains that California leads the nation in its rural fire losses, and more than 80 percent of these fires are preventable. Last year 4,171 fires burned more than a million and a half acres with a loss of more than two and three-quarters millions of dollars.

Proper rural fire equipment will aid in reducing the losses, proper precautions will prevent them. The careful farmer will plow firebreaks and will be alert to stop blazes before they gain headway that permit no combating. Organization of fire districts and individual effort are as necessary as insurance to protect rural property in the dry season of the year.

DELAY SUBSOILING UNTIL FALL.

Seeing the benefits that have accrued in a neighbor's fields from subsoiling, there is a tendency on the part of farmers to blast or break the subsoil by deep tillage tools at the first convenient opportunity. Breaking the subsoil, particularly in hardpan districts, is most desirable, but it should never be done until the soil is bone dry. Then the hard formations shatter. If there is moisture in the soil, it is likely to pack and form pockets or potholes, which in wet weather cause injury to trees. By all means break up any hardpan, irrigation pan and plow sole that may exist, but do it when the ground is at its driest.

KEEP FRUIT BOXES STERILE.

Heavy damage is caused every year through spoilage of fruit infected from boxes in handling and particularly in storage. Boxes, trays, floors and bins should be carefully cleaned before the season starts. Sodium hypochlorite kills yeast and mold spores without odors or danger. Coarse dirt should be removed by washing, and this should be followed by a thorough wetting with the disinfecting solution. Fig growers are already feeling the pressure for cleanliness in handling, and other dried-fruit producers are going to be brought up sharply before many years unless they act before they are compelled to.

CLEAN OUT THE WEEDS.

One of the greatest enemies of water is weeds. Most of the water taken from the soil is through transpiration of plants. Weeds will take their share, and more, if permitted to remain. They should be cleaned out before they rob the soil of moisture, that may mean the success of the crop. But having removed the weeds, there is nothing further to be gained by cultivation. The dust mulch theory long ago has been exploded. It adds nothing to the ability of the soil to hold moisture; it is a costly practice and it permits the sun to burn out the humus. Keep the orchard clean, by all means, to conserve the soil moisture; any further cultivation is useless and wasted effort.

USE CAUSTIC EARLY.

The time to use caustic to prevent the growth of horns on calves is while the animals are very young—before the horns can be seen. As soon as the buttons can be located under the skin, and while they are still movable, apply the treatment and the results will be satisfactory. When the calves become older the use of caustic is not satisfactory and may be accompanied by undesirable results.

DRYING OUT POULTRY YARD.

There is no disinfectant for round worms of poultry that is better than the sunshine. With spring rains over and the hot weather here, the poultryman should set aside yards for use next year. These should not be plowed, cultivated or irrigated, but merely left to the summer sun for treatment, after all plant growth is removed. When the fall rains start the ground may be turned over and barley or rye planted for feed in the spring. The soil will be sanitary when this crop is grown. The mortality among laying hens is increasing in the state, and much of it is due to round worms, parasites picked up usually as eggs in the yard. If the yard is given the sun treatment, the parasites will disappear.

WATCH OUT FOR FAKES.

At this season of the year, and at all others as well for that matter, the farmer and the suburban resident who has a square foot for cultivation is pestered with the peddler who would sell anything under the sun, but usually has a spray or a fertilizer. Either one he recommends as approaching the perfect; a trial often proves it valueless, or worse in that it damages the trees, shrubs, plants or flowers. There are well-known controls for plant diseases and insect pests; there are fertilizers that can be used safely. It is the business of the farm advisor in each county to respond to calls for such help, or the College of Agriculture of the University of California at Berkeley will furnish information on request. The patronizing of the peddler, nine times out of ten, not only is money wasted, but worse.

THE CORN EAR WORM.

The corn ear worm in California is a decided pest, and has been the despair of many a farmer and back yard grower. Sodium fluosilicate, dusted upon the silk, is about the best control that has been found, and is easy to use. Ordinary black pepper, applied in the early stages of development, is a fair control. If the corn this year is to be protected, however, use the sodium fluosilicate when the silks begin to appear upon the ears. There may be some ears that have worms, but they will be very few, compared with the ordinary infestation.

PESTS ABOUT THE HOUSE.

There is little need to be troubled with insect pests around the house, even during the active season in warm weather. Ants are easily controlled now; any drug store will furnish the materials to be placed in cans about the house for the ants to take home to poison the colony. A repellent may be used if the insects are persistent in one particular place.

Crickets often are a nuisance, but this mixture, spread around in handy places, will dispose of them: dry-mix one pound of bran and one ounce of paris green or white arsenic or calcium arsenate. Stir thoroughly and then add a cup of black molasses and water sufficient to make a crumbly mash. The rind and pulp of half a lemon makes a flavor the insects like. This formula may be used against other unwelcome visitors around the house or garden, such as grasshoppers, cutworms, slugs, snails, etc.

MANGE OF PIGS.

Give the hog a chance to keep himself clean. He may have some dirt if he has everything he would like, but he would have no disease. If the wallows are clean, he will have no dirt. Crude petroleum used in the wallows, or put in one of the rubbing contraptions which so delight the porkers, will effectually kill the mange. The hog is not naturally a dirty animal. The conditions under which he has been domesticated have induced what is now inseparably identified as a habit of the hog.

To advance state progress.
To promote the study of California history.
To preserve California's landmarks, relics and traditions.
To honor and keep in memory California's Pioneers.

To guarantee social enjoyment, mental improvement and mutual benefit to members.
To care, conjointly with the Order of Native Sons of the Golden West, for the orphaned children of California, of whatever class, color or creed, by placing them in permanent homes through legal adoption proceedings, thus engaging in the most humanitarian of public welfare work, that of improving the future citizenship of the state.
If YOU were born in California and believe in these principles, you should be a member of the Order of Native Daughters of the Golden West.

Mrs. Josie Frederick, long the secretary, read the history of the Parlor, which was instituted April 12, 1919, with thirty-four charter members. Other speakers were Mrs. E. R. Williams, the first president; Mrs. Rose Trotter, active in the organization of No. 214, and District Deputy Hattie Corr.

Benefit Largely Attended.

Santa Rosa—Santa Rosa No. 217 had its annual card party for the benefit of the homeless children April 18. A large crowd attended, over forty-eight tables being in operation, and a nice sum was netted for the cause. Forty beautiful prizes, donated by merchants and members, were awarded.

The Parlor celebrated its ninth institution anniversary May 16. With President Effie

Thomas presiding, a class of candidates were initiated, the ceremonies being followed by a banquet.

Joint Meeting for Order's Head.

Hollister—Grand President Dr. Louise C. Heilbron officially visited Copa de Oro No. 105 and San Juan Bautista No. 179 in joint session April 25. Among the many in attendance were Past Grand Presidents Mamie G. Peyton, Bertha A. Briggs and Pearl Lamb, Grand Trustee Sadie Brainard and Supervising Deputy Clara Gairaud, the latter being accompanied by a delegation from Vendome No. 100 (San Jose). The hall was decorated with bright-hued blossoms. Several candidates were initiated, addresses were delivered and gifts were presented.

Preceding the meeting dinner was served at tables tastefully adorned with lighted tapers and a profusion of spring flowers. Past Grand President Bertha A. Briggs was the toastmistress, and Justina Lewis spoke on "Co-operation." Mayme Avilla entertained with a group of songs.

Blooms From Old-Fashion Garden.

Sutter Creek—Amapola No. 80 celebrated its thirty-fifth institution anniversary April 25 with a turkey supper attended by sixty-four members. A lively meeting followed, three candidates being initiated. The banquet and meeting halls were beautifully decorated in the Order's colors and spring blossoms from Amapola's old-fashion garden.

Card Parties for Loyalty Pledge.

Oakland—Piedmont No. 87 entertained the mothers of the members at an open meeting May 9. Following a very interesting program was a sociable game of cards. A tasty banquet, prepared by Chairman Mae Meade, was served, and all the mothers were presented with a remembrance of the occasion.

Under the chairmanship of Josephine Collins and Past Grand President Addie L. Mosher, card parties are being arranged for the benefit of the Loyalty Pledge. Many of the members have already responded with their pledges.

Pioneers Heard From.

Oroville—Gold of Ophir No. 190 and Argonaut No. 8 N.S.G.W. entertained California Pioneers May 1 at the annual banquet given in their honor. The festive board was beautified with baskets of roses. President Ruth Brown of No. 190 extended a welcome to the trail-blazers of the West. A group of old-time songs, illustrated, were sung by Aita Baldwin and Florence Boyle.

Among the Pioneer speakers of the evening were: Mrs. Laura Gordon Chappelle (1852), C. L. Duhem (1852), Mrs. E. J. Mooney (1853), Richard Johnson (1853), Mrs. Matilda Clark (1856), J. W. Browning (1856), H. W. Jolley (1859).

Fire Victim Showered.

Pleasanton—Pleasanton No. 237 recently tendered a miscellaneous shower to Mary Dutra, a member who lost her home by fire. Many beautiful and useful gifts were presented. Bernice Lewis was chairman of the occasion.

Jointly with Pleasanton No. 244 N.S.G.W., the Parlor had a card party May 21 to which the families of the members of both were invited, and the evening proved a most enjoyable one. Myrtle Madsen was chairman of the affair. This was the first of a series of parties to be held for the purpose of promoting friendly spirit and interest between the two Parlors.

To Inaugurate Assistance Fund.

Chico—Annie K. Bidwell No. 168 enjoyed a Mother's Day program May 9, those participating being Mrs. Frances Snider, Catherine Oliver and R. E. Lyle. Quotations from noted authors, telling of wonderful mothers, were read by several other members.

Westbrook heads a committee arranging for a benefit, the proceeds of which will go into a fund, originated by the Parlor, to meet hospital expenses of those unable to pay for such service. Jointly with Chico No. 21 N.S.G.W., the Parlor had a card party May 24 at which a program was presented; Mrs. Ben Hudspeth was the chairman.

timers joined. Mrs. Lucia Ruiz-Hernandez sang "I Love You, California," "Estrellita" and "La Mixteca," accompanied at the piano by Julius W. Krause.

Herman C. Lichtenberger, Past Grand President, on behalf of Ramona Parlor No. 109 N.S.G.W., presented La Mesa Club with a handsome set of flags, and John C. Gorman, vice-president Hollywood Parlor No. 196 N.S.G.W., presented a gavel. President McNaughton accepted, with thanks, the gifts.

La Mesa Club meets on the anniversaries of California's historical dates, and a historic review of such date is presented by some member. The next meeting will be July 7, the anniversary of the date when Commodore Sloat of the United States Navy unfurled on California soil at Monterey the Stars and Stripes.

BENEFIT FOR CHILDREN.

June 15, at Philharmonic Auditorium, Pearl Keller will have her annual entertainment for the benefit of the homeless children. A splendid program is assured, and the cause is worthy of a packed house. The affair is endorsed by the Native Sons and Native Daughters Homeless Children Committee, Irving Baxter (Ramona No. 109 N.S.G.W.) chairman.

SHAKESPEARE FOUNDATION.

A group of citizens, organized for the purpose of stimulating interest in Shakespeare and giving fitting observance to his place in literature, have selected the University of California at Los Angeles for a chair of instruction dedicated to the bard. This group, to be known as the Shakespeare Foundation, proposes to bring eminent scholars to the university to conduct lectures dealing with Shakespeare and his plays.

It is planned to finance this and other enterprises deemed to promote interest in the poet and his works. This includes annual productions of his plays by notable artists, such as would be available among the players engaged in Hollywood. It is proposed to set aside one week each year for an elaborate program devoted to appropriate celebration of Shakespeare.

Williams A. Clark Jr. is honorary chairman of the foundation, which includes among others such names as E. Avery McCarthy, Richmond J. Schweppe, Judge Benjamin Bledsoe and Edward D. Lyman.

ANNIVERSARY OUTING.

Ramona Parlor No. 109 N.S.G.W. will celebrate its forty-second institution anniversary with a barbecue and outing at Whiting Wood, near Glendale, June 9. The families of the members will be welcome, and appropriate games will be provided. "A good time is assured," says Secretary John V. Scott.

Other events on the Parlor's June program are: Election officers, the 7th; initiation, the 21st; good of the order program, the 28th.

FLAG FOR BOY SCOUTS.

A class of nine candidates became members of Los Angeles Parlor No. 124 N.D.G.W. May 1. The card party May 8, Esther Murphy chairman, was a most pleasant affair; delicious refreshments were served. The pot-luck dinner of May 15, under the supervision of Grace J. Norton, social hostess of the Parlor, was enjoyed by fifty-five members; appetizing home-cooked viands were served. The hat made by Grace C. Yarwood was disposed of, and brought $10 for the Loyalty Pledge. The barbecue May 12 at Campo Cahuenga, prepared by Ruth Ruiz, was greatly enjoyed.

June 5, Los Angeles will initiate another large class of candidates. At that time a flag will be presented Troop No. 143, Boy Scouts of America. June 12, the regular monthly card party will be held, and June 19 a report on americanization work will be given by Harriet Martin.

IS EDUCATION PROFESSIONALIZED?

Is education becoming professionalized? This is one of the topics to be discussed by the school trustees section of a short summer course in public administration to open at the University of Southern California June 3.

Problems that confront the average layman in the performance of his duties as a school board member will be covered in five daily sessions, to be attended by school trustees and school administrators, and devoted to appropriate subjects.

The revised California school code and other specific problems of particular interest will be studied. Afternoon and evening sessions will include reports, papers, lectures, round table discussions and reviews.

BRILLIANT SUCCESS.

The supper-dance of Californiana Parlor No. 247 N.D.G.W. at the Biltmore Hotel May 10 was a most brilliant affair and highly successful. There was an immense attendance, and the program was thoroughly enjoyed. The committee in charge consisted of Mrs. Arthur Wright, president; Miss Mary Foy, trustee; Mrs. William Kirkley Chambers, first vice-president; Mrs. A. O. Evans, second vice-president, and Mrs. Leland Atherton Irish.

A portion of the proceeds of this outstanding event in local social circles will form the nucleus of a fund being raised by Californiana to erect a bronze statue in honor of Philip De Neve, Founder of Los Angeles, September 4, 1781.

ARRANGING FOR BARBECUE.

June 3, Hollywood Parlor No. 196 N.S.G.W. will initiate a class of candidates and elect officers for the July-December term. June 17, another class of candidates will be initiated. On both occasions refreshments will be served.

July 14, at Riley's ranch in Sand Canyon, the Parlor will hold its annual barbecue, arrangements for which are now under way.

Moore, Gordon Wheeler, Helen Corrigan, Kathleen Parks, Patricia McCaserty, Emma Clishee and Mrs. Palestine. President Athorn planned corsage bouquets on all the older mothers, about fifty of whom were present.

May 18, the Parlor dedicated to the Pioneer Mothers a Memory Garden in Recreation Park. The site was set aside for the purpose by the City of Long Beach and will be beautified with old-fashion flowers. Among the speakers were City Manager George Buck; President Julia E. Fleming, director of public service. Musical numbers were contributed by Helen Cervantes, who sang her own composition, a tribute to the Pioneer Mothers, and the Jefferson junior high-school.

May 9, the thimble club of the Parlor met with Clara Fay. It was a farewell luncheon, as she is soon to depart on a European tour. Cards followed the lunch. The food sale May 25 was a huge success. Chairman Violet Henshilwood and her committee worked very diligently.

Honored by Visit.

Richmond—Grand President Dr. Louise C. Heilbron honored Richmond No. 147 with an official visit April 16, when several candidates were initiated. Other visitors were Grand Secretary Sallie R. Thaler, Grand Marshal Estelle Evans, Past Grand President Addie L. Mosher, Supervising Deputy Gertrude Morrison, District Deputy Eilne Page, and delegations from Antioch, Martinez, Piedmont, Bear Flag, Aloha and Berkeley.

Dr. Heilbron gave an interesting and instructive talk. The visiting grand officers were presented with gifts, after which a banquet, prepared by a capable committee, was served.

Counties' Gathering Well Attended.

Sacramento—The annual picnic of the Native Daughters and Native Sons of Sacramento and San Joaquin Counties held here April 27 was largely attended. "Bill" Thisby was the chef for the barbecue, which was good.

A ball game between Calif de Oro No. 206 (Stockton) and Coloma No. 212 (Sacramento) was won by the former, 15 to 4. The prize waltz was won by C. Griffith of Sacramento No. 3 N.S.G.W. and Mrs. Nellie Nordstrom of La Bandera No. 110 (Sacramento). The N.S.G.W. past presidents' race was won by E. Kuebler of Sunset No. 26 (Sacramento), and that of the N.D.G.W. past presidents by Helen Hoagland of Calif de Oro No. 206 (Stockton).

Past Presidents Select Chiefs.

San Jose—The annual convention of the Past Presidents State Assembly was a most harmonious and interesting one. Several new associations have been organized the past two years. After the business was completed the hostess association, Santa Clara County No. 3, entertained with a program, followed by a dainty repast. Officers elected and installed included:

Millie Tietjen, chief president; Eldora McCarty, past chief; Lily May Tilden, chief vice-president; Emma Gruber-Foley, chief treasurer; Anna Gruber-Loser, chief secretary; Josephine Clark, chief marshal; Cora Stobing, chief inside sentinel; Winifred Halter, chief outside sentinel; Lillian B. Troy, chief organist; Margaret Grote-Hill, Mary Frances Mitchell, Mamie Davis, Myrtle Bernardo, Emily Clifford, directors.

Friend's Death Deplored.

Menlo Park—Menlo No. 211 and Menlo No. 185 N.S.G.W. extend condolence to Mrs. Catherine Derry, Frank, Donald and Edward Derry on the death of their husband and father, Frank Derry, who passed away April 24. He was a native of San Francisco, and was always ready at any time to assist the local Parlor. He was a member of the fire department, and his death was a great loss to this community, where he resided the past quarter-century.

Mothers Entertained.

San Diego—An interesting program, complimentary to the mothers and the adopted mothers of the Parlor, was given by San Diego No. 208 May 14. The hall was beautifully decorated in red carnations. A juvenile orchestra from Lincoln school—Chas. Jacobson Jr. (director), Ruby Christian, Davina Thompson, Prosser Ott and Mina Flores—furnished several selections. Others who contributed numbers were: Leslie Zeigler, Margaret Held, Pearl A. Simpson and Irma Heilbron. Fifteen members of the Parlor presented an "Old Fashioned Album."

While refreshments were being served the "mother's" cake was cut by Mrs. Mary Wood, an esteemed member of the Parlor. The affair was under the direction of First Vice-president Mabel BURGERT.

Baby Parade Sponsored.

San Jose—The streets of this city were crowded with delighted sightseers May 16 witnessing the baby parade, one of the features of the annual Fiesta de las Rosas. The parade, a huge success, was sponsored by Vendome No. 100. Anne Farnsworth was chairman for the event, and also marshaled a division of the floral parade the following day.

Mother's Day was observed May 8, Gertrude Mathers being chairman. A program was presented, refreshments were served and the mothers of the members were remembered with gifts and flowers. A bridge party May 1, President Alice Kady general chairman, was a big social event. The proceeds are to be devoted to furnishing a room in the Native Daughter Home.

A covered-dish dinner preceded the initiation of several candidates May 12. Fay Withycombe was chairman, and Alice Roll and Hazel Haub directed the evening's program. Stella Boggs, Fay Withycombe and Clara Gairaud were hos-

Feminine World's Fads and Fancies

PREPARED ESPECIALLY FOR THE GRIZZLY BEAR BY ANNA STOERMER

FASHIONS ALONE TESTIFY TO THE growing cult of beach life and have had much to do with prolonging the hours spent on the sands. At all the smart resorts, the lure of the outdoors, the health-giving quality of the sun's rays and the athletic mood contribute to the growing enthusiasm for attuning one's daytime hours, summer or winter, to the music of the sad sea waves.

Summer resorts will be gayer and more fashionable for the summer of twenty-nine, and women who have never before taken to beach costumes very seriously recognize what is expected of them.

Not all that is new and charming in the new beach life can be attributed to the pajama, however. In the variation of the costume idea the jacket costume has established itself in bathing fashions as strongly as in the sports mode, the jacket being with or without sleeves. In all these compositions, color and fabric play a vital role of contrast, while the trimming ideas introduce a note of gaiety.

One may be as practical as she pleases for the morning swim in one of the many smart little suits with the tuck-in shorts, provided one smotheres it after the sun bath in the decorative scenery of pajama or coat.

There are all sorts of complimentary novelties which augment the picturesque effect, such as broad-brimmed hats, parasols, silk contrasting facings of cretonne, huge beach bags in rubber-lined chintz or colored raffia, gay sashes and kerchiefs, sand clogs, and high-heeled rubber slippers to match the suit.

Of course, a rug to match the costume is the last word in beach decorations. A cape of rubberized terry cloth is one of the smart items.

Light and dark blue are joined into two-piece suits with pleated trunks and have low-cut backs, brief trunks and straps which serve as brassieres in molding the figure. Cretonne trims the cover-all suit of rubberized rayon.

Color and contrast lend a vivid quality to the beach ensemble. A black and white jersey suit has sunback top, yoked trunks, knee-length, and matching coat. The beach novelties are decorative and diverting.

A choker, just the right thing, is formed of natural wood beads in graduated size. An anklet bracelet is made of carved wooden beads, combined with red glass beads. All sorts of flowers are made of rubber, and many large hats are made of novelty straws, in green, red, orange, blue, brown and tan and have raffia streamers. A beret in coral or any wanted color made of rubber, is the last word.

Camp outfitting is another thought we must bear in mind. The general endorsement of the sun-tan vogue and the health arguments which have for the past few years been winning more and more converts convince us that the sun bath this year will not only be healthy but fashionable, if one eliminates clothing wherever possible.

English shorts, knickers, bloomers and shirts are made in one with undergarments, thus eliminating unnecessary layers and incidentally simplifying laundry problems. Collars are briefer, ties are less ample, and the beret and the gob hat permit the rays of the sun to fall upon the face. Hose have been reduced to ankle length.

We have the sleeveless shirt with convertible collar and a single pocket. The sweat shirt is closed tight at the neckline and is very attractive in mottled green and white. The usual serge, sateen and poplin are the fabrics for bloomers, cut so the fullness is at the bottom and assuring a snug fit around the hips.

Even middy blouses are cut on conforming lines with sports shirt collars. The result is an increased freedom of action for the camper, which is exactly the thing that she seeks. For some time camp clothes have been getting more practical, and the tendency to adopt more man-nish clothes is part of the movement.

The golf season is on the horizon. Knit wear, as usual, occupies a great deal of prominence. Three-piece costumes, with sleeveless jumpers, are an outstanding note. Most knitted golf costumes are sleeveless, lacing either at the front or the side. Lacing is frequently seen on the jumpers, and the white jumper with striping in the color of the cardigan is regarded as important.

Skirts are pleated at the front to allow freedom, though some are wrapover, with plenty of lap. The rib stitch in what is known as corduroy wale is a new idea in knitted golf togs, and small bright gingham checks are also advocated.

A knitted golf dress is two-piece, an interesting feature being the use of ribbed stitches at the front of the shoulders and the back of the neck, resembling tucking and giving added fullness where needed.

Featherweight chamois and suede jackets are likewise considered smart with the golf dress, tailored in style with crepe-de-chine linings. Another phase of the leather jacket mode is the matching suede hat.

With cotton frocks and ensembles as important as they are for the coming summer, it is not surprising that the vogue of cotton should have extended to millinery. The closely stitched hat is in the color of the ensemble. Silk is used in the same way, but with a wider stitching than linen.

Velveteen matching the velveteen sports coats is another fabric seen in entire hats, with close stitching and sometimes having facings of linen or of straw.

A jacket costume is in brown and white, the sleeveless dress and cardigan of brown jersey. The cloche of white linen weave straw is worn with a lively scarf of orange and white crepe-de-chine. Brown and white pumps and a white and brown leather bag are the correct accessories.

N.S.G.W. HELP TO MAKE U. C. GREAT WORLD CENTER HISTORICAL RESEARCH.

New light may shortly be thrown on the melodramatic history of early Californians during filibustering expeditions into Mexico between 1850 and 1860, as a result of studies just completed by Rufus Kay Wyllys, graduate student at the University of California. In The Grizzly Bear for January 1929, Wyllys briefly reported his six months' work in the archives of Mexico, the article being titled "On the Trail of the California Filibusters in Mexican Archives."

These studies were made possible through the generosity of the Order of Native Sons of the Golden West. For fifteen years the Native Sons have provided two traveling fellowships of $1,500 each for research in Pacific Coast history. One of these was awarded to Wyllys.

Among the famous filibusters whose names Wyllys traced in the archives of the government of Mexico, including the archives of the departments of foreign affairs and of war and navy, are Gaston de Raousset-Boulbon, William Walker, Henry Crabb and others of their type.

Many stories have been written concerning the more or less tragic expeditions of Californians to establish independent colonies in Mexico, Wyllys states, but none have given proper attention to the Mexican government side of the question. He found, for example, as a possible cause of the failure of the many expeditions, that the Mexican government at Mexico City was much better informed of the plans for the expeditions than the filibusters realized. He also found numerous clippings of San Francisco newspapers in the archives, detailing the efforts of the filibusters to recruit expeditionary forces long before the expeditions started.

Dr. Herbert E. Bolton, chairman of the department of history of the state university, says that the Native Sons of the Golden West, through their generous assistance in fellowships, have helped to make the University of California one of the greatest centers for historical research in the world.

OLD SPANISH DAYS FIESTA WILL BE GREATEST EVER.

Santa Barbara City—This year's Old Spanish Days Fiesta, to be held in August, will outrival in every particular all predecessors. Plans are already well under way.

The fiesta will open August 14 with the dedication of Santa Barbara County's handsome new court house. Santa Barbara Parlor No. 116 N.S.G.W., by invitation of the Board of Supervisors, will have charge of this feature.

The following day an epochal parade, depicting the most interesting history of Santa Barbara City, will be the chief attraction, and the two succeeding days will be devoted to numerous fiesta events.

CALIFORNIA NATIVE'S DEATH RECALLS STATE'S EARLY HISTORY.

Winters (Yolo County)—The recent death here of Mrs. Linnie Wolfskill-Councilman at the age of 68 recalls California history, as she was the first daughter born to the late John R. and Susan Cooper-Wolfskill.

John R. Wolfskill was the first White settler on Putah Creek, in 1842, and, except General John A. Sutter, who located at New Helvetia (now Sacramento), was the first White person to locate in California above San Francisco Bay. His wife was a daughter of Major Stephen Cooper, one of the first settlers at Benicia, Solano County.

Apricot Festival—The fourth annual Diablo Valley Apricot Festival will be held June 30 at Brentwood, Contra Costa County.

"The replenished understand not the pain of the starving."

BIG HEARTED "SYD" MEE PASSES ON.

John Sydney Mee, affiliated with Arrowhead Parlor No. 110 N.S.G.W. (San Bernardino), died suddenly May 8. He was born at San Bernardino City, January 27, 1875, and among the surviving relatives is a brother, James W. Mee (Sepulveda Parlor No. 263) of San Pedro. He represented Arrowhead Parlor at the Forty-ninth (Santa Rosa 1926) Grand Parlor.

"Syd" Mee was a splendid Native Son—big hearted, hard working and most hospitable. His loss will, indeed, be sorely felt, not only in Arrowhead, but throughout the southland.—C.M.H.

STARTING A PRIVET HEDGE.

To start a California privet hedge, make cuttings about twelve inches long and plant them nine inches deep and from eight to twelve inches apart. Keep the cuttings moist and when the new shoots appear, pinch them back when they are about six or eight inches long. This will keep the plants bushy at the ground. Prune frequently, to make the hedge dense. Old plants, improperly pruned, may be improved by cutting low, at about six or eight inches from the ground.

"A sluggard takes a hundred steps because he would not take one in due time."

CALIFORNIA'S WEALTH OF YELLOW GOLD

THE PRESENCE OF GOLD IN STREAM gravels of California was known by the Indians at least as early as 1841, and possibly as early as 1820. March 2, 1844, Manuel Castanares, deputy for California to the congress of Mexico, reported to his government that placers in California South had produced, to December 1843, a total of 2,000 ounces of gold dust, most of which had been sent to the United States Mint at Philadelphia, Pennsylvania.

James W. Marshall unearthed gold nuggets in the tail race of General John A. Sutter's saw-mill on the American River at Coloma, El Dorado County, January 24, 1848, and it was that discovery which started the history-making gold rush to California.

Figures compiled by numerous individuals, the United States Geological Survey, the United States Bureau of Mines and the San Francisco Chamber of Commerce show the vast gold-wealth which has been unearthed in California each year from 1848 to and including 1928:

Year	Value	Year	Value
1848	$ 245,301	1889	$11,212,913
1849	10,151,360	1890	12,309,783
1850	41,273,106	1891	12,728,869
1851	75,938,232	1892	12,571,900
1852	81,294,700	1893	12,538,780
1853	67,613,487	1894	13,863,282
1854	69,433,951	1895	15,334,317
1855	55,855,395	1896	17,161,562

Native Sons of the Golden West

SAN FRANCISCO—THE BOARD OF Grand Officers met May 4, the following being in attendance: Grand President James A. Wilson, who presided; Junior Past Grand President Charles A. Thompson, Grand First Vice-president Charles L. Dodge, Grand Second Vice-president John T. Newell, Grand Third Vice-president Frank I. Gonzalez, Grand Secretary John T. Regan, Grand Trustees Ben Harrison, Frank M. Lane, Richard M. Hamb, J. Hartley Russell, Harmon D. Skillin, Charles A. Koenig, Irving D. Gibson.

Several matters, presented to the Grand Parlor in the form of resolutions, were discussed.

Past Grand President John F. Davis was in attendance and made an interesting report on the work of the traveling history fellows of the University of California, provided for by an annual appropriation of $3,000 by the Order.

Grand Trustee Lane reported prospects are good for the organization of a parlor at Bakersfield, Kern County, and that he is endeavoring to organize parlors in Mariposa and Visalia, as well as other places in the San Joaquin Valley.

This being the last meeting that Junior Past Grand President Thompson would attend officially, he took occasion to express appreciation for the many courtesies extended him while a grand officer.

Historic Site Marked.

Merced—Carrying out the purpose of the Order to mark with enduring monuments those places in California associated with the activities of the Pioneers, Yosemite No. 24 made its second annual tour to historic places in Merced and Mariposa Counties April 21.

The main feature was the unveiling and dedication of a monument at the Mariposa County Court House, bearing this inscription: "Mariposa County Court House. Erected 1854. In Continuous Use Since Erection. This marker placed by Yosemite Parlor No. 24 N.S.G.W., Merced, April 21, 1929. Dedicated to the Mariposa Pioneers."

Speakers of the occasion included: P. R. Murray, president, who presented the marker in behalf of the Parlor; J. J. Trahuco, superior judge Mariposa County, who accepted the marker for the county; May F. Givens, Grand Trustee N.D.G.W.; Dr. Louise C. Heilbron, Grand President N.D.G.W.; Horace M. Alhright, director national parks.

Gales of Laughter.

Sau Bernardino—The joint social gathering of Arrowhead No. 110 and Lugonia No. 241 N.D.G.W. April 26 was a huge success. The program opened with a meeting of the "Spinners' Aid Society," conducted by Lois Aldridge Johnson. Needing money, the society decided to stage a mock wedding. Jerome B. Kavanaugh was the parson, Walter Harris the bridegroom and six-foot Ed Jones the bride. There were numerous attendants, and Miss Olive Easton played the wedding march.

The ceremony produced gales of laughter from the big crowd, and at the reception which followed dancing was in order until a late hour. Those responsible for the evening's decided success were: Charles Frost (general chairman), Fred Kramer, George J. MacDonald, Monte Weeks, M. W. Yerrington of Arrowhead, and Miss Lois Poling of Lugonia.

Anniversary Observed.

Sacramento—Sutter Fort No. 241 celebrated its twentieth institution anniversary with an entertainment and dance. Milton W. Hoffman presided, and among the speakers were Past Presidents E. N. Skeels, H. A. Nauman Jr., T. S. Lages, M. F. Trebilcock, C. L. Katzenstein and J. A. Hoerner. Plans for a membership drive, to start in July, were outlined.

Present Best Past Officers.

San Rafael—The long-expected ritual contest between the regular officers and a team of past presidents of Mount Tamalpais No. 64 was held May 6 and resulted in a decision in favor of the regulars. Both teams did splendid work and scored high marks, the officers winning by twenty-two points. J. F. Stanley and W. Schroeder of the San Francisco Past Presidents Assembly were the judges.

Rodney E. Messner, Marin County surveyor, presided at the banquet which followed the ceremonies, and lauded both the officers and the past presidents for their splendid showing. "Jim" Stanley commended the Parlor for the wonderful progress it has made in recent years. Charles Redding, county treasurer, predicted a great future for the Order in Marin County which, he declared, is facing a great wave of prosperity. District Deputy J. S. Rosa invited the Tamalpaisers to visit his home-Parlor, Sea Point No. 158, at Sausalito. Other speakers were W. E. Grady, Emil Malz Jr. and C. W. Russell.

At a recent meeting of No. 64 Chas. Collins and B. J. Brusatori gave illuminating talks, respectively, on insurance and municipal ownership of water in Marin County. May 20 George Streckfus and Frank Kelly discussed matters of interest. These talks are in accordance with a new policy recently adopted by the Parlor to stimulate interest and increase attendance, and the idea is proving quite effective.

House Warming.

San Diego—San Diego No. 108 had a housewarming in its new quarters in Knights of Columbus Hall, Fourth and Elm streets, May 8. Entertainment was provided by the Golden West Syncopators, the Parlor's own orchestra.

Plans for the annual barbecue picnic in El Monte Park were outlined, and ways and means to restore San Diego Mission were discussed. The Parlor now has $1,500 in its mission restoration fund, and it is anxious to have the landmark preserved.

Membership Standing Largest Parlors.

Big Time in Mountains.

Nevada City—June 22 and 23, Hydraulic No. 56 and Quartz No. 58 (Grass Valley) will sponsor a two-day outing in the mountains between Nevada City and Downieville, to which all Native Sons and their ladies are invited.

Several grand officers will make the pilgrimage, and there will be large representations from the Parlors in the mountain counties, as well as from Sacramento, San Francisco and Fresno Cities.

The feature for Sunday, June 23, will be the outdoor initiation of a large class of candidates to be presented by Parlors as far south as Fresno City. The ritual will be exemplified by a team from Fred H. Greely Assembly of Past Presidents.

Those interested in the function should get in touch with Dr. C. W. Chapman, secretary Hydraulic Parlor, Nevada City, who will furnish any and all desired information.

WORK COMPLETED.

Berkeley (Alameda County)—The University of California awarded May 15 bachelor degrees, higher degrees or certificates of graduation to 2,310 young men and women at its sixty-sixth commencement day exercises in the Memorial Stadium.

Great Waste—During 1928 California produced 317,000,000,000 cubic feet of natural gas, of which amount 78,000,000,000 was wasted, by escape.

52nd Grand Parlor

California from Mexican rule. The spot "is known as the only place in the United States where a treaty has been signed between the United States of America and a foreign country."

IMMIGRATION.

The question of immigration was before the Grand Parlor in the form of three resolutions, presented by the Board of Grand Officers, all of which were adopted:

Declaring that, "because there are no teeth" in the Federal Immigration Act of 1924, its provisions are shamefully violated, the Federal Congress is petitioned "to pass without unnecessary delay such legislation as is necessary to provide for apprehension, punishment and deportation of violators of the immigration restriction act, and of those who aid in such violation."

Reiterating the Order's stand, "that aliens ineligible to American citizenship should be excluded as immigrants, as a measure of protection to American standards," and declaring that "we are receiving from Mexico alone, formally through the immigration gates and illegally across the border, some 100,000 Mexicans annually, most of them Indian peons ineligible to our citizenship, unassimilable, and undesirable as immigrants from many points of view," the Federal Congress is urgently requested to take such action "as will confine immigration from Mexico strictly to such elements as are eligible to our citizenship."

Declaring that the "Filipinos, under the general naturalization law, are ineligible for citizenship," and that "they are racially unassimilable with the population of the United States and, for various reasons, social, economic and political, are not desirable as immigrants," the Federal Congress is urged "to prohibit further entrance of Filipinos for permanent settlement, and to repeal the recent statute making eligible for citizenship Filipinos who have served in units of the navy."

RESOLUTIONS ADOPTED.

Endorsing the "Englebright Bill," now before the Federal Congress, "appropriating considerable money for the prevention of forest fires."

Petitioning the Federal Congress to adopt House Bill 17163, introduced by Congressman Harry L. Englebright (Hydraulic No. 56), "which provides for making the ninth day of September [California's Admission Day] of each year a holiday for federal employees in the State of California."

Endorsing, and petitioning the Governor of California to sign, the following bills passed by the recent State Legislature: Senate Bill 415, appropriating $400,000 for forest fire protection on watersheds areas. Assembly Bill 296, placing the state parks under the jurisdiction of the State Board of Forestry. Assembly Bill 940, authorizing the director of the State Department of Natural Resources to acquire cut-over land for forestry or reforestation purposes.

Endorsing the proposal to have the name of the late Ina Coolbrith, "loved laurel crowned poet of California," officially given "to some peak in the high Sierra in the vicinity of Beckworth Pass, through which she first entered California in pioneer days in her early childhood."

Endorsing the practice of some superior court judges "of placing the State (Bear) Flag upon their benches, together with the Flag of the United States of America," and urging all superior judges in California to do likewise.

Extending the thanks of the Grand Parlor to all who contributed to the entertainment and pleasure of the successful session, and to the press and KPO for the publicity given the deliberations and the banquet.

GRAND OFFICERS ELECTED.

At the election for grand officers, 410 ballots were cast, and the following were selected:

Grand President—Charles L. Dodge (Carquinez No. 205).

Grand First Vice-president—John T. Newell (Los Angeles No. 45).

NOTES OF THE SESSION.

Alexander R. Heron, Director of Finance of California, addressed the Grand Parlor and presented engrossed resolutions extending, in behalf of the people of the state, thanks to the Order for the gift to California of the Donner monument and surrounding lands near Truckee, Nevada County.

Grand President Dr. Louise C. Heilbron personally extended greetings from the Order of Native Daughters of the Golden West, and Secretary Mary E. Brusie spoke briefly on the homeless children work. They were accompanied by Founder Lily O. Reichling-Dyer, Grand Secretary Sallie R. Thaler and Grand Outside Sentinel Millie Rock of the Native Daughters.

Fred G. Stevenot of the State Forestry Department addressed the Grand Parlor on "Forestry and Reforestation," his talk being followed by moving pictures pertaining to the subject.

Past Grand President Judge John F. Davis, speaking for Dr. Herbert E. Bolton, head of the University of California history department who was unable to be present, outlined the work of the Order's traveling history fellows.

Past Grand President Judge Fletcher A. Cutler, lauding the new Native Daughter Home in San Francisco, proposed a collection for funds with which to purchase wrought-iron gates for the entrance to the property. The response netted $324.40, of which amount John A. Corotto (San Jose No. 22) contributed $100.

Grand President James A. Wilson was the recipient of a gavel and a clock, the former being presented by Past Grand President Edward J. Lynch on behalf of the Arlet Rowing Club of San Francisco, and the latter by Joe Rose on behalf of the San Francisco Extension of the Order Committee.

Valentine S. McClatchy (Pacific No. 10), executive secretary of the California Joint Immigration Committee and a recognized authority thereon, addressed the Grand Parlor on "Immigration." In the course of his remarks he referred to the influx of Mexicans and Filipinos, not wanted and not needed in California.

Past Grand President Dr. Charles W. Decker presided at the Memorial Session. Easton Kent was the soloist, and eulogies for deceased members were delivered by Past Grand President Judge John F. Davis, Past Grand President Lewis F. Byington and Burrell D. Neighbours (Ramona No. 109).

The Landmarks Committee agreed to assist the Parlor of Yuba and Sutter Counties to reconstruct the house of General John A. Sutter upon the site of Hock Farm, the first White settlement in Sutter County, 1842.

JUDGE CHARLES A. THOMPSON,
Taken into the fold of Senior Past Grands.

The Past Grand Presidents, with "Dean" John H. Grady presiding, had their annual reunion banquet at the Elks Club Tuesday night, and received into the fold Judge Charles A. Thompson.

Just following the calling to order of the Grand Parlor, W. B. O'Brien (Alameda No. 47) sang "I Love You, California," accompanied at the piano by Grand Trustee J. Hartley Russell.

Following his installation as Grand President, Charles L. Dodge was the recipient of a traveling bag and a basket of beautiful flowers, the former being presented by Sheriff R. R. #### AMADOR COUNTY NATIVES ORGANIZE FOR WORTH-WHILE PROJECT.

Sutter Creek (Amador County)—The Native Sons and Native Daughters Landmarks Committee of Amador County was organized here April 21 to perpetuate the memory of famous characters and historic deeds in the county by erecting monuments along the highways. D. V. Ramazzotti (Amador Parlor No. 17 N.S.G.W.) was elected permanent chairman.

The first monument, near Jackson, will mark the spot where Michael Tovey, early-day stage guard of the Mother Lode country, was murdered by bandits. It is hoped to have it ready for dedication Admission Day, September 9.

"Little drops of water, little grains of sand, make a mighty difference in the price of land."

(SPECIAL TO THE GRIZZLY BEAR.)

JACKSON (AMADOR COUNTY)—FOR THE first time in the history of the Order of Native Daughters of the Golden West, an open-air initiation of the Parlor of the Third Mother Lode Councils of Amador, Calaveras and Tuolumne was held in a secluded glade of the Calaveras Grove of Big Trees, Saturday, May 25.

The place selected for the initiation was admirably suited for the occasion. The outdoor room had an immense redwood stump for the president's station, and directly opposite, at the station of the first vice-president, stood a very large living sequoia, upon which were hung the charter of Ursula Parlor No. 1 and a picture of the Founder of the Order, Lily O. R. Dyer. At the past president's station was another beautiful sequoia, upon which was placed a bronzed replica of the Great Seal of State. Stuffed animals, a bear, squirrels, etc., were placed about in suitable position to add to the out-of-door realism.

Virtually surrounding the amphitheatre were the beautiful dogwood in full blossom; snow-flowers in gorgeous red were plentiful, and fully blown. The grandly glorious colors of the American flag floated to the breeze, and the banners of the Order completed a vivid picture. Above and about all were the mighty sequoias, the cedars, the giant firs and pines, majestic in their age-old dignity and beauty.

Fully two hundred Native Daughters were present, and when Grand President Dr. Louise C. Heilbron arrived with her escorts, Grand Trustee Sadie Brainard, Supervising Deputy Emma Boarman Wright of Jackson, and Miss Kelly of Sacramento, a hearty welcome was accorded the distinguished guest and her party. The officers who exemplified the ritualistic work were selected from the eleven Parlor of the three participating counties, and were as follows:

Senior past president, Ella Moyle (Anona); junior past president, Emma Smedley (Anona); past president, Mrs. Tiscornia (San Andreas); president, Gladys Noce (Amapola); first vice-president, Josephine M. Oneto (Ursula); second vice-president, Mrs. Marshal (Dardanelle); third vice-president, Edith Goodloe (Princess); recording secretaries, Marguerite Davis (Forrest), Emma Boarman Wright (Ursula), Rose Lloyd (San Andreas), Layton Dooley (Chispa), Nettie Whitto (Dardanelle); financial secretary, Viola James (California); treasurer, Annie Fithian (Chispa); marshals, Cynthia Phillips (Chispa), Mrs. Manuel (Ruby), Mrs. Danton (San Andreas), Lena Glavenich (Ursula); organists, Eva Stephens (Ruby), Louise McGuire (Chispa); trustees, Margaret Kirkwood (Ursula), Henrietta O'Neill (Ursula), Mary Albert (Princess); inside sentinel, Mary Gorgas (Dardanelle); outside sentinel, Lottie Carpenter (Chispa).

Supervising Deputy Emma Boarman Wright was in immediate personal charge of the arrangements prior to and during the ceremonial. In this labor she was especially assisted by District Deputy Winifred Lncot of Ursula Parlor, who accompanied her on two special trips to the grove to aid in the labor of clearing and adorning the meeting place. District Deputies Solena Marre of Amador County, Lila Bisbee of Calaveras County and Leonora App of Tuolumne County were present and rendered valuable assistance.

After the sixteen candidates were initiated, Grand President Heilbron gave an excellent address, speaking of the Order at large and the work being carried on; of the beautiful rendition of the initiatory work, in which each and every officer acquitted herself with letter perfection; and of the inspiration gained by attending the work as rendered in God's beautiful outdoor temple.

All then proceeded to the tables and spread their lunches, which became the absorbing feature of the ensuing hour. Then Supervising Deputy Wright addressed the assemblage and announced the following program: Address, Dr. Louise C. Heilbron, Grand President; poem, "Ask Us Why We Love Tuolumne," Mary Gorgas; remarks, Henrietta O'Neill; along educational lines, Sabra Greenough, superintendent Amador County schools; poem, "California," Lila Bisbee. The Grand President then concluded the ceremonies of the day with a benedictory message of love and appreciation, and thereafter the homeward journey was begun.

The greatest thanks are due to Edgar Whiteside, in charge of the grove during the illness of the lessee, Mrs. Job Whiteside, for the many courtesies extended, for the freedom of the grove accorded to the Native Daughters and their parties, and for his gracious co-operation in the strenuous labor of arrangement.

This occasion should make history for the Order, for the Parlor of the Mother Lode, where the Order had its birth, and for the Calaveras Grove, which should find itself the mecca for many similar fraternal gatherings. The location selected for the assembly is ideally situated for the purpose, and its sylvan simplicity and grandeur afford a fit setting for the inspiring ceremonial of the ritual.

Sweetpea Festival—Salinas, Monterey County, will have a Sweetpea Festival, June 7 and 8.

GREATER SANTA MONICA

ters in Santa Monica. He and his sons, W. S. Vawter and E. J. Vawter, built and operated the first general store, established a lumber yard and built a planing mill. Not satisfied to be just a merchant, W. D. Vawter served as postmaster for a number of years. Later he organized the First National Bank of Santa Monica, the first bank to serve the city. His sons were active for many years in the city's affairs, the older as one of the trustees, and assisted in its growth by taking part in the establishment of many of its businesses.

For several years the agitation for a wharf at Santa Monica had run rampant. Looking toward its erection, companies were formed, private parties petitioned for franchises, elections were held to vote bonds, all of which were defeated, and the "Outlook's" editorials campaigned for a wharf. The question was finally settled in August 1891, without consulting the opinions of Santa Monicans, when it was learned that C. P. Huntington had decided to build a wharf at Santa Monica.

Up to 1891 the Santa Monica schools had included only the grammar grades. At this time a high school was established and its first class was graduated in 1894. Santa Monica's school buildings, equipment and curricula are to this sea harbor had been discussed. With the increase in commercial importance of Southern California, it was apparent that the National Government must assist in creating a harbor on this coast. After the expansion of the eighties the question was pushed in Washington, resulting in the visit of many distinguished members of the commerce committee of the United States Senate to California.

In all his years of editorship of the "Outlook," L. T. Fisher had made an exhaustive study of the harbor facilities at Santa Monica and was also familiar with the conditions at Wilmington. In his editorials he stressed the advantages of Santa Monica as a setting for a harbor and bore out his statements with facts. In 1889 the United States Senate Committee of Commerce visited San Pedro and Santa Monica and were more favorably impressed with Santa Monica because of its more advantageous location. It was eight miles nearer Los Angeles, it was naturally more protected, and the construction materials could be obtained more easily at a lower cost. Congress appropriated $5,000 to cover the expense of preparing a project for a deep-sea harbor on the California coast to be located between Points Dume and Capistrano. A board of engineers of the War Department was appointed, two of whom had been interested ing heated and involved various private interests, corporations and cities, including Los Angeles. For a while in 1896 it looked as though Santa Monica would get the harbor, but the opposition was so strong that in compromise the full appropriation was made by Congress, but a new board was appointed to determine the final location. The decision of this board favored San Pedro, largely because of the great amount of work already completed there, and the fact that it would not be practicable for the government to maintain two harbors. Santa Monicans took this final decision with as much grace as possible, gave up their hopes to attain commercial prominence, and devoted all further efforts toward developing the city as a resort town.

April 1, 1896, was celebrated by what some called another "Sherman's March to the Sea." Gen. M. H. Sherman of the Pasadena and Pacific Road had built an electric line to Santa Monica, providing the city with a real transportation line at last. The arrival of the first car was an occasion of importance. Buildings were decorated, schools were closed at noon, and the entire population turned out for the event. In May of the same year the first police department was organized and two policemen appointed to keep law and order in the town. With the spread of Santa Monica's reputation as a city of beauty, charm and gaiety, many conventions were held there. In September 1898 Santa Monica was entertaining three political conventions at the same time: the Democratic, the Silver day acknowledged to be as fine as any city of its size in the country.

About this time the city received two important donations: Messrs. Jones and Baker deeded the bluff and city park to the town, and the W. C. T. U. turned over its library of eight hundred volumes to be maintained as a library by the city. In September 1893 twelve incandescent electric lights were turned on the streets for the first time.

Fresh excitement over a possible harbor attended the opening of the year 1895. As early as 1875, when the first wharf was built in Santa Monica, the possibility of constructing a deep-in the harbor constructions at San Pedro for some time, and it was felt that its decision in favor of San Pedro, which was submitted to Congress in December 1891, was not an unprejudiced one. When the matter was again brought before the government it was thrown aside and a new board of five engineers authorized to examine the possibilities and advantages of both proposed sites.

In September 1892 this board arrived in Los Angeles. It seems to have been influenced by the fact that a head of one of the departments represented on the board had large interests in San Pedro. The harbor campaigns were becom-

Republican and the Peoples parties.

With the growth of South Santa Monica, in 1900 came the agitation for division of the south from the north side. The citizens of the former were not satisfied with their representation in the city's government and felt that they had not received their share of improvements, so they proposed to withdraw from the corporation and be governed by the Los Angeles County Board of Supervisors, under which government they would be able to provide their own light and water supply. When the matter came to a vote, however, there was a decided majority recorded against division.

Santa Monica had long been in need of a city hall, but it was not until November 19, 1901, that bonds were voted for that purpose. After a strenuous battle between the many factions, the site at Oregon and Fourth was chosen. In the same year the first large public auditorium was erected in connection with the North Beach bathhouse.

In 1902 the question of reorganization of Santa Monica's form of government was again considered. About two years before it became evident that the affairs of the city could be more effectively handled under a new form of government, and the subject of obtaining a charter and becoming a city of the fifth rank was taken up. In order to qualify as a city of that rank, it was necessary to have a population of at least 3,000. Citizens of the opposition insisted that the city did not have that many inhabitants. The board of trustees now took a census, which bore out this contention, showing a population of 2,717.

In the meantime, the Good Government League, which had been organized the year before by a number of public-spirited men for the purpose of keeping a check on municipal matters, claimed that this census was inaccurate and caused a new census to be taken. It is certain that no one was missed, for the census showed that there were 3,260 inhabitants. The following election resulted in a decided victory for the league and progressive citizens in general, although the new government did not go into effect until 1903. The organization of a new board under the charter and the occupation of the new city hall lent a new impetus to the city's development.

Still the talk of division and the incorporation of South Santa Monica into a town called "Ocean Park" continued. Many of the new residents who had helped to build up that community and its improvements without much help from Santa Monica desired to enjoy the fruits of their prosperity alone. The rapid growth of the last few years had attracted many new settlers who did not know of the previous attempt to withdraw from the parent city. The older inhabitants, however, had contributed toward the improvement of Santa Monica and did not care to repeat that contribution for a new city. Another petition was circulated, but it was never presented and the agitation gradually died out. It was hoped that this would bring about a feeling of unity and faith in "Greater Santa Monica."

By 1905 Santa Monica had passed forever from the class of a country town to a city, and South Santa Monica was taking on the appearance and activity of a metropolis. Land which only a few years before had been the waving fields of barley of the old Spanish land grants, was rapidly being subdivided and transformed into suburban homesites. Many improvements were under way, including a Carnegie library and a proposed home for the Merchants National Bank, then being formed. The consolidation of the United Electric, Gas and Power Company with the Edison Company this year provided Santa Monica with public utilities of a metropolitan class.

For a number of years, the sewer system and wharf questions had vied with each other for a solution. The need for a sewer system had become so acute in 1905 that something had to be done. Ocean Park was still using the Santa Monica outfall sewer. The new city was making desperate efforts to find a solution for the situation, but every proposal had been blocked, so it continued to depend on Santa Monica's facilities. There was soon a reversal of conditions. Santa Monica had required a rental from Ocean Park and, when it was not paid, started suit. Soon after this a tremendous storm changed the color of things by causing breaks in the pipes and nearly destroying the sewer pier. The discharge of the sewage near the almost completed Ocean Park bathhouse proved menacing to its success.

The newly incorporated town of Ocean Park had already voted bonds for a septic tank and sewer system, and in order to save the situation, offered Santa Monica the use of its septic tank until that city could care for its own sewage. In the meantime, Santa Monica had voted bonds for a sewer system, but the amount was afterward considered insufficient for the purpose and it continued to depend upon Ocean Park's system. The new septic tank failed to deodorize the sewage and a bitter fight took place which nearly succeeded in disincorporating the City of Ocean Park, and left Santa Monica in the lurch, since the courts ordered that city to discontinue the use of the Ocean Park mains while it still had no means of caring for its own sewage. The fight continued until September 1907 when a suitable location for a septic tank and outfall system was decided upon, which proved satisfactory to every one.

With the increased need of schools in Santa Monica came the thought of expansion. A plan of annexation was presented to the people in the district between Eighth and Marine streets to Twenty-seventh and Montana avenues, and an election held March 29, 1905, resulted in an addition to the city which nearly doubled its size. New schools were provided, but the expansion in territory and population was still not sufficient. It was then suggested that a new form of city government would provide a more advantageous type of government, which would require the division of the city into wards and allow the people to govern themselves in accordance with their own particular needs.

In order to obtain such a charter, a population of 3,500 was required, so a new census was taken which showed a population of 7,208. The charter was presented to the people and adopted March 28, 1906. At the same time the territory known as the "Palisades" was annexed to the city. Santa Monica, with her new city charter, an assessment increase of from $3,830,677 in 1905 to $6,523,186 in 1906, a rapidly growing population, excellent school facilities, some of the best roads and beautiful buildings in the country, was now on her way to become a city of distinction.

A new brick manufacturing plant was built in Santa Monica at this time by an Eastern corporation, the Simmons Brick Company, and to this new company and the Los Angeles Pressed Brick Company, which had been established in Santa Monica for a number of years, were awarded the contract for furnishing 18,000,000 bricks to be used in the construction of the Los Angeles outfall sewer. Another company was organizing for the purpose of utilizing the Santa Monica clays in the making of fine pottery, as it had been proved that they were of unusual quality.

Santa Monica had, indeed, become a metropolis. June 4, 1905, the postoffice was robbed of more than $3,000 worth of cash, stamps and registered mail, and this was only one of a series of bold robberies to occur during the summer.

While not fulfilling the dreams of her earliest settlers in becoming a commercial center, Santa Monica has gained fame and renown as a city of unrivaled scenery, beautiful homesites and cultural advantages of all kinds.

dise. Where might have ridden ugly lumber schooners, today ride the trim, graceful yachts of the many wealthy residents of Santa Monica. The Crescent Yacht Club is but one of a number of organizations supporting boat piers along the waterfront. From the yachtman's standpoint, the close proximity of the Santa Barbara Channel Islands, Catalina Island, Ensenada and Mexican waters, lends a peculiar charm to Santa Monica.

Here where Indians once fished with their nets, is now the largest municipally-owned fishing pier in the world. In fact, every marine sport is available at Santa Monica and Ocean Park. Aquaplaning, surf-board riding, motor boating, yacht racing are all part of the daily program.

In this city where once social activities were limited to an occasional fiesta, abound numerous and varied clubs: Santa Monica Bay Women's Club, Bay Cities Music Association, Community Theatre Guild, Horticultural Society, Writer Club and hook clubs for the more mentally inclined. Close by is the Brentwood Country Club and the Los Angeles Country Club, while under construction is an eighteen-hole municipal golf course near Clover Field. A half-dozen other famous golf courses are within fifteen miles of Santa Monica.

Where once gay caballeros rode into the mountains of the great far-reaching Spanish grants, today residents of this gracious city penetrate on bridle paths, the variety and picturesqueness of which is not equaled in the length and breadth of the Golden State.

Every month of the year the citizens of Santa Monica may play at whatever sport their fancies may desire. For twenty years the municipal park on Wilshire boulevard has been improved and added to, until today fine croquet, tennis and horseshoe courts are in constant use by those who care for the less-strenuous sports.

Where once the stagecoach groaned to a halt with the mail, and a gala event was the squeaking passage of the first streetcar through Santa Monica, today two hundred interurban trains make daily calls.

Where once the dons held sway, is now a strip of the most varied and interesting beach in the United States. Five piers, fifteen to twenty beach clubs, enclosed plunges, open-air plunges and every conceivable form of indoor and outdoor amusement now attract to Santa Monica an astonishing tourist and resident population, the size of which would have staggered even the optimistic Messrs. Jones, Fisher and Vawter. It has been conservatively estimated that as many as 200,000 visitors have been entertained in one day on the Santa Monica and Ocean Park beaches.

Once it was planned that Santa Monica should thrive among tall chimneys, amid the clatter and grind of machinery, and the pulse of industry. Once that was the vision. Today the picture is quite different. Above the long stretches of beach, on the hillsides, tier after tier of beautiful homes have been built, furnishing endless vistas of colorful Spanish and California architecture. Large private estates along the Riviera, small vine-covered hungalows nestling in the mountain canyons—all house people who find it a gracious caprice of fortune that the harbor did go elsewhere, leaving this rich natural playground for Santa Monica's contented residents.

From a village where once a church met above a hardware store to a city of sixteen schools and twenty-two churches—that growth has taken little more than half a century.

Thus, today, Santa Monica nestles in the foothills, and with the Pacific at her feet, sighs with contentment at the fact that to her shores have come, not the factories, but the homes.

John L. S. Cooke

(SECRETARY,
SANTA MONICA-OCEAN PARK
CHAMBER OF COMMERCE.)

CLAIMED BY ITS LOYAL RESIDENTS as being the most favored spot in all America, the Santa Monica Bay district holds a charm that makes good many of the assertions of its people. It is indeed one of the most beautiful districts in the United States and is generally recognized at home and abroad as one of the most delightful oceanside districts of the Western Hemisphere. Its magnificent palisades, bordering the mighty Pacific, are justly famed for their beauty, and the district possesses as equal and delightful a climate as can be found anywhere.

There is little difference between winter and summer—it is never too hot, never too cold. The district is represented in the Native Sons of the Golden West by Santa Monica Bay Parlor No. 267, an organization of live and progressive men of whom California can justly be proud. This organization, under the leadership of President Clarence E. Webb of Santa Monica and Secretary John Smith of Venice, is a wide-awake and progressive body, the membership of which pride themselves on being residents of the Santa Monica district.

Santa Monica actually has everything for which Southern California is famous. For the last fifty years it has represented the ideal type of home environment and outdoor living that has literally brought hundreds of thousands of people to take up permanent residence along the shores of the Pacific Ocean.

Somehow or other, Santa Monica has always maintained its own "personality," due largely to its close proximity to the mountains, to the ocean and to the beaches and, more especially, to the pleasant social background of open-air sport and recreation for which this city has been known for more than three generations. It is only natural, therefore, that Santa Monica has succeeded in preserving its identity and its distinction in many things associated with a higher type of living and accomplishment.

Santa Monica has the largest municipally-owned fishing pier in the world, and every day in the year the side rails of this famous landmark are lined with fishermen of all ages. Public yachts and fishing boats making daily trips, cater to a patronage of residents and visitors who find here that sport is unexcelled anywhere on the southern coast. Its favorable climate makes Southern California the mecca of the yachtsman. Northward to Santa Barbara and the Channel Islands, westward to magic Catalina, southward to San Diego and Ensenada, Mexico, yachting is possible any day in the year.

Bad weather is very rare, sudden storms are unheard of and rain and fog are noted during certain months only. The Crescent Bay Yacht Club, the first of the many similar institutions that have come into completion in the last few years, has its fine club building on the ocean shore near the mouth of Santa Monica Canyon.

Motor boating, surf riding, aquaplaning, swimming—in fact, every known marine sport,—is enjoyed by people in all walks of life along the entire length of Santa Monica Bay.

The country clubs have a membership not only of men and women of leisure, but include also many business and professional men of Los Angeles and vicinity. The municipal golf links, near Clover Field, is one of the finest courses in the southland, and within a radius of ten or fifteen miles from Santa Monica are half a dozen more clubs which have already made golfing history in California. It is only natural that the social activities of the city are legion; to mention a few, Santa Monica Bay Women's Club, Bay Cities Music Association, Community Theater Guild, Horticultural Society, Writers' Club, various book clubs, etc. All these organizations flourish, as do also the Kiwanis, Exchange, Lions, Rotary, Optimist and other businessmen's clubs. Church societies of all creeds are represented, and various lodges thrive in several parts of the city.

If horseback riding were the only sport available, it would still be worth much to participate in the delights of this horseman's paradise. The Uplifters' fine polo field borders on Beverly boulevard where it skirts the rim of Santa Monica Canyon, and the public is often permitted to view, from the above, some of the well-contested games for which this field is famous. Any time, any day, the bridle paths in the higher levels of the Santa Monica Mountains disclose such magnificent ocean and mountain scenery as defies camera and pen.

Will Rogers of screen fame, with all his wealth and with all Southern California to choose from, finds these scenic hillsides the local spot for his palatial ranch and private polo field. Altogether, Santa Monica is unique as a home place for the sportsman—climate, location and scenery are all ideal.

For twenty years the municipal park on Wilshire boulevard has provided recreational facilities unequalled in any other city of its size in America. Here the landscape gardener has created a community playground in daily use. The comfortable seats beneath the shade trees, where grownups may rest or read, are never empty, summer or winter. In addition to the excellent and well-patronized courts in the municipal park, there are other public and private courts, the most noteworthy of which is at Clover Field. Nearby also are archery and trapshooting ranges, and other provisions for outdoor sports are included in the general plan of Recreation Center. There is also a government aeroplane landing field, used also for commercial and pleasure purposes. It has been well said that Santa Monica is the sports capital of the southwest.

Between Las Flores Canyon, north of Santa Monica, and the southern boundary of Venice, is a fifteen-mile strip of beach that provides a more varied program of sports and amusements than can be found anywhere on the California coast. Piers with every resort attraction are available. Some fifteen or twenty new beach clubs offer every facility for social enjoyment on the shore and in the ocean.

Amusement palaces, enclosed plunges, concert balls, auditoriums, ballrooms, a bandstand, etc., are all under proper supervision and all supply entertainment for all tastes and all ages.

More than a mile of the beach is city property and reserved forever for the use of the public. City authorities publish the fact that upwards of 200,000 visitors in a single day have been entertained on the "pike" or on the beaches of Greater Santa Monica, the Palisades City.

UNIFYING OF WORK GOAL OF SANTA BARBARA NATIVE DAUGHTERS.

Santa Barbara—Reina del Mar Parlor No. 126 N.D.G.W. celebrated the close of its twenty-eighth year by the completion of the Loyalty Pledge to the Native Daughter Home of $5 per member, totaling more than $500 for the Parlor. This money was earned by individual members in accordance with the plan suggested at the last Grand Parlor by Past Grand President Grace S. Stoermer. The Parlor's experience in fulfilling this obligation has been particularly happy. Talents never before turned to financial account were ferreted out and stirred into action, with the result that Miss Stoermer's plan was put into literal effect.

The Parlor's anniversary party was combined with a card party and buffet supper, at which the last group of members completed their pledges. In addition to the efforts of individual members, the success of the money-raising plan was due to the unique suggestions of the finance committee: District Deputy Mrs. William R. Vick, Past President Vera Pacheco, President Irene Quinn, Vice-president Mrs. John Mitchell, Past President Amelia Myers and Supervising Deputy Anna McCaughey.

During the past year Reina del Mar has carried out a tremendous program along social service and historical lines. This was made possible through its interlocking with existing organizations within the community. Rather than maintain a separate program, the Parlor identified itself with the different interests brought into the Parlor through individual members, all of whom are associated with some community organization or undertaking. All of these interests receive the co-operation of Reina del Mar, which has set for its goal the unifying of organization work to prevent overlapping and waste of time and expenditure.

CELEBRATION SAN DIEGO'S ANNIVERSARY TO BE IMPOSING EVENT.

Celebration of the one hundred and sixtieth anniversary of the founding of San Diego will be sponsored by the San Diego Historical Society in connection with the dedication of the Junipero Serra Museum in Presidio Hill Park July 16.

In the eighty-three years since American occupancy of California, little has been done to commemorate the fact that Presidio Hill is the site of the first settlement of civilization in California.

The high feature of the celebration will be the dedication of Presidio Hill as a historic park. The thirty acres include the site of the first presidio and mission, the oldest palm in California, and Fort Stockton, an impressive landmark of the Mexican war.

At the same time there will be dedicated a massive structure, built in the best style of the old missions, as a monument to Junipero Serra, founder of the California missions.

SPECULATION NOT APPROVED OF BY LOS ANGELES BANKER.

On recommendation of the executive committee, directors of the Citizens National Trust and Savings Bank May 10 approved a plan to reduce the par value of the bank's stock from $100 to $20 per share. As the stock is now on a 20 percent basis the new shares will therefore earn at the rate of $1 per quarter or $4 a year. By making the split of 5 to 1, fractional dividends will be avoided.

"This action," says President J. Dabney Day, "should not be interpreted as indicating approval of speculation in bank stocks. The executive committee in recommending this change have not been thinking in terms of market quotations. They feel, however, that the reduction in par value to a point where wider distribution can be made is a beneficial change, and it follows the general trend among many of the strongest banks throughout the country."

CATALINA (MINNA MCGARVEY.)

There's many a Treasure Island
In pages of Romance,
Where buried gold and riches
Are found by the bold—perchance.

But out in the blue Pacific Fair Catalina lies,
And flings her treasure freely
From sea, and the earth and skies.

It glitters in sapphire waters
Where silver fishes leap
To flaunt their shining beauty
Then flash to the emerald deep.

Her shells are imprisoned rainbows
Of coral, jade and pearl,
Each ground by rolling breakers
To shimmering conch and curl.

And over it all the brilliance
Of azure skies that smile
On jeweled Catalina,
A fathomless Treasure Isle.

FORTY-THIRD N.D.G.W. GRAND PARLOR

(CLARENCE M. HUNT.)

ESTHER R. SULLIVAN OF MARYSVILLE, Yuba County, affiliated with Marysville Parlor No. 162, was elected and installed as Grand President of the Order of Native Daughters of the Golden West at the Forty-third Grand Parlor, in session at Santa Cruz City, June 17, 18, 19 and 20. One of the first official acts of Grand President Sullivan was to dispatch the following message to the Subordinate Parlor:

"Marysville, California.
"July 1, 1929.

"To the Officers and Members of Subordinate Parlor, Native Daughters of the Golden West—Dear Sisters: As your Grand President, I extend to you my cordial greetings for a year of co-operation and service, dedicated to the principles and projects of our Order. This accomplishment depends on the united efforts of each sister.

"My able predecessors have given unsurprisingly of their time and energy to build up an organization which promotes loyalty, friendship and harmony. It is my desire to continue these objectives.

"Our Order should be the largest and strongest woman's fraternal organization in this state. An increased membership means increased interest and increased finances. This can be attained if each sister exerts her personal influence to add to her Parlor's membership. Appoint an active membership committee, and double your Parlor's membership with representative California women.

"Publicity is essential. Instruct your publicity committee to give due publicity to all Parlor activities. In this way your Parlor will be recognized as a special factor in your community life. We can attract the best women of our state to our Order, if they are familiar with our worthwhile projects, presented to them by our members or through press publicity.

"Let us treasure the history of our state, preserving in memory the deeds of the Pioneer Men and Women who gave so freely of their time and sacrificed in many ways to develop the California of today. On us depends the California of the future.

"As an intelligent people, we must promote education, loyalty, and a citizenship which will insure a prosperous, progressive and patriotic California.

"The saving of time and finance is an important factor in our fraternal life, so please accept the dates assigned for official visits.

"In planning my work for the coming term, I realize that our future success depends on the co-operation and service that we render to each other and to our Order. By our united efforts, let us add constructive work along every line of endeavor, stimulating prosperity and success for our noble Order, the Native Daughters of the Golden West.

"Sincerely and Fraternally yours in P.D.F.A.,
"ESTHER R. SULLIVAN,
"Grand President, N.D.G.W."

PROCEEDINGS

The Forty-third Grand Parlor was presided over by Grand President Dr. Louise C. Heilbron. Much of the time was devoted to the reports of grand officers and committees, embodying, most of all, matters which previously had been given due publicity in The Grizzly Bear. During her term, Grand President Heilbron traveled 35,000 miles in the interest of the Order. Her report, presented immediately following the formal opening of the Grand Parlor, dealt at length with her activities and the projects of the Order and contained many recommendations. In conclusion, she said:

"My view for the future throughout the state is for great achievement. The future life of our Order depends on continued work with our projects. Remember, that to find a friend and to keep a friend is more than golden wealth, but the best worth-while life for each and every one of us is to so live and work today that if there is no dawn of day tomorrow we will have no regrets. We tarry here but a little while in this great, wonderful world. The world today is for us to enjoy, for who, but our Infinite Father, knows what world will find us an occupant tomorrow. Remember, it is but too human to err, or make mistakes; so if, by word or deed, your Grand President mistakes have been made, kindly please remember they were of the head and not of the heart." A rising vote of thanks was given the Grand President for her splendid report.

ESTHER R. SULLIVAN OF MARYSVILLE,
NEWLY ELECTED GRAND PRESIDENT N.D.G.W.

GRAND OFFICERS' REPORTS.

The report of Grand Secretary Sallie R. Thaler was a record of the numerous transactions of that office. Grand Parlor receipts for the year were $16,957.02 and expenditures $16,210.93. June 1 the General Fund had $16,800.86, including $12,307.41 cash. During the year 116 members of the Order passed away.

The report of Grand Treasurer Susie K. Christ showed the condition of Grand Parlor funds, as follows: General—Balance June 1, 1928, $11,561.02; year's receipts $16,957.02; year's expenditures, $16,210.63; cash balance June 1, 1929, $12,307.41. Death Benefit—Balance June 1, 1928, $2,352.62; year's receipts, $6,868.85; year's expenditures, $8,175.00; cash balance June 1, 1929, $1,046.47.

June 1, 1929, there was $444.17 in the Mills College Scholarship Fund, $6,031.67 in the Redwood Memorial Grove Fund, and $490.19 in the University Scholarships Fund. Total receipts of $309.56 for the restoration of Santa Clara Mission were disbursed February 15, 1929.

COMMITTEE REPORTS.

The Home Committee reported in detail through Past Grand President Dr. Mariana Bertola, the permanent chairman, Past Grand President Emma Gruber-Foley, the secretary, and Jennie Greene, the treasurer. "I thank my ever-faithful committee and all of our Subordinate Parlor for their splendid support," said Dr. Bertola. "Especially do I thank Grand President Heilbron for her never-failing interest and the master stroke that is to lay low the mortgage—the Loyalty Pledge. If every member earns five dollars for this pledge the mortgage will be wiped out. I hope that at the next Grand Parlor we will have a big bonfire and then, with appropriate ceremonies, we will burn the mortgage." Past Grand President Grace S. Stoermer, chairman of the Home's sub-committee on finance, reported that, to June 17, 1929, $10,747.91 had come in from the Loyalty Pledge.

Reporting for the Redwood Memorial Grove Committee, Past Grand President Anna L. Monroe, chairman, said a total of $6,031.27 had been received. April 29, 1929, the California State Park Commission agreed, by resolution, to match this contribution with an equal amount, and to use the whole sum to acquire an outstanding grove of redwoods in Humboldt County to be officially designated Native Daughters of the Golden West Grove. The trees therein will be named in honor of those designated by the Subordinate Parlor and the individual members of the Order contributing to the fund.

The Americanization Committee, through Past Grand President Catherine E. Gloster, chairman, told of the wonderful work being done by the Subordinate Parlor along that line.

Past Grand President Stella Finkeldey, chairman, reporting for the Veterans Welfare Committee, said the $184.50 contributed by Subordinate Parlor had been used to convey cheer, in the way of useful gifts, to veterans in various hospitals. Many Parlor are very active in this work and submitted detailed reports.

Chairman Florence Dodson-Schoneman recorded the history and landmarks activities of the Subordinate Parlor in her report for California History Committee. She also suggested the contribution of funds for the restoration of San Antonio de Padua Mission in Monterey County, founded July 14, 1771.

The State of the Order Committee, Past Grand President Grace S. Stoermer chairman, highly commended "the intelligent and comprehensive report presented by Grand President Dr. Louise C. Heilbron, especially her enthusiastic endeavor to bring to completion the liquidation of the indebtedness on the Native Daughter Home and the method of sponsoring the Loyalty Pledge. We more than appreciate her ever alertness to current events that brought recognition to the Order, the outstanding one being the tribute to the First Lady of the Land, Mrs. Lou Henry Hoover. We heartily endorse the adoption of the slogan, 'A Member a Year'."

Mary E. Brusie, for sixteen years the secretary and the directing head of the N.S.G.W. and N.D.G.W. Central Homeless Children Committee, by asking questions pertaining to the work had the assistance of the whole Grand Parlor in the presentation of the report for that committee. Some of "our children" aided, too, with recitations and musical numbers. And in addition, Miss Brusie had on hand an exhibit of beautiful baby-things of all descriptions made and contributed by Subordinate Parlor for the good of a most worthy cause.

UNIVERSITY SCHOLARSHIPS AWARDED.

On recommendation of the then Grand President, Sue J. Irwin, the Fortieth (Sacramento 1926) Grand Parlor enacted legislation providing for the granting of two scholarships—in addition to the Mills College Scholarship—annually to under-graduate university students of "B" grade who are members of the Order.

The first awards of these two additional scholarships were made at the Santa Cruz Grand Parlor—to Evelyn Towne, affiliated with Miocene Parlor No. 228 (Taft), at the University of California (Berkeley), and to Marvel Thomas, affiliated with Los Angeles Parlor No. 124, at the University of California at Los Angeles.

LEGISLATION ENACTED.

Providing that a delegate or alternate to the Grand Parlor must be a present or a past officer of a Subordinate Parlor; except in the case of a Parlor established less than a year, when any member is eligible.

Providing that the Grand President shall appoint no member of a Subordinate Parlor as a district deputy grand president unless said member be a past president of the Parlor.

A few minor changes were made in the Initiatory Ritual and the Manual of Instructions.

Authority was given the Grand President to appoint a special committee to arrange for the broadcasting of bi-monthly radio programs, the same to embrace an address on projects of the Order.

A rising vote of thanks was given the election board—Past Grand Presidents Ariana W. Stirling and Olive Bedford-Matlock, Martha Marshall (Dardanelle Parlor No. 66), Mildred Brant (Berkeley Parlor No. 150) and Hazel Hansen (Verdugo Parlor No. 240)—for expeditious counting of the ballots.

A budget of $13,890, including $3,085 for Santa Cruz mileage and $1,200 for the Grand President's contingent fund, was approved, and a per capita tax of $1.00, payable semi-annually, was voted. In addition, the usual 50-cent assessment for the Home, payable in October, was levied.

The Grand President and the Board of Grand Trustees were authorized to complete the arrangements for the acquirement of a grove of redwoods in Humboldt County.

The selection of a meeting-place for the Forty-fourth (1930) Grand Parlor was left to the Grand President and the Board of Grand Officers. Yosemite Valley, San Francisco and Santa Cruz were suggested.

A letter of congratulation was ordered sent the Board of Regents of the University of California for selecting as president of the university a native-born Californian, Robert Gordon Sproule.

A letter of appreciation for his valuable research accomplishment was ordered sent Dr. Mathew Stirling, and the Grand Parlor rose to honor his mother, Past Grand President Ariana W. Stirling.

A letter of appreciation was ordered sent George W. Marston of San Diego for erecting a historical museum, surrounded by a park, upon the site, in San Diego City, of the first mission and presidio in California.

Approval was given the efforts of the Ina Coolbrith Circle to have a peak in the high Sierra named in honor of the lately deceased poet laureate of California, Ina Coolbrith.

Mary E. Brusie (Argonaut Parlor No. 166), whose devotion to the best interests of childhood has endeared her to a host of happy children and devoted parents, was given a rising vote of endorsement for her splendid work as secretary of the N.S.G.W. and N.D.G.W. Central Homeless Children Committee.

First prize of $100 was awarded Californiana No. 247 for being the first Parlor to respond 100 percent to the Loyalty Pledge, and second prize of $50 went to Piedmont Parlor No. 120.

No rent being charged for the Grand Parlor meeting-place, the $300 provided for that expense was voted the hostess Parlor, Santa Cruz No. 26, for its Loyalty Pledge.

The special Pioneer Roster and Relics Committee was empowered to have copied, at Grand Parlor expense, the songs of pioneer days for preservation.

Thanks were voted Grand President Dr. Louise C. Heilbron for her gracious courtesy, the press for publicity, Santa Cruz Parlor No. 26 for hospitality extended, and to all those who, through co-operation, aided in making the session a pronounced success.

NOTES OF THE SESSION.

Past Grand President Carrie Roesch-Durham, who has attended every Grand Parlor, was again the chairman of the Credentials Committee.

The opening day, June 17, being the ninety-seventh anniversary of the writing of "America" by Samuel Francis Smith, at the suggestion of Past Grand President Alison F. Watt the Grand Parlor joined in singing the national anthem.

Grand President Heilbron announced that Presidio Parlor No. 148 (San Francisco) had accomplished more veterans' welfare work outside of California than any other Parlor.

Fraternal greetings on behalf of the Order of Native Sons of the Golden West were extended, in person, by Grand President Charles L. Dodge, Grand Secretary John T. Regan and Grand Trustee Charles A. Koenig. The former presented a check for the $350 collected at the Native Son Grand Parlor in May for the purchase of ornamental iron gates at the entrance to the Native Daughter Home in San Francisco.

Mayor Fred Swanton extended greetings on behalf of Santa Cruz City, and E. S. Slack delivered an address on "Intimate Prison Work at San Quentin."

Community singing directed by Clara A. Gairaud (Vendome Parlor No. 100) was a daily feature of the session, and Lois Johnson (Lugonia Parlor No. 241) and Estelle M. Evans (Antioch Parlor No. 223) favored with vocal selections.

Every afternoon Santa Cruz Parlor No. 26, which proved a delightful and thoughtful hostess, served refreshments. Particularly active in dispensing hospitality were Past Grand President Stella Finkeldey, Secretary May L. Williamson and Anna M. Linscott, members of that Parlor.

GERM OF ENTHUSIASM, SET AFLOAT, WILL SPREAD AFIELD AND BRING RESULTS

"PUBLICITY HAS BEEN DEFINED AS the state of being open to the observation of a community," said Past Grand President Bertha A. Briggs, chairman Publicity Committee, in her report to the Santa Cruz Grand Parlor. "With this thought in mind and with the definite purpose of permitting the public to share in and enjoy our privileges and pleasures rather than to limit them to our own selfish interests, our publicity committee, early in the official year, started out with well-organized procedure, working on an objective basis. With the entire state divided into districts, each committee member assumed charge of a designated group of Parlors in whose membership she put forth every effort to further strengthen an already vivid conception of the worthwhileness of our Order. In this way was formed a chain of active and faithful workers to go forth and tell our story to the world. It is our earnest belief that this well-defined program of constructive effort has tended to further insure the strength of our great organization, its success depending entirely upon the spirit and personnel of the individual groups.

"Each having responsibilities greater than the gratification of mere local objectives, every Parlor has been urged to reach out and avail itself of contacts with other groups—for the accomplishments of one affect every other to a greater or a lesser degree, irrespective of location. No organization can ever be truly great and strong if it attains only what is expected of it—it must establish even higher ideals and reach above the level of expectation. Our horizon is not stationary—it broadens from year to year—and our real strength lies in the spirit which finds expression in our maxims.

"The work of the Publicity Committee is no simple task—there is a vast deal of machinery to be kept in motion. Goethe has said, 'The chord that wakes in kindred hearts a tone must first be tuned and vibrate in our own.' During the past year, your committee has tried to strike the chord of universal interest. In our endeavor to gain goodwill, we have tried to herald the fact that our Order deserves it. We have tried to build up and keep the confidence of the public by giving them an opportunity to broaden their vision as to our unlimited power for good. We have tried to establish the conviction that our Order of Native Daughters of the Golden West is not in an experimental stage, but that we have behind us a record of stability and of splendid achievements.

The mother, Mrs. Mary Houlihan (Stirling Parlor No. 146), of Estelle M. Evans came from Pittsburg, Contra Costa County, in an airplane piloted by her brother, William Houlihan (Diamond Parlor No. 246 N.S.G.W.), to witness her installation as Grand Vice-president.

Preceding the formal opening of the Grand Parlor an innovation was introduced, the grand officers, gowned in white and carrying baskets of flowers presented by Grand President Dr. Louise C. Heilbron, marching to their several stations.

Lily O. Reichling-Dryer, Founder of the Order, Dr. Eva R. Rasmussen, Past Grand President, Alice H. Dougherty, former Grand Secretary, and Jennie Greene (Buena Vista Parlor No. 63), member of the first Board of Relief and now treasurer of the Home Committee, were among those in attendance.

There were several dinner parties, including: The grand officers, at which Grand President Dr. Louise C. Heilbron was hostess; representatives of the Subordinate Parlors instituted by Emma Lou Humphrey when she was Grand President; members of the Grand Parlor Home Committee; representatives of Subordinate Parlors in various districts of the state.

Quantities of flowers and numerous gifts were presented, among the latter being the Grand Parlor official diamond and ruby ring, presented to Dr. Louise C. Heilbron, retiring Grand President, just preceding the close of the session.

President Sterling of Woodland Parlor No. 90 went home with the beautiful doll disposed of by San Diego Parlor No. 208 for the benefit of the Home.

The new Board of Grand Trustees met immediately after adjournment of the Grand Parlor and elected Irma W. Laird as chairman, and Anna Mixon-Armstrong as secretary.

GRAND OFFICERS ELECTED.

At the election for grand officers, 390 ballots were cast and the following were selected:

"The principles which form the basis of our movement—of women united in the ideals of service to Native Land—are principles which we have made it our purpose to urge on. In our work, we must look down the vista of five or ten years from today and guide our action by what we desire our Order to be at that distant date. We must build the structure keeping with the foundation which has been laid broad and deep.

"It is for you and for me to express our desire for fraternal advancement in terms of human helpfulness and to make over public opinion to buoy us up to loftier aspirations. If we set the germ of enthusiasm afloat in our midst, carrying it in our attitude at all times, it will spread far afield and bring spontaneous results—the vital things that pay dividends.

"We have so very much of which we should be proud. Consequently, we should not fear that, in our publicity work, we may be judged as propagandists. The world is always more or less in an age of propaganda, which is, after all, nothing but an attempt to get over our ideas to others. We have in the past, and we should in the future, engage in propaganda to that extent and in that way and in that spirit.

"In order to increase our numbers, carry out our projects to successful conclusion and obtain the support of those outside our ranks, it is most important that we must not allow the public to be uninstructed. We must be public-minded at all times; we must recognize publicity as a power and an indispensable adjunct to our growth and advancement—as a real friend-maker. Given the great force which promotes understanding and goodwill, the ultimate power of publicity and the extent of its development is not easily comprehended.

"The attitude of each and every one of us has a strong influence upon the prestige of the Order in every community. It is upon our unflinching courtesy and tact, upon our manner of conducting ourselves in our everyday lives, that the future prosperity and progress of our fraternity depends. We must remember that, to the outsider, we personify the Order of Native Daughters of the Golden West. We must remember that the measure of our own lives is the outgrowth of the overflow, the contribution to the welfare of all.

"Only when free men guard with watchful eyes their heritage, can they preserve the prize. Their fathers won in sacrifice and pain, And show the world their toils were not in vain."

Grand President—Esther R. Sullivan (Marysville Parlor No. 162).

Grand Vice-president—Estelle M. Evans (Antioch Parlor No. 223).

Grand Secretary—Sallie R. Thaler of Aloha Parlor No. 106 (Oakland).

Grand Treasurer—Susie K. Christ of Yosemite Parlor No. 83 (San Francisco).

Grand Marshal—Evelyn I. Carlson of Dolores Parlor No. 169 (San Francisco).

Grand Trustees (in order of vote received): Anna Mixon-Armstrong of Woodland Parlor No. 90; Irma W. Laird of Alturas Parlor No. 159; Sadie Winn-Brainard of California Parlor No. 2 (Sacramento); May F. Givens of Mariposa Parlor No. 63; Eldora McCarty of Palo Alto Parlor No. 229; Pearl N. Reid of Santa Cruz Parlor No. 26; Gladys E. Noce of Amapola Parlor No. 8 (Sutter Creek).

Grand Organist—Minna Kane-Horn of Escholtzia Parlor No. 112 (Etna).

Grand Inside Sentinel—Millie Rock of Gabrielle Parlor No. 139 (San Francisco).

Grand Outside Sentinel—Edna B. Briggs of I Bandera Parlor No. 110 (Sacramento).

These, together with Dr. Louise C. Heilbron of San Diego Parlor No. 208, who automatically became the Junior Past Grand President, were installed by Senior Past Grand President M. Himes-Noonan, assisted by Past Grand President Olive Bedford-Matlock, Marvel Thomas (Los Angeles Parlor No. 124) and Annie C. Thuesen (Alta Parlor No. 3).

ENTERTAINMENT.

The entertainment program, arranged in Santa Cruz Parlor No. 26, was carried out as outlined in The Grizzly Bear for June.

At the entertainment and card party Monday night, the program included dance numbers, piano solo by Otto Kunitz, vocal selections by

CALIFORNIA HAPPENINGS OF FIFTY YEARS AGO

Thomas R. Jones

(COMPILED EXPRESSLY FOR THE GRIZZLY BEAR.)

THE DEMOCRATIC STATE CONVENTION at Sacramento July 1, 1879, selected J. DeBarth Shorb of Los Angeles to preside, and he had a merry time trying to keep the angry delegates in order. The cause of the unruliness was the desire of the San Francisco wing to coalesce with the New Constitution party, but the country delegates were for a straight-out Jeffersonian-Jacksonian ticket. The convention wrangled for two days, and at one time the opposing factions lined up, yelling imprecations and shaking fists at each other. They were too far apart, however, to hit anything but air, and no gore was shed. Quiet was partly obtained by the president after Senator Tim McCarthy of San Francisco, who had a combative reputation, announced that "The San Francisco delegation will have peace if we have to fight for it!" The San Franciscans won first blood by having the convention nominate for governor Dr. Hugh J. Glenn of Colusa, who was also the nominee of the New Constitution party. Then they lost out, or the convention adopted a resolution that the rest of the ticket should be made up of "straight" Democrats.

Dr. Glenn during the month became the storm center of the political tempest in California. There were a series of bolts from the Democratic party of those who would not support him because he would not unequivocally accept the Democratic nomination. And then followed the biggest bolt of all, in his favor, that of the stalwart Republican leader George C. Gorham, who declared he would stump the state for him. The Workingmen's party made a bitter fight against Dr. Glenn, charging him with being a land baron owning 65,000 acres of farming land, and 1,000 mules which were better housed and fed than the thousand laboring men he employed to seed and harvest his grain fields.

The Republicans opened the campaign with a mass meeting July 1 at Petaluma, Sonoma County, which was addressed by George C. Perkins and A. L. Hart. The Workingmen held meetings in various towns and cities, and denounced the Federal Congress for not passing an eight-hour-day law.

The Prohibitionists had their state convention at San Francisco, July 16. Nine delegates attended, and each got an office.

At county conventions, what was then considered a novelty was the nomination in Ventura County of Miss Augusta Stevens and in Kern County of Mrs. Dora B. Rogers for superintendents of schools.

POWDER EXPLOSION KILLS EIGHT.

Independence Day, July 4, was duly celebrated in all of the cities and many of the towns of the state. The mining town of Shasta, in Shasta County, put on one of the biggest celebrations, and probably the last, in its fitful career. People came from Trinity and Siskiyou Counties to participate, and there was no street long enough to accommodate the afternoon hurlesque parade. Sacramento City had the largest parade of "horribles" ever seen there. Every young man participated, and ridiculed the fads and fancies of the time.

At Bodie, Mono County, July 10, a powder magazine of the Standard Mining Company blew up, destroying the works of that mine, also those of the Summit Company not far away, and a dozen houses and cabins. Eight persons were killed and forty badly injured. While the force of the explosion was barely felt in the drifts of the mine, the ground for twenty miles around was shaken.

Fireworks caused the destruction by fire July 1 of the Commercial hotel and other buildings in Oroville, Butte County, with a loss of $15,000.

The merchandise store of Drails, Morrow & Co., at Visalia, Tulare County, burned July 1. Loss, $16,000.

Fire at Sacramento City July 2 burned the furniture factory of Hamburg & Co. and eight other buildings, causing a $50,000 loss.

A half-mile of snowsheds on the Central Pacific near Cisco, Placer County, burned July 17.

Fifty acres of wheat and the house and barn of G. W. Ware near Colusa City were destroyed by fire July 10.

Merced City had a $20,000 fire July 21, nine buildings being destroyed.

Another fire visited San Bernardino City this month and cremated seven buildings, with a $17,000 loss.

That California was still a gold producer was indicated by receipt at the United States Mint

In San Francisco July 7 of 62,270 ounces of gold worth $1,100,000.

A meeting of farmers and hydraulic miners at Wheatland, Yuba County, to discuss differences existing between the two industries, failed to bring about an amicable understanding.

The Golden Gate hydraulic mine at Sucker Flat struck a rich deposit of gravel from which $900,000 worth of gold was extracted this month.

Peter Anderson, the state's most popular Negro and publisher of the "Pacific Appeal," dropped dead in San Francisco, July 16, at the age of 60.

ENTOMBED MINERS' SKELETONS FOUND.

Jesse O. Goodwin of Marysville, Yuba County, married July 2, died on his honeymoon at a resort near Vallejo, Solano County, July 16, at the age of 62.

Francisco Peralta, owner of the Peralta grant in Alameda County, died at San Francisco, July 17.

The Southern Pacific began filling in at Long Wharf, West Oakland, Alameda County, and soon replaced a gang of Chinamen with White-men. After a week's employment the latter struck for $2 a day and ten hours work. A gang of Italians were brought in to replace the strikers, who immediately attacked and drove away the Garibaldis. The work was then suspended.

The Arctic exploring yacht "Jeanette" started from San Francisco on a trip to the North Pole July 8. It was given a popular sendoff by thousands who gathered upon the wharf, the city front and the hilltops, while the bay was afutter with craft which accompanied the "Jeanette" through the Golden Gate and bade it goodbye.

The Banner mine at Moore's Flat, near Oroville, Butte County, had to be abandoned in 1857 on account of the shaft caving in and the owners going broke. This year the mine was reopened and a new drift was run to the old workings. There were found the skeletons of two entombed miners, who had died of starvation. Nothing was intact except their gum boots, which held the bones of their feet and legs.

Cottontail were so numerous in Pajaro Valley, Santa Cruz County, hunters were haggling thirty or forty in an afternoon's hunt.

Near Honey Lake, Lassen County, were found the antlers of two bucks, fastened together in a mortal combat that resulted in the death of both from starvation.

John and Albert Dalm, Duncan Mills, Sonoma County, lads, killed a California lion measuring ten feet from tip to tip.

William Sproule, lately retired president of the Southern Pacific Company, with five others started on a hunting trip into Lake County from Sacramento City July 22. He was then 21 years old and had before him his railroad career.

A temperance meeting July 12 in a grove at Guerneville, Sonoma County, lasted four days and was attended by 4,000 people.

Walter F. King, while hunting deer in Skunk's Hollow, a canyon thirty miles from San Jose, Santa Clara County, had a set-to with a grizzly bear, and both were killed.

BURST CORK MEN FOOL OFFICERS.

A hoiler in the Southern Pacific shops at Sacramento City exploded July 27, killing J. M. Keyes.

THE BIG CITY THAT KNOWS HOW

POPULAR NATIVE DAUGHTER PASSES

MRS. EMA GETT, PAST GRAND PRESIDENT of, and for years most active in, the Order of Native Daughters of the Golden West, passed away at her Sacramento City home, June 4. She was a native of San Francisco, and was affiliated with Califia Parlor No. 22 (Sacramento). She was the widow of Major William A. Gett, a member of Sacramento Parlor No. 3 who was active in the affairs of the Order of Native Sons of the Golden West. As Grand President Mrs. Gett presided at the Fifteenth (1901) Grand Parlor, held in Sacramento City.

Among the Native Daughters from all parts of California who gathered in large numbers at Sacramento June 6 to pay respect to Past Grand President Gett at her burial service were Grand President Dr. Louise C. Heilbron, Grand Vice-president Esther R. Sullivan, Grand Secretary Sallie R. Thaler, Past Grand Presidents Cora B. Sifford, Ariana W. Sterling, Dr. Eva R. Rasmussen, Olive Bedford-Matlock, Mary E. Bell, Pearl Lamb and Mae Himes-Noonan. The eulogy was delivered by Past Grand President Olive Bedford-Matlock, who said:

"Her last request of me was, that her friends of years and years and years should gather round her bier and not shed there a tear, but just express to her their love sincere. And I am here to do for her what she would have done for me—in loving words to pay tribute to a devoted friend who was, in truth, a friend to every friend she ever had.

"Her bark of life traveled serenely along for many years on placid seas; then an unseen rock—a crash, and her pilot went down, and his mate was left alone, just as she had reached the happiest, sunniest hour of all the voyage; and for several years she has sailed alone, until a hand reached out and called her to him. And now she has sailed away o'er an unknown sea toward an unknown shore, has our brave and tender friend.

"You may search the state from north to south, from east to west among the rank and file of the Native Daughters of the Golden West and you will find not one more loved of her fellow-members than was our own Past Grand President, Ema Gett.

"Her noble character, her peace-loving disposition and her generous charity toward the frailties of others made her loved, not only in the Order to which she gave the best energies of her life, but endeared her to every person in the community with whom she worked and with whom she came in contact.

"A life worth while is a life well filled with the happiness that true friends give, and as she was passing she whispered to me again and again: 'I've been blessed with so many friends; I'm rich in the love of my friends.' And so she passed away in the knowledge that she had friends far and near who loved her well; and I sometimes would that I had loved her less, then my sense of personal loss would not have been so great.

PAST GRAND PRESIDENT EMA GETT, who passed away June 4.

"She added so much to the sum of human joy, and were every one for whom she did some loving service to bring a single blossom to her grave, she would sleep tonight beneath a wilderness of flowers.

"We shall miss your helpful words. We shall miss your generous hospitality, your ready response to the call of duty and your devotion to our Order's welfare. And O, we shall miss your loyal friendship! A loss not easily told in words.

"As you have loved the beauty, the color and the music of this world, so you'll revel in the glories of that grander sphere. And as you beckon us from that misty shore, to which your bark has but gone before, and until such time as we, too, shall pass to that magic isle, we bid you, Ema dear, a fond farewell.

"We cannot say, and we will not say
That she is dead. She is just away!
With a cheery smile and a wave of the hand
She has wandered into an unknown land;
And left us dreaming how very fair
Its needs must be, since she lingers there.
And you, oh you, who the wildest yearn
For the old-time step and the glad return,
Think of her faring on, as dear
In the love of There as the love of Here.
Think of her as the same, we say,—
She is not dead—she is just away!"

DAUGHTERS ENTERTAIN SONS.

Dolores Parlor No. 169 N.D.G.W. entertained the members and families of Dolores Parlor No. 208 N.S.G.W. at a social dance June 6. There was a good attendance, and all enjoyed the games and refreshments played and served between dances. Grand Trustee Evelyn I. Carlson had the affair in charge.

Dolores has pledged itself to furnish a $150 room in the Native Daughter Home, and to raise funds for the purpose is sponsoring a series of whist parties, under the chairmanship of Grace Castillo, for the fourth Wednesday of each month. # GREAT GATHERING CALIFORNIA NORTH NATIVE SONS

(Special to The Grizzly Bear.)

NEVADA CITY (NEVADA COUNTY)—The greatest gathering in recent years of the membership of the Order of Native Sons of the Golden West in California North occurred June 23 at Uncle Tom's Cabin, a pleasure resort four miles from Nevada City on the Yuba Pass highway leading toward the summit of the Sierra through the historic towns of Downsville and Sierra City, Sierra County.

The event was the annual outdoor initiation of members into Subordinate Parlor by the initiatory team of Fred H. Greely Assembly No. 6 Past Presidents Association, and thirteen candidates were initiated. The Assembly is one of the most progressive in the state, and has consistently maintained an attitude of constructive helpfulness to the Parlor within its jurisdiction. The annual outdoor initiation, one of its activities, is keeping the spirit of the Native Sons at a high level in the district. The setting was ideal. Uncle Tom's Cabin consists of a camp ground and a large outdoor dance platform with a high roof of native shingles. It is surrounded by magnificent groves of sturdy pines on the adjacent hillsides. The entire estate was turned over to the Native Sons for the outdoor ceremonies.

Recognizing the value to the Order in general of the work undertaken by the Fred H. Greely Assembly, and of the constructive program evolved by Dr. C. W. Chapman, secretary Hydraulic Parlor No. 56 (Nevada City), and his committee of past presidents, the following grand officers attended the meeting: Charles L. Dodge, Grand President; Frank I. Gonzalez, Grand Second Vice-president; Seth Millington, Grand Third Vice-president; John T. Regan, Grand Secretary; Frank M. Lane, Irving D. Gibb, being custodian of the former and Emma O'Meara of the latter.

July 31 the officers-elect of Dolores N.D.G.W. and Dolores N.S.G.W. will be jointly installed. Dancing and refreshments will go to make up a pleasant evening.

ANNUAL N.D. LUNCHEON.

Grand President Dr. Louise C. Heilbron was the honor guest at the annual luncheon of all the San Francisco Native Daughter Parlors at the Clift Hotel June 8. Past Grand President Eliza D. Keith presided, and the main speaker of the occasion was Judge John F. Davis, Past Grand President N.S.G.W.

Other speakers included Founder Lily O. Reichling-Dyer, Past Grand Presidents Dr. Mariana Bertola and Mae Himes-Noonan, Grand Secretary Sallie R. Thaler, Grand Trustee Evelyn I. Carlson, Emily O. Taylor and May R. Barry.

MANTLE DEDICATED TO N.D. PAST GRAND.

The Native Daughter Home had as guests of honor and entertainers at the June 9 breakfast the glee club of Vendome Parlor No. 100 (San Jose), with Clara Galraud as director and Tillie Brohaska as accompanist. Grand President Dr. Louise C. Heilbron presided.

During the breakfast a mantel of spanish marble, presented to the Home by Orinda Parlor No. 56, was dedicated to Past Grand President Emma Gruber-Foley, a member of the Parlor and a devoted worker for the Order. Rose Tierney Sage, president of the Parlor, delivered the dedicatory address.

Others in attendance included Past Grand Presidents Genevieve Watson-Baker, Eliza D. Keith, Margaret Grote-Hill and Sue J. Irwin; Grand Secretary Sallie R. Thaler, Grand Trustee Sadie Brainard, Elizabeth Douglas and Anna Thuesen.

RECEPTION FOR N.D. PAST GRAND.

The N.D.G.W. district deputies of San Francisco tendered a reception to Past Grand President Eliza D. Keith at the Native Daughter Home June 15. May Noble was chairman of the very happy affair, and was assisted by Emily Taylor.

A greeting to Miss Keith was cleverly extended in a short poem by the composer, Josephine B. Morrissey. A musical program by the N.D.G.W. quartet was particularly well received.

ASSISTANT N.D. GRAND SECRETARY WEDS.

Miss Irma Shannon (Aloha Parlor No. 106 N.D.G.W.), assistant to Sallie R. Thaler, Grand Secretary N.D.G.W., was wedded June 22 to Arthur Murray of Oakland.

The meeting opened as an adjourned session of Quartz Parlor No. 58 (Grass Valley), with approximately one hundred members of the Order in attendance. Following initiation, Grand President Dodge spoke of the purposes and activities of the Order. Grand Third Vice-president Millington, a member of Fred H. Greely Assembly, told of its special design to stimulate and encourage the Subordinate Parlor in the neighborhood, and P. W. Smith, also a member of the assembly, told what those Parlor had in mind to do.

This was the third outdoor initiation held by the Fred H. Greely Assembly at the same location. The idea is unique. It was picturesque.

The auto trip to the Big Basin Thursday afternoon was greatly enjoyed. Lunch was served under the big trees and a brief program was presented.

PAST GRANDS' REUNION.

With Mamie G. Peyton as the hostess, the Past Grand Presidents had their annual reunion around the festive board June 18. The decorations were green and white ships of state and mounds of watsonia, with tiny shells as favors. This being the twenty-fifth anniversary of Stella Finkeldey's Grand Presidency, she was presented by Dr. Mariana Bertola, on behalf of her colleagues, with a handsome shawl.

Mae Himes-Noonan was welcomed into the fold, and was presented with a toy bank in which those present deposited coins; the contents are to be given the Home at the 1930 Grand Parlor. Olive Bedford-Matlock was elected president, and Bertha A. Briggs secretary.

In attendance were Past Grand Presidents Carrie Roesch-Durham, Cora B. Sifford, Eliza D. Keith, Dr. Mariana Bertola, Genevieve Watson-Baker, Stella Finkeldey, Arlana W. #### DAY OF EVENTS AT SANTA MONICA

SANTA MONICA—JUNE 9, MEMBERS and friends of Santa Monica Bay Parlor No. 267 N.S.G.W. and Santa Monica Bay Parlor No. 245 N.D.G.W. gathered at Inspiration Point, Palisades Park, to pay homage to the Pioneers of Santa Monica. Chief of Police Clarence E. Wehh, president No. 267, presided. Mayor Herman Michel extended a welcome to the many assembled, and Commissioner Public Works John A. Morton presented, in the name of Santa Monica City, a site whereon had been placed a native granite houlder surmounted by a sun-dial. Sheriff William I. Traeger, Past Grand President, accepted the site on behalf of the Parlor, after which the monument was unveiled, and dedicated to the memory of the Pioneers by Grand First Vice-president John

T. Newell, assisted by Grand Trustee Ben Harrison, District Deputies Eldred L. Meyer and Burrel D. Neighbours and Past President Harold Barden.

Following the dedication of a tree to the memory of the Pioneer Fathers by the Native Sons, the Native Daughters dedicated another tree to the memory of the Pioneer Mothers, those participating in the latter ceremony being President Rita Smith, Grand Trustee Marvel Thomas, District Deputy Florence Dodson-Schoneman and Josephine Potter. A flagpole, at the tip of the point overlooking the Pacific, was then dedicated to the Santa Monica boys who took part in the world war, and a Flag of the United States of America, presented to American Legion Post No. 123 by the Natives, was hoisted with appropriate ceremonies by Palisades Troop No. 23, Boy Scouts of America.

From Inspiration Point the assemblage proceeded to the California Botanic Gardens in Mandeville Canyon where, in the Grove of Honor, Santa Monica Bay Parlor of Native Sons planted a seven-year-old sequoia sempervirens and Santa Monica Bay Parlor of Native Daughters planted a eucalyptus. The sempervirens, when a very small tree, was brought from the Santa Cruz Mountains by E. A. Gracer, who presented it to the Parlor. The first eucalyptus trees, said Florence Dodson-Schoneman, were planted at Wilmington by the late Pioneer Phineas Banning. Dudley S. Corlett, secretary of the California Botanic Gardens, briefly referred to the beauties of Mandeville Canyon which, he predicted, would eventually be known as the Riviera of America.

Following a bountiful lunch, Undersheriff Eugene W. Biscalluz took charge and introduced the following, who responded with brief remarks: E. A. Speagle, Pioneer of 1849; Grand Trustee Ben Harrison, District Deputy Eldred L. Meyer, Howard Blanchard, Grand First Vice-president John T. Newell, District Deputy Florence Dodson-Schoneman, Rita Smith, Rosalie Hyde, Dan Daniels, Harold Barden and Arthur Giroux, general chairman of the day.

Dr. Owen C. Coy, secretary of the California State Historical Association and professor of history at the University of Southern California, was the principal speaker of the day, and his most interesting address was listened to with close attention. "Many people," said he, "overlook the importance of history and condemn those whom they accuse of living in the past. These people are very shortsighted, for only through the study of that which has gone before can we progress and understand the present. All education is based on the past, and we profit through the mistakes of other years and are thereby helped to understand the present and make definite plans for the future. It is through the study of past history that patriotism is developed."

Dr. Coy then proceeded to summarize the history of California, and illustrated that portion of his remarks dealing with the flags which have flown over California soil by displaying small silken replicas of those flags. Instantancing that real estate subdividers of the southland in the past were as great "hoosters" as those of the present time, he read the following extract from a speech delivered July 15, 1875, by Thomas Fitch at a sale of lots in Santa Monica:

"On Wednesday afternoon at one o'clock we will sell at public outcry to the highest bidder, the Pacific Ocean, draped with a western sky of scarlet and gold; we will sell a hay filled with white-winged ships; we will sell a southern horizon, rimmed with a choice collection of purple mountains, carved in castles and turrets and domes; we will sell a frostless, bracing, warm yet unlanguid air, braided in and in with sunshine and odored with the breath of flowers.

"The purchaser of this job lot of climate and scenery will be presented with a deed to a piece of land 50x100 feet, known as 'Lot H in block

ANNIVERSARY AT OLD ADOBE.

Californiana Parlor No. 247 N.D.G.W. observed the first anniversary of its institution with a tea June 12 at the historic Avilla adobe under the direction of Mrs. Harry Leigh Bentley, chairman of the Parlor's California history and landmarks committee. Miss Mary Foy, on the Parlor's behalf, presented to the adobe a Californiana State (Bear) Flag, following which Isadore B. Dockweiler (Ramona No. 109 N.S.G.W.) spoke on the history of the flag. A beautifully decorated birthday cake was cut by Past Grand President Grace S. Stoermer.

In the receiving line for the Parlor were Mrs. W. H. Chambers, A. O. Evans, Leland Atherton Irish, C. E. Noerenberg, T. G. Duffy, Byron L. Carr, C. H. O'Brien, A. E. MacGregor, and the Misses Jane Quinn, Florence Steinike. Mrs. Ed. H. Anthony, Mrs. Dick Smith and Miss Anna Desmond presided at the tea urns. Among the Native Sons in attendance were Grand First Vice-president John T. Newell and Past Grand President William I. Traeger.

GREAT ARTISTS FOR GRAND OPERA.

More than twenty of the greatest luminaries in the operatic firmament have been engaged for the October season of the Los Angeles Grand Opera Association, according to Manager Merle Armitage. The Philharmonic orchestra has been engaged, and gorgeous scenery, spectacular ballets, trained choruses and colorful costumes will be employed.

This will be the sixth season of the association, which has become one of the four largest in the entire United States producing opera of the finest type. The enthusiasm and interest of the public have enabled the association to give superlative performances with practically no deficit, although the cost of the nine performances exceeds $160,000.

KING BUST GIVEN U. C. L. A.

In recognition of the interest taken by Dr. Ernest C. Moore, director of the University of California at Los Angeles, in the life and work of Thomas Starr King, early-day California statesman, J. Harvey McCarthy (Ramona No. 109 N.S.G.W.) has presented him with a bronze bust of King, fashioned by Henry Lyons (Ramona No. 109 N.S.G.W.), sculptor.

Among other testimonials to the greatness of King, Dr. Moore edited and published his famous oration on Socrates. King was one of two Cali-

SPANISH INFLUENCE IN MILLINERY has been revealed to the window shopper in many guises during the past weeks. This turn at the end of the spring season revives interest. Most of these displays of black felt, with red and black pompom trimmings, emphasize the true spanish sailor. There are numerous black hallihuntis, hakans and hair hats offered, with red roses or other red flowers arranged in similar manner to the red and black pompoms; that is, a cluster above and under the brim at one side.

Black lace in millinery is another offering of the spanish influence. The all-lace hat has hack drapes arranged from the crown tip. These are worn for afternoon attire.

Sports hats of colorful shantung include the heret as well as the draped crepe-de-chine. Knitted sports apparel for travel or sports wear include the brimmed felts and colorful scarfs.

Some of the brimmed felts are handed in wooden heads, with a triple string necklace and double string bracelet in the same type.

In most showings of sports costumes, consisting of navy or red flannel jacket with white frock, a felt hat is worn to harmonize or contrast with the jacket.

Knit underwear exploits the sunhack, whether of glove silk, rayon or cotton, and strongly favors the low hackline fashion called athletic. The low-back vest is developed in the sheerest of glove silk weaves, with the bodice line cut in two points, both front and back, to which the shoestring shoulder straps of self fabric are attached. Some may choose the "V" line, while others may choose the deep-cut "U" chemise.

The one-piece combination with the handean top adopts both necklines. In these models, as well as in the vests, the design of the garment is such that drawstrings are frequently omitted, the snug fit keeping it close to the figure.

Another tendency which these low-hack garments have in common with the rest of the summer underthings is their brevity. Not only are the vests cut briefer than formerly, but they are worn tucked inside a brief pantie, or bloomer, in which the fitted waistband, or front yoke, is the approved finish.

While it is true that these models were designed for athletic garments, and to conform to the sunhack dress, the styles which are developed in the sheer chiffon glove silk are suitable for evening wear. They fill a long-felt want among women who have been unable to find a model with evening décolletage for this purpose. The low-back styles are likely to carry over in demand beyond the season that is definitely athletic.

In the matter of color, there is wide disagreement among these garments. The cottons rely on the pastels, such as maize, blue, peach, pink and white. The rayons favor pink, peach and suntan. But glove silks present an unlimited color appeal. Chartreuse, red, blue, orchid, violet, tangerine and stripes are favored in both silks.

Corset fabrics keep step with the trend toward light-weight effects in foundation garments generally. The demand for light-weight brocades has brought out several new fabric weaves. One has the texture of a soft faille ribbon, yet retains all the strength and resisting qualities.

The use of tricot fabrics in higher-priced garments often has been precluded because of the high sheen. The fact that real silks are used in these newer tricot without any mixtures of rayon is one of the chief reasons for the lusterless effect.

Coarse mesh fabrics are making an appearance for summer use in conjunction with the finer nets.

The stockingless vogue is still breeding new ideas in hosiery. For instance, promoting interest in the seamless kinds and in a larger array of colors, so that they will more perfectly imitate the hue of sunburnt skin which, of course, started all the commotion about hare-skinned styles.

The prevailing insistence of chiffon weights for stockings for all wear is the very essence of an effort to get the bare-leg look. On the other hand, stockings have been stimulated in another way—where fancy meshes and clock decorations completely oppose the hare-legged ideal.

Then, too, the little socks that are so much in the sports picture are the result of the stockingless idea. Colors that were leading two weeks ago are still the most popular in hosiery. These are suntan, lido, maive, moderne, sunburn and allure.

Belts grow colorful and narrow. Red glaze kid makes a smart belt with a slip-tie buckle closing. A somewhat wider belt combines beige suede with black.

The buckle in black and silver enamel and crystal is used on a pink suede belt, relieved by white nailheads. Many of the new belts are trimmed with contrasting insets. Pique in white or pastel tones is the belt fabric leader.

Shantung shirting silks and printed silk crepes are used for daytime sleeveless one-piece dresses, with "V" neckline and pleated skirt.

Slipover sweaters with "V" or round neck are worn with flannel skirt and coat. Occasional blazer-striped cardigan represents a small percentage of patterned models.

Coats and jackets are made of quilted silk, enleco, blazer-striped flannel, plique or plain velvet and are unlined.

For evening, lacquer red, dark blue, soft green and yellow prove most popular, with much black and white.

An occasional flowered frock in taffeta or satin, worn by a few, is always in pastel or white.

Long hair is as important as the bobbed, and is worn back of the ears and knotted low where the hair is long.

COTTON FABRICS ARE USED FOR NUMEROUS OCCASIONS.

Cotton dress fabrics are now considered suitable on a great many kinds of occasions where they were not formerly worn. The great variety of finishes, patterns and colors has also made cotton more popular than ever.

Cotton is favored for sports wear because it stands frequent tumbling, the United States Department of Agriculture's home economics bureau points out. Piques, broadcloths, suitings and other closely woven, substantial fabrics are made up into sleeveless tennis or boating dresses for "active sports wear." Dressy coats and ensembles in plain colors or gay prints, or interesting combinations of both, are designed for those who look on at the tennis meet or golf tournament—"spectator sports wear." Cretonnes and cotton sponges are used for "water sports wear"—beach pajamas and coats.

Both decorative lounging pajamas and practical sleeping pajamas are made, by preference, of cotton fabrics—cotton broadcloth, gingham, soft cambric and muslins, often printed in delightful geometric and flowered patterns. Informal evening dresses and formal afternoon frocks are made of plain and flowered organdy and lawn, dimity, voile, dotted swiss and other dainty materials. For tailored cotton street or business dresses, prints and ginghams are always good.

The choice for children's dresses is unlimited, ranging from the sheer muslins, printed zephyrs, ginghams and soft satens to the stoutest kindergarten cloth.

Some of the most interesting new touches are: Three shades of plain colored batiste or fine muslin in one ensemble, as, for instance, oranges, greens, blues or lavenders; narrow-wale light-weight pique in a plain color for sports coats—brick red is very good—matching some part of the pattern in a printed sleeveless dress beneath; checked gingham, from the smallest to the largest checks, for jacket suits, tuck-in blouses, sleeveless dresses with plain matching coats or jackets with plain colored dresses; two similar but slightly different calicoes in old-fashioned patterns, used in reversible quilted coats; two sizes of colored dots, irregularly spaced, on white light-weight pique; many pastel colors, especially in organdy, swiss and lawn; velvetene for summer coats.

FAST DISAPPEARING INDIANS

TOLD OF IN NEW BOOK.

Another monument to the fast-disappearing Indian tribes of California South, most of whose institutions, it is believed, will be gone forever within the next decade, has been dedicated by the University of California department of anthropology, in the shape of a 350-page hook on the old culture of the Serrano, Cahuilla, Cupeño and Luiseño groups of Riverside and San Diego Counties.

In his new hook, "Aboriginal Society in Southern California," the author, Dr. William Duncan Strong, reconstructs a picture of Indian life and customs as they existed before the coming of the White man among the four California South tribes mentioned. He traces the borders of their old hunting territories, and discusses their political and social organizations, hunting rules, marriage laws, songs, legends and special ceremonies.

KILLING LAWN WEEDS.

Lawn weeds may be controlled by spraying with ammonium sulphate solution; at the same time a fertilizer is added to the soil that will aid grass and clover. The solution will burn the weeds; in fact, it may affect the lawn plants, but they will recover. Digging weeds is perhaps the surest method, if the roots are removed, but in a large lawn this is quite a task. Weeds come in through the use of fertilizer, which is necessary if the lawn is to be kept up properly. Commercial fertilizers may aid somewhat in this regard. In any event, the grass or clover must be fed. If they are, even in poor soil a good lawn may be developed.

"This world we are living in is mighty hard to beat—you get a thorn with every rose, but ain't the roses sweet?"—Exchange.

Native Daughters of the Golden West

SAN DIEGO—MEMBERS OF SAN DIEGO No. 208 and San Diego No. 108 N.S.G.W. gathered at the Federal Government cemetery at Point Loma, Memorial Day, and dedicated the Albert Smith monument recently placed there by the Parlor. District Deputy Albert V. Mayrhofer, chairman of the day, introduced Grand President Dr. Louise C. Heilbron, who said:

"Sisters, brothers and friends—As Grand President of the Native Daughters of the Golden West, I am here to do honor, and to dedicate this memorial tablet, to the memory of a civilian hero who has done more than any other man to save this wonderful state to our country. Albert Smith and other Americans were taken aboard a United States warship for safety from San Diego, as the Mexican forces far outnumbered the Americans and were in possession of the presidio, which was fortified,—the spot overlooking Old Town, where our esteemed fellow-citizen, Geo. W. Marston, is now erecting a museum, afterwards named 'Fort Stockton.' Albert Smith who, no doubt, was a young man of great courage and imbued with an intense patriotism, left the ship at night, swam to shore and, under cover of darkness, entered the presidio and spiked the Mexican guns. When the Mexicans found themselves thus handicapped, their courage left them and they took to the hills. Smith climbed the flagpole, cut down the enemy's flag and nailed our own beautiful Red, White and Blue in its stead.

"Some six years ago we received a permit from the Federal Government to remove the remains of this hero from his resting-place in Old Town and interred them in this beautiful spot. We expected a suitable marker would be placed over the grave hut, falling in this, the Native Daughters and Native Sons of San Diego, with enthusiasm and devotion to our principles, secured this houlder and had the bronze tablet inscribed: 'To the memory of Civilian Albert Smith who under cover of darkness spiked the enemy's guns and under fire raised the American Flag, Oct. 1846. Dedicated by the Native Daughters and Native Sons of the Golden West.' Although the exact date of the action cannot be fixed, we do know it was the month of October, in 1846.

"In the name of the Grand Parlor of the Native Daughters of the Golden West and as their Grand President, by the power in me vested I dedicate this monument to the memory of this hero. May he rest until the glorious day when, at the great reckoning, he shall find his name enrolled in golden letters in that roll-of-honor preserved for the greatest and most worthy of men."

Home Acquired.

Sutter—Built forty years ago for lodge and bank purposes, the two-story brick Bank building has been purchased by South Butte No. 226 and will be fitted up as a home for the Parlor. The upper floor is to be used as a meeting place, and the lower floor will be used for other activities.

AIMS AND OBJECTS of the ORDER OF NATIVE DAUGHTERS OF THE GOLDEN WEST

- To cultivate state pride.
- To aid state development.
- To advance state progress.
- To promote the study of California history.
- To preserve California's landmarks, relics and traditions.
- To honor and keep in memory California's Pioneers.
- To stimulate and inspire patriotism.
- To assist in the work of americanization.
- To encourage higher education for women, as evidenced by the Order's liberal college scholarship.
- To guarantee social enjoyment, mental improvement and mutual benefit to members.
- To care, conjointly with the Order of Native Sons of the Golden West, for the orphaned children of California, of whatever class, color or creed, by placing them in permanent homes through legal adoption proceedings, thus engaging in the most humanitarian of public welfare work, that of improving the future citizenship of the state.
- If YOU were born in California and believe in these principles, you should be a member of the Order of Native Daughters of the Golden West.

ities. Originally the building had a valuation of $15,000, but it was purchased by the Parlor for a few hundred dollars. It has been but little used, and is in excellent condition.

When constructed, it was intended that this building should house a bank, expected to be an important unit of the business life of the town that was being exploited far and near, for it was intended that Sutter City, at the base of the Sutter Buttes, should become the seat of government of Sutter County. Hotel, stores and other structures were erected as the beginning of the new city. The promoters had big ideas, however, and the railroad they started never was completed. In late years, however, the town has been steadily on the improve.

South Butte Parlor was instituted in June of 1923 by Miss Esther Sullivan (Marysville No. 162), elected Grand President at the Santa Cruz Grand Parlor. Josephine Norris is the president of the Parlor.

Second Anniversary Picnic.

Fullerton—Grace No. 242 had its second institution anniversary picnic in the city park June 5, over 150 attending. Guests of honor were Past Grand President Grace S. Stoermer, after whom the Parlor was named, and District Deputy Genevieve Hiskey. Birthday cakes, presented by Mrs. Hiskey and Mrs. Frank Hill, were accepted by President Helen Anderson. Following supper there was a program of talks and sports stunts, the latter being in charge of Mms. Clyde Bruce, Dan McFarland and A. J. Edwards.

At the June 6 meeting the Parlor elected officers, Lucana McFadden being selected for president and Mary Rothaermel for recording secretary. The needle club was entertained June 27 at the home of Evelyn Hawkins.

County Gathering.

Ferndale—A meeting of the Humboldt County Parlor—Occident No. 28 (Eureka), Oneonta No. 71 (Ferndale) and Reichling No. 97 (Fortuna)—May 24, with Oneonta as hostess, was largely attended and interesting. Musical numbers were contributed by Mrs. B. Rusk, Mrs. Bernice Mills, Mrs. Barry and Miss Emma Becker; Clara Johnson and Verna Peers appeared in a skit, "Old Time Wedding Day," and among the speakers were Lucy Erickson, Mrs. M. Schnoor, Hattie Bittencourt, Mrs. McCarthy and Past Grand President Anna L. Monroe, the latter's subject being "Americanization." A banquet concluded the affair.

Oneonta has furnished a room in the new Native Daughter Home in San Francisco, and has decided to name it in honor of Past Grand President Monroe, a member of the Parlor. It has also decided to present to each alien receiving naturalization papers a Flag of the United States of America, a copy of "The American Creed" and a congratulatory note from the Parlor.

Officers Elected.

Sausalito—At the election of officers for the July-December term in Sea Point No. 196, June 10, Mary B. Smith was selected for president and Evelyn Witch was retained as recording secretary.

Pioneer Women Guests.

Santa Ana—Pioneer women of Santa Ana were guests May 20 of Santa Ana No. 235 at a delightful tea. It was decided that Mrs. Elizabeth Lamme had resided here longer than anyone else present, having come in 1869, and she was presented with a bouquet.

After an hour devoted to reminiscences and renewing old friendships an entertaining program was presented by Lulu Hall, Freda Barger, Lucille Lambert and Carolyn Wells. The main address was delivered by Dr. C. D. Ball, who told of Santa Ana's advances in the last half-century. The tea was arranged by Mrs. Glenn Wells, assisted by Mms. Ira Coke, Florence Watson, Alvin Selvidge and Walter Moore.

Jessie Wells recently entertained the thimble club of the Parlor at her home, and quite a bit of sewing was done for the bazar to be held in the near-future.

Flags Presented Schools.

Middletown—Clear Lake No. 135 held services June 11 in memory of the late Past Grand President Ema Gett who, nearly twenty-seven years ago, instituted the Parlor. A program was presented by Helen Herman, Vera Asbil and Madeline Simonsen, and refreshments were served by Belle Farmer and Angie Nelson.

The Parlor has presented California State (Bear) Flags to the Middletown grammar school, the Coyote grammar school and the Middletown joint union high school.

Gift for Bride.

Fresno—Officers of Fresno No. 187 were elected June 7, Gertrude Trollie being chosen for president and Elvira Soares being retained as recording secretary. Leta Viator, who is to make her home in Pacific Grove, Monterey County, was given a handkerchief shower. President Virginia Hainline, on the Parlor's behalf presented a gift to Bernice Floeck, a recent bride. A public card party was given June 14, Cecilia Rohy being in charge.

Memorial Services.

Santa Barbara—Reina del Mar No. 126 had impressive memorial services for its deceased members May 30, those participating being Vera Pacheco, Mrs. Wm. R. Quinn, Mrs. John Mitchell, Christina Moller, Mrs. Wm. Belt and Mrs. M. C. Harrison. Following the ceremonies the graves were visited and decorated.

WHAT IS A FRIEND?
The sunshine of calamity.
The essence of pure devotion.
The ripe fruit of acquaintanceship.
A star of hope in the cloud of adversity.
A volume of sympathy bound in cloth.
A diamond in the ring of acquaintance.
A safe in which one can trust anything.
The jewel which shines the brightest in the darkness.
The link in life's long chain which bears the greatest strain.
The first person who comes in when the whole world has gone out.
The triple alliance of the three great powers: love, sympathy and help.

Native Sons of the Golden West

BAKERSFIELD (KERN COUNTY)—WITH many Native Sons from Los Angeles and San Bernardino Cities and the San Joaquin Valley in attendance, Bakersfield No. 42 was instituted June 2 by Grand President Charles L. Dodge, assisted by Junior Past Grand President James A. Wilson, Grand First Vice-president John T. Newell, Grand Second Vice-president Dr. Frank I. Gonzalez, Grand Secretary John T. Regan, Grand Trustees Frank M. Lane and Ben Harrison.

Thirty-one candidates were initiated, the ritual being exemplified by the following: Ralph I. Harbison (Ramona No. 109), president; Joseph P. Coyle (Ramona No. 109) senior past president; Charles B. Harkness (Fresno No. 25), junior past president; J. W. Jasper (Arrowhead No. 110), first vice-president; M. E. Griffith (Fresno No. 25), second vice-president; Ray M. Russell (Ramona No. 109), third vice-president; Paul P. Lombardi (Ramona No. 109), marshal; Grand Trustee Frank M. Lane (Fresno No. 25), inside sentinel; R. W. Brazelton (Arrowhead No. 110), outside sentinel; Julius W. Krause (Ramona No. 109), organist.

The following officers of the new Parlor were installed by District Deputy George Haines of Fresno: Rolland L. Curran, president; Ben F. Cooper, junior past president; A. T. Lightner, senior past president; Dr. C. E. Radebaugh, first vice-president; J. K. Lilly, second vice-president; Warren Stockton, third vice-president; Steward Magee, recording secretary; H. Lawton Borgwardt, financial secretary; J. P. Shields, treasurer; Frederick Hoar, marshal; P. E. Davis, inside sentinel; Fred E. Cremer, outside sentinel; Richard E. Ashe, John A. Hart, J. Perry Brite, trustees.

Following the ceremonies there was a banquet, which was attended by all the visitors and members of Bakersfield Parlor. Mrs. Anna M. Radebaugh, instrumental in the organization of the Parlor, was the hostess and was showered with congratulations. Addresses were delivered by Grand President Dodge and the other grand officers, President Curran, Assemblyman A. T. Lightner and Judge T. A. Baker of No. 42, and many of the visitors. The meeting place and banquet tables were beautifully decorated with flowers, these being arranged by Mms. Anna M. Radebaugh, Mae Williams and Mary Monteith.

Mrs. Radebaugh, the organizer of Bakersfield No. 42, also organized El Tejon No. 239 N.D.G.W., which was instituted June 17, 1926. The membership of the new Parlor includes some of Kern County's finest California natives, and there are many more who have declared their intention of affiliating with the Parlor.

Old Timer's Wish To Be Gratified.

Auburn—Members of Auburn No. 59 were told all about the old pioneer trail from this place to Lake Tahoe via Forest Hill, June 7. The speaker, Robert W. Watson Sr. of Tahoe City was induced to tell his story by Sheriff Elmer H. Gum, a past president of the Parlor. "Bob," as Watson is familiarly called, now past 80 years of age, punctuated his remarks with many interesting reminiscences.

"Boys," he said, "I have an ambition. I want to mark out the old pioneer trail from Forest Hill to Lake Tahoe before I pass on. I am probably the only man now living who knows this trail. It was blazed in 1852, and was first used to carry supplies from California to Nevada. Later, it was used in the rush from California to the Comstock mines in Nevada, in 1858-9. And again in the gold rush to Squaw Valley, located just before you get to the Truckee River and Lake Tahoe from the California side. This was in 1862-3. The Squaw Valley strike was a myth, and a short time afterward, when the Central Pacific Railroad was built over the Sierra, this old pioneer trail was abandoned. I was over it last fall and found many of the blazed trees still standing, but others were down, and the trail was covered with thick undergrowth. There are many points of historical interest along this trail. One is the place where Captain Duke of the Diggers was poisoned by the Plutes. With the help of the Native Sons, I would like to re-mark this old trail."

"Bob" Watson insists, however, that be himself be allowed to do one thing—build a monument upon the trail's highest point at an elevation of over 10,000 feet, and dedicate it to the Pioneers of California. A flag placed above this monument could be seen from Forest Hill, Tahoe, Truckee and other points, all of them miles distant.

The Auburn Native Sons have accepted "Bob's" offer and, with markers, camp outfits, etc., will do the marking this September. It will consume a week's time, but, from a historical standpoint, the time will be well spent. It will be a wonderful outing, too, for the deer season will be open and "Uncle Bob" says the streams are full of trout; be planted them some three years ago. Few people ever go into the region, save now and then as shepherders. "Bob" promises to have his monument completed this year, and Auburn Parlor is considering placing upon it a bronze plaque, fittingly inscribed.

Grand Officers in Session.

San Francisco—The Board of Grand Officers met June 8, the following being in attendance:

Sam J. Richey of St. John, New Brunswick; I. D. Lyon of Midland, Texas, and Harry S. Winans of Dallas, Texas, in communications stated they are desirous of forming organizations similar to the Order of Native Sons, and asked for literature, which was ordered sent them.

Various letters, asking for speakers and proposing dedications were referred to Grand President Dodge and Grand Secretary Regan for attention.

The Grand Parlor Ritual Committee was directed to re-word certain portions of the Initiatory Ritual to conform with the action of the Grand Parlor, which abolished all signs excepting that of salutation.

Sponsors Memorial Day Observance.

Ferndale—Following the usual custom, observance of Memorial Day here was under the auspices of Ferndale No. 93. The ceremonies opened with a parade which proceeded to the State theater, filled to overflowing. E. P. Calanchini, president of the day, delivered a welcome address, an invocation was pronounced by Rev. David Miller, and Judge J. T. Fraser Sr. delivered the oration. Other numbers on the program were vocal selections by the girls' glee club of the Ferndale Union high school under the direction of Ernest G. Dobney, patriotic selection by Lester Dedini and a selection by a saxophone quartet.

The procession was then re-formed and proceeded to the cemetery, where the graves of departed veterans had been decorated with flags and flowers. At the grave of the "Unknown" Harlan Diedrichsen gave a patriotic recitation, a salute was fired and taps were sounded. The parade was headed by the Flag of the United States of America, borne by Geo. E. Corbett, the sole surviving G. A. R. veteran in Ferndale, and by the California State (Bear) Flag, carried by Geo. W. Kausen.

Winning five out of six games, and having a percentage of 833, the baseball team of Ferndale Parlor has been declared the 1929 champion of the Humboldt County Native Sons League.

Lost, Without Grizzly.

"Grizzly Bear Publishing Co.—Gentlemen: Enclosed is check for renewal of my subscription for two copies of The Grizzly Bear. I certainly would be lost, if denied the privilege of reading your valuable magazine, the coming of each issue of which I eagerly look forward to.

"I regret that Earl LeMoine's series of articles, 'Europe Through California Eyes,' have come to a close; they were most entertaining and also educational. Tom Jones' 'California Happenings of Fifty Years Ago' afford me a great amount of pleasure; that monthly news contribution is certainly worth the magazine's subscription price.

"With best wishes for your continued success,

"A Friend of The Bear,

"T. W. McAULIFFE.

Exciting Match Promised.

San Rafael—Officers of Mount Tamalpais No. 64 were elected June 3. B. J. Brusatori being chosen president. They will be installed by District Deputy J. S. Rosa, July 15, at which time the Parlor's forty-fourth institution anniversary will be fittingly observed.

The social committee is very active and is planning a number of events, among them a picnic and a dance. The married members have challenged the single men to play a game of baseball, the losers to pay for a dinner. Both teams are practicing daily, and the game promises to be most exciting. As many of the best players among the single men contemplate matrimony at an early date the match must be held very soon.

The "Big 5" of Mount Tamalpais are looking forward to a substantial increase in the Parlor's

In Memoriam

PAST GRAND PRESIDENT EMA OETT.

To the officers and members of Clear Lake Parlor No. 135 N.D.G.W.—We, the charter members appointed to draft resolutions in the memory of our beloved Past Grand President, Emma Oett, the founder and organizer of our Parlor, August 5, 1902, do respectfully submit the following:
 "Beautiful life is that whose span
 Is spent in duty to God and Man;
 Beautiful calm when the course is run,
 Beautiful twilight at set of sun,
 Beautiful death with a life well done."

Whereas, It has pleased Divine Providence, in His boundless mercy and love, to call from her earthly work the beloved organizer of our Parlor to her Heavenly Home; whereas, we reverently bow to the Divine will; we will miss our sister, whose kindly smile and noble qualities were ever a lesson to us all; therefore, be it

Resolved, That we extend our sympathy to her sorrowing family; be it further resolved, that a copy of these resolutions be spread upon the minutes of this meeting and that a copy be sent to The Grizzly Bear Magazine for publication.

Middletown, June 11, 1929.

HATTIE A. HEINDEL.

Died, June 1, 1929, Hattie A. Heindel, charter member of El Dorado Parlor No. 186 N.D.G.W. We, the condolence committee of El Dorado Parlor No. 186 N.D.G.W., submit the following resolution:

Whereas, Our Heavenly Father has deemed it best to remove from our midst our beloved sister, Hattie A. Heindel; be it

Resolved, That El Dorado Parlor has lost a true and loyal member, her family a loving, faithful mother, and her passing has left in this community a void that is hard to fill; her sister members share in the sorrow of those left behind;

"The harque of her life was loosened
 And gently glided away
 Across the River of Death so still
 To the Land of Eternal Day."

And be it further resolved, that the charter of the Parlor be drawn for thirty days, that these resolutions be spread upon the minutes of the Parlor, and that a copy be sent to the family of deceased and one to The Grizzly Bear for publication.

BEATRICE LUCE,
 IRENE IRISH,
 ALTA L. DOUGLAS,
 Committee.

Georgetown, June 8, 1929.

PATRICK HENRY GRIFFIN.

Whereas, In the wisdom of our Heavenly Father, Brother Patrick Henry Griffin has been called to his eternal rest; and whereas, in the passing of Brother Griffin this Parlor has lost a loyal and esteemed member, his wife a devoted husband, and this city and community a valuable and honored citizen who was ever willing to assist in the advancement and upbuilding of the community—a person whom to know was to esteem and whose demise the entire community may well sincerely mourn; therefore, be it Resolved, That the members of Modesto Parlor No. 11 Native Sons of the Golden West extend the most heartfelt sympathy to the members of Brother Griffin's family in this, their sad hour of bereavement, and sincerely pray that their sorrow may be tempered in the thought that God, in His infinite mercy, knows best; and he it further resolved, that these resolutions be spread upon the minutes of the Parlor in memory of Brother P. H. Griffin and that a copy be sent to the wife of the deceased brother.

MARGARET L. PARKS.

Whereas, God has called from among us Margaret L. Parks, a beloved member of Gold of Ophir Parlor No. 190 N.D.G.W.; and whereas, in her passing this community loses one whose kindness, charity and loving sacrifice shone as an inspiration to all, and this Parlor one whose unselfish service and devotion to duty will long be remembered; now, therefore, be it

Resolved, That in tribute to her memory we spread upon the minutes of this meeting this, our tribute of love and regret, and that we extend to her sorrowing loved ones our sincere sympathy and commend to them the comfort of our faith that, through the gateway of death, we pass to life eternal, where sorrow shall be forgotten, and love rejoice in reunion with its own.

A BIT O' FARMING

PREPARED EXPRESSLY FOR THE GRIZZLY BEAR BY M. H. ELLIS

IF THERE IS A POTENTIAL MARKET IN the Orient for California products, fresh and packed, California farmers ought to know it by next season. If the Orient can and will use fresh fruits, in another year it will be known whether fruits can be shipped there, and how they should be treated in refrigeration. The investigation of the market conditions is to be undertaken jointly by the United States Department of Commerce and the University of California. Prof. B. H. Crocheron and W. J. Norton of the college of agriculture extension service will spend the next seven or eight months in a survey of market conditions and demands in the Orient.

Prof. E. L. Overholser of the pomology division, an expert on fruit refrigeration, will make a voyage to the Orient, and also through the Panama Canal to the Atlantic Coast, to observe the behavior of fruits on ocean voyages. The steamship companies are co-operating, and the fruit industry is furnishing both fruit and laboratory equipment for the investigation.

The newly established Giannini foundation for agricultural economics is co-operating in both enterprises as the first work it has undertaken. Both the foundation and the university, of which it is a part, are, by these projects, taking the first actual steps toward opening a new market for California's specialty crops that has been made in any systematic way for the industry as a whole.

CLEANING OUT POISON OAK.

There are many sections of the state where poison oak is all too prevalent; wherever it is prevalent it is a pest of the first magnitude. Cutting it out seems only to encourage it. Chemicals are about the only means of ridding the premises of it unless it is dug out bodily, root and branch. There is, however, a commercial weed killer on the market that has given good results when sprayed on the foliage. Apparently the chemical kills not only the leaves but poisons the poison oak. The weed killer is arsenical, and reports have it that it does the work in good shape.

Sodium arsenate applied liberally on exposed roots usually will kill the plants, but there are few who wish to work around them. Carbon bisulphide placed in foot-deep holes a foot and a half to two feet apart, after which the holes are tightly plugged, may solve the problem. In thickets of the pest, this is a hard job. The weed killer apparently is the best bet.

FERTILIZATION WITHOUT MANURE.

There is no question as to the value of manure as a fertilizer. It supplies the necessary plant food and adds humus to the soil. The drawback is its scarcity and the increasing price. A program of fertilization may be outlined that will keep the soil in good shape, and without the use of manure.

To supply the humus and the nitrogen a good cover crop may be used; the other plant foods may be supplied readily by commercial fertilizers. The cover crop must be a legume, of course, to supply nitrogen; any good crop that is worked into the soil as it approaches maturity will supply the humus. Fertilization is a necessity, as many farmers have found. You can't forever take from the soil without putting something back.

KEEPING PULETS IN PRODUCTION.

When pullets go into the molt, egg production drops off rapidly. It may be necessary, therefore, to change the diet somewhat to delay the molt and keep the younger members of the flock producing eggs while prices are good. In the first place, be sure the pullets are vaccinated when not more than five months of age. February pullets should be vaccinated right now. Vaccination has a tendency to delay laying. Cut down on the protein if the pullets have been coming along in good shape. Indeed, this might well be done at three months if the development of the birds has been satisfactory. At six months, work them gradually over to a laying ration, if a different one is used for laying than for growing. Always change feeds gradually; sudden changes may throw the birds into a premature molt. Watch the combs and wattles. Too rapid development there means more than enough protein in the diet. Cut down the milk and meat in such cases.

USE ALFALFA GRADES.

Dairymen who complain that their orders for alfalfa hay are not filled by shippers according to specifications may have some cause for complaint; on the other hand, their specifications may be faulty. Choice dairy alfalfa, select dairy alfalfa, fancy dairy alfalfa, good feeding alfalfa and such terms may mean one thing to one shipper and another to another. The use of the United States hay standards will go a long way to avoid costly controversies arising from shipping specifications.

If the dairyman acquaints himself with these grades and finds which he wants, then insists that a federal hay inspection certificate accompanies the invoice, there can be little chance for misunderstanding. These standards are based on definite specifications of leafiness, color and foreign material, leafiness being emphasized because the protein is most abundant there. Consequently, feed values depend upon leafiness.

PACK FRUIT WHEN COOL.

Don't pick fruit in mid-day, when it is hot from the rays of the summer sun, and then pack it at once for shipment. Perishable fruits always should be packed when cool, and it will pay to let them stand overnight to cool off, unless, of course, precooling equipment is available. Afternoon pickings may be left in the shed overnight. Field boxes should not be filled; give plenty of room for air circulation during the night. Pack in the morning. If it is absolutely necessary to pack the same day the fruit is picked, don't lid until the next morning.

Give the fruit as good a start as possible on its way to market. Remember, too, that simply placing in refrigerator cars doesn't bring down the temperature at once. In the middle of the car, at the top, it will take days to get the temperature down to a safe degree. Pre-cool artificially, if possible, otherwise let nature help by holding the fruit overnight.

GET DRYING EQUIPMENT READY.

Don't start the drying season with floors, trays and other equipment sticky from the residue of last season's operations. See that the grader, the dipper and all the other apparatus are clean and free from mold spores. To get rid of the sticky stuff, use a lye solution for soaking about twenty-four hours, then mop down and rinse off with clean water. To stop spoiling of fruit, be sure the mold spores are gone; insurance against this may be accomplished with a solution of sodium phychlorite. Wash bins, boxes, trays and machinery with this, and do the job thoroughly.

CLEANLINESS IN DRYING.

Sun-dried fruit is and always will be popular, if care is taken with the drying. Vitamines are retained and added by the rays of the sun. On the other hand, the consumer will prefer the clean dehydrated product to that from the dry yard that comes in sandy and gritty. Every precaution possible should be taken against sand and dust on drying fruit. Keep drives watered. Plant grain or grass to keep down the dust. As far as possible, see that heavy traffic does not pass the dry yard and keep the yards as far as possible from the cutting sheds. Some dust may be unavoidable; much of it can, and should be, eliminated.

VACCINATING PULETS.

It is time pullets are vaccinated against smallpox to get best results in production of eggs this fall. The new vaccine developed by Dr. J. R. Beach of the University of California is by all means to be recommended. The birds are cleaned up rapidly and get back into production much more quickly than with the old treatment. If birds are in heavy production, the egg flow must be brought down. Make the mash half cornmeal, and feed plenty of grain and good greens for three months after vaccination. February pullets should be vaccinated at once; none should go to more than five months before treatment.

CARE IN PICKING.

Watch the pickers in your orchard. See that only fruit of quality fit to be packed is taken from the trees and that it is of proper maturity. One California grower last year employed an inspector to watch the pickers. As a result, he secured better quality of fruit and the cost of picking per box was reduced from 20 to 12 cents by having someone on the job to keep the pickers at their work.

SUMMER ITCH ON HORSES.

When horses are changed from dry feed to green pasture, new hay or new grain, there often is a tendency to develop the summer itch. The horse will bite himself and scratch, although apparently well and healthy. Heat and sweating also may induce the itch, as also will lack of grooming, imperfect shedding or insanitary stabling. Perhaps all may contribute. In case the horse has not shed well, clip him. See that the stable is cleaned and disinfected, and then kept clean. Make a solution of a teaspoonful of sheep dip in a pint of water and bathe the affected parts. A tablespoonful of granular hypsulphite of soda in the feed twice a day also will be helpful.

KEEP GOOD OLD EWES.

There is no reason for disposing of good ewes, even though they may be old, as long as their teeth are sound and their lambs are regularly nursed. Some of the best ewes are those no longer young. Care must be taken, of course, to see that they are sound and that their teeth are good. The owner of sheep must see that every animal in the breeding herd gets individ-

ORANGE RUST IN BERRIES.

Watch out for orange rust in berries and, when it appears, cut out and burn all infested shoots at once. It appears as a sort of rusty powder, and stunts growth in bush berries to a marked degree. The severity of the attacks varies with the seasons. Spraying alone is a poor remedy, but after the shoots that are affected have been removed it is a good plan to spray the bushes with a 3-3-50 Bordeaux mixture.

BRED HELFER BLINDNESS.

Pregnant helpers about to calve, often develop a blindness that, while it is of course serious, usually passes away with the dropping of the calf. Treatment is of no avail. The eyes are clear, but with the pupils dilated from paralysis of the retina and the optic nerve. The trouble is apt to appear more frequently among helpers than among older cows, but is not infrequent at any age.

LIMBERNECK AND EAR CANKER.

Perhaps the length of rahhlts' ears may have something to do with harboring trouble; at any rate there are two difficulties that start in the ear that may appear. Rahhit ear canker is very contagious, and is perhaps best controlled by cleaning the ear with a blunt instrument and then applying a good antiseptic salve or a 3 percent solution of carholated olive oil. The symptoms are red ears, sore inside, followed by fits and often death. Limberneck is caused by a mite starting an abscess in the ear. The rahhit holds its head on one side and eventually is unable to stand at all. Borax and olive oil treatment, followed by brushing with powdered borax, will help. This treatment when rahhlts are young may prevent the appearance of the trouble.

HARD MILKING COWS.

Cows that are hard to milk, or that hold up their milk, are usually no great addition to the profit side of the dairy ledger. It may be, of course, that holding up the milk is a habit induced by rough treatment; if so, nothing but patience and gentle handling will cure. On the other hand, the cow may be in physical pain at milking time. Such causes are hard to discover and harder to relieve. The cow that comes to the milking barn with a full udder, usually welcomes the relief of being milked. If she doesn't milk well, she usually is not paying her board.

WATCH SOIL MOISTURE.

Don't irrigate merely because the water is in the ditch. Use water only when the soil needs it. The plant, be it tree or grain, will use the same amount of water whether the ground is soaked or if it is close to the wilting point. If the wilting point is reached, then of course water is needed in the soil. Too frequent irrigation brings up the water table and alkali, causes tree root troubles and wastes water. The soil auger is the only safe guide.

Don't be afraid to irrigate near picking time. The tree will take just as much moisture from the soil, and put just as much in the fruit, be the soil soaking or fairly well dried. Fruit quality is not impaired by heavy irrigation. It is not well, of course, to have the orchard muddy during picking time, but if the trees need water, give it to them and don't worry about soft fruit.

COTTONY CUSHION SCALE.

Cottony cushion scale, thanks to the ladybird beetle, or ladybug as it is commonly known, no longer is a serious pest. When this scale does appear in force, however, it is damaging. The control, fortunately, is not difficult. If it appears on shade trees or in the garden a stream of water under good pressure will take care of it. If more drastic treatment appears needful, use a pound of the paste form of whale-oil soap in ten gallons of water. A foliage oil emulsion also will be helpful.

GO EASY ON CULTIVATION.

Don't cultivate the soil more than it needs. This admonition, often repeated, still is unheeded in many sections. Cultivation can accomplish nothing more than ridding the soil of moisture-robbing weeds. Beyond that it is a wasteful practice, burning out soil organisms and inducing plow soles that make irrigation difficult. Cultivation will conserve moisture only as it destroys weeds, no more.

California Cotton—In 1928, California produced 172,230 500-pound bales of cotton; in 1927, 91,103 bales, and in 1926, 130,590 bales.

membership during the fall term. The members of this progressive committee report much interest among eligibles.

To Arrange for Admission Day.

Stockton—Stockton No. 7 elected officers June 3, W. I. Newley being selected for president. The following committee was named to arrange for the Parlor's participation in the Santa Cruz Admission Day celebration: H. M. Herrman, F. R. Fernando, W. A. Strong, F. G. Krumh, W. F. Woolfson, R. A. Mitscher.

Real Co-operation.

Merced—Yosemite No. 24 is already planning for the entertainment of the 1930 Grand Parlor, and A. E. Howard has been named chairman of a committee to carry on the work of preparedness. Veritas No. 75 N.D.G.W. will co-operate in every way. 1930 will be the diamond anniversary-year of Merced County, and it is probable the celebration of that event will be featured in connection with the Grand Parlor gathering.

Co-operating with the Parlor and giving endorsement to its endeavors, the management of the Hilmar Community Fair, the only fair to be held in Merced County this year, has designated August 21 as Native Sons and Daughters Day, and will set aside a good portion of the day's receipts for the Grand Parlor entertainment fund. This is real community spirit, and is very encouraging to the committee.

Flags Presented.

Oakland—The Alameda County Board of Supervisors was presented June 12 with a set of flags by the several Native Son and Native Daughter Parlor of the county. The presentation was made by Richard M. Hamb (Piedmont No. 120), who said: "These flags are in appreciation of the favors and courtesies extended the Alameda County Natives by the Board of Supervisors during the Admission Day celebration here last September."

Supervisor Walter M. Davis made the acceptance address, and traced the history of the California State (Bear) Flag, raised at Sonoma, June 14, 1846.

Visitors Given Good Time.

Saint Helena—Saint Helena No. 53 was host June 16 to the Parlors of Vallejo, Napa, Calistoga and Suisun at a largely attended Napa and Solano Counties inter-city gathering. The festivities opened with a parade headed by Napa No. 62's drum corps, following which was an Italian supper. Mayor Walter Metzner, a member of No. 53, welcomed the visitors and among the other speakers were President W. O. Mackay of Napa No. 62, President Fermin Segoria of Vallejo No. 77, President Louis Carlinzoli of Calistoga No. 86, President H. R. Thomas of Solano No. 39, Grand Marshal Arthur J. Cleu, Grand Inside Sentinel Joseph Clavo and Eugene Webber.

After the feast Frank Harrison took charge and presented an excellent program. The visitors were loud in their praises for the good time had. The arrangements were in charge of a committee composed of Frank Harrison, Albert Griffith and Remo Corbella. This was the last of the inter-city gatherings.

Celebration Chairman Named.

Santa Cruz—Santa Cruz No. 90 will handle the details of the state-wide Admission Day celebration to be held here in September, and has named H. P. Jeantrout chairman of the general committee of arrangements. Grand Marshal Arthur Cleu, who will direct the September 9 parade, was here last month looking over the situation.

At the meeting June 11 the Parlor elected officers, Frank Burns being chosen president. Refreshments were served by Frank Leoncio and a committee. A membership contest is under way, with Enoch Alzina against Stanley Tait, H. T. Alzina and Sidney Tyler.

Independence Day Host.

San Bernardino—Arrowhead No. 110 will be host to all Native Sons in the southland at an old-fashioned barbecue at the Parlor's clubhouse, Crestline, in the San Bernardino Mountains, at 12 noon of Independence Day, Thursday, July 4.

"Come one, come all," says Secretary "Bob" Brazelton, "and, at the end of the day, if you have not been satisfied with plenty to eat and a good time in general, it will be 'just too bad.' Don't forget the members of your family. All we want to see is a paid-up card."

Flag Raising Ceremonies.

Oakland—Impressive flag raising ceremonies were held at Kilkare Woods, an Alameda County beauty spot, June 16. The flag, used in France during the world war, was presented the Kilkare Woods Association by Mr. Parker. Past Grand President Judge Fletcher A. Cutler was the orator of the day and was accompanied by Grand President Charles L. Dodge and Grand Second Vice-president Dr. Frank I. Gonzalez. Entertainment features and dancing concluded the ceremonies.

The affair was handled by the following committee, all members Fruitvale No. 252: James P. Cronin (chairman), Dr. C. H. Peters, Joseph F. Ehrhart, John Jacob Miller, Gerald McClellan, Ed. F. Van Alstine, Sidney Watz.

PERSONAL MENTION.

Past Grand Presidents Lewis F. Byington and Judge Charles E. McLaughlin departed June 16 for a tour of Europe.

GETTING THE MOLE.

Moles are one of the most serious of garden pests and one of the most difficult to eradicate, for the inexperienced, anyway. If a run can be found that is not too near the roots of plants, two ounces of carbolic bisulphide poured into the hole is pretty apt to smother the rodent. Poison placed in vegetables does no good; moles won't eat the bait. A better plan is to mix strychnine with hamburger steak. The scissors-type trap also is effective against moles.

MANY CHANGES MADE IN STATE'S AUTO REGULATIONS.

All persons driving motor vehicles in California will find numerous new state regulations in effect about August 15, as the result of bills passed by the State Legislature and signed by the governor. Among the more important are:

A definite procedure under which reckless drivers will be held financially responsible for damage to person or property. Centralized state control of traffic through the California highway patrol, a distinctive state traffic police. New regulatory provisions in the state code to promote safety, facilitate traffic and provide uniform enforcement. That motorists may familiarize themselves with the new laws, the legal department of the Automobile Club of Southern California has summarized the legislation thusly:

The motorists' liability measures provide that a negligent driver, when a damage judgment has been returned against him, must pay the bill. If he fails to do so, his license will be revoked. He could then recover the license only by paying the damage judgment up to $5,000 for one death or injury, or $10,000 for more than one death or injury in a given accident, or $1,000 for property damage in one accident, and would be called on to give financial security as to future operation of a motor vehicle by taking out insurance or posting a bond. Penalty of one year imprisonment or $1,000 fine, or both, for operation of a motor vehicle after suspension or revocation.

Motor-vehicle owner liable within certain limits for negligence of a driver operating car with expressed or implied permission, where driver is not an agent or servant of owner. Liability of parents for negligence of a minor includes every case where minor has expressed or implied permission of parent to drive, except when minor is employed by someone else.

Operator's and chauffeur's cards to carry court endorsement of records of convictions for driving while intoxicated, reckless driving and certain other offenses. Motorist violating promise to appear after arrest will receive no new license or registration card until case disposed of.

Driving in so negligent a manner as to indicate either wilful or wanton disregard of the safety of persons or property shall constitute reckless driving. Motorists must stop in obedience to human flagman or visible signal at railroad crossing.

Unlawful to operate a motor vehicle upon the highway unless equipped with a silencer or muffler. Stickers upon windshields prohibited, except when placed upon lower right side and seven inches square. Carrying of tires in front of radiator prohibited. Unlawful to use a horn otherwise than as a reasonable warning.

Offense of failing to stop and render aid divided into misdemeanor when only property damage, and felony when personal injury. Motorist must stop and leave name, or report to police department, when striking unattended vehicle. Pedestrian must walk upon left side of highway. Owner made responsible who requires carrying of excess loads or other violation by his drivers.

CALIFORNIA PAVEMENTS.

More than one-third of the mileage of the California state highway system is provided with pavement of the first class. More than one-fifth has pavement of the second class, and the balance consists of earth or surfaced roads.

Maximum Safety has been built into modern motor cars so that the number of motor fatalities per 100,000 registrations has declined materially in the past ten years.

NEW WAYS DEVELOPED TO MAKE ROADS LAST LONGER.

New developments in road construction and in truck design are contributing materially to the life of the road surface, says the United States Department of Agriculture.

The effect of six-wheel trucks on road pavements is only half as severe as the effect of four-wheel trucks of equal gross weight, according to tests by the public roads bureau. This indicates there is little doubt that the heavy trucks of the future will have six wheels. Large economies will result in the preservation of road surfaces and in wear and tear on the vehicles, as well as in the cost of transportation by reason of the larger loads that may be carried on a single vehicle.

Experience has shown that fine crushed rock and gravel roads, of which there are thousands of miles in the Western states, are worn down at the rate of an inch a year and more by traffic of 500 vehicles a day. As a result of experiments conducted by the highway departments of Oregon and California, and the public roads bureau, a method of treating or "processing" these roads by mixture of light asphaltic oils with the surface course in place on the road has been developed which practically eliminates all wear, does away with the dust nuisance and forms an incomparably smoother, better road. The new method of construction is now being widely adopted.

Similar methods for the treatment of sand-clay and topsoil roads in the South, developed by experiments conducted by the bureau in co-operation with the highway department of South Carolina, are being employed on a large scale in that area with similarly successful results and large economies.

GUARD AGAINST OVERHEATING;

IT IS MOST HARMFUL.

One of the most harmful influences to guard against in summer driving is overheating. This condition is generally due to the following, according to the free emergency road service of the California State Automobile Association:

Neglect to keep the battery filled with pure distilled water is one of the greatest evils, as well as the most common, and will shorten its life quicker than anything else. Evaporation of the water in the solution is continuous. If the level of the water is permitted to reach a point below the tops of the plates, the upper portion is left exposed and useless.

If only one-half of the surface of the plate is covered by the solution, a normal charging rate is equivalent to twice the amount of current which should go through the covered portion. This causes rapid overheating and damage not seen at the time, but which results in considerable expense later. The temperature in the battery should not be allowed to exceed 110 degrees Fahrenheit.

DEFINITE BRAKE STANDARD SET.

By amending the California Vehicle Act, the State Legislature set a definite standard of adequacy for motor-vehicle brakes. The amendment provides that a car must be equipped with brakes capable of stopping the car within certain distances at certain speeds.

It is further provided that no vehicle shall be tested for brake efficiency at a speed higher than that permitted by law for such vehicle.

BURDENS EQUALIZED.

About fifteen sparsely-settled California counties will benefit by the passage by the State Legislature of Assembly Bill No. 1060, which has been signed by the governor.

The bill provides that, before division of motor-vehicle funds on the basis of registrations, a minimum allotment of the funds shall be made to each county. This will help to equalize the highway burdens of all the counties.

It's Dangerous—Gasoline is a dangerous explosive, and care should be exercised in its use in the garage and the home. One gallon, when properly mixed with air, is equivalent to eighty-three pounds of dynamite.

"DOLL UP," FOR THE AUTO

TOURISTS ARE COMING IN DROVES.

That California South may look for a record number of visiting autoists is indicated in figures compiled by the Automobile Club of Southern California, showing the number of cars coming into this section through eastern gateways. In April of this year the check through the border stations of California by the State Department of Agriculture showed that 608 cars came through Blythe, 4,290 through Daggett, 2,697 by the Old Trails route, 1,595 over the Arrowhead cutoff, and 6,602 through Fort Yuma, a total of 11,500 cars. Of this number 6,517, or about 57 percent, bore out-of-state licenses. This was an increase over a year ago of a trifle more than 41 percent.

In this check, no count was taken of the routes from the East in the northern part of the state or of the cars entering from Oregon. Reports from the north indicate that the vacation influx of Oregon, Washington and Canada cars already has started, so that it is safe to assume that a new high mark for visiting motorists will be set.

With this prospect in view, the big motoring organization is urging all communities to "doll up" so that the visitors will obtain the best possible impression of California South.

BE CAREFUL OF CHILDREN.

Drive slowly when approaching or passing children, is the message of the California Committee on Public Safety, which is conducting a state-wide campaign to reduce the traffic accident toll.

The committee advises that there is but one safe rule to follow when approaching children at play in the streets or upon sidewalks—drive slowly and always have the car under perfect control.

BEST BRAKES.

Brakes that will lock the wheels are not the most efficient. Friction is the most important factor in stopping a car. The best brake adjustment is that which stops just short of locking. And, of course, the tires that have been through several brake lockings are the ones that wear out the quickest.

To Avoid Accidents—Many avoidable accidents could be averted if motorists, changing tires or making mechanical repairs, kept entirely off the highways.

SMOKING BANNED IN STATE'S EIGHTEEN NATIONAL FORESTS.

Effective June 1, and continuing until the end of the fire season, no smoking will be permitted within any of the eighteen national forests of California, except in established camps, at places of habitation and in certain high mountain areas in the Sierra Nevada, according to orders issued by S. B. Show, chief of the California district, United States Forest Service.

The orders further provide that each automobile or pack-train party camping in the national forests must be equipped with a shovel and an ax suitable for fire fighting purposes. A camp fire permit must also be secured before building any fires upon national forest land, including fires in stoves burning gasoline, kerosene or wood.

A number of important watersheds within the Cleveland, San Bernardino, Santa Barbara and Sierra National Forests have already been closed to all public use and travel, except under special permit from the Forest Service.

"Joy" Silent
HYDRAULIC

FOR OVERHEAD VALVE MOTOR
HOW IT WORKS: Oil in chamber C flows around plunger D, automatically maintaining a column of oil to take the blow from the cam; a shock absorber for the valve.

A revolutionary invention based on an old, established principle! Absolutely eliminates valve noise in the most efficient type of motor ever designed! Your motor need never be "NOISY!"

The JOY HYDRAULIC PUSH RODS eliminate the necessity of outside push rod clearance. So simple in construction and operation they outlast the life of a car. To install, simply remove the regular push rods—replace with JOY HYDRAULICS—just a few moments' job—and the trick is done! Then a SILENT MOTOR FOREVER!

FIFTY YEARS AGO

drowned by the upsetting of a boat on San Francisco Bay, July 20.

Pat Quinn, a miner, was decapitated in the San Geronimo mine at Nicasio, Marin County.

Stephen McDonald, aged 14, out hunting with a lad named Gordon at Shasta, Shasta County, July 10, thought he had accidentally killed his companion and, in anguish, blew his own head off. Gordon was only wounded.

Andrew Larsen was killed July 8 by the explosion of a steam thresher boiler near Rio Vista, Solano County.

Charles Reed, celebrated minstrel, with Cummings and Harrington, a burnt-cork team, sailed from San Francisco for Australia, July 9. Charles Locke, theatrical manager, claimed they owed him $500, and a squad of police went to the steamer to arrest them, but although it was searched from deck to hold they could not be found. When the steamer was beyond reach of the officers three women, dressed in deep mourning, appeared at the deck rail and, raising their veils, gave the officers the haka.

Agnes Schui, 15 years of age, preparing breakfast at Oroville, Butte County, July 10, was fatally burned as the result of her clothes catching fire from the stove. Two weeks previously, her brother was drowned in the Feather River.

General E. Banton of Los Angeles was waylaid at San Geronimo by three men, apparently for the purpose of robbery. While lashing him to the wheel of a wagon he got possession of a revolver and, when the opportunity offered, fired and killed one of the men, named John Wakefield. A second one was wounded but, with the third, made his escape.

Francis Milliken, a 9-year-old San Francisco lad, was killed July 3 while shooting a toy cannon.

The Fearless Victory Club was an organization of young women of Chico, Butte County, and not a man was allowed to join. It was believed to have a literary foundation, but the consensus of masculine opinion was otherwise.

Frank Smith, veteran stage driver, walked in his sleep out of the second story of a Merced City livery stable July 20 and broke his hip. While lying helpless upon the ground some miscreant robbed him of $20.

BOWLING CHAMPIONS.

San Pedro—Sepulveda Parlor No. 263 N.S.G.W. has invited Long Beach Parlor No. 239 and Santa Ana Parlor No. 235 to unite with it for joint installation of officers July 19. District Deputy E. C. Crowell will be the installing officer.

Repeating their victories of last fall and winter, the howlers of the Parlor won a second cup this spring in the San Pedro Fraternal Bowling League. Final games were played June 5, and the Sepulveda team emerged with a seven-point margin over the nearest competing team.

As a reward for their achievement in winning two trophies in one year, the Parlor will present small gold howling-hall charms to the members of the team: M. A. Bennett (captain), Dr. C. W. Kocher, John P. Martin Jr., Frank Ardaiz and Stanley A. Wheeler.

BIG MEMBERSHIP GAIN PROMISED.

Long Beach—Long Beach Parlor No. 239 N.S.G.W. is scoring success by continually initiating new members. Frank B. Hart is in charge of the membership campaign and, with the assistance of Treasurer E. C. Crowell, appointed district deputy, a big gain for the term is promised in this district.

June 14 the homeless children committee of the Parlor went to Los Angeles and turned into the fund to assist the "kiddies" the munificent sum of $500.

"CONCERTIZED OPERA."

"Opera under the stars" will vie with "symphonies under the stars" at the Hollywood Bowl this summer. Three great operatic masterpieces will come to a hearing in concertized form, without the usual settings and accoutrements of stage presentations.

Stars from the great opera houses will interpret the leading roles, and the great howl orchestra under the haton of Eugene Goossens will play not only the accompaniment but orchestral interludes to supplant choral numbers and recitative and to maintain the momentum and motivation of the score. Assisting artists, picked for peculiar promise and adaptability, will support the headliners.

Here is the repertoire of the greatest innovation in howl history: July 26—"Carmen," with Alice Gentle, Paul Althouse and Alexander Kisselburgh. August 2—"Die Walkure," with Elsa Alsen, Paul Althouse and Tudor Williams. August 16—"Tannhauser," with Alice Gentle, Alexander Kisselburgh and Otto Ploetz.

THE DEATH RECORD.

Mrs. Francisca B. Bottler, mother of Frank D. Bottler (Ramona N.S.), passed away May 29. William K. Spence, affiliated with Hollywood Parlor No. 196 N.S.G.W., was killed in the auto races at Indianapolis, May 30. He was born in Los Angeles City, June 9, 1906, and is survived by a wife.

Mrs. Edna Pearl Leavitt-Love, wife of Lew A. Love (Modesto N.S.), passed away June 4 at Burbank. She was a native of Calaveras County, aged 38.

Ferdinand A. Alvarez, father of Gus Alvarez (Ramona N.S.), died June 9.

William T. Hearst, affiliated with Stanford Parlor No. 76 N.S.G.W. (San Francisco), died June 18, survived by a wife, Ethel M. Hearst (Californiana N.D.).

HAND OF MAN-- A STORY OF THE FORESTS

Southard M. Modry

CHAPTER VII.

THE FIRST REAL STEPS IN THE CONSERVATION of forest lands began during the term of President Benjamin Harrison, when Congress in the year 1891 authorized the president to set aside forest reserves from the public domain.

The act of 1891 was stimulated by the necessity of protecting watersheds from denudation. Since that time succeeding presidents have taken forest lands from the public domain and the national parks and established forest reserves under the direction of the Interior Department. President Theodore Roosevelt, particularly, set aside vast areas. Since the act of 1891 agricultural lands within the reserves have been opened for settlement, and liberal provisions made for those engaged in mining and hydro-electric power development.

The administration of the vast areas of forest reserves which, in order to avoid confusion, are now called national forests, rests with the division of forestry in the Department of Agriculture. The department has also established experimental stations for the purpose of conducting such experiments as may be necessary. Many of these stations are in co-operation with the states, universities and colleges. At the University of California is the California Forest Experiment Station, under the able direction of Director E. I. Kotok, maintained by this department.

California is the second largest state in the West in national forest and park areas, being second only to Oregon. Under the supervision of the Federal Government, adequate fire protection and rules for the administration of this immense domain have been established and wisely administered. The Forest Service has within its ranks a highly efficient organization of specially trained men whose lives are devoted to the administration and preservation of forests and watersheds. No finer body of men exists in the government service.

The government has established wise provision for the administration of the timbered areas, including artificial reforestation. Lumber companies are permitted to operate within the area, the timber to be cut being previously checked by forest rangers and sold to them. It is required by the department that a certain number of seed trees be left, in order to reforest cut-over areas. All lumber operators in these districts are carefully checked and compelled to observe all the rules of the department, especially in regard to burning and slash disposal, usually done under the supervision of rangers. Cattlemen and sheepherders are permitted to graze their stock in these areas on payment of a reasonable fee and full compliance with all government regulations. Especially is the protection and encouragement of wild animal life assisted, and the destruction of predatory animals sought. Much stress is made to insure the perpetuation of fish, and the government maintains several fish hatcheries.

At the present time there is pending in the Congress of the United States a bill known as the "Englebright bill," a measure introduced by Representative Englebright of California for fire prevention. At the present time the Forest Service is supplied with funds to fight fires, but no means are provided for fire prevention, such as building forest fire breaks and fire trails and the procurement of proper fire fighting equipment. This bill appropriates and creates a large fund for the purpose, and as the Western forests will secure valuable and much-needed protection by the passage of the bill. Grizzly Bear readers can give much-needed co-operation by communicating with their representatives and senators, requesting support for the "Englebright bill."

DO IT NOW!
This summer, when traveling through the towering pines of the Sierra or the spreading redwoods of the coastland, don't forget to observe the simple rules laid down by the Forest Service for the protection of the woodlands. Don't forget to carry an ax and a spade along. If you are going to camp by the wayside. Don't forget to clean up rubbish when you are breaking camp. Don't forget to burn all inflammable material and, above all, don't forget to bury the remnants of the campfire with soil, not dead leaves.

The forest ranger's life is an extremely active one and a great responsibility rests upon his shoulders. Among his multitudinous duties are to see that all travelers observe the government regulations; to check the lumber companies and see that they give the government a square deal and comply fully with their contracts; to watch the herders who run cattle over the land, and to be forever watching for fire. In each forest area, different rules are in force, according to the condition of the country.

Get acquainted with the forest ranger in the district through which you are traveling. Notwithstanding his many duties and cares, you will find him kind and courteous, ever ready to lend a helping hand and, above all, willing to impart to you his intimate knowledge of the forest and forest life.

Remember, the national forests are maintained not only for the preservation of our national resources, but also for your pleasure and convenience, so conduct yourself when within their boundaries as if they were your own personal property. Observe rules of the forest station; report fires, no matter how small, because you may be the means of saving a vast area by so doing.

And, don't forget the "Englebright bill." Write to your senator and representative in the Federal Congress at Washington NOW!

DIAMOND STATE FAIR ATTRACTS RECORD NUMBER EXHIBITORS.

Fifty-two counties of California, several Western states and two foreign countries have so far arranged for exhibit space at the seventy-fifth annual (diamond) California State Fair and Western Exposition to be held at Sacramento City, August 31 to and including Admission Day, September 9.

President R. A. Condee of the exposition says the number of participating counties is by far the largest on record, thus assuring the greatest horticultural and livestock show in western history.

Many of the county displays, to be arranged in the agricultural pavilion, will carry historic themes appropriate for the diamond anniversary celebration of the State Fair. The states and foreign countries will have their exhibits in another structure, which also will house a feature exhibit from the 1,200-acre Kern County ranch of President Herbert E. Hoover.

IMMIGRATION THOUGHTS WORTHY CAREFUL CONSIDERATION OF THINKERS.

Who's taking care of the fruitgrower's daughter while the fruitgrower is busy growing fruit? The Mexican, according to Assemblyman E. G. Adams of Livingston, Merced County, genuinely alarmed by sociological questions which are bringing more peons across the border into California yearly. The Filipino, according to Miss M. R. Glenn, sociological expert of San Francisco, asserting that the little brown brother, while small, has a lot of "it" which American girls "fall for." No one, in the opinion of legislators who heard arguments for and against further spread of other than citizen labor. That efficient young woman [the fruitgrower's daughter] they held, is quite capable of caring for herself.

The peon from below the Rio Grande is spreading through the United States rapidly, carrying a menace to health through possibility of eventual widespread fusion of blood, while California records show that most of them die as paupers after having been seasonal public charges, and that at least 50 percent are afflicted with dangerous social diseases. Adams contended, asking support of a demand on Congress for restriction of immigration from Mexico.

The Filipino youth seeks the white girl in this country, buys himself a car and a new suit of clothes, attends public dances and makes a hit with a certain element of the composite Miss California, the result being a growing tendency to intermarry, and the consequent creation of a hybrid race, Miss Glenn declared.

CHAPTER VIII

CENTURIES GONE, THERE LIVED IN the province of Normandy, northern France, a powerful potentate, in that day the most powerful military leader in Europe, namely, Duke William of Normandy, afterwards called William the Conqueror. He was not only a soldier, but also a wise administrator who favored commerce and encouraged science. He conceived the idea of conquering his neighbor, England, and in the year 1066 A.D., taking advantage of the death of his cousin, Edward the Confessor, transported an immense army across the English Channel and defeated the Saxon king, Harold, on the field of Hasting.

In order to consolidate his conquest and to retain it in the midst of a hostile population, he caused a survey to be made of all the lands in the kingdom. This survey was entered in what was termed the "Doomsday Book," which was to have been a lasting evidence of title. Under the feudal system as perfected by this monarch, each lord held his land for service in time of war and, in some cases, to render other service to the king. In turn, the retainers under each nobleman held lands for military service.

Though the allodial system under which we hold our property has nothing in common with the feudal system, our constitution permits the use of private property, when necessary, for the protection and welfare of all the people and, more often by condemnation proceedings, the government of the nation, the state or the municipality takes over private property, allowing fair compensation therefor.

Our constitution and our laws allow every man to use his property in any way he may see fit, so long as he does not injure his neighbor. Each citizen is both legally and morally bound to so make use of his land as to preserve the physical and the natural resources of the commonwealth. He cannot render this land useless for future generations. There are many precedents in law which hold this doctrine sound. We are merely trustees of the land we hold for a short span of life and, as trustees, it is incumbent on us to so use our trust that those who come after us may survive.

The time has come when measures should be taken for the preservation of the watersheds of California. Luckily, the National Government has partly simplified this problem by establishing national parks, but there are still 17,250,000 acres of private lands, consisting mostly of watersheds, requiring forest protection. Several million acres of these lands have been entirely denuded of timber.

Different motives stimulated William the Conqueror in making his survey, but the primary idea was self-preservation. The same rule holds true in this modern age. The preservation of race and ideals should stimulate the State of California to follow in the footsteps of the National Government, with the end in view of establishing in this great domain a forest reserve of private lands for the welfare and protection of future generations. I reiterate: the owners of this land have but a passing interest; the people of the State of California have a lasting interest.

Like William the Norman, the State Government should cause to be made a survey of all the watersheds and forest lands within the confines of this state and, when completed, this survey should be designated a forest reserve, which should be administered wisely under the direction of the State Bureau of Natural Resources and the state forester. Let California have a forest reserve that shall stand throughout the ages as a monument to human wisdom.

The padres, as they struggled northward along El Camino Real, found in this state a veritable paradise. Let it not be said that the Anglo-Saxons, their successors in interest, like the savage Huns of Attila desolated this paradise.

Not the mines, not the farms, not the factories, but the soil far up in the mountains is the source of all wealth of this glorious state. To the giants of the forest, which hold back life-giving waters, do we owe our first duty. To guard, to protect and to replace them when they are destroyed, is the primary duty of the government.

We have been niggardly in the past. Are we going to continue that policy? Are we going to watch the forest lands of this state dwindle away until nothing remains but a desolate waste—until the rivers dry up, the lakes evaporate and practically all natural resources disappear?

Forest conservation will cost less today than ten years hence. A dollar today means a thousand times that amount in the future. The state and those interested in the lumber industry can, at a nominal cost, place the forests in almost the same status they were when the first White man ventured upon the soil of California.

In 1925, forest fires burned over 20,600 acres of forest land. In the same year 104,800 acres were cut over by lumbermen. The rate of cutting is increasing every year, yet throughout the state only a very small acreage is replanted. Demon fire, with your assistance, does less damage to the watersheds than the lumbermen themselves. These are facts which cannot be controverted.

Let the Native Sons of the Golden West rally to the cause of forestry. As citizens, let us demand from the State Legislature an accounting. Why have we not the proper forestry laws and regulations?

Ob, beautiful California, queen of the Golden West,
Of all earth's fair dominions, the loveliest and best.
With eastern borders guarded by mountains vast and grand,
On western shores Pacific's waves break over golden sand.
The summer sun is shining upon the green clad hills,
And all the air is throbbing with happy songbird trills;
The flowers like unseen censurs are wafting sweet perfumes
And painting hills and valleys with gorgeous colored blooms.
Orange groves with golden fruit and snowy blossoms white,
In every season of the year present a wondrous sight;
And lemon orchards vie to hold the palm for beauty rare,
With waxen blooms, shining leaves and yellow fruitage fair.
From out the bosom of the earth hot mineral fountains spring,
Whose healing waters to the sick relief and comfort bring;
And other springs and driven wells flow natural gas and oil

Which light the homes, run machines and make the kettle boil.

Here giant trees, the mightiest the world has ever known,
Have stood like lofty sentinels thru centuries long flown;
While the fury of the tempest and earthquake's awesome shock
Have failed their heights to level or massive forms to rock.

Here grand old canyons deep and green between great mountains rest,
While high above on towering peaks the eagles build their nest;
And their massive sides, impassible, white with untrodden snow,
Look down upon fair valleys where the tender violets grow.

And golden poppies, springing from the fertile hillside sod,
With the purple-shaded lupins in the breezes sway and nod;
And the tall and graceful yucca in its beauty may be seen
With mass of flower-decked branches, of hills a stately queen.

Mount Lassen, that for centuries in harmlessness had slept
And thru the years of solitude its secret had well kept,

DIAMOND JUBILEE STATE FAIR

(IRVIN ENGLER).

SACRAMENTO—CALIFORNIA'S STATE Fair this year will be a diamond jubilee, commemorative of the founding of the State Agricultural Society in 1854 and in celebration of the commonwealth's progress in horticulture, stock raising and industry during a span of seventy-five years. The State Fair grounds at Sacramento will be decked in gala attire for the notable event, which opens August 31 and continues for ten days, concluding with an especially brilliant program on California's Admission Day, September 9.

The usual features of the Fair, presented on a greater scale than ever before, will be augmented by gorgeous displays of other Pacific Slope states and the Republic of Mexico attractively assembled in one of the immense pavilions. Another new feature will be an aircraft show, the first ever held under the auspices of the State of California.

Now Finer than Ever

All extra fare train advantages to the East at no extra fare

Complete new equipment is now being placed in service on the "Golden State Limited." These new cars bring still greater refinements of travel luxury to this famous train, long the favorite of those accustomed to the fine things of life. Yet the extra fare to Chicago has been abolished.

The Golden State maintains its same fast 61¼-hour schedule from Los Angeles to Chicago, its additional through Pullmans to Kansas City, and St. Louis, and its same unexcelled connections with other fast trains out of these cities.

On the Golden State Limited, rooms en suite, if desired; Pullmans, club car, observation car, barber, shower baths, valet, maid, library—and Southern Pacific's exceptionally fine dining service.

Reduced summer roundtrips East on sale until Sept. 30—return limit Oct. 31.

Attracted by the record-breaking jubilee program, every California county is planning an exhibit in the California Horticultural Pavilion, bringing into one great panoramic picture the choice products and extensive resources of the Golden State. This alone will be a spectacle unequaled in the history of America, for no other state in the union is able to show such an amazing variety of soil products. It will be recorded as the world's greatest horticultural show.

In the Western Exposition Building will be exhibits from Arizona, Idaho, Nevada, Oregon, Utah, Wyoming and Mexico, grouped around a central display of products from the Kern County California farm of President Herbert Hoover. Here again the Diamond Jubilee Fair will make history, being the first exposition at which the farm of a President of the United States will be represented with an exhibit.

A record premium list, totaling $125,000, is offered in the various departments, including $27,000 for livestock, $10,000 for agriculture and horticulture, $23,600 for the State Fair horse show, $34,000 for harness and running races, and $8,000 in the educational department. An exceptionally interesting program of amusements and grandstand attractions is being mapped out for the record crowds which are expected to attend.

The first State Fair, held in San Francisco in 1854, was staged in Musical Hall, with a cattle show at Mission Dolores. Exhibits were transported in freight wagons drawn by mules or oxen, and many of them did not arrive until the fair had been under way for several days. Despite these obstacles and inconveniences, the pioneer exposition was pronounced a great success and it led to the second annual Fair, held in Sacramento in 1855, which definitely established California as a state with unlimited agricultural possibilities. Newspapers of America and Europe marveled at the almost unbelievable productivity of California soil.

In 1856 the Fair was held in San Jose, Santa Clara County, in 1857 at Stockton, San Joaquin County, in 1858 at Marysville, Yuba County, and in 1859 it returned to Sacramento City, where it has been held annually ever since. The State Fair plant now represents a valuation of $1,500,000, including 155 acres of ground and twelve large structures. Proposed improvements and additions for the next decade total $1,000,000.

The State Fair Board, in charge of the exposition, consists of R. A. Condee of Chino, president; T. H. Ramsay of Red Bluff, vice-president; Chas. W. Paine of Sacramento, secretary-manager; Fred H. Bixby of Long Beach, W. H. Brooks of El Centro, Justus Craemer of Orange, C. A. Melchor of McFarland, Edward Dinkelspiel of Suisun, Ellis Franklin of Colfax, Sam H. Greene of Oakland, A. C. Hardison of Santa Paula, Harold J. McCurry of Sacramento, and John M. Perry of Stockton.

CALIFORNIA

Railroads, cities, towns and harbors, by the people who have come,

Have been huddled in this land of great adventure now called home.

On the flag that floats so proudly over land and over sea,

With the group of stars so splendid, California's star we see;

And it marks her timely coming in the union of the states

With an open door of welcome thru the matchless Golden Gate.

Oh, life is worth the living in this glorious sun-kissed clime,

Where hills and vales are calling in a symphony sublime

For action and endeavor to achieve Creation's plan

And make this Eden of the World the home of God-like man.

(Editor's Note—The accompanying verse came to The Grizzly Bear from Nellie M. Cline of Placentia, Orange County, who says: "The poem was written by Mrs. Julia Garrison of Santa Ana, 82 years of age, who is in a wheelchair and is a most ardent lover of California. The poem was read recently at a meeting of Grace Parlor No. 242 N.D.G.W. of Fullerton.)

SANTA BARBARA TO DEDICATE NEW COURT HOUSE

SANTA BARBARA—ON THE GRAND Parlor of the Order of Native Sons of the Golden West and on Santa Barbara Parlor No. 116 N.S.G.W. and Reina del Mar Parlor No. 126 N.D.G.W. have been bestowed the honor of dedicating Santa Barbara County's beautiful new court house, completion of which marks a milestone in the civic development of the county. Many of the Natives, descendants of Pioneer stock, hold positions of honor in Santa Barbara's county organization and because of them and the service rendered by the Parlor to the community, it is particularly fitting that they should have the privilege of dedicating the building.

The court house, which covers an entire city block, is unique in architectural beauty and has attracted the attention of the entire state as well as that of hundreds of visitors from other parts of the country. Dedicatory ceremonies will be held in the sunken gardens in front of the building, and will bring together state and county officials, mayors of most of the California cities and thousands of native and adopted citizens of the state.

Visiting officials will be received by the Santa Barbara Board of Supervisors from 1 to 2 o'clock the afternoon of Wednesday, August 14, dedication day. The dedicatory ceremonies will start at 2 o'clock and will include:

Introductory remarks, W. E. Learned, president Santa Barbara Parlor No. 116 N.S.G.W.; presentation Flag of the United States of America, James A. Wilson, Junior Past Grand President N.S.G.W.; acceptance of flag, C. L. Preisker, chairman Board Supervisors; song, "The Star Spangled Banner"; presentation California State (Bear) Flag, Seth Millington, Grand Third Vice-president N.S.G.W.; acceptance of flag, Supervisor S. J. Stanwood; song, "I Love You, California"; address, Charles L. Dodge, Grand President N.S.G.W.; address, Judge Fletcher A. Cutler, Past Grand President N.S.G.W.; song, "America"; placing of tablet, grand officers N.S.G.W.

Reina del Mar Parlor No. 126 N.D.G.W., which is arranging the reception to follow the dedicatory ceremonies, has invited, and received, the co-operation of all the women's organizations in Santa Barbara County, members of which will act as hostesses in various parts of the building. Following the court house program, the Grand Parlor N.S.G.W. Landmarks Committee will place a bronze plaque commemorating the raising of the Flag of the United States of America at Santa Barbara City, December 27, 1846, by Fremont's Military Scouts.

The dedication of Santa Barbara County's new court house officially opens the Old Spanish Days Fiesta, an annual event in Santa Barbara City, which will continue through Thursday, Friday and Saturday.

ADMISSION DAY CELEBRATION AT SANTA CRUZ

SANTA CRUZ—SANTA CRUZ IS ARRANGING to welcome an immense crowd during the state-wide Admission Day celebration under the auspices of the Order of Native Sons of the Golden West. Arrangements for the celebration, which will be a three-day affair, September 7, 8 and 9, are in charge of Santa Cruz Parlor No. 90 N.S.G.W.

The Parlor has the co-operation of the Santa Cruz Chamber of Commerce, Santa Cruz Parlor No. 26 N.D.G.W., Watsonville Parlor No. 65 N.S.G.W. and El Pajaro Parlor No. 35 N.D.G.W. of Watsonville.

The celebration will open Saturday, September 7, with follies and dancing in various parts of the city. A program of events for the 8th is in the making. The big feature of the 9th, Admission Day, will be the parade, in charge of Arthur J. Cleu, Grand Marshal N.S.G.W., in which thousands of uniformed and gaily costumed Native Sons and Native Daughters, with numerous hands and drum corps, will participate.

Details of the celebration are in the hands of numerous committees. The executive committee is composed of H. P. Jeantrout (chairman), Willett Ware (secretary), Stanley G. Tait (treasurer).

CALIFORNIA HAPPENINGS OF FIFTY YEARS AGO

Thomas R. Jones

(COMPILED EXPRESSLY FOR THE GRIZZLY BEAR.)

DURING AUGUST 1879 CALIFORNIA experienced one of the most intense and exciting state political campaigns in its history. Political meetings, preceded by torchlight processions with brass bands, bonfires and street illuminations, and addressed by party warhorses were of nightly occurrence during the week-days in all of the important cities and towns. Some times two of the contending parties held meetings in the same city the same night, and this resulted in personal clashes, both vocal and fistie.

George C. Perkins, Republican candidate for governor, on account of his coming to California before the mast around Cape Horn, was dubbed the "Sailor Boy," and enthusiastic clubs were organized for his reception in many towns. This seemed to give him an edge on the situation. William F. White, the candidate of the Workingmen, had no distinguishing trait, and was seldom mentioned.

But Dr. Hugh M. Glenn, the New Constitution and Democratic candidate, came into the limelight as a land baron—as the owner of a domain of 65,000 acres upon which were employed a thousand mules and but a few score White men. It was contended that the day's work on his ranch began at 3:30 a. m. and ended at 8 p. m., and that his sons, aged 11 and 8 years, could speak the Chinese language more fluently than English, owing to the employment of Chinese there. The advocates of the New Constitution party were kept busy nailing campaign lies, and the cognomen by which Dennis Kearney had dubbed them, namely, "Honorable Bilks,"—shortened to the initials "H. B."—gave them a handicap hard to overcome. A large number of dyed-in-the-wool Democrats bolted Dr. Glenn's nomination and this was another disconcerting condition.

The finishing stroke to the campaign came August 23. The Workingmen of San Francisco had nominated as a candidate for mayor of that city Rev. I. S. Kalloch, a Baptist minister of oratorical ability. The DeYoung brothers, publishers of the "San Francisco Chronicle," recognizing the fact that he was the candidate to heat, started a vindictive campaign against him. Rev. Kalloch, in his public speeches, responded in kind and read extracts from scurrilous articles published about the DeYoungs. Charles DeYoung notified him he would shoot him on sight if he repeated them, and at a public meeting the night of the 22nd Rev. Kalloch, undismayed, repeated the charges. The morning of the 23rd Charles drove in a coupe to the side door of the Metropolitan Temple, where Rev. Kalloch had his study, and sent a messenger boy to inform him a gentleman desired to speak with him. Unsuspecting, he went down and, opening the door, was shot from the coupe by DeYoung, twice. One bullet hit him in the chest and another in the thigh, and he was considered dangerously hurt. DeYoung started to leave, but the gathering crowd overturned the coupe and would have served summary treatment had not the police arrived in time to take him away. Great excitement prevailed throughout the city and the state, and the "H. B." party was doomed.

POOR SHOOTING REFLECTED ON TOWN.

With the Republicans united and the three opposing parties divided into warring factions, they viewed the field serenely and, at the end of the month, felt confident of success. There was considerable fusion between the party candidates for minor offices throughout the state, and this made the results, for other than the state offices, confusing.

Joseph D. Lynch, editor of the "Los Angeles Express," and Wm. A. Spaulding, editor of the "Los Angeles Herald," had been expressing opinions of each other in abusive language during the campaign in the editorial columns of their respective papers. August 15 Spaulding stationed himself in the doorway of the "Express" office and awaited the coming of Lynch, and when he appeared, crossing the street, he fired two shots at him. Lynch responded by pulling a gun and firing four shots at Spaulding. A bystander named Majors was hit in the thigh, receiving a flesh wound, and a printer in the "Express" office was shot through an ear. As neither of the editors could hit the side of a barn the public demanded they be kept under surveillance and thus prevented from doing harm to some one else.

P. Ganee, editor of a French newspaper in Los Angeles, published an article attacking the integrity of Frank Oakley, who went to the editorial rooms to get satisfaction. Not receiving it, he pulled a gun and shot four times at Ganee, who responded with one shot. Neither was hit, and such poor shooting was considered a reflection on the town.

"Lucky" Baldwin was arrested, and the distillery, warehouse and wine cellars of his Santa Anita, Los Angeles County, rancho were seized, August 11, by revenue officers for violation of the law in using refilled and unstamped packages of brandy. Some of his employees were the principal witnesses against him, and he was put under bond.

General John C. Fremont, now the governor of Arizona, came to California by rail from Chicago August 15. Time was no object, when he first came overland to this state.

Wesley Venus, a Pioneer of the Pacific Coast, came to Sacramento from the wilds of Oregon to draw a deposit made in a bank there in 1854, since which time he had been around the world. He was paid 50 cents on the dollar by the receiver of the defunct bank, and was grateful for that.

R. B. Woodward, who created the pleasure ground of Woodward Gardens and made the What Cheer House the famous hostelry of workmen in San Francisco and thus became a millionaire, died August 20.

NICKELS IMPORTED FROM JAPAN.

The Southern Pacific Company had built a line of road from Benicia to Suisun, Solano County, across the tule lands bordering Suisun Bay. Two hundred yards of the roadbed sank out of sight August 1. Pites were repeatedly driven and filling in was resorted to, but this section has continued to sink out of sight at intervals ever since and the company has spent many thousands of dollars to maintain the line.

It was claimed that the wreck of the steamship "Brother Jonathan," sunk in July 1865 off the coast from Crescent City, Del Norte County, had been located in twenty-two fathoms, a depth from which the $1,000,000 of treasure that was on board could be salvaged. An expedition to do this was being organized in San Francisco.

Ten cargoes of wheat, amounting to 402,104 centals and valued at $700,421, cleared for Europe through the Golden Gate during the month.

Dividends paid by mining companies this month amounted to $745,416, compared with $1,435,041 in August of 1878. The decline of fifty percent was due to the exhaustion of the Nevada bonanzas.

The San Francisco Mint coined during the month 139,000 twenty-dollar, 12,000 ten-dollar and 21,700 five-dollar pieces, and 700,000 silver dollars. This coinage, amounting to $3,708,500, was all from gold and silver mined on the Pacific Coast.

The month's exports of treasure from San Francisco were $1,267,547 to New York and $547,163 to China. Owing to the demand for nickles exceeding the supply, several thousands of dollars in Japan 5-cent pieces were imported from Yokohama by financiers and put in circulation in San Francisco.

A big development of a silver ore deposit was discovered in the Tioga district, about twenty-five miles south of Bodie, Mono County, and a rush was in progress.

Wheat fields were now reported near Hanford, Kings County, where, four years ago, the water of Tulare Lake was ten feet deep. So fast had the water of the lake receded, the brink was five

MOTOR INDUSTRY OPPOSES PLACING ITS PRODUCTS ON FREE LIST.

Reduction of the tariff on passenger motor cars from 25 to 10 percent ad valorem, maintenance of the present 25 percent duty on trucks and buses, and retention of provisions in the present tariff act for imposition of countervailing duties up to 50 percent ad valorem, were submitted July 11 as the views of the automotive industry of the United States in general, by Alvan Macauley, president National Automobile Chamber Commerce, at the final hearing of the metals and metals manufactures subcommittee of the Hawley tariff bill, consideration of which will be resumed when the Federal Congress assembles in December.

"If this question [placing all motor vehicles on the free list] had been raised to us one or two years ago," said Macauley, "I think I am safe in saying that virtually a unanimous answer would have been that we required no tariff for passenger cars. But today, in the event of a removal of the motor vehicle from the dutiable list, and with changing economic conditions abroad, the result might be the invasion of the American market by foreign-made cars. . . .

"We cannot assume the responsibility for opening the doors to free competition by foreign labor in American markets through consenting to placing our commodity on the free list, without first trying out a partial reduction, nor do we believe that Congress should do so."

OPERATORS MOTOR VEHICLES MUST GET NEW LICENSES.

The licenses of all auto drivers issued prior to January 1, 1927, will automatically become canceled at midnight of August 14, according to the State Division of Motor Vehicles. The action is made imperative by the new state motor-vehicle law, which goes into effect that date.

Within a reasonable length of time after August 14, traffic officers will be instructed to arrest all drivers not having up-to-date licenses and to charge them with a misdemeanor. This will be instrumental, it is contended, in weeding out a lot of unfit drivers and will place all operators under the supervision of the state.

NEW AUTO EQUIPMENT WATCHED WITH APPREHENSION.

Advocates of safe auto driving are watching with some apprehension a new radio receiving apparatus for use in an automobile. It is said the driver of an auto equipped with one of these can, at the same time, listen to music, stock market reports, sport events, etc.

Whether such attachments are to become rivals of the mythical, but famous, hack-seat drivers is still a question, but it is feared by many that if a person attempts to drive a car and listen to a radio program at the same time there is greater liability of accidents than when the driver concentrates on the job.

Prize Winning Slogan—"This is your country—beautify it." is the prize-winning slogan of the national contest conducted among high-school students to enlist popular support in beautifying the countryside.

Better Conditions—America's 1929 vacationing motor tourist caravan, some 45,000,000 strong, are encountering this year better road and touring conditions than ever before.

To Eliminate Grade Crossings—The California Public Safety Committee has launched a program to eliminate grade crossings, hazards of the state highways.

STRICT ENFORCEMENT OF HEADLIGHTS LAW PROMISED.

Driving with glaring or dazzling headlights any place in California will be a misdemeanor when the new motor vehicle law becomes effective August 14. Declaring its intention to rid the highways of these menaces, which are productive of more complaints than any other single offense, the State Division of Motor Vehicles will strictly enforce the law.

Traffic officers, after August 14, will cite all drivers with such lights to appear in court. The notice will require an offender to have the lights adjusted before appearing in court and be prepared to submit satisfactory evidence that he has done so when he appears; the punishment thereafter will be at the discretion of the court.

EYESORES ALONG HIGHWAYS*MUST BE ELIMINATED.

"Must our fine highways be bordered by bewildering signs, tawdry buildings, weeds, waste paper and old cans?" queried Secretary Ray Lyman Wilbur of the Federal Interior Department in a recent radio address devoted to improving and preserving the natural beauty of roadsides.

Many national organizations, government officials and other personages are lending their active support to the highways beautification movement, which is aimed especially toward the elimination of ill-appearing and dilapidated shacks, junk heaps and eyesore signs tacked and bill-posted upon trees, fences and public and private property along highways.

That highway signs which mar the natural attractiveness of roadsides must go, is the rapidly-growing sentiment among motorists throughout the country.

BIG INCREASE IN FATALITIES.

Fatalities resulting from auto accidents in the City and County of Los Angeles increased nearly 32 percent during the first six months of 1929, according to the Automobile Club of Southern California.

Deaths resulting from motor vehicle accidents of all natures totaled 358, an increase of 86, or 32 percent, over the fatalities for the same period of 1928. The number of autos operating in the city and county, however, has grown approximately hut 8 percent.

SATURATION POINT NOT REACHED.

Licensed auto operators in California are increasing at the rate of approximately 27,000 a month, which proves that the state is still far from the "saturation point," either in motor vehicles or their operators.

"It is not the green driver, but the fellow of long experience who thinks he can drive, that causes the accidents," according to George F. Moynahan, the state's chief inspector.

Autos Attack—No railroad locomotive ever went out of its way to attack an auto, but the same cannot be said for autos, according to a railway engineer, who says that 25 percent of last year's grade-crossing accidents were caused by autos running into trains.

Unnecessary Hazard—Driving a car when only part of the brakes are working and the car swerves when the brakes are applied adds unnecessary hazard to safety.

Scenic Route Opened—The scenic Roosevelt highway, extending from Santa Monica to Ventura, was opened to traffic June 29.

"Keep the Tail Light Burning" when the car is parked upon a dark street or left standing upon an unlighted roadway.

AUTO INDUSTRY OUTRANKS

ALL OTHER U. S. INDUSTRIES.

Nine of every ten autos in the world are American made, according to a July 11 statement of the Federal Commerce Department's automotive division. Of the grand total of 32,028,500 autos in world use, 90 percent were manufactured in the United States. The figure includes 24,567,000 passenger cars and 3,984,500 trucks.

Almost every other auto outside continental United States and Canada is American-made. Of the 6,336,843 cars in foreign countries, 2,231,600 passenger cars and 649,380 trucks came from the United States.

That the world is rapidly becoming motorized is strikingly shown by a comparison of registration figures at the end of 1922 and at the end of 1928. The increase in use of autos in the world, excluding continental United States, was 5,019,522, or 210 percent. In continental United States the increase was 12,390,068, or 100 percent.

The auto industry in the United States outranks all other manufacturing industries. Autos also rank first in exports of manufactured products from the United States. Exports alone from the United States and Canada nearly equal the combined production of the rest of the world. With the facts here presented, it is not difficult to understand why the United States and Canada support such a large majority of the world's motor cars.

LIGHTS FOR TRAFFIC OFFICERS.

The traffic officer of the future may be "lit up" at night, as experiments with that idea in view conducted at Washington, D. C. proved successful. A light harness is provided, which displays a red light on the shoulder strap and a green light on the arm band.

Investigating—The Federal Commerce Department has instituted a nation-wide investigation of the auto accident situation.

miles away from the former banks, and the land was being seeded as fast as it could be tilled.

The city council of Marysville, Yuba County, August 5 decided to file an injunction suit, to stop hydraulic mining, against all hydraulic mines along the Yuba River and its tributaries. The miners made an offer to contribute $30,000 to the Marysville levee fund and enable the city to raise its levees, but the offer was refused.

Many of the wooden sidewalks in Sacramento City were of uneven construction, laid down in a go-as-you-please way without regard to grade or height. The trustees passed an ordinance to have the sidewalks put on the level with an established grade. A multitude of arrests of property owners followed, and their complaints were loud against the improvement.

FOREST FIRES CAUSE HEAVY DAMAGE.

August 1 the thermometers registered above 100, and so continued until the 20th, going as high as 112 in some localities. Showers fell the 21st, cooling the atmosphere.

A big field fire broke out August 1 near Lone, Amador County, and burned for a week. It destroyed buildings, miles of fencing, stacks of hay and thousands of acres of pasturage. Charles Walker, a young man, dropped from a sunstroke while fighting the fire August 2.

A big fire started in the hills south of Mayfield, Santa Clara County, August 5 and spread over many square miles, doing an immense amount of damage.

A forest fire started east of Smartsville, Yuba County, and burned over the foothills of Nevada County to French Corral, sweeping for ten days through the brush and trees.

Eight hundred acres of standing grain in Vlacitas Valley, near Livermore, Alameda County, burned August 3, with a $10,000 loss.

There were many forest fires of lesser size burning in the Sierra from Siskiyou to San Diego during the month and, until cleared by showers, the atmosphere was so filled with smoke the sun appeared to be a red orb in the sky and could be gazed at without the eyes being dazzled by its glare.

At San Rafael, Marin County, there was a twenty-four-hour walking contest between local pedestrians. Eugene Sentiss won by walking eighty-three miles.

Ten Western Union telegraph operators in San Francisco entered a pedestrian contest August 10 for a sweepstake of twenty miles. E. H. Reese won by going the distance in three hours and forty-seven minutes.

Crittenden Robinson and R. B. Johnson shot for $100 a side at ten pigeons at Bird's Point, Alameda County. Robinson won, killing all his birds.

The sporting part of Los Angeles' population crowded Main street August 31 to witness a footrace for $1,000 a side between two sprinters named Davis and Williams. Davis won by a nose.

W. E. Shilton, living at Yuba Dam, a suburb of Marysville, Yuba County, August 2 shot and killed a Chinaman in his chickenhouse. The Chink had three dozen chickens sacked and was ready to depart when halted.

A man named Brewer went to the home of his sister on a farm ten miles from Stockton, San Joaquin County, and grossly abused her. When John Campbell, her husband, came home and learned the fact he went in search of his brother-in-law and shot him dead.

Mrs. George G. McKinley, wife of a farmer near Dixon, Solano County, August 8 visited the threshing crew at work on the farm. In some unknown manner her clothing caught fire from the engine and she was fatally burned.

GRIZZLY KILLED IN FIERCE COMBAT.

Two brothers in their teens, named Lawrence and Charles Castle, went out in a boat on Tomales Bay, Marin County, to fish. A squall upset the boat, and both were drowned.

A lad named Engle, at Georgia, Shasta County, August 5 attempted to light a fire in a cook stove with coaloil. The oil exploded, and he was hurled to death.

Walter F. King and a companion named Williams went on a deer hunt to Skunk Hollow, between Merced and Santa Clara Counties. After making camp they saw the track of a grizzly, and King started, alone, to find the bear. Not returning, Williams went in search of him and found him lying upon the ground, unconscious, with a bloody butcherknife in his hand. He was bleeding from a ghastly wound in his side, his clothing had been stripped from him by the grizzly's clawing, and his head was partially scalped. About twenty feet away the grizzly lay dead. It had first been shot, then attacked King by turning suddenly and rushing upon him. Then followed an encounter which King ended with his butcherknife and in which he received injuries that disabled him for a long time.

While riding along a trail in Temescal Canyon, Alameda County, a 12-year-old girl, named Thorndyke, and her young brother came upon a bear and two cubs. Giving chase, they separated them and drove the cubs into a corral. The lad was badly bitten and clawed in his attempt to capture one of the cubs and, while attending to his hurt, the she-bear came and, growling menacingly, led the cubs away. The children did not seem to be alarmed at the danger they were in.

Lee McCoy, a lad living near Maxwell, Colusa County, was thrown by a mule, dragged several miles and killed.

A young man named Arthur attended a political meeting at Hicksville, Sacramento County, and riding home after midnight became so drowsy he dismounted to take a sleep under a tree by the roadside. He tied the halter rope of the horse to his leg in order to keep it by him. While he slept the horse became scared and ran away, dragging young Arthur to death.

The skeletons of two men were found by a sheepherder near the South Fork of the San Joaquin River on the Mono County trail. The men had evidently perished in one of the winter blizzards while on their way to Mono County. There were no identification marks found about them.

A party of military officers and their ladies with the Eighth Infantry band went on a tug from Benicia to Vallejo, Solano County, August 12 to pay a visit to the officers at Mare Island Navy Yard. While returning, about midnight, a heavy sea struck the tug and swept overboard most of the instruments of the band and two of the musicians, named Comas and Ardine, who were drowned.

FRESNO—JULY 4, INDEPENDENCE DAY, Fresno No. 25 inaugurated its program of marking historic spots in Fresno County by placing a bronze marker upon the site of the first mercantile business conducted in the limits of the present City of Fresno—the southwest corner of the Chamber of Commerce building, near the Southern Pacific depot. It was at this point that James E. Faber opened a general mercantile business in a tent, April 22, 1872. The railroad was then in course of construction, and had reached the point where the city was to be about a month previous. Faber was then clerking in a store at Herndon, on the San Joaquin River about ten miles north of Fresno. He purchased a stock of goods in Stockton, but found great difficulty in getting them transported to Fresno, since the railroad was open only for construction trains, and the regular wagon trains skirted the foothills about twenty miles to the east. But he found a friend, in the conductor of a construction train, who allowed him to load them in a boxcar used for hauling machinery, but had the crew dump them off on a sandridge about two miles north of the station, so that the division superintendent would not learn of this breach of the rules; Faber then went with a wagon and gathered them up. He did a thriving business among the railroad construction crews, and later on among the cattlemen who came to load their steers after the railroad was opened to traffic. His only approach to disaster was when his tent was attacked by an infuriated steer; he escaped by shinning up a pole, and the steer was satisfied with uprooting the guy-ropes of the tent. Faber, 84, is now a resident of Hayward, Alameda County, and has two daughters living in Fresno.

The ceremony was held under the trees in the park surrounding the Chamber of Commerce building, and was in charge of a committee consisting of C. B. Harkness, L. A. Winchell and M. E. Griffith. Two granddaughters of Faber unveiled the marker, and Griffith made the presentation speech. Mayor Z. S. Leymel accepted it for the city, praising the historical work of the Order and expressing his hopes for a continuance of the program of Fresno Parlor. Faber then told the audience of his experiences. The Independence Day celebration was sponsored by the Parlor, which organized the citizen's Fourth of July committee in 1927.

July 12, Fresno, Selma No. 107 and Madera No. 130 held a joint installation here, District Deputy Dan J. Sullivan presiding. The ceremonies were followed by a buffet supper. Fresno extended an invitation to the other two Parlor to be its guests at the annual dove feed September 6. This invitation was given in fulfillment of an obligation incurred by No. 25 when it lost a recent membership contest; under the terms of the competition, Fresno was to initiate twice as many members as the other two Parlor combined, but failed to do so by a small margin.

ALL TOGETHER!

Grand President Charles L. Dodge, in a letter dated July 1, advised Subordinate Parlor that, during the balance of this year, he will reward members of the Order with a $2.50 gold-piece for each candidate initiated.

Every Parlor needs new members. Every community has desirable eligibles by the hundreds. Now is the time for every member to exert himself to bring those eligibles into the fold. A little effort on the part of all means big results for each Subordinate Parlor and the Order.

Membership Standing Largest Parlor.

San Francisco—Grand Secretary John T. Regan reports the standing of the Subordinate Parlor having a membership of over 400 January 1, 1929, as follows, together with their membership figures July 19, 1929:

Barbecue in Old Sonoma.

Sonoma—For the purpose of promoting sociality and replenishing its social fund, Sonoma No. 111 will sponsor a barbecue August 11 at Bates Grove, a beautiful grove of oak trees on the highway two miles southwest of this place particularly well adapted for the purpose. The public are invited, and special invitations have been sent all neighboring Parlor of Native Daughters and Native Sons.

The barbecue will be served at noon, following which dancing, games and social intercourse will be in order. The admission charge is $1.00 for adults, with a lesser charge for children. A pleasant outing is assured.

Entertains Daughters.

Sonoma—Tuolumne No. 144 entertained Dardanelle No. 66 June 28, the hall being tastefully decorated with flags, ferns and flowers. A large crowd was in attendance. Ed L. Gorgas, chairman of the evening, complimented President Tobias M. Wilzinski of No. 144 for the good work accomplished during his term, and congratulated the officers for the splendid condition, numerically and financially, of both Parlor.

Tobias M. Wilzinski delivered an address of welcome, Edwin L. Forster gave a stirring talk on "The Order of Native Sons," and musical numbers were contributed by Margaret A. Porter, Mrs. W. J. Porter, Ed. L. Gorgas, Rowan Hardin and Mrs. Edna Hardin. At the banquet, William M. Harrington was the toastmaster and spoke on "The Gold of California." Other speakers, and their subjects, included: Mrs. Carrie Ball of Golden Era No. 99 N.D.G.W. (Columbia), "Native Daughters;" Charles Grant of Columbia No. 258 N.S.G.W., "The Good of the Order;" President Mary E. Gorgas of Dardanelle No. 66, "California." A. J. Giovanetti delivered an address based on the spirit of the American people, and paid a wonderful tribute to the Native Sons of the Golden West.

To Stimulate Interest.

Weaverville—That members of Parlor in the northern part of the state may become better acquainted and that interest in the Order may be stimulated, Mount Baldy No. 87 and McCloud No. 149 (Redding) plan a gathering of California North Native Sons here August 10 and 11.

Plans of the arrangements committee include a dance the night of the 10th and a class initiation the morning of the 11th, these ceremonies to be followed by an outdoor luncheon for members of the Order and their friends. It is probable that several of the grand officers will be present at the gathering.

Drum Corps Wins Two Prizes.

San Rafael—Officers of Mount Tamalpais No. 64 will be installed by District Deputy J. S. Rosa, August 5, when a large class of candidates will be initiated. At the same time the Parlor's forty-fourth institution anniversary will be fittingly observed. Mount Tamalpais was instituted by Dr. Charles W. Decker, now Past Grand President, and the remaining charter members include: Frank M. Angellotti, former chief justice of the California Supreme Court, the first president, and Salvador Pacheco, the first financial secretary.

The "Big 5" committee of the Parlor is greatly elated over the fact that the drum corps, which it so enthusiastically sponsored, is a tremendous success. Though organized but a little more than a year, the drum corps got two prizes July 4 at Napa City—first, a silver loving cup, in a competitive drill, and second for the best-dressed unit in the parade.

Mount Tamalpais plans to make a good showing at the Admission Day celebration at Santa Cruz City. A committee is working out the details, and much interest is manifest among the membership.

Serra Pilgrimage.

W. I. Neeley, Thresa Costa and Christine Powers became the respective presidents. Following the ceremonies entertainment, including dancing, was provided.

SMALL SAN DIEGO COUNTY

COMMUNITY HAS ENVIABLE RECORD.

A community of more than 100 population settled more than a half-century ago into which no sheriff has even sent a deputy to make an arrest, is the boast of San Diego County for De Luz, twenty miles north of Oceanside and sixteen miles east of San Clemente. An old-timer of the region is authority for the claim that the community has always been strictly law abiding.

"Only three times in more than fifty years has an officer of the law paid an official visit to De Luz," he declares. "A deputy sheriff once called to take a mentally-deficient child to a state institution, a fire warden once came to serve notice of a fire hazard on a landowner, and a game warden once made an arrest of a northern visitor who had exceeded the bag limit."

N. S. NEWSPAPERMAN DEAD.

Sacramento City—Thomas Alonzo Cody, for sixteen years advertising manager of "The Sacramento Bee," died July 19 survived by a wife and a son. He was a native of Placerville, El Dorado County, aged 64, and was affiliated with Sacramento Parlor No. 3 N.S.G.W.

MENDOCINO TREASURER PASSES.

Port Bragg (Mendocino County)—A. L. Wintzer, for sixteen years treasurer of this county, died July 5 at San Francisco. He was born at Boonville, Mendocino County, January 12, 1865, and was affiliated with Alder Glen Parlor No. 200 N.S.G.W.

PRESIDENT N. S. PARLOR PASSES.

Antioch (Contra Costa County)—Charles Edward Webster Jr., president General Wiun Parlor No. 32 N.S.G.W., died June 30. He was born in this city, March 27, 1904.

CUTTING ALFALEA FOR QUALITY.

Alfalfa cut at the full-bloom stage may come through to No. 1 grade if all conditions in curing are just right; but if there should be some bleaching, over-drying, rain or dew damage, it would be very apt to go down a peg in grading and its value cut accordingly. On the other hand, if it is cut in the quarter-bloom stage, it will have a degree of color and leanness that will tolerate moderate damage without the lowering of its grade. The early-cut hay thus has a far better chance of making No. 1 grade and high profits than does the late-cut alfalfa.

THE BIG CITY THAT KNOWS HOW

"FATHER" OF NATIVE SONS HAS BIRTHDAY

JULY 11 WILL LONG BE REMEMBERED by many of the members of California Parlor No. 1 N.S.G.W., for on that evening some two hundred of them gathered at the Elks Club to celebrate about the festive board the fifty-fourth anniversary of the organization of the Parlor—the "father" of the Order of Native Sons of the Golden West.

Every remaining charter member was present: Past Grand President John H. Grady, Grand Treasurer John E. McDougald, Ellis Bloch, Alfred Gilbert, William H. Staniels, Aaron Heringhi, John R. Matches, Charles W. Welch, William Josephi, James B. Stovall, A. C. Lutgens, Edwin L. Meyer and Albert Goldman.

Also, the following representatives of the Grand Parlor: Grand President Charles L. Dodge, Junior Past Grand President James A. Wilson, Grand Second Vice-president Dr. Frank I. Gonzalez, Grand Secretary John T. Regan, Grand Marshal Arthur J. Cleu, Grand Inside Sentinel Joseph Clavo, Grand Organist Henry G. W. Dinkelspiel, Historiographer George H. Barron, Grand Trustees Frank M. Lane, Irving D. Gibson, Charles A. Koenig, J. Hartley Russell and Harmon D. Skillin, and District Deputy I. M. Peckham. And the following Past Grand Presidents: Dr. Charles W. Decker, Judge John F. Davis, Daniel A. Ryan, James F. Hoey, Edward J. Lynch and Judge Fletcher A. Cutler. The hand of welcome was extended to all by the president of the Parlor, John J. Slattery.

Clarence W. Morris, past president of California, was the toastmaster, and the honored guests were introduced by Past President Jesse H. Miller. Short talks were given by Grand President Dodge, Past Grand President Decker, Past Grand President Grady, Grand Trustee Koenig, Past Grand President Cutler, Past Grand President Ryan, Historiographer Barron, District Deputy Peckham, Dr. H. Herrington and others. The committee of arrangements included: Jesse H. Miller (chairman), Ellis A. Blackman (secretary), Edward J. Cerf, Fred Ehlers Jr., John J. Slattery and William H. James.

FIRST WEDDING AT N.D.G.W. HOME.

The N.D.G.W. Home Building recorded its first wedding ceremony June 26, when Miss Gladys

Cordy and Arthur E. Bennett were united in marriage, Rev. Irvin T. Paulsen officiating. The bride is an officer of Orinda Parlor No. 56 N.D.G.W., the groom is a past president of Sequoia Parlor No. 160 N.S.G.W., and their mothers are affiliated with the Native Daughters. Arched columns, garlanded with gladioli and fern, supported the wedding bell.

The strains of Lohengrin's "Wedding March" heralded the coming of the bride, who was given away by Dr. William Atwood, an old friend of the family. She was attended by Mrs. Bertha Oman, matron of honor, and Miss Martha Baker, bridesmaid. Robert Castro was the bestman, and Fred Bennett the groomsman. Mrs. Rita Bennett of Buena Vista Parlor No. 68 N.D.G.W., accompanied on the violin and piano by Mr. and Mrs. Bert Fries, sang "Ah, Sweet Mystery of Life" and "Oh, Promise Me."

The bride's dress was peach-colored lace, and she wore a picture hat to match and carried a shower bouquet of lilies of the valley. The matron of honor was gowned in orchid taffeta, and the bridesmaid in green taffeta and tulle; both wore picture hats and carried bouquets of pink roses. Mrs. Ida Cordy, mother of the bride, and Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Bennett, parents of the groom, were in attendance. Amid a shower of rice the bridal party repaired to the home of the bride for the wedding supper, attended by fifty invited guests. Following a two weeks' honeymoon, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur E. Bennett are making their home in San Francisco.

DRUM CORPS ELECTS.

The drum corps of Rincon Parlor No. 72 N.S.G.W. has elected the following officers: C. Kearse, president; A. Helmer, vice-president; M. Joyce, secretary-treasurer; M. Devencinzi, M. Erdletz, H. Helmer, C. Lawrie, trustees.

were installed July 7 by District Deputy I. M. Peckham, who was highly complimented on the impressive manner in which he conducted the ceremonial. Prior to the installation the officers-elect, headed by President William E. Weisgerber, initiated a candidate, the ritual being emphasized in a very creditable manner.

On behalf of the Parlor, Past President A. W. Boyken presented an elegant wrist watch to Past President Joseph T. Curley, in appreciation for his effective work in Stanford's behalf. A. B. Tuckey donated a beautiful trophy, to be awarded that member of the Parlor who, in the estimation of a committee to be appointed by Presi-

THIMBLE CLUB LUNCHEON GUESTS.

The thimble club of Dolores Parlor No. 169 N.D.G.W. were guests July 2 of Mrs. Amella Silva, at her Atherton, San Mateo County, home. A delightful luncheon was served at attractively decorated tables placed outdoors, and the afternoon was spent sewing garments for the homeless children. Guests included Grand Marshal Evelyn I. Carlson, Mms. Irene Stelling, Jean Franklin, Francis Duffy, Grace Castillo, Hazel Nelson, Mary Krause, Irene Kaupert, Emma O'Meara, Florence Stayart, Mary Bauer, Bessie Nicol, Marie Donald, Louise Winkler, Mabel Lyons, Gladys Weber, Kittie Mullaney and Erna Lazarus.

At the Parlor meeting July 10 a committee was appointed to secure samples of costumes for the Admission Day celebration in Santa Cruz, as the Dolores girls will be in evidence in the parade.

OFFICERS INSTALLED.

Officers of Pacific Parlor No. 10 N.S.G.W., with Edward P. Saunders as president, have been installed by District Deputy Walter T. Podd.

Officers of South San Francisco Parlor No. 157 N.S.G.W., with Theodore Portello as president, have been installed by District Deputy Thomas Dillon. Harry J. Maisey, retiring junior past president, was presented with a diamond-studded watch charm.

ANNUAL HIGH JINKS.

July 16, Yosemite Parlor No. 83 N.D.G.W. had its annual high jinks, all present being in costume and performing some act. District Deputy Myrtle Ross presided as judge and awarded prizes to Marguerite Kaufman, Phelita Reagan and Agnes Zraggen. Grand Treasurer Susie K. Christ was a picture in her costume of pioneer days. A midnight supper was served, and a most enjoyable time was had.

JOINT PUBLIC INSTALLATION.

Friends and members of Twin Peaks Parlor No. 185 N.D.G.W. and Twin Peaks Parlor No. 214 N.S.G.W. enjoyed joint public installation of officers July 16. Speakers of the evening were Past Grand President Margaret Grote-Hill and District Deputy Elizabeth Muller of the Native Daughters, and Grand President Charles L. Dodge, Grand Second Vice-president Dr. Frank I. Gonzalez, Grand Secretary John T. Regan, Grand Trustee J. Hartley Russell, District Deputy Walter Bammen and Supervisor Charles Powers of the Native Sons. Past president emblems were presented Bessie Hulten and Homer McReynolds. A presentation was also made to Merle Sandell, retiring secretary of No. 185. Dancing concluded the installation ceremonies.

The child welfare committee of Twin Peaks N.D.G.W. paid a July Fourth visit to the children of the tubercular ward of the San Francisco Hospital and presented them with candy, scrapbooks and magazines.

PREPARING FOR ADMISSION DAY.

The San Francisco N.S.G.W. Extension of the Order Committee elected the following officers June 28: Harry Romick (Castro Parlor No. 232), chairman; Caspar Hare (Niantic Parlor No. 105), vice-chairman; Harold J. Regan (South San Francisco Parlor No. 157), secretary; Grand Trustee Charles A. Koenig (Golden Gate Parlor No. 29), treasurer; George W. Schonfeld (Olympus Parlor No. 189), sergeant-at-arms.

The San Francisco Parlors have reserved the Casino at Santa Cruz for joint headquarters during the Admission Day celebration there, and preparations are being made for a large turnout in the September 9 parade.

YACHTING REGATTA.

San Francisco Bay will be the scene of eight successive days of sailing events in August, when the Pacific Inter Club Yacht Association will sponsor the seventh annual Pacific Coast championship yachting regatta from the 24th to 31st, inclusive. The San Francisco Yacht Club will be host at the opening dinner the evening of the 24th. Special races are scheduled for each of the eight days, the trophies to be awarded the evening of the 31st.

Belvedere Cove will be made the scene of a "Night in Venice," when all yachts and motor boats are invited to anchor in the cove. Motor boat races from Sacramento and Stockton will usher in events on the water. Sailing boats, motor launches, schooners, yawls, cruisers and speed boats will all be given special tests. There will be a rowing race and a sailing race for United States naval officers. All the yachtsmen of the Pacific Coast, their families and friends will participate in the festivities.

AUTO FATALITIES DECREASE.

San Francisco is demonstrating that the auto accident fatality list in city traffic areas can be reduced by sane, impartial enforcement of traffic laws and by safety educational work. Official figures show that forty persons lost their lives on the city's streets in auto accidents during the first six months of this year, a reduction of twelve under the fatality list of fifty-two during the first six months of 1928.

The figures for the fiscal year ended June 30 are even more illuminating. The total of auto accident deaths for the twelve months ended June 30 was 122, compared with a total of 146 the previous year, a reduction of twenty-four. Either set of figures shows that San Francisco's fatality list has decreased at the rate of two a month.

The motor car has created common problems of traffic movement and safety in every center of population, it is pointed out, and what has been done in San Francisco can be done in other cities. The successful safety idea in one community is adaptable to other cities, large or small.

Serra Pilgrimage—Monterey City will feature its annual Serra Pilgrimage and Fiesta, August 15-18.

Flower Show—A Santa Clara County flower show will be held at Los Altos, August 23 and 24.

A BIT O' FARMING

PREPARED EXPRESSLY FOR THE GRIZZLY BEAR BY M. H. ELLIS

AFTER YEARS OF DISCUSSION AND political promises, a plan of nationwide farm relief has at last been decided upon; a federal farm board to work out details and put the plan into action has been appointed by President Herbert Hoover and everything is set for the experiment. The debenture clause, an outgrowth of the McNary-Haugen idea, was killed by Congress after a hard fight, and the law as enacted follows pretty closely the plan approved by the president.

In brief, the act provides for an appropriation of half a billion dollars for the relief of agriculture and creates the federal board of nine men with powers sufficient to go ahead with the administration of the fund, to establish crop stabilization corporations and to supervise the disposal of farm crop surpluses.

If the farmers of the United States co-operate with the board, and if the board efficiently goes into the administration of the act, there is no reason that it should fail. Looking over the personnel of the board, its potential efficiency cannot be doubted. Reviewing the co-operative inclinations of the American farmer, there is considerable doubt if he will swing into the stride of the board, at first at least. Unless the agricultural interests of the nation pull together, there will be a very decided tendency on the part of other interests to let them solve their own troubles.

There has been some criticism of the president's appointment of Alexander H. Legge, president of the International Harvester Company, as chairman of the board. Agriculture should feel fortunate that a man of such ability could be persuaded to accept the post. What agriculture needs is organization and business management. The International Harvester Company got it with Legge as its head. The federal farm board ought to profit by his business experience and executive ability.

California is represented on the board by one of its foremost agriculturists, C. C. Teague of Santa Paula. President of the California Fruit Growers' Exchange and the California Walnut Growers' Association, chairman of the Agricultural Legislative Committee, a leader in co-operative marketing, the manager of one of the largest fruit-growing enterprises in the state, and familiar with every phase of California's farming industry, he should not only add strength to the board but should be able to take care that this state is not neglected in the actions taken by it.

Great agricultural industries, such as dairying, grain, tobacco and livestock, were recognized in selecting men for the board, and the personnel is one that inspires confidence and gives hope that something will be done besides the spending of $500,000,000.

AGRICULTURAL YEAR BOOK.

California grows commercially every crop produced in the United States with the exception of sugar cane. The California farmer, then, should be interested in agriculture as it is conducted in the nation at large; nowhere can he secure more information than in the United States Department of Agriculture Yearbook, which now is ready for distribution. Congressmen have a limited number for free distribution, or they can be obtained from the Government Printing Office at Washington, D. C., for $1.50. Nearly half the book is devoted to "What's New in Agriculture," which alone is worth to any farmer many times the cost of the volume.

APPLE GRADES CHANGED.

"C grade loose," is the lowest classification under which apples may be marketed in California under the new apple standardization provision made by the State Legislature. The unclassified grade, which last year temporarily broke down the Eastern markets on Gravensteins, has been eliminated. Apples now are included with other commodities under the general standardization law and enforcement will be by county horticultural commissioners under the supervision of the State Department of Agriculture. Instead of the fee of three-quarters of a cent per box, certification will be made for $5 a car.

MEALYBUG WATER CONTROL.

Control of mealybug by washing the trees is not likely to be found efficient or satisfactory. If high pressure is used, fruit and twigs will be broken off. If low pressure is used, the volume of water must necessarily be large. In one test a thousand gallons per tree were used, with results not at all satisfactory. If parasites are available, they will be found more effective by far.

ANOTHER BREEDING PROBLEM.

Milk has a good taste if it is rich in lactose, or sugar, and poor in chloride, or salt. Having determined that, experiments have been conducted by the dairy industry division of the University of California to see if either content could be affected by feeding. Molasses was used in the effort to increase lactose; salt was used in the chloride determination tests. The results were negative. No change in the sugar or salt contents of milk could be made by adding to or withholding from the diet either ingredient in the ration. Consequently, milk flavor in normal cows is seen as a breeding problem, just as is, butterfat. To get milk of pleasing taste, past records must be consulted when breeding.

ACID SOIL TESTS.

Acid soil causes a lot of trouble, not only on the farm but in the garden. Lime is the remedy; the difficulty is in knowing when to apply it. Secure blue litmus paper from a drug store and insert one or two strips in a sample of the soil free from roots and organic matters. With the soil in a tight container, and the litmus paper strips inserted to about half their length, add pure water until the soil is well moistened. After ten or fifteen minutes see if the paper has changed color. If it has not changed to red, try the test again or let a second strip remain longer. If there is no change there is no acidity about which to worry. If the paper turns red, use lime freely.

KEEP THE ROOSTER OUT.

There is no reason for keeping the males with the laying flock of hens at this time of the year; on the other hand there are good reasons why they should be removed. Infertile eggs are much less liable to spoilage than fertile ones, and in hot weather this is a factor that should not be overlooked. There is absolutely no truth in the belief that the presence of the male aids production. When the hen is born the number of eggs she can lay has been determined. Proper feeding and care will bring out the largest possible number of these. If anything, the presence of the males hinders production rather than aids it. Keep the roosters away from the hens, store the eggs in places where the temperature can be kept low, 55 degrees or less, and the quality will be much improved, as well as the quantity.

GUMMING CHERRY TREES.

Cherry trees are very susceptible to gumming, and at this season of the year the trouble is most noticeable. There are two kinds, bacterial and physical. If bacterial, the trouble lies in infection, which may be overcome by cutting out diseased parts and application of Bordeaux paste.

Physical gummosis may result from excessive winter moisture or summer drought, shallow soil, violent temperature changes or from any cause that disturbs the tree unduly. See that the land is well drained, irrigate carefully, whitewash the trees in the late fall, and either subsoil or blast when the soil is at the driest late this month or next. Bacterial gummosis is sometimes hard to detect, but a careful examination will reveal the true state of affairs. Gum from bacterial cankers usually is cloudy and under the bark the wood will look dark and diseased. If this test is not satisfactory, the laboratory must be used.

FAIR SEASON COMING.

The fall fair season is just ahead; state, district and county fairs will hold the center of interest in the next two months. The fair, from the agricultural point of view, no longer is merely entertainment; it is a laboratory in which agricultural progress may be studied, a rule by which the farming development may be measured. Not merely through the inspection of big pumpkins or fruit, but through the study of exhibits and the learning of lessons set forth.

Exhibits should not be a hodge-podge of produce which generally may be grown in one locality about as well as in another. They should represent the district from which they come; they reflect the individuality of that district and indicate the possibilities there. This year, a short one in fruit lines in some counties, should bring correspondingly better quality in the displays.

MAKE THE SILO AIRPROOF.

Many a silo has turned out spoiled or partly spoiled silage because of air leaks. Before the silo is filled for the winter's feeding it will be well to see that some sort of air-proofing is applied to the inner walls. Just what this may be is not important, if it does the work. One Middle Western farmer stopped his silage losses by painting the inside of the silo with a mixture composed of four gallons of water, a pound of salt, two tablespoons of alum, a teaspoon of lye, and cement enough to make a paste that could be easily applied.

NEW TUBERCULOSIS LAW.

The new bovine tuberculosis law becomes effective this month, and through its provisions the State Department of Agriculture hopes to make rapid strides in cleaning up tuberculous herds in California. The law provides for the establishment of tuberculosis control areas by the state department, in which all cattle must be

A calf segregation section provides that on requests of hoards of supervisors, tuberculosis eradication calf segregation areas will be formed in which calves from untested or reacting cattle must be removed from their mothers before forty-eight hours after birth and fed with pasteurized milk on premises free from infection.

SUMMER PRUNING.

Summer pruning of young trees will do much toward the correct shaping of the tree and will make easier the pruning in winter time. Pinching back of tips of limbs that are not going to be needed, will discourage their growth and strengthen the limbs not so checked. The removal of a great deal of foliage will shock and injure the tree; careful pinching back will do much toward developing the sort of framework that will be needed when the tree is in full bearing. Good spacing of scaffold branches is possible in this method, to a far greater extent than through dormant pruning. However, it must be remembered that a single pinching back will not suffice; the trees must have attention throughout the summer or growth will persist and the first work will be hardly worth while.

PEAR AND CHERRY SLUG.

The pear or cherry slug becomes troublesome in many parts of the state at about this time of the year. The use of road dust, or better, slack lime, will make the work of these pests so difficult they usually will give up. Soap and oil sprays also will control the pests, but the usual care in using oil sprays at this time of the year must be exercised. Lead arsenate spray also will discourage them, or any other leaf eating pest that appears in the orchard. Use a pound of dry arsenate of lead or two pounds of arsenate paste in twenty-five gallons of water. Neutral lead arsenate is less likely to burn the foliage than is acid lead arsenate.

GETTING BEES OUT.

A method of moving bees from a location where they are not desired, as in the wall of a house or in some similar location, is to use the screen fly trap idea. A cone of wire screen about eight inches high, just large enough at the small end to let a bee through, will result in getting them all out and keeping them out, provided there is but one entrance. If a hive is placed nearby, the bees likely will adopt a new home, where a new queen should be given them. After about four or six weeks, open up the old hole and the bees will go in and carry out the honey.

KEEP THE MOWER IN TRIM.

The mowing machine, operating constantly at high speed, is under a constant strain and needs continual attention. The alignment of the cutter bar should be watched, the sickle blades should be kept sharp and properly centered on the guards. Lubrication, it goes without saying, must be watched. To relieve the tension on the mower, a new type has been introduced this year, which operates at two speeds through a gear transmission similar to that of an automobile. By using the speeds as the need arises, the life of the machine is greatly lengthened.

CAN'T CONTROL CURRANT FLY.

The currant fly, a cousin of the much-discussed and greatly-feared Mediterranean fruit fly, has become quite common in California and has wrought heavy damage to currants and gooseberries in some districts. There is no spray that will control it. The adult oviposits her eggs in the berries of the fruit, and the larvae, or maggots, destroy them. Careful cultivation in fall and winter will aid in keeping the infestation down by destroying holdover pupae; but eradication is quite impossible.

DUSTING FOR PEA PESTS.

Where beans and peas are affected with weevil, aphid and mildew, as occurs in many parts of the state, a combination dust has been found effective. Sulphur is used in the dust formula to get the mildew, arsenate of lead is introduced to get the weevils, and nicotine takes care of the aphids. The mixture should be in the proportion of about 75 percent sulphur, 15 percent arsenate of lead and 10 percent nicotine-sulphate. Any ingredient may be left out if the pest for which it is intended is not present. Other pests requiring attention more than likely could be treated by adding the proper ingredient for control.

Big Week Spirit.

Sallnas "The Spirit of Big Week" was the theme for an amusing program at the July 11 meeting of Aleli No. 102. A parade in which the members appeared in gay costumes was followed by a carnival show, for which Susie Hunter was the spieler and in which Harriet McGlinchey, Mildred Hinricks and Marie McClunon appeared.

Enjoys Grizzly Bear.

From Past Grand President Dr. Eva R. Rasmussen of Sacramento, The Grizzly Bear received the following, mailed aboard the Pacific Limited, July 9:

"After a week in Yosemite and among the Mariposa high trees, started on a Middle Western trip, and am reading the July issue of The Grizzly Bear for additional enjoyment.

"Am wondering if there be, anywhere, a publication of the same nature which exemplifies the same ideals and is expressive of the same spirit that has given long life to The Grizzly Bear."

Interest Appreciated.

Petaluma—Officers of Petaluma No. 222, with Annie Dickson retained as president, will be installed August 6. The meeting of June 18 was adjourned out of respect to the memory of Lucille Avilla, who passed away suddenly. A swimming party and a picnic, in which Petaluma No. 27 N.S.G.W. has been asked to join, are being planned.

The Parlor has permission from the American Legion to place flowers twice a week at the war memorial erected this spring. The Legion has expressed great appreciation for the interest taken in the memorial by the Native Daughters.

At the close of the ceremonies the group motored to the Sycamore Pool for a picnic supper—the surprise feature of the evening. June 30 the Parlor had its annual picnic at Load Town.

In Memoriam

MARY FIELD.
We, your committee appointed to adopt resolution of sympathy and respect to our late sister, Mary Field, herewith submit the following:

Whereas, It has pleased God to remove from our midst our beloved sister, Mary Field; therefore, be it Resolved, That the members of Hiawatha Parlor No. 140 N.D.G.W. deeply feel her loss and extend to her mother in this, her saddest hour, our heartfelt sympathy. The sweet strains of her music will ever remain with us in memory.
Her soul has passed into the keeping of our Heavenly Father, and we trust that He will grant us the privilege of so living the space of time yet granted us that, when time for us shall end, we shall hear those sweet strains again on the golden harp, eternal in the heavens. Be it further resolved, that a copy of these resolutions be presented to her mother, that a copy be spread upon the minutes of this meeting, and that a copy be sent The Grizzly Bear Magazine for publication.

CHARLES EDWARD WEBSTER.

Whereas, In the wisdom of our Heavenly Father, our president, Charles Edward Webster, has been called to his eternal rest; and whereas, in his passing General Winn Parlor
No. 32 N.S.G.W. has lost a faithful officer, the community a big-hearted, big-hearted, charitable citizen who was ever willing to help the other fellow—a person whom to know was to esteem, and whose demise the entire community sincerely mourn; therefore, be it

Resolved, That the members of General Winn Parlor No.
32 Native Sons of the Golden West extend their most heartfelt sympathy to the members of Brother Webster's family

Feminine World's Fads and Fancies

PREPARED ESPECIALLY FOR THE GRIZZLY BEAR BY ANNA STOERMER

THE MARKED UPWARD TREND OF the waistline is changing the autumn silhouette. If the normal waistline is not actually belted, it is indicated through seamings and fabric manipulation. The belt placed just at the top of the hips is still smart, and far more becoming to the average figure than the normal outlining of the waist.

The tuck-in blouse is for the slight figure, and the princess, which has returned in new guises, may have the waist defined at either point.

Skirt fullness is placed much lower, and achieved through circular flounces and cleverly placed pleats. For street, the skirts must be long enough to cover the knees, and for afternoon and evening they may be long at any point or a series of points, and even long all around.

For formal wear, whether we like it or not, designers say longer skirts and close-fitting bodices that mold the figure, making a retaining garment of some kind,—an absolute necessity. The uncorseted figure is slowly passing out of the picture.

Velvets, both transparent and in the heavier panne weaves, are to be as popular as ever this coming season. Printed transparent velvets have designs of exotic loveliness that bring new interest for separate gowns and wraps. The panne velvets are both printed and plain, and are perhaps newer. All velvets require care and should be steamed or hung out of doors when they have become marked. They are luxury fabrics that cannot be expected to withstand hard wear or careless treatment.

Woolens are very important for the coat frock. The new weaves are sheer and fine, and not at all uncomfortable. They come in sheer tweeds, thin flannels, crepe weaves, challies, etamine, cashmeres, and fabrics of wool and other yarns.

The coat frock is made in the soft manner that has been called "dressmaker type," and requires no more tailoring than a silk dress. Leather belts and tailored buttons give the masculine touch.

Lingerie touches on wool frocks are feminine, and most becoming. Stripes and plaids are all in the autumn mode. The plain fabrics are combined with the fancy ones, and either match the predominant color note of the plaid.

Coatings are lightly woven and appear in beige and natural shades, as well as the brown tones that are so good for autumn. Red is again smart and is of several shades, such as tomato, henna, fuschia, raspberry and the wine colorings. Blue is best in the brighter shades, and black still has fashion's favor.

Broadcloth is used for the dressier types of coats, and much fur is in evidence for collars, cuffs and trimmings. Both flat furs and fox are used. Velveteen appears for separate coats and for evening wraps, and the so-called velvet pique, a narrow wale corduroy, is designed for sports coats.

Coats for dresses are gradually departing from straight lines that we have become accustomed to wearing. The slightly fitted princess, with a modified flare, is very new.

Printed taffetas are rather quaint in design, and charming for afternoon frocks. Many of the weaves are revivals of about twenty years ago. Brocaded designs are extremely fine, worked separately and fairly distant from each other.

Chiffon and lace remain general favorites for evening gowns. Fullness is concentrated at the backs of gowns, and sashes with trailing ends lend grace to the formal silhouette. Chiffon is the ideal material for such creations, and whether printed in large florals or plain in black or high shades, it is a perfect foil for feminine beauty.

The hip yoke is of great importance. It is cut in unusual lines and is closely fitted and arranged to effect the higher waistline.

Necklines are both pointed and round, and the various sun-tan back-revealing necklines are for day wear. The low-cut neckline is a summer fad, and is not to be taken seriously when autumn is with us. Berthas are gracefully different, and there are bows posed at the girdle and the shoulder.

Cottons are truly beautiful this summer, and while we cannot wear them on the street when cool weather approaches we can still use our supply for the house. The printed batistes, fine piques and gabardines make smart frocks for indoor wear, and can be plunged into the tub. With steam-heated schools and homes, there is no longer necessity for the heavier fabrics, and cotton is ideal for many reasons.

The separate blouse is very lovely in fine batiste or handkerchief linen. Hand work adds much to the plain materials, and embroidery is returning.

Lingerie and negligees are so easily made at home, and fabrics are so very inexpensive and beautiful, that we should have a very generous supply.

For sports wear, wool jersey, flannel or the new cashmeres are employed, and wool yarn is used for the embroidery. There are all-over designs such as sprays of flowers, modernistic motifs and interesting quiltings that are very easy to follow. A simple running stitch is very easy to accomplish and gives the dainty touch that is so important in attaining individuality.

Monograms continue to be great favorites. You will find it a joy to work out a monogram that is unusual.

There is no end to the number of bags we need, if the ensemble is to be perfect. There is the silk bag, that may be quilted or embroidered in wool or beads. Many lovely bags are made by clever hands. There are designs to be had, and you may find even the materials all awaiting your hand work.

An evening scarf made of three different shades of sheer velvet or chiffon is cut and hem-stitched together to make an evening scarf wrap. The capucine shades in frocks, with contrasting tones in wraps, are the most favored at this time.

Two tones of violet with two tones of coral are smartly combined. Cloud blue, turquoise, and both light and dark sapphire are exclusive shades.

Father O'Sullivan stressed the fact that the first act of Christianity was performed at Los Christianitos (Little Christians), so named for two babies whom this scout found dying. The parents asked that they be baptised. This, it is found, was the first baptismal act in California.

Historical Event.

San Diego—Dedication of a tree, with bronze marker, in honor of Father Francisco Palou, friend and biographer of Father Junipera Serra, took place July 13 at Presidio Park under the auspices of San Diego No. 208. The program opened with Father Dominic Francisco of Old Town parish giving in detail an accurate account of Father Palou's early life and his devotion to Father Serra.

Lewis B. Lesley, associate professor of history at San Diego College and former Native Son traveling fellow in Pacific Coast history, paid tribute with the topic, "Father Palou, Great Biographer To a Great Man;" he told in glowing words the great debt lovers of California history owe to this man for writings and records of early California missionaries. Geo. W. Marston, donor of Presidio Hill Park, thanked the members of San Diego Parlor for being thoughtful and the first organization to perpetuate the memory of this great man.

Junior Past Grand President Dr. Louise C. Heilbron charmingly remarked on the beauty of the tree, typical of San Diego County, and as a living emblem for the memory of such a worthy historian as Father Francisco Palou. Councilman Edward H. Dowell, member of San Diego No. 108 N.S.G.W., thanked the Native Daughters, in behalf of the City of San Diego, for the addition of another historical marker, being the very ground upon which the first presidio was founded. Mrs. Theodore Barnes, in Spanish costume, sang a group of old Spanish songs to the accompaniment of a guitar. Much credit is due Chairman Mabel H. Burgert, incoming president of No. 208, for the success of this historical event.—R. M. H.

A NEW PIANO VALUE WHEELLOCK GRAND $495

It is Aeolian built, which means it is quality-built. And of prime importance, this new Wheellock grand has tonal beauty that's comparable to much larger grands and an action that has won the admiration of critical musicians. In addition, it has artistic lines—a beautifully finished case—genuine ivory keys and gleaming brass hardware. All in all, it's the outstanding piano value of today—and is creating more interest than any instrument we have offered in our fifty years of piano merchandising.

WOULD SAVE HISTORIC TREE

LOS ANGELES PARLOR NO. 45 N.S.G.W. is endeavoring, through its landmarks committee, W. O. Gilkey chairman, to preserve a "ruhher" tree planted more than a half-century ago at Twentieth and Long Beach avenue. And its efforts are being seconded by many citizens, some of them offering financial assistance. The history of this tree is set forth in the following letter received recently by Gilkey from William R. Hannon:

"The Merton Bay fig tree, located at the corner of East Twentieth street and Long Beach avenue, has been owned by the Hannon family for the past forty years. It was planted by Andrew J. Cooper, in the year 1875, which makes the tree fifty-four years old. It has a spread of branches 120 feet; the trunk is 30 feet in circumference.

"The tree was brought from the Southern states in a pot. Its native home is Australia. It is an evergreen and produces a small fruit which resembles a fig hut is of no value. The sap that flows from the tree is milky white and, when dry, is elastic.

"This is the largest tree of its kind in the United States. And to think that some day it may fall prey to the ax after standing fifty-four years, which is over a half-century! The City of Los Angeles should buy the ground and maintain a park to keep the tree as a landmark."

"DYNAMITE."

When Cecil B. DeMille produces and directs a motion picture, the world expects to be thrilled, and startled as well. DeMille's first all-talking production, "Dynamite," which is now playing twice daily at Fox Carthay Circle Theater, is proving to be the most sensational of all former successes created by this motion-picture genius. Critics and public alike are giving "Dynamite" preceding rank with such great former DeMille hits as "The Volga Boatman," "Male and Female," "Why Change Your Wife," "The Ten Commandments" and "The King of Kings."

The new DeMille opus at Fox Carthay Circle is this director's first Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer production, and it is not of the religious type that he has done recently. It returns, rather, to the dressy, boudoir and bath-tub vehicles with which he formerly intrigued the public. "Dynamite" also has the vivid contrasts of life between the idle rich and the enslaved poor which made such tremendous story interest in his "The Volga Boatman."

In "Dynamite," DeMille has done new things with the "talkie" medium which no one should miss seeing and hearing. He films one scene upside down! He does a mine explosion that is titanic in its effects. He accomplishes new effects with a telephone, and the result is a picture far in advance of any talking feature yet produced.

Accompanying "Dynamite" is a concert overture for every performance played by Carl Elinor's famous concert orchestra; a clever all-talking burlesque comedy, "Madame Q" by Hal Roach, and Fox Movietone Talking news. Two shows are presented daily, the matinee starting at 2:15 and the evening show at 8:15.

BENEFIT BALL AT SANTA MONICA.

Saturday night, August 3, the Interparlor Committee N.S.G.W. and N.D.G.W. will sponsor a hall at La Monica Ballroom, Santa Monica Pier. Tickets are 50 cents each, and not only Native Sons and Native Daughters, but the public in general, are invited to participate.

The purpose of this hall is to raise funds with which to clear away the considerable deficit brought forward from the 1928 Admission Day celebration at San Pedro. La Monica Ballroom should be filled to overflowing on this occasion and, with a little effort, it will be. —C. M. H.

PRETTY PICTURE.

Officers of Los Angeles Parlor No. 124 N.D.G.W. were publicly installed July 25 by District Deputy Doria Phillips, assisted by Past Grand President Grace S. Stoermer, Kathryn A. Tregea as acting grand marshal and Pearl K. Dwinell as acting grand organist. Irene G. Eden became the new president. Entering the hall, the officers-elect, gowned in white and carrying arm bouquets, presented a pretty picture; at the altar they halted and, with the bouquets, formed an arbor under which the temporary officers proceeded to their stations. A large crowd, including visitors from neighboring Parlors, witnessed the ceremonies.

President Eden thanked the members of the Parlor for the honor conferred on her, and introduced Marvel Thomas, under whose direction a

Don't you love it John?—no rush—no jostling crowds—just you and I—and our own special friends—at HOME.

It's so wonderful to have our own party and our own entertainment—any music we choose—and such tone. That Sparton is a marvel—no wonder they call it—"Radio's richest Voice." I agree with Birch-Smith's when they say—

"To see and to hear this greatest of all receivers almost permits you to see your entertainers and to feel the thrill of their individuality." So true is the Sparton in its reception that the term "face-to-face" realism has been applied to it.

splendid program was presented, including acts by pupils from the Lake school and vocal solos by Wilma Holmes. Ruth Ruiz, on the Parlor's behalf, presented an emblematic ring to Flora Holy, the retiring president, and presentations were also made to Past Grand President Stoermer, District Deputy Phillips, President Eden, and Third Vice-president Ruth Johnson-Esthes, a recent bride. The delightful evening was concluded with refreshments.

July 3, Los Angeles received splendid reports from the Santa Cruz Grand Parlor delegates. July 17, a delegation of Verdugo Parlor No. 240 (Glendale) members paid a visit. Six members of No. 124, dressed as "kids," came into the meeting and showered with lovely gifts from the Parlor Miss Bertha Marshall, who is to be married during August. Florence Dodson-Schone-man had as her guests at the Dodson ranch July 28 the officers of Los Angeles during her term as district deputy of the Parlor and their escorts. A delicious spanish dinner was served, and Mrs. Schone-man was unanimously voted a delightful hostess.

"PILGRIMAGE PLAY."

The "Pilgrimage Play" is now being presented at the picturesque open-air Pilgrimage Theatre in Hollywood. Ian Maclaren as Christ, Mary Worth as Mother Mary, and Virginia Pearson as Magdalene portray the leading roles at the head of a cast of 125 artists.

The play annually attracts tourists and travelers from all parts of the world because of its unique character as an outdoor production and extraordinary scenic effects achieved by utilizing a whole mountainside as a stage. Reservations for seats at all performances of the community non-profit enterprise may be obtained at the Pilgrimage Theatre, Cahuenga and Highland avenues, the Brkel Music Co., 446 South Broadway, and the principal theater agencies in all California South cities.

POINT FIRMIN OUTING.

Los Angeles Parlor No. 45 N.S.G.W. installed officers July 18, District Deputy Burrell D. Neighbours officiating and Walter Fisher becoming president. Ray LeMoine, for the Parlor, presented an emblematic charm to Howard Bentley, the retiring junior past president. The Parlor is now the possessor of a new gavel, presented by Paul Brunette, through Grand First Vice-president John T. Newell, July 11. The "stag" outing at the ranch of William D. Newell in the Santa Monica Mountains July 20 and 21 was well attended and proved most enjoyable.

Los Angeles will have Initiation August 8, and on the 20th a visit will be paid to Glendale Parlor No. 264. August 22 will be an open meeting, and Chairman Roland Nichols of the good of the order committee, who will be in charge, promises a big surprise that the absentees will be sorry they missed. The afternoon and evening of August 31 the Parlor will have a basket picnic and outing at Point Firmin for members and their families.

N.D.G.W. PAST GRAND HONORED.

Counted as a California woman of outstanding achievements, sterling character and, above all, an indefatigable laborer for the things for which the Order of Native Daughters of the Golden West stands, Past Grand President Grace S. Stoermer who, July 23, installed the new officers of Californiana Parlor No. 247, was unanimously selected to have her name chiseled upon the doorplate of the room at the new Native Daughters Home in San Francisco which Californiana will furnish. The sum of $160 has been set for the purpose, $100 of which was won by the Parlor as a prize for having been the first in the state to pay its Loyalty Pledge of $500 to the Home. The installation ceremonies were well attended, and Mrs. Guadalupe E. Wright was retained as president.

In giving the annual report of the history and landmarks committee, Mrs. Harry Leigh Bentley, chairman, cited some of the Parlor's achievements. One thousand dollars has been placed in a fund for a statue of Felipe de Neve, founder of Los Angeles; it is hoped to present this to the city in 1931, when, September 4, it will celebrate its one hundred and fiftieth birthday. President Wright said the Parlor, which was instituted June 12, 1928, with eighty-four members, now has a membership of 163 and a large class of candidates awaiting initiation early in September.

First Vice-president Mary Foy urged an appreciation of the spirit brought to us by the early Pioneers, and predicted that this state could become a great center of historical research and a powerful influence in the world. Search should be made, she said, for descendants of those early intrepid spirits, and invitations extended to them to join the Order, as the history of these founders is most intriguing. Other speakers were Marvel Thomas, Helen Kennerley and Mary K. Corcoran. Tea was served at a beautifully appointed table, centered with a cake picturing a procession of the gold-rush days—heavily laden hurras and red-shirted pioneers.

ATTRACTIVE MEETING PLACE.

Glendale—Glendale Parlor No. 264 N.S.G.W. now has a most attractive meeting-place, the Thursday Afternoon Clubhouse, 206 West Cypress street, and has changed its time of meeting to the first and third Tuesday evenings. Verdugo Parlor No. 240 N.D.G.W. meets at the same place the second and fourth Tuesdays.

July 16, officers of the Parlor were installed by District Deputy Al Cron, Vernon C. Allen becoming president. Short talks were made by Grand First Vice-president John T. Newell, District Deputy Ralph Harbison, President Lewie Smith of Los Angeles Parlor No. 45, District Deputy Cron, and Dr. Joseph A. Kleiser, who retired as the president of No. 264. Refreshments were served. July 30, Glendale and Verdugo had a joint watermelon sociable for members and friends.

Several candidates were initiated during the month, and a movement was launched to materially increase the membership of "the world's largest Parlor."

August 16 a class of candidates will be initiated, and August 30 the good of the order committee will provide an entertainment.

BARBECUE DRAWS CROWD.

The annual barbecue of Hollywood Parlor No. 196 N.S.G.W. at Riley's ranch in Sand Canyon July 14 was attended by over 200, and all had a good time and enjoyed a splendid "feed." In a game of baseball between Hollywood and Los Angeles Parlor No. 45, the latter came out second best. The committee of arrangements included Lee Owen (chairman), Edgar Black, Charles Riley, Fred Lovie, Harold Thomas, Henry G. Bodkin, Edward J. Reilly, Dr. J. W. Shilling, Dr. L. G. Hallock, Superior Judge Joseph P. Sproul and M. U. Rosenthal.

Miss Elizabeth Theda Kroes (Los Angeles N.D.) became the bride of Thomas William Golding (Los Angeles N.S.) at the Monrovia home of Mrs. J. A. Crandell July 14. The groom is a son of "Tom" Golding (Los Angeles N.S.).

DAUGHTERS ADOPT WAR VETERAN.

San Pedro—Assisted by members of Santa Ana Parlor No. 225 N.D.G.W., District Deputy Eunice Fox installed the officers of Rudecinda Parlor No. 230 N.D.G.W., Letitia Sarciaux becoming president. Anna Spickler, the retiring president, was presented with an emblematic ring. Refreshments were served at beautifully decorated tables, the favors being tiny boats. Margaret Kreider and an able committee had charge of the refreshments and decorations. A series of card parties have been planned for August.

Rudecinda, through its veterans' welfare committee, has adopted a world war veteran at the National Soldiers' Home at Sawtelle. The young man is one who has not received compensation from the Federal Government. President Anna Spickler and the committee—Margaret Dever (chairman), Mary Dever and Tennie Padilla—visited Sawtelle in regard to the work they are doing. Veterans' welfare is one of the outstanding activities of the Parlor.

TRAVELER HAVING GOOD TIME.

Long Beach—The thimble club of Long Beach Parlor No. 154 N.D.G.W. sponsored a card party July 11, which was well attended, and July 25 a covered dish luncheon in Bixby Park was enjoyed.

July 25 the Parlor was paid a visit by District Deputy Rosalie Hyde, and two candidates were initiated. A postcard dated Paris, France, was received from Clara Fay, who left in May for a tour of Europe. She says she is having a wonderful time and plans to return to long Beach in October.

THREE PARLORS N. S. INSTALL.

San Pedro—Officers of Long Beach Parlor No. 239 N.S.G.W., Sepulveda Parlor No. 263 N.S.G.W. and Santa Ana Parlor No. 265 N.S.G.W. were jointly installed July 19 by District Deputy Edgar C. Crowell, Paul McFadyen, Joseph A. Brannen and Charles E. Price becoming the respective presidents. Brief addresses were made by Grand First Vice-president John T. Newell, President Brannen of Sepulveda and District Deputy Crowell. Refreshments were served.

July 20, Sepulveda and Rudecinda Parlor No. 230 N.D.G.W. had a dance and card party. The arrangements committee consisted of Margaret Dever, Tennie Padilla, Mary Dever, Joseph A. Brannen, Frank I. Markey, Harry E. Fairall, Ernest Jani and John P. Paralieu.

California's Best Customer

The products of orchard, garden, field and factory form the solid foundation of California's prosperity, but—they are valueless until sold. The greatest single problem confronting the grower or manufacturer of foods is finding a market for his wares. The problems of production are simple compared with those of securing widespread economical and profitable distribution.

Safeway Stores, as one of the world's largest distributors of foods, is a major factor in helping California producers to profitably dispose of their products. With more than 3200 stores in 23 states, Canada and the Hawaiian Islands, and present sales at the rate of $200,000,000.00 annually, Safeway Stores provide a potential market for California products which is tremendous.

During 1928 Safeway's purchases of California-grown and manufactured products exceeded $22,000,000.00. In 1929, they will probably amount to considerably more. Californians can well be proud of this great food distributing organization which delights in truly serving both producers and consumers of this state.

SANTA CRUZ, THE CELEBRATION CITY

Mabel Wheeler

(SECRETARY, SANTA CRUZ CHAMBER COMMERCE.)

THE EARLY HISTORY OF THE SANTA Cruz section is closely identified with that of the entire country around Monterey Bay. Its wood-crowned mountains attracted the attention of Juan Rodriguez Cabrillo on his first voyage of exploration along the coast in 1542, only fifty years after Columbus discovered America.

Sir Francis Drake was the next explorer who sailed along the same course, observing the wooded hills. Then, in 1602, the mariner, Sebastian Vizcaino came, and exploring more carefully, discovered Monterey Bay. He wrote such enthusiastic reports about the beauty of the bay, the fertility of the shore and the general desirability of the place for a large settlement, that the Portola expedition was formed and left San Diego in July 1769, following closely the California coast.

This was the first group of White men to make such an overland trip, and on October 17, 1769, they crossed the San Lorenzo River and set up a cross, calling the place Santa Cruz. Father Palou passed through Santa Cruz a few years later and wrote of it: "Santa Cruz is fit not only for a town, but a city, without wanting any of the things necessary."

It was not until twenty-two years after the arrival of the Portola expedition that the Mission Santa Cruz was established, the date being September 14, 1791. Tents were erected on the hill where the Catholic church now stands and work was begun in a primitive way. A church was built, the dedication being held on March 10, 1794, and life at the mission began in earnest. Other buildings were added as needed, and work was carried on in a primitive way, and immigration from other parts of the United States began to come into Santa Cruz.

The development of the community has continued down through the years and today, as we travel by auto over the silver-ribbed highways or by rail or air over the scenic routes leading into Santa Cruz, catching a birdseye view as we enter of the wonderful improvements which have come to pass, little do we think or realize the hardships endured by those early settlers who did so much in the pioneering of the place.

"A Deauville in Mid-California—hut Santa Cruz along with its beach and its Casino, has big trees and mountain parks that Europe may envy, but cannot possess," is a recent statement made regarding Santa Cruz, and this is, indeed, true. Located, as it is, on the north shore of the crescent of Monterey Bay, seventy-eight miles south of San Francisco and the bay cities, and only a few hours' drive from the interior valleys of the state, Santa Cruz is the "Playground of Central and Northern California," with thousands coming from the south to enjoy the many attractions.

The weather is well-nigh perfect throughout the year, with the summer temperature seldom as high as eighty-five degrees, or in winter as low as thirty-two degrees. The average temperature over a period of thirty-five years is 56.3 degrees. Every day is just right for the outdoor life, and that is one of the reasons that Santa Cruz is popular with old and young alike.

The Santa Cruz beach is the oldest and one of the best known watering places of California, and although during the past few years other places have been opened along the coast, Santa Cruz still maintains its popularity. The million-dollar Auditorium, formerly known as the Casino, is the mecca for thousands who come to enjoy the cooling breezes which are wafted across the Pacific Ocean and beautiful Monterey Bay. What could be more delightful than a plunge in the surf, entirely free from undertow, with a record of over fifty-five years of safe bathing; or a swim in the natatorium, where the salt water, slightly warmer than the surf, flowing through, is entirely changed every four hours; or to lounge in the finest of white sands along the mile strand of perfect beach; or to visit the concessions along the boardwalk, which are many and varied; or to dance in the rose is the Venetian court, built down to the water, and, from the opposite side particularly, this makes a charming picture. Here again bathing is popular throughout the year, and one may have a choice of salt or fresh water, as Soquel Creek flows into Monterey Bay at this point. A few miles further south, Seaciff, with a delightful beach, was opened a couple of years ago, and draws its full share of residents and visitors.

Rio del Mar, near Aptos, with a combination of beach and wooded hills, has improved rapidly during the past three years. This subdivision was formerly the old Spreckels home and much of old Spanish romance is woven into the history of this ranch. Treasure Island was the popular picnic ground where Claus Spreckels entertained many of the early-day elite as well as the late reigning king of the Sandwich Islands, Kala-kaua.

"How did Treasure Island obtain its name?" you ask. Tradition tells us that in the early days of Mexico, when gold was so plentiful and Spaniards were loading their boats and going back home, the pirate ships became so numerous that it was difficult for them to get home safely, and this spot was picked as a place to hide their gold where it could be easily located by a map. Only recently several Spaniards visited the place with an old faded map showing the contour of Monterey Bay, the creek and the island, with its many great oaks. Days were spent in digging around the island; then one night the men disappeared and no one knows what was found. Other beaches are Twin Lakes, Del Mar and Roh Roy, and many more delightful nooks and beaches are found along the shore, each with a charm all its own.

While Santa Cruz is favored with beautiful beaches, let us not forget the background of the Santa Cruz Mountains and its accessibility to those monarchs of the ages—the Big Trees—the oldest living things on earth, and here Santa Cruz is especially blessed, for it has two groves of big trees.

The Santa Cruz Big Trees are located only six miles from the city and are accessible every day in the year by train or auto. It was in one of these trees that General John C. Fremont camped with his men during the winter of 1846, which tree has since been named for him. Windfalls at that time cut in the tree have now almost grown over. Seventy-five sailors have stood in this tree at one time, and everyone who enters the grove visits the General Fremont tree. The building used as a trading post still stands in the grove. The largest single tree in the group is the Giant, and is three hundred and six feet in height and sixty-five feet in circumference. It is estimated that this tree contains enough lumber to build forty-seven hungulows, and as one stands at its base it is difficult to glimpse the top. The Sherman is said to be the oldest tree, its age estimate being placed at 5,000 years. The Cathedral Group is interesting, due to the fact that eighteen trees are growing from one root, nine large and nine small trees. Many of the trees in the grove have been dedicated to and named for some person or organization, among them being, General Grant, Roosevelt, McKinley, Harrison.

Twenty-three miles from Santa Cruz, in the northern end of Santa Cruz County, we find California Redwood Park, composed of ten thousand acres. California owes a wonderful debt of gratitude to the late Andrew P. Hill of San Jose, who was the instigator of the movement to save these wonderful trees. The lumber companies were already commencing howl, which is noted for its splendid floor and attractiveness? The kiddies as well as the grownups can while away happy hours in these healthful pastimes, and each day seems better than the previous one.

Other beaches within a few miles of Santa Cruz are all increasing in popularity. Swanton beach, along West Cliff drive, is easily identified by its relation to the double arch rocks. The beach at Seahrigh, always popular as a family place, has been greatly improved by the building of Scholl-Marr castle, which houses the concessions and bathhouse. Capitola-by-the-Sea, five miles from Santa Cruz, has for years been a center of activity, and many improvements during the past two years have added greatly to the attractiveness of the place. ing to cut these rare trees, hut Hill, with the assistance of the late Josephine Clifford McCracken, well-known writer, started a campaign looking toward the saving of the forest, which resulted in the State Legislature passing an act making Big Basin a state park. Here are also found many magnificent trees, among them being the Santa Clara tree, Father tree, Mother tree, Animal tree, Fallen Monarch, the Garage tree, Compass group and others.

A rustic inn with cottages offers accommodations to those who desire them, while the underbrush has been cleared from what is known as Governors Camp to permit camping, and the visitors to California Redwood Park in one day frequently number more than five thousand. The fact that the park covers so much acreage offers wonderful opportunity for the hiker, and two nature-study guides are employed during the summer to conduct such trips if desired.

The trails are all well marked and the distances vary, so that even those who cannot walk far may follow an entire trail in some instances in a very short distance. One of the most interesting events of the day is the feeding of the deer each evening, and quite frequently fifteen or sixteen of them are feeding at one time. On account of the fact that no dogs or firearms are permitted in the park, the deer have become quite tame and some of them will take food from the hand.

The Sequoia Sempervirens is the variety of tree in both the Santa Cruz Grove and the California Redwood Park, and these trees, tall and stately, show their first branches many feet above the ground. These two groves, however, are as climaxes along the San Lorenzo River drive, which leads past the Santa Cruz Big Trees, through Felton, Ben Lomond, Brookdale, Boulder Creek and to California Redwood Park. This is one of the delightful drives of California, and resorts and homes are found in the most picturesque places. For instance, Brookdale Lodge at Brookdale, with the diningroom built over the running stream, is the first place of its kind ever built.

Of course, in these days no place can even hope to cater to the vacationist unless it can provide that sport which in the past few years has become so popular, and Santa Cruz is able to offer four golf courses within a radius of ten miles, each with an individuality. The Santa Cruz Golf and Country Club was for a number of years the only course in Santa Cruz County. This is a splendid eighteen-hole course on the hills overlooking the city and Monterey Bay. About two years ago a fine nine-hole course was opened at Rio del Mar, ten miles from Santa Cruz. This course also commands a beautiful view of Monterey Bay.

Recently the Monterey Bay Golf and Country Club's new eighteen-hole course was opened along the Santa Cruz-Watsonville highway, five miles from the City of Santa Cruz, and everyone who has visited the course is most enthusiastic over the entire setting. The fourth course, an eighteen-hole handicap course, just about to be opened, is being laid out under the supervision of Miss Marion Hollins, former woman golf champion of the United States. This will also offer wonderful facilities, and plans are under way for a beautiful clubhouse to be erected in the near future. An active tennis club stimulates interest in that sport and some of the very best tennis players appear in the tournaments held in Santa Cruz.

One of the activities of Santa Cruz in which interest is rapidly growing is deep-sea fishing.

Santa Cruz County has long been noted for its many trout streams, and the opening of the trout season finds thousands availing themselves of fishing in the streams which are so easily accessible. However, during the past two or three years the number who come from far distances for deep-sea fishing bids fair to outnumber, in a short time, the fresh-water fisherman. The catches are usually very satisfactory and the trip in the launch is greatly enjoyed.

The Santa Cruz Yacht Club, with a large membership, stages some interesting yacht and outboard motor boat races each season which are participated in by yachtsmen from all parts of the state.

Santa Cruz has so much to offer in the recreational line that strangers are apt to overlook the fact that it has more miles of paved streets than any city of its size in the United States; that the bank clearings and building permits are steadily increasing each year; and the entire community is improving in every way.

A new eight-story hotel just opening is a wonderful addition to the city, while the St. George, one of the oldest and best known hostleries of California, has been rebuilt in the mission style and is now known as the St. George Mission Inn. Santa Cruz also boasts of a number of other excellent hotels and apartment houses, with rates to suit the purses of all.

As a home community, Santa Cruz offers unusual inducements, for with an all-year climate, favorable living conditions and beautiful scenery, what more could be desired? The winter tourist will find the place fully as attractive as the summer visitor.

The poultry industry yields the Santa Cruz district an income estimated at $3,000,000 per year. Conditions are so favorable that the California Farm Bureau Egg Laying Contest, under the auspices of the Department of Poultry Husbandry of the University of California, was located at Santa Cruz, where it has been successfully maintained for a number of years. Santa Cruz has become so well known as a breeding center that eggs and baby chicks are shipped to points all through the West and even as far east as Michigan.

Bulbs and flowers are grown both commercially and for home use. There are few places in which all kinds of flowers will thrive and bloom as in Santa Cruz. The bulb fields in bloom add to the picturesqueness of the community as well as adding to the income of the residents. The annual New Year's Flower Show, at which only flowers grown out of doors are exhibited, holds a record of nearly 200 varieties exhibited at the last show.

The growing of artichokes along the coast north of the city has created an income of $1,500,000 annually from the 3,000 acres now under cultivation. The demand for this appetizing vegetable is rapidly increasing, due to the food value.

The fishing industry gives employment to a large number, and the sale of fish during the past year was in the neighborhood of a quarter-million dollars.

Santa Cruz County is rich in minerals, and the largest cement plant in the United States is located north of the City of Santa Cruz, with an output of 1,500,000 barrels per year. Lime and limestone products are also manufactured in large quantities.

The lumber industry, which was at one time the principal industry of the county, is still represented by two companies operating on a large scale. Other industries consist of incubators, leather, art leather goods, fruit packing, candy, redwood burl novelties, brushes and machines.

The educational facilities of Santa Cruz are excellent, with seven grammar schools, a high school, a progressive business college and a Catholic school. A summer school for elementary teachers offers special opportunities to teachers for combining the course with a summer vacation.

The religious life of the community is stimulated and increased by churches representing the leading denominations, while fraternal organizations and clubs play a prominent part in the social life of the residents and visitors.

Santa Cruz may be made a base from which to point to dozens of places of interest which can be reached in a few hours. The cities and towns of the county other than Santa Cruz City are Watsonville, Aptos, Capitola, Soquel, Davenport, Felton, Ben Lomond, Brookdale and Boulder Creek.

Watsonville is the center of the southern end of the county, and lies in the heart of one of the richest agricultural districts of California.

For play or home, Santa Cruz offers everything that is to be desired. There is only one Santa Cruz, and the entire community stands ready to welcome those who enter its midst. The doors of Santa Cruz, the friendly city, stand wide open.

SANTA CRUZ ADMISSION DAY PROGRAM

SANTA CRUZ CITY WILL BE THE MECCA of thousands of Native Sons and Native Daughters from all parts of California who will gather there for the three-day Admission Day celebration, September 7, 8 and 9. They will go by train, special and regular, autos, busses, and any other available means of transportation—the idea being to get there and be numbered among the throng who will join in observing the state's seventy-ninth birthday anniversary. And Santa Cruz, the hospitable city, will be glad to welcome and to entertain them.

Santa Cruz will, it is said, be better decorated than ever before, for the Richfield Oil Company, a California-owned corporation, exemplifying cocompanying friends will arrive in Santa Cruz. Special events for that evening include dancing and entertainment at the various Parlor headquarters, and a band concert, followed by an outdoor vaudeville show, at the beach. The street in front of the Santa Cruz County Court House will also be turned into a huge outdoor dancing plaza, brilliantly lighted and elaborately decorated.

At 11 a. m. of September 8 there will be a drum corps competition at Memorial Park. A Native Son golf tournament has been arranged for at the Santa Cruz Golf and Country Club course. At 2 p. m. there will be a baseball game at the Bay-street ball park. At 9 p. m. there will be a display of fireworks from the beach

Santa Cruz, under normal conditions, offers unusual attractions in the way of entertainment for visitors, and Santa Cruz Parlor No. 90 N.S.G.W., in conjunction with the Santa Cruz Chamber of Commerce, is adding to those features, which means that there will be something doing every minute of the three-day Admission Day celebration.

A reception committee will meet the visitors as they arrive. Housing headquarters will be maintained at the Chamber of Commerce, 28

ADMISSION DAY PARADE AT SANTA CRUZ

(CLARENCE M. HUNT.)

HONORING THEIR NATIVE STATE, California, on the occasion of the seventy-ninth anniversary of its admittance, September 9, 1850, as one of the United States of America, members of the Order of Native Sons and Native Daughters of the Golden West, gathered by the thousands from all sections of the Land of Sunshine, Fruits and Flowers, will stage a colorful Admission Day pageant in Santa Cruz City, September 9.

The pageant will be directed by Arthur J. Cleu, Grand Marshal N.S.G.W., assisted by Evelyn I. Carlson, Grand Marshal N.D.G.W., and several division marshals and aides. The parade will start at 10:30 a. m. from the Southern Pacific depot and Pacific avenue, thence north on the left-hand side of Pacific to Mission and Front streets, countermarching on Pacific to the Laurel street extension of Third street, where it will disband.

Grand Marshal Cleu furnished The Grizzly Bear, August 22, with the line-up of the parade to that date; it is very likely that, by the time the hour arrives for the Admission Day parade to move, more divisions will be added. ### FEW GOPHERS DROWN.

If an occasional gopher is found dead after the alfalfa field is irrigated, don't take it for granted that all the gophers have been drowned.
Investigations have shown that about 10 percent of the rodents may meet a watery death during irrigation, but that the other 90 percent are pretty sure to escape. Other means of ridding the field of the pest must be adopted.

Native Sons of the Golden West

"TO THE OFFICERS AND MEMBERS of all Subordinate Parlors of the Order of Native Sons of the Golden West—Dear Sirs and Brothers: At the last [San Francisco] Grand Parlor of the Native Sons of the Golden West, a resolution was adopted selecting Santa Cruz as the city in which to hold the 9th of September [Admission Day] celebration.

"It is not necessary, I am sure, to remind you of the facts connected with this glorious occasion, and as loyal Native Sons, we cannot but help to express our feelings in the demonstration on that day.

"I, therefore, extend to all the Parlors throughout the Order an invitation to participate in this celebration, the seventy-ninth anniversary of the admission of the State of California into the Union. The committee in charge is making elaborate preparations and your cooperation will be greatly appreciated.

"I would commend you to do all in your power to see that this day is fittingly observed in your immediate community, if it is impossible for you to participate in the celebration at Santa Cruz, as I feel that we should strive to fulfill the debt which we owe to the memory of our Pioneers by an observance of this day, and that we should also, in a fitting manner, endeavor to impart to the adopted sons and daughters of California the spirit of loyalty and love of our state, the heritage of which we are so proud.

"Sincerely and fraternally yours,

"CHARLES L. DODGE,

"Grand President.

"Martinez, August 1, 1929."

Mount Bally's Birthday Party.

Weaverville—In observance of the forty-third institution anniversary of Mount Bally No. 87, the Parlor, assisted by McCloud No. 149 (Redding), entertained representatives of several California North Parlors, August 10 and 11. Arcata No. 20 sent a delegation of fourteen, and Redding, Fort Bragg, Eureka, Bieber and Etna were well represented. Three of the remaining four charter members of Mount Bally—Superior Judge James W. Bartlett, G. O. Laws and H. L. Lowden—participated in the festivities; G. W. Tinsley was unable to be present. A dance the night of August 10 opened the program.

The morning of the 11th Mount Bally initiated a class of twelve Trinity County Natives, the ritual being exemplified by the Parlor's officers, headed by President J. J. Jackson. Following these ceremonies a bounteous feast of well-prepared food was served by a bevy of Weaverville's beautiful girls under the trees in Bandstand park. Guests at the luncheon were all Native Sons, visiting and local, and members of Eltapome No. 55 N.D.G.W. with their immediate families.

Grand Outside Sentinel Horace J. Leavitt, junior past president of Mount Bally, addressed the gathering, welcoming the visitors to Weaverville and inviting them to come again. Other speakers were Judge Bartlett, who outlined Trinity County's interesting early history, and representatives of the visiting Parlors.

Meets in New Home.

Salinas—Santa Lucia No. 97 had the first meeting in its recently-acquired new home August 5. The festivities started with a barbecue, served by R. W. Adcock, A. J. Hutchings and John Ostrander. Officers were installed by District Deputy John Souza, R. W. Adcock becoming president. A committee consisting of A. J. Hutchings, M. G. Silva and Paul Brindero was appointed to submit plans and specifications for remodeling the home building.

Mountain Initiations.

San Bernardino—Under the guidance of Judge Donald E. Van Loven, president, Arrowhead No. 1110 has inaugurated a plan of holding a monthly initiation in its clubhouse at Crest Line, in the San Bernardino Mountains. Here, large classes of candidates were received into membership

July 20 and August 17. Steak suppers preceded the ceremonies on both occasions.

August 8 the Parlor sponsored an evening picnic at Fairmount Park, Riverside. President Van Loven presided, and there were addresses by Dr. E. P. Clarke, editor "Riverside Daily Press," Joseph Seymour, a recent initiate, and Senator Miguel Estudillo. J. A. Gregory was general chairman of the outing, and was assisted by W. Donald Keir, Dan Ross, Harry G. Lord, Gordon C. Heap, Joseph H. Hayden and R. W. Brazelton. Journeying to San Diego August 21, the officers of No. 110, using frontier costumes, initiated a class of candidates for San Diego No. 108. Plans for the observance of Admission Day are under way by a committee composed of Johu Andresen Jr. (chairman), Grand Trustee Beu Harrison, Joseph Seymour and Leslie Maloche.

In making the request, the San Diego Natives said: "We believe it will add materially in perpetuating early California historical significance in the minds of the public."

Order's Progress Related.

Forty-fourth Anniversary Observed.

San Rafael—The forty-fourth institution anniversary of Mount Tamapals No. 64 was observed August 5 by initiation of several candidates and installation of officers, concluded with a sumptuous banquet. Thomas P. Boyd, former Marin County district attorney, presided at the festal board, and in telling the history of the Parlor alluded to the many prominent citizens who took an active interest in its affairs: Frank M. Angellotti, former chief justice of the California Supreme Court and No. 64's first president, Salvador Pacheco, George Agnew and T. J. Wasser, surviving charter members; the late Thomas J. Lennon, presiding justice of the appellate court; M. F. Cochran, deceased, editor "San Rafael Independent;" "Billy" Magee, San Rafael's marrying justice, who long served the Parlor as recording secretary, dying in office; J. Emmet Hayden, San Francisco supervisor, and hosts of others. Other speakers were Charles Redding, Marin County treasurer, R. E. Messner, county surveyor, C. W. Russell, M. E. Soares, President B. J. Brusatori, Monroe Label and Hugh McCurdy.

On the Parlor's behalf the retiring junior past president, M. E. Soares, was presented with a beautiful emblematic ring by President Brusatori, who commended his activities on the "big 5" committee. President Brusatori was also the recipient of a gift from admiring friends at the hands of Past President Monroe Label.

Let's Go Now!

Sacramento—With "Every Member Get a Member" as its slogan, Sunset No. 26 has under way a membership campaign, inspired by John J. Monteverde Sr., former Grand Trustee, who wants the Parlor's membership increased at least seventy-five during the term of his son, J. J. Monteverde Jr., as president.

To stimulate interest, "Monte" Sr. will add $2.50 to Grand President Charles L. Dodge's $2.50 for every eligible initiated, provided a minimum of seventy-five members are secured. And in addition, high-honor men will receive awards of $25, $15 and $10.

Clyde L. Corcoran, junior past president, chairman of the drive, has reminded the members of Sunset that "Procrastination is the thief of time—let's go now!"

Past Presidents Visit.

OLD PINE CONE ASSOCIATED WITH COAST REVOLUTION

THE STORY OF WESTERN CALIFORNIA's inundation by the Pacific Ocean and the millions of years during which the geological transformation took place which brought the Pacific Coast to its present outline, is epitomized in a fossil specimen discovered recently near Bakersfield, Kern County, and turned over to the geology department of the University of California at Los Angeles.

This specimen consists of an immense pine cone, perfectly preserved in a state of petrification, found in the mountains east of Bakersfield. It is several million years since this cone dropped from the pine tree to which it belongs, and its subsequent history is an outline of the history of the Pacific Coast from the time when the ocean extended over the major portion of what is now California.

"This pine cone had floated upon the ocean until, becoming water-logged, it sank far below the surface," says Prof. W. J. Miller, head of the U. C. L. A. geology department, in describing its strange evolution. "At the bottom it gradually became covered with thousands of feet of sediment. Here underground waters, carrying mineral matter in solution, gradually petrified it. None of the original cells remain, but have been completely replaced with selenite, a variety of gypsum. Although the cone is in a state of remarkable preservation as regards its contour, it is now a solid piece of mineral.

"Then came the great coast revolution, geologically speaking, when the great Coast Range of mountains was born out of the sea—lifted thousands of feet by the great upheaval; and the sea was thrown back to its present confines. Since the great uplift, weather conditions, stream actions and other factors have worn away the overlying material, laying bare the fossil pine cone."

The specimen, considered one of the most beautiful pieces representing the tertiary age, will repose in the museum which is to be part of the new university's geological department.

CALIFORNIA VINEYARDIST

HAS NO USE FOR FILIPINOS.

The Order of Native Sons of the Golden West has gone on record as in favor of applying the immigration quota to Mexico, and of excluding Filipinos. Commenting on the latter, who are generally recognized as a menace, the "Livingston Chronicle" of recent date said:

"One of the largest employers of farm labor in the Livingston district came to town Monday and expressed the hope that something could be done to keep Filipinos out of the Livingston district. He had some strong comments to make.

He is Roy Weir, manager of the American Vineyard.

"There's no place on my ranch for Filipinos and I run them off as soon as they appear," said this big vineyardist. "They are a most unreliable lot and I wouldn't hire one if I could get him for two-bits a day. They come to my place in big automobiles almost every day and recommend themselves highly, but I show them the gate quick.

"They have no sense of honor or honesty and as far as being good farm help is concerned, I can't see it. I know of some orchards and vineyards that were ruined last year by Filipino pruners, who were content to make a dollar and a half a day, but the owners of these properties who thought they were economizing will find their production so cut down this year that, if they have any sense they won't hire Filipino pruners again. . . .

"Filipinos think they are better than the Whites, and don't keep their place. I don't care what a man's color or race is, if he is honest and decent, but it goes against the grain to have some people adopt a superior attitude toward me and my family. I don't like that."

MOUNTAIN FIRE

(EDNA GEARHART.)

Since dawn I have watched an ominous cloud
That sullenly swells on the pine-covered ridge,
Rising and piling in ravenous surge,
Pearled and purpling with menacing glow,
Aping the thunder heads, flouting the sun,
Incredible threat in the blistered sky.

In the cloud I see Torture of blue jay, terror of trout,
Fleet spirit of deer, and feather of quail,
Hot breath of pine trees, shimmer of needles,
Gray fluff of squirrel, embers of buckthorn,
Anguish of chipmunk, writhing of lupine,
And red rape of pools.

And I who have loved the mountains,
Their intimate beauty of petal and wing,
With smarting eyes and powerless hands
Must watch their torment and havoc.

—University of California Chronicle.

BACH, of Santa Monica, will go down in aviation history as the first Pacific Coast Airplane factory to successfully develop a tri-motored passenger ship. Its first job (illustrated above) is still in use. Day in and day out it flies over the San Francisco to Seattle run of the West Coast Air Transport Lines. Bach uses and recommends Union gasoline because of its power—its mileage possibilities and unfailing dependability. It has found by service tests and comparisons that "success-tested" Union wins on every count by which a motor fuel is measured. ### THIRD ANNUAL PRESENTATION

"FELICITA," PAGEANT-DRAMA
Escondido (San Diego County)—"Felicitá," an epic of the battle of San Pasqual, where General Kearney's men gave their lives in the conquest of California, will have its third annual presentation here September 1, 2, 8 and 9. The pageant-drama is fashioned from material largely historical, and the setting, "the bowl under the sheltering oaks," is most appropriate, in that the historic events featured in the scenes transpired near by.

"Felicitá," meaning "happy little one," lived in San Pasqual, a village at which General Kearney stopped when on his way to San Diego. She was the daughter of the Indian chief of the village, Poncho. The pageant-drama, written and directed by Dr. Benjamin F. Sherman, is woven about the romance of an American soldier and the beautiful Indian maiden.

DEVELOPMENT MOTOR LINES

FOR FARM PRODUCTS PREDICTED.
Development of organized motor-truck systems for transporting perishable farm commodities to markets from producing regions within a radius of 250 miles, and for distributing produce from large markets to smaller towns within a similar area, is predicted by marketing specialists of the Federal Agricultural Department's bureau of agricultural economics. The establishment of motor-trucking systems as feeders to allroad concentration points for long hauls is also regarded as a possibility.

"Although there has been a rapid increase in the use of motor transportation of farm products in the last few years from established producing areas and from new growing regions formerly outside the range of wagon haul to cities," says a recent statement, "the motor-transport business from farm to market is as yet practically unorganized and for the most part is in the hands of independent truckers. More or less organization already exists, however, in the distribution of produce from cities to small towns."

SOME FALL LAWN TROUBLES.

Brown patch on lawns is a common ailment that alarms the owner, and sometimes rightly so. Usually it is caused by too much irrigation, making conditions right for a soil fungus that kills the grass. In the first place, cut down the water almost to wilting the grass. Then try a fungicidal remedy such as may be obtained from any seed store and use it according to directions.

To encourage the grass that may be in need of help at the end of a long summer, use about an ounce of ammonium sulphate to a gallon of water, about a pound to 200 square feet, followed by heavy sprinkling. If the material is used at 20 ounces to a gallon, and applied in the middle of the day with no following irrigation, it will kill weeds pretty satisfactorily. It will not get obnoxious grasses, but broad-leaved plants are likely to succumb. The grass may look brown for a few days, but when the ammonium sulphate gets into the soil, it will quickly get to work on its lawn improvement program.

AUTO OPERATING COSTS VARY

ACCORDING TO SIZE OF CAR.

The average operating costs of autos vary from 6.02c a mile for light cars to 9.45c for the heavy ones, according to information gleaned in an extensive survey.

In the four-cylinder class these averages prevail: light cars 6.02c a mile, medium cars 6.42c, heavy cars 7.20c. In the six-cylinder class the costs are: light cars 7.38c a mile, medium cars 8.40c, heavy cars 9.45c.

The heaviest single charge is for maintenance, with depreciation second, and gasoline, based on a cost of 20c per gallon, third. Tires and tubes constitute the fourth largest expense, followed by interest on investment, garage rent, insurance, license, and oil. Although 9.43c a mile charge for heavy six-cylinder cars may seem high, it is considerably lower than the 10c cost which prevailed for average vehicles a few years ago.

NATIVE DAUGHTER HAS BIRTHDAY.

Mrs. John Ross Martin, a member of the Women's Auxiliary of California Pioneers, recently celebrated her birthday anniversary in San Francisco, where she has resided for many years.

She claims the distinction of being the first child born to Anglo-Saxon parents in California, July 4, 1847. Her father, the late John Cameron, was the first mayor of Sonoma City, her birthplace.

A BIT O' FARMING

PREPARED EXPRESSLY FOR THE GRIZZLY BEAR BY M. H. ELLIS

FARM RELIEF, AS ADMINISTERED BY the Federal Farm Board, is not going to take the form of a cure-all that can be applied one day and be effective the next. Those who expected over-night relief in agriculture were doomed to disappointment from the start; those who have given the matter real thought have found the actions of the board, up to now, in accord with their ideas. President Hoover told the board he did not expect any legerdemain; he wants a solid foundation laid upon which an enduring agricultural structure may be built. Chairman Alexander H. Legge told the American Institute of Cooperation that the board did not intend to buy or sell, that it only hoped to aid the farmers in selling through their own organizations, and to strengthen and aid those organizations.

The personnel of the board has been wisely chosen. California knows her own representative, Charles C. Teague, and knows that if the rest of the board is as capable as he, there will be something done. George E. Farrand, one of the best-known co-operative attorneys in this state, has been named attorney for the board. Chris L. Christensen, chief of the Federal Bureau of Cooperative Marketing, has been elected secretary.

It has been said in these columns before, and is repeated now: no legislation can force prosperity on agriculture! The farming industry must work out its own salvation. The Federal Farm Board may point the way; undoubtedly it can and will. The trouble lies farther back, with the farmer himself. When the farmer finds, as the businessman finds, that co-operation is the straightest road to success, and that he is not robbing his own pocketbook when he fails to join the movement that brings better prices to him whether or not he is a member, then, and not before, will he be truly prosperous. When co-operatives fail because independents break the markets, the farmer is at fault; the independent can get products only from the farms. Those self-centered farmers who take high prices offered, for the sole purpose of breaking down the co-operatives, will find some day they have brought about their own undoing. The first battle for farm relief is an educational one. It must be fought with propaganda—plenty of it—giving the whole picture and the true picture. Not until enough farmers producing any given commodity are convinced that the crop can virtually be controlled by the co-operative, can farm relief victories be won.

MEDITERRANEAN FRUIT FLY.

Before sailing for the Mediterranean fruit districts, the original haunts of the fruit fly that now is menacing Florida and, in a lesser degree, all the subtropical districts of the nation, Prof. H. J. Quayle made the cheering statement that control has about been attained in Florida. There were few who thought the pest could be eradicated; if it is, the State and the Federal Governments have wrought close to a miracle.

Eternal vigilance, wise direction and plenty of money still are needed. While the original infestations have been stamped out, new centers are appearing and must be handled promptly. California has more at stake in this fight than any other state, for its fruit crop is greater.

COMPENSATION IN FLORIDA.

With the fight against the Mediterranean fruit fly in Florida, there has arisen a situation that has not been unexpected. Shall owners of trees destroyed in the clean-up be compensated? And how much? In the battle here in California against the foot and mouth disease, animals killed were paid for jointly by the State and the Federal Governments.

The Florida threat is no less serious than was the one here; it concerns fruit, instead of livestock. A scale, ranging from $1 for young trees up to six years, to $2.50 for trees more than fifteen years, has been agreed to by the Federal Government and the farmers, but Florida has not yet signified her intention of meeting the government half-way in paying this, as did California. Aside from this, however, comes the question of the fairness of the price. California farmers got what may be considered a fair price for their cattle slaughtered. Is $1 enough for a six-year orange tree? Here's something for California farmers to think about; the question may be their own, if the Florida campaign for control is unsuccessful.

PUMPKINS WILL SET FRUIT.

Fear is often expressed, when the first blossoms fall from the pumpkin or squash vines, that they are not going to set fruit. The inexperienced may notice wilt at the close of a long, hot day and, fearing lack of water, irrigate heavily and keep it up. As a matter of fact, the leaves of such vines are large and transpiration during a hot summer day is so heavy that wilting is but natural. If the leaves are crisp in the morning there is no cause to worry. Perhaps too-frequent irrigation is the cause. Like tomatoes, pumpkins and squashes don't need excess moisture at blossoming time. Shut off the water and let the vines alone for a week or two and pumpkins or squashes, as the case may be, will put in their appearance.

THE MORNING GLORY.

A new remedy for morning glory is reported successful this summer by a farmer who flooded a field where the pest was bad, and kept it flooded for about thirty days. The experiment was successful. It is well to remember, in trying this control, that the water must be kept on continuously and deep enough to submerge all the plant above the ground. Alfalfa is a pretty good control for morning glory. Plant early enough in the fall that the stand is good before frost comes, after plowing deeply. Seed between 20 and 30 pounds to the acre to get a heavy stand. Delay the first cutting in the fall to give the alfalfa a chance; also to keep a shade over the morning glory that may be appearing.

SUCKERING SWEET CORN.

Suckering corn is not only unnecessary, it may do harm, say college authorities. Here's another time-honored theory that may be laid in the attic with over-cultivation and drying-out of orchards near picking time. It seems but reasonable that the suckers do no good and that the corn plants are better off without them. However, tests can do no harm. Suckering costs money, and if it does no good it should not be made a farm practice. Growers should try alternate rows suckered and unsuckered, being careful that other conditions are as nearly equal between the rows as possible. It should not be difficult to ascertain the facts.

BALING ALFALFA HAY.

It may be cheaper as a process to hale alfalfa hay from the windrow, but when quality is considered it is doubtful if the practice is sound. If alfalfa hay is permitted to sweat in cocks or in stacks before baling the quality is much more likely to be good. Coked while still tough, the hay has a better color, the leaves hang on better and after a moderate sweat may be haled with the quality insured. It will not then sweat in the hale and there is much less danger of loss, in addition to superior quality.

SPRAY FOR BLACK SCALE.

While the orange grove may have been fumigated for black scale, a late fall spray of oil and lime sulphur will be helpful. Medium oil sprays may do the work, but the combination will be likely to give better results. In the case of red scale, the oil spray will not be nearly so effective, unless the infestation is light. Where the scale has become resistant to fumigation, the treatment may have to be varied, as also according to districts. Horticultural commissioners and farm advisors always are willing to aid in such problems.

THE HOG OUTLOOK.

Indications are that the hog industry in California is growing smaller and the state continues to import its pork. There were about 1 percent fewer hogs in California this spring than a year ago, and the forecast is that a further decline will ensue. There is a profit to the average producer of about two cents a pound for hogs produced here, under present prices. Better care to insure bigger litters raised, greater utilization of cheap feeds, better bred hogs and more efficient marketing would increase this profit. The profit from hogs may not be great, but it is a sure profit and one that should not be overlooked by the wise farmer who does not care to put all his eggs in one basket.

CHLOROSIS OF TREES.

Chlorosis of trees, evidenced by yellow leaves and a lack of green, has caused and still is causing trouble in the orchards of the state. The cause is too much lime in the soil, and not enough iron available to offset it. So far no practical means of making iron available has been found, but by the injection of iron solutions in some orchards the condition of the trees has been greatly improved. The use of crystals for injection also is claimed to have given results. At the present time, however, this method of treatment has not been well developed and should not be tried until the grower is sure of his ground. Soil sulphur added to the tree's feeding area has been tried, but with no very definite results.

THE NEW DOG LAW.

Whatever its merits, the new dog law is in effect, and all dogs that do not have city or county licenses must bear their owners' names and addresses. Dogs entering fields where livestock is kept may be killed; any damage they may do must be paid double by their owners. This law is intended to protect sheep; while it is stringent, the wool growers of the state long have demanded protection from tramp dogs and from killers that heretofore have kept somehow within the law. The law makes it thus mandatory for dog owners to keep their dogs under control and to make their ownership known by metal tags attached to collars or leg bands.

LATE TOMATO BLIGHT.

Growers of late fall tomatoes should be on guard against blight. With the cooler weather and first showers of autumn, this fungus disease gets under way and a bit of fog encourages it all the more. Bordeaux spray, about 4-4-50, is the best preventive known. It should be applied at high pressure and with a nozzle that will get both sides of the leaves. When two or three foggy days come in a row, or a shower appears, the tomato vines should be safeguarded against blight.

LIME-SULPHUR FOR DISINFECTANT.

If there is some lime-sulphur left after the spraying job is done, don't throw it away. Haul the spray rig around to the hen house, the hog houses, barns or any other farm buildings that may be sheltering livestock parasites. Used at the rate of one gallon of lime-sulphur to ten of water, it will kill mites, lice and any other vermin that it hits. Moreover, its penetration is good if well applied. For a general cleanup of farm buildings, it will be found quite satisfactory.

PEAR SLUG REAL ENEMY.

While related to the common garden slug, pear slugs have a different field of activity and their damage is in trees, the pear, cherry and prune. They eat the leaves, leaving nothing but the skeletons, and the damage to the tree is that of lack of nourishment. They have been known to kill trees by their defoliation. If the trees are small, dusting will get them—just ordinary dust of any kind, such as road dust, ashes, hydrated lime or anything fine and dry that will cover them well. Where the trees are too large to be handled in this manner, four pounds of basic arsenate of lead in 100 gallons of water, sprayed over the foliage, will get them. A 25-percent arsenate of lead dust also is effective.

FALL IRRIGATION OF TREES.

The job of the fruit tree is not done when the crop is off its limbs. It must store up energy for the coming year, and it sets its fruit buds in the autumn. Consequently, it must not be neglected. A very important item in orchard practice is fall irrigation, and it must not be delayed too long. While the leaves still are on the trees, and green, the orchard should be watered. If there are weeds after the summer's harvest rush, get them out so that the tree may profit by the irrigation. Water sometimes is scarce at this season and every drop may count.

POISON PLANTS ON THE RANGES.

At this season of the year, when the ranges are dry and feed scarce, cattle are likely to eat anything green they find. They may have passed up some rather unpalatable and more or less poisonous plants all season; but with everything green gone they may return to eat such plants now. This has happened in one district, where wild or Indian tobacco has caused a considerable loss among range cows. It is well to keep a close watch on the herd at this season and, if poisoning develops, ascertain the cause at once.

DAIRY FEEDING AND MILK.

No ration can be arranged to increase the butterfat content of a cow's milk; no ration can be devised to change the taste of a cow's milk. By taste is meant the ratio of sugar and salt in the milk that give it a pleasing or unpleasant flavor, not that which may come from feeding weeds. The quality of the cow's milk is bred in her. To get richer, better-tasting milk and more of it, the dairyman must look to breeding. If the cow's milk is high in sugar content, the milk will be pleasant to taste; if it is high in salt and low in sugar, the taste will be less pleasing. Hence in breeding, dairymen have not only to scan pedigrees for production of milk and percentage of butterfat, but also for taste of milk, for all these things figure in the dairy profits.

CALIFORNIA HAPPENINGS OF FIFTY YEARS AGO

Thomas R. Jones

(COMPILED EXPRESSLY FOR THE GRIZZLY BEAR.)

THE STATE ELECTION IN CALIFORNIA September 3, 1879, resulted in a victory for the Republican ticket, George C. Perkins, for governor, receiving 67,965 votes, Hugh M. Glenn, the New Constitution - Democratic candidate, 47,647, and Wm. F. White, the Workingmen's candidate, 41,483. The total vote approximated 161,000, 40,000 being cast in San Francisco and 8,000 in Los Angeles. Electing a majority of the senators and the assemblymen, the Republicans secured control of the State Legislature.

Rev. I. S. Kallach, although physically incapacitated by the DeYoung bullets, was elected mayor of San Francisco by a majority of over 2,000. Electing fifteen of the local candidates, the Workingmen were given an opportunity to govern the city.

Admission Day, September 9, California's twenty-ninth birthday anniversary, was observed by a display of flags everywhere, and by banquets of the Pioneer Societies.

The annual State Fair opened at Sacramento for a week's run September 8. A special feature was an encampment of the California National Guard, 800 members of which paraded at Agricultural Park each morning. The "tiger," having a lair in every saloon, and numerous "side shows" furnished plenty of entertainment. One of the greatest surprises for the visitors was the installation, in front of the Weinstock-Lubin store, of two electric lights—something heard of, but never before seen.

Other fairs during the month included: Napa and Solano Counties at Vallejo, 15th; Northern District at Marysville, Yuba County, 15th; El Dorado County at Placerville, 16th; San Joaquin Valley at Stockton, 16th; Santa Clara County at San Jose, 22nd; Monterey County at Salinas, 30th; Butte County at Chico, 30th.

General U. S. Grant, returning from a two-year trip around the world, arrived in San Francisco September 21 and was accorded the grandest reception ever given a nation's hero. September 30 he and his party started for the Yosemite Valley, but in the meantime Oakland, Alameda County, gave him an ovation the 24th, and San Jose, Santa Clara County, the 26th. At Stockton, San Joaquin County, there was a grand reception, preceded by a parade featuring 2,000 girls dressed in white.

At Merced, where the party took stages for Yosemite, was W. D. Doust who, in 1852, piloted the stage in which Grant, then a lieutenant, made a trip from Stockton to Knights Ferry. While he and the general were reminiscing Mrs. Grant appeared and, being introduced to the stage driver, inquired: "Are you a good driver?" To which Doust, the veteran reinmaster, replied: "No ma'am."

SANTA CRUZ COUNTY FUNDS DISAPPEAR. Grapes were retailing in Fresno City at one cent a pound.

Pacific Coast mining companies paid dividends amounting to $389,000 this month.

C. P. Huntington arrived in San Francisco this month and turned over to the executors of the Mark Hopkins estate United States bonds and cash to the amount of $5,300,000, thus increasing the Hopkins estate from $18,000,000 to $23,300,000.

A count of the Santa Cruz County funds September 13 revealed a shortage of nearly $24,000. George Otto, county treasurer, while suspicioned, was believed to have been robbed by scientific yeggmen who manipulated the locks of two safes.

During the month the United States Mint in San Francisco coined 361,000 twenty-dollar pieces, 40,000 ten-dollar pieces, 92,000 five-dollar pieces and 1,000,000 silver dollars. This coinage, totaling $9,440,000, was of gold and silver mined on the Pacific Coast.

A forest fire starting in the foothills near Santa Barbara September 13 endangered that city. Great damage was done between Montecito and Santa Barbara.

Five Red Bluff, Tehama County, business houses burned September 14, causing a $10,000 loss.

Fire in Stockton, San Joaquin County, September 30 destroyed six buildings, with a $12,000 loss.

Marysville, Yuba County, had a $100,000 fire September 8, a warehouse and several stores being consumed.

Harry Rickliffe and Budd Jackson, hunting quail in Sonoma County, killed 216 of the toothsome birds in a day.

A giant tarantula, four inches long, two inches wide, and standing upon legs five inches long, was captured near San Leandro, Alameda County.

A Plumas County hunter popularly known as "Peavine Tom," found a bear wallow in which five grizzlies were cavorting. He killed three of them, but was terribly mutilated in the conflict.

A brilliant meteor shot across the northwestern sky at 7:15 p. m. of September 5, leaving a streak of light behind that changed to zigzag-like lightning flashes for thirty minutes.

A Sunday-school teacher at Lone, Amador County, quoted the Scripture: "Wine is a mocker, strong drink is raging." Afterward, a saloon-keep said the teacher looked directly at his two children and drew the attention of the whole school to them. He paid a $40 fine for "putting a head" on the teacher.

treatment has not been well developed ar should not be tried until the grower is sure his ground. Soil sulphur added to the tree feeding area has been tried, but with no ve definite results.

THE NEW DOG LAW

Abijah Gibson, Elijah Frost and Thomas McClain, arrested September 8 for raiding the smokehouses, henhouses and barns of Little Lake, Mendocino County, ranchers, were taken from the authorities by a vigilance committee of twenty-five disguised men, whose identity was never revealed, and lynched.

A sea monster, twelve feet long and four feet wide, was seen cavorting in Santa Monica Bay, September 2.

September 2 the stage from Moore's Flat, Nevada County, to Nevada City was stopped by two masked men about three miles from the latter place. The express box, from which but a small sum was obtained, was broken open, and then the passengers were lined up for robbery. Wm. F. ## WHAT IS THE ASSOCIATION AGAINST THE PROHIBITION AMENDMENT?

An association incorporated under the laws of the District of Columbia on December 31, 1920, with the statement that its purpose is "to conduct an educational campaign intended to convince the electorate that said (Eighteenth) Amendment establishes in certain respects an unwise and dangerous precedent, and that its repeal would be for the best interests of our country."

WHAT IS ITS PURPOSE?

To bring about the removal of the Eighteenth Amendment from the Constitution of the United States, meanwhile to temper the fanatical excesses and absurdities of Prohibition enforcement acts, and then to help the separate States, in accordance with their constitutional rights, to install the best method of controlled and restricted distribution of alcoholic beverages as a means of doing away with speakeasies and secret drinking and preventing the return of the old unregulated saloon system.

True temperance is an ultimate object.

HOW DOES IT WORK?

Through economic and sociological research, the underlying facts affecting the Prohibition situation are determined. These facts are laid before the public of the United States.

Politically, support is given to congressional candidates who are fighting for the principles for which the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment stands.

WHO ARE THE DIRECTORS?

Acknowledged leaders in professional, industrial, philanthropic, financial, farming, literary and labor fields throughout the United States.

WHO ARE THE MEMBERS?

Thousands of men and women, of every class and creed throughout this country, have for years been subscribing to membership in the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment because of their conscientious opposition to present Prohibition conditions. On the rolls are professors, ministers, business men and women, mothers and wives, older brothers and sisters, civic and religious leaders in every part of the United States.

HOW IS IT SUPPORTED?

By the dues and voluntary contributions of its members from year to year. It is not endowed and has no assets other than the earnest support and good will of those who subscribe to its principles and fighting funds. Every dollar goes direct to the firing line against the delusions and evils of Prohibition. One million dollars a year must be raised to make this work count. The more dollars you can throw in, the hotter the fire.

sisted its being taken, with the exclamation "I'll die first!" He was instantly killed.

As the result of a quarrel at a Democratic political meeting in San Francisco the previous night, Dudley C. Haskell shot and killed a man named Schwartz, September 3.

The 10-year-old son of Mrs. Poole, living on a ranch near Colton, San Bernardino County, was dragged to death by a calf with which he and his 4-year-old brother were playing.

The three small children of Mrs. John McGrath, living near Ukiah, Mendocino County, were taken with spasms after eating bread and milk and two of them died. The cow from which the milk had been taken also died soon after in convulsions. It was found that some unknown wretch had poisoned the cow.

The pest of grasshoppers, that for three years destroyed crops in Sierra County, appeared to be at an end, due to the presence of devouring beetles.

A big pigeon shoot at Folsom, Sacramento County, September 7, was judged by Assemblyman Frank L. Coombs of Napa City, now a Past Grand President of the Native Sons.

Daniel Collins, who started to hike from San Francisco to New York June 1, reached his destination September 3.

At this time, Yolo County had 102 individuals who owned more than a thousand acres of land, and San Joaquin County had 109. R. S. Carey and Charles McLaughlin were the largest landowners in the respective counties, claiming title to 17,724 and 90,000 acres.

NATIONAL PARK IN CALIFORNIA

ENLARGED AND ENRICHED BY GIFT.

A museum building and forty acres of land have just been added to the Lassen Volcanic National Park through action of the Federal Interior Department in accepting a deed proffered by B. F. Loomis of Anderson, Shasta County. The land is part of a section added to the park by the passage of the act extending its boundaries through the addition of approximately 24,280 acres containing interesting scenic spectacles associated with the volcanic phenomena of the region. Loomis purchased the land, then in private ownership, some two years ago with the idea of constructing a museum in memory of his daughter, Mae, for future donation to the national park. The museum, the main building of which is 72x27 feet, is constructed of softly-tinted native stone and reinforced concrete throughout, the only wood used being in the window frames and the bronze-covered door. Extending from the main building in the form of a "T" is another, 27x52 feet.

The main building is devoted primarily to volcanic exhibits, including a photographic history of Lassen Peak and its recent eruptions. The extension contains exhibitions of wild-life groups of the region. In a separate building, in the construction of which all varieties of lava were used, is an exhibition seismograph under glass, so that the public may watch its operations at all times.

"A one hundred percent American is one who puts his duty to his country above his selfish desires, and who is more anxious that his children and his children's children may live in a country where justice and liberty prevail, than for any profit that he may make for himself during his own life by cheating."—Benjamin Franklin.

Postmasters To Gather—The National Association of Postmasters will have its annual convention at Sacramento City, September 17 to 20.

SEVENTY-FIFTH STATE FAIR PRESENTS NUMEROUS ATTRACTIONS.

Two California Pioneers who saw the First State Fair at San Francisco in 1854 will be guests of honor at the Diamond Jubilee (seventy-fifth) State Fair and Western Exposition which opened at Sacramento City August 31 and will continue through Admission Day, September 9.

They are Mrs. Emma Sullivan, 90, of Belvedere, Marin County, and James B. Morris, 88, of Agua Caliente, Sonoma County. Mrs. Sullivan was born in Australia, and arrived in San Francisco in January of 1850. Morris came to California when a boy of 11, and proudly recalls his trip on a mule across the Isthmus of Panama.

According to the "Daily Alta Californian" of San Francisco, the First State Fair was highly successful: "The State Agricultural Fair opened at Musical Hall yesterday. A great many persons visited the mall throughout the day, although the opening was a very informal one, in consequence of a large number of articles having failed to arrive. A visit to this exposition will richly repay the time expended on it. One hour spent in Musical Hall will afford more information concerning the vast agricultural resources of our beautiful state than could be acquired by traveling about for weeks from place to place. Flowers of every hue, rare plants, mammoth vegetables, pictures, wax works, shells, minerals, agricultural implements, etc., displayed with much taste, form a beautiful picture."

The California State Fair, founded in 1854 and held annually ever since, has been a great factor in the development of not only the state, but the whole Pacific Slope. The seventy-fifth fair presents, in addition to the Western States Exposition, displays by California's fifty-eight counties and numerous other attractions.

San Diego—San Diego No. 108 had a most en-thuslastic meeting August 21, the hall being packed. Arrowhead No. 110 (San Bernardino) was represented by a delegation of twenty-one, among them Grand Trustee Ben Harrison. Four candidates were initiated.

Admission Day, September 9, the Parlor will present to the City of San Diego a Flag of the United States of America and a California State (Bear) Flag, to be flown from the flagpole erected by the Parlor in 1923 to mark the site of Fort Stockton, which is now included in the new Pro-sidlo Park, recently donated to the city by George W. Marston.

Included in this parksite are the site of the first San Diego Mission, destroyed by Indians, and the large cross erected to the memory of Father Junipero Serra. Marston has constructed in the park a wonderful museum for the preser-vation and exhibition of things historical.

At the Admission Day ceremonies there will be addresses by Judge Eugene Daney Jr., past president, Mahel Burgert, president San Diego No. 208 N.D.G.W. and George W. Marston of the San Diego Historical Society. On the Parlor's behalf, Councilman Edward H. Dowell, past president, will present the flags, and they will be accepted for the City of San Diego by Mayor Harry Clark. The United States Navy band will furnish the music for the occasion.

Long Sleep Ended.

Richmond—Richmond No. 217, dormant for several years, has awakened and now promises to become the largest Parlor in Contra Costa County. August 21 a class of twenty-four can-didates for the Parlor and Vallejo No. 77 were initiated, and the affair, largely attended, was the turning point in Richmond's career. Previ-ous to the ceremonies there was a parade in which the drum corps of Oakland No. 50, Pied-mont No. 120 and Claremont No. 240 partici-pated. The ritual was exemplified by the follow-ing:

Grand President Charles L. Dodge, president; Junior Past Grand President James A. Wilson, junior past president; Herbert de la Rosa, former grand marshal, senior past president; Grand First Vice-president John T. Newell, first vice-president; Grand Second Vice-president Dr. Frank I. Gonzalez, second vice-president; Grand Secretary John T. Regan, third vice-president; Grand Marshal Arthur J. Cleu, marshal; Grand Inside Sentinel Joseph Clavo, inside sentinel; C. George Cuthbertson (Castro No. 232), organist. Following initiation Richmond No. 147 N.D.G.W. served a banquet which was enjoyed by over 200. President James Long of No. 217 was the toast-master, and addresses were made by Grand President Dodge, Grand First Vice-president

IMPOSING BUILDING DEDICATED

SANTA BARBARA — BEFORE THOUSANDS of spectators gathered from all parts of California, Santa Barbara County's beautiful new $2,000,000 court house of Spanish architecture was dedicated by officials of the Grand Parlor of the Order of Native Sons of the Golden West, under the auspices of Santa Barbara Parlor No. 116 N.S.G.W. and Reina del Mar Parlor No. 126 N.D.G.W., August 14.

The new court house, being the greatest single expression in architecture of the community's picturesque life, the dedication was incorporated in the program for Santa Barbara's annual Old

An octagon-shaped bronze plaque, inscribed "Dedicated by the Native Sons of the Golden West August 14, 1929," was then set in place, the following participating in the ceremonies: Grand President Charles L. Gonzalez, Grand Third Vice-president Seth Millington, Grand Secretary John T. Regan, Past Grand Presidents Dr. Charles W. Decker, Joseph R. Knowland and Judge Fletcher A. Cutler.

U.S.C. BEGINS FORTY-NINTH SESSION SEPTEMBER 14

WITH MANY SONS AND DAUGHTERS of Native Sons of the Golden West in attendance, the forty-ninth session of the University of Southern California will open at Los Angeles for freshmen September 11, and for other students September 14. The interim will allow ample time for the new students to become oriented to their new environment, to meet the campus leaders and faculty members, and to plan their year's schedules before the returning Trojans come to the campus.

More than four hundred faculty members, including regular professors, as well as a number of eminent educators from foreign and American universities as visiting exchange professors, will be at the University of Southern California. Notable among these are C. F. Tucker Brooke, visiting professor of the English language and literature, who attended Oxford as a Rhodes scholar and acted as instructor at Yale and exchange professor at the University of London; Edmund Howard Hollands, professor of philosophy, a Sage fellow at Cornell and professor of philosophy at the University of Kansas since 1913; Arthur S. Patterson, Ph. B., Docteur de l'Université de Grenoble, visiting professor of Spanish, and many others of high educational standing.

With the Mudd Memorial Hall of Philosophy nearing completion, a new unit to the semi-centennial building project is added to the University-avenue campus. In this building will be housed all the philosophy offices, classes, faculty offices and the Hoose library of philosophy, which contains many rare volumes in addition to a wide scope of current reference books.

Courses for which the University of Southern California is becoming internationally famous for its progressiveness are those relating to the institute of international relations, the photography courses and the aviation courses. Being unusual and modern, these courses are giving impetus to widespread favorable comment towards the institution which sponsors advancement as well as offering the highest type of instruction in the classical, cultural and professional fields.

known as the St. Charles Hotel, on December 27, 1846, declaring Santa Barbara American Territory. Lieutenant Theodore Talbot and his small band of rangers who had occupied the town in July 1846, participated in the ceremonies. In commemoration this plaque is dedicated August 15, 1929, by the Historic Landmarks Committee Native Sons of the Golden West."

The Native Sons and the Native Daughters took a prominent part in all of the many features of the Old Spanish Days Fiesta. Reina del Mar Parlor N.D.G.W. successfully sponsored an unusual reception immediately after the court house dedication, and enlisted the interest of every woman's organization in the county. In the historic parade of August 15, the Santa Barbara Parlors of Native Sons and Native Daughters were represented by two beautiful floats—Reina del Mar entering Saint Barbara, and Santa Barbara the Bear Flag. During their visit to Santa Barbara the Native Sons grand officers were royally entertained, and in addition to viewing the fiesta attractions from points of vantage, were taken on sightseeing trips to the many points of interest in and about the Queen City.

"Our Order," commented Grand Secretary John T. Regan, "is proud of the privilege granted to dedicate Santa Barbara County's wonderful court house, and we are appreciative of the honor conferred on the Order by the Board of Supervisors."

STATE'S NEW MOTOR VEHICLE ACT NOW IN FULL FORCE.

Including scores of changes of vital interest to every motorist in the state, California's new Motor Vehicle Act became effective August 14. It represents months of study by officials of the State Division of Motor Vehicles, safety groups and other interested bodies, and is regarded as one of the main accomplishments of the 1929 Legislature.

Outstanding in importance among the provisions of the new act is the creation of the California highway patrol, which puts all traffic squads formerly operating as independent county units under a central head, completely controlled by the state. The change was sponsored by Frank G. Snook, chief of the division, and Eugene Biscailuz, former undersheriff of Los Angeles County, has been named to head the patrol. Among other important provisions are these:

Makes it unlawful to move any special mobile equipment over the highways, such as well-boring machines, ditch digging apparatus, etc., unless a sign with letters not less than two inches in height, giving the owner's name and address, is displayed. This does not apply to self-propelled vehicles.

Requires that safety zones set aside for the exclusive use of pedestrians shall be plainly marked with buttons or vertical signs.

Reverts chattel mortgage provisions to provide that no mortgage is legal until the mortgagee shall be registered as the legal owner of the vehicle.

Requires persons whose licenses have been revoked or suspended to forward their license plates to the division.

Sets up a standard for brakes, and makes it unlawful to operate a vehicle that cannot comply with the standards.

Makes it unlawful to use a horn otherwise than as a reasonable warning and bans harsh and loud horn noises.

Redefines a reckless driver as any person who drives in so negligent a manner as to indicate a wanton disregard for safety of himself and others.

Requires drivers entering a public highway from a private road to yield to all vehicles, and prohibits passing a school bus discharging or loading passengers.

Requires a driver who strikes an unattended vehicle to leave a notice upon such vehicle and to notify the police authorities as well.

Relieves drivers of responsibility in case of injury or death of riding guests, except where intoxication, wilful misconduct or gross negligence can be shown.

Provides for revocation of operator's license and registration certificate of any person failing to appear in court within fifteen days after arrest for violation of the act on his signed promise to appear.

NO SPEED LIMIT, SAYS JUDGE.

In setting aside a speeding conviction in Kings County, Superior Judge Van Zandt ruled that, as long as an autoist has his car in perfect condition and under control at all time, there is no speed limit in California.

A jury in the justice court had been instructed to convict the defendants if they were found to have been traveling more than forty miles along the open highway.

Main Buyers—Wage earners and low-salaried groups comprise an unusually large proportion of the buyers of autos.

Tehama Fair—The Tehama County Fair will be held at Red Bluff, September 13, 14 and 15.

CAREFUL DRIVER NEED NOT FEAR "COMPULSORY INSURANCE."

There is no law in California requiring a motorist to secure public liability, property damage, or any other type of insurance on his car, is the substance of a bulletin issued by the State Division of Motor Vehicles in response to numerous inquiries concerning the effect of insurance provisions of California's new Motor Vehicle Act.

Only in the event a person fails to satisfy a judgment rendered against him by a court of competent jurisdiction for damages involving injuries, death, or property damage is insurance required. Failure to satisfy such a judgment within fifteen days after it becomes final requires the division to revoke the operator's or chauffeur's license and the registration certificate of the person involved. Thereafter, before the license and certificate may be restored, the person involved is required to pay the judgment and to secure public liability insurance to the amount of $5,000 for one person killed or injured, $10,000 for two, and $1,000 property damage, or to post a surety or personal bond or a cash deposit amounting to $11,000.

"This is not compulsory insurance as the term is known ordinarily," the bulletin explains, "inasmuch as it affects only those persons involved in accidents who fail to satisfy judgments. The new law emphasizes, doubly, the need of careful driving to keep out of trouble. But the careful driver has nothing to fear from it."

NEW RECORD ESTABLISHED IN STATE HIGHWAY HISTORY.

New highways and those reconstructed in the state highway system during the biennium ended June 30 totaled 1,030 miles, establishing a new record in California state highway history. Disbursements for the biennium, including construction, maintenance, reconstruction, rights of way, etc., totaled $41,074,736.55.

During the two-year period 103 new bridges were constructed at an expense of $3,000,000, and seventeen were widened. Twenty-four railroad grade crossing eliminations were either completed or contracts for their elimination were awarded. Contracts were awarded on 405 projects during the period.

AUTO CLUBS MUST POST BOND TO GUARANTEE SERVICE.

Among the many new California laws which went into effect August 14 is one which, it is contended, will outlaw so-called "gyp" auto clubs that have collected thousands of dollars from auto owners for promised service not forthcoming.

All motoring service organizations are now under the supervision of the state insurance commissioner, and must post a $100,000 bond to insure faithful performance of service contracts. Each must procure a certificate of authority, and licenses for its agents. The certificate may, after a hearing, be revoked at any time—for violation of the act, insolvency, fraud, or refusal to submit to examination.

Production Increased—During the first seven months of 1929 auto and truck manufacturers affiliated with the National Automobile Chamber Commerce increased production 7 percent over last year. Judging from the present rate of production, the 1929 output will exceed all preceding years.

Danger Months—The fall months, commencing with September, record the peak of the auto accident toll.

Siskiyou Fair—The Siskiyou County Fair will be held at Yreka, September 6, 7 and 8.

AUTO DRIVERS WARNED

AGAINST USE OLD LICENSES.

All motor vehicle operators' licenses dated prior to January 1, 1927, automatically were invalidated August 14, and operators with such licenses have no legal right to drive. Any such driver, according to an announcement of the State Division of Motor Vehicles, is subject to arrest at any time and may be penalized by a maximum fine of $500 or six months in a county jail.

"We are going to allow a reasonable time for operators with licenses dated prior to January 1, 1927, to procure new ones," says Chief Frank G. Snook of the division, "but they should not wait until they are arrested and fined before complying with the law."

AUTO IS CHARGED WITH

AIDING BAD SOCIAL CONDITION.

When a motorist gives a hitch-hiker a lift, he is helping to create a social problem which is engaging the attention of authorities throughout the United States. At a recent conference of social workers in San Francisco, one authority contended that the increasing prevalence of migratory child labor in this country can be traced largely to the auto.

Hundreds of children are becoming "gypsies" because of the temptation to boys to travel around, expecting lifts from motorists, he said, and these little nomads, instead of learning habits of steadiness and industry, are subjected to a wide variety of contacts bound to have a far-reaching effect.

CAR OWNERS WARNED TO ## PROTECT THEMSELVES AGAINST THEFT.

Reports received by the State Division of Motor Vehicles show a total of 12,216 motor vehicles, reported stolen, were recovered during the first seven months of 1929, indicating that less than 5 percent of the cars stolen disappear for good. More than 90 percent of the thefts are traced to "joy-riders" anxious to borrow a car for a few hours and operate it until the gas gives out.

All California motorists are urged to memorize their license numbers, so that they may notify the police immediately in case of theft. Car owners should also protect themselves by removing keys and locking doors on leaving cars. If parking at night, cars should be left upon well-lighted streets only.

CO-OPERATION WILL CUT TOLL.

Autos are ten times as deadly as typhoid fever, according to statistics. They are nearly twice as deadly as diphtheria. But this fatality rate is preventable, if each citizen will do his duty, reports the California Committee on Public Safety.

If every citizen will give a little thought and time to the big subject of safety in traffic, the effect will be far-reaching, and the 2,000 dead, 50,000 injured and $60,000,000 property loss faced by the people of California this year will be materially reduced.

1930 License Plates—The color scheme for the 1930 auto plates for California will be the same as this year, except that the colors will be reversed so that the background will be a deep yellow and the letters and numerals a dull black. Numerous tests have proven this combination of colors to have the highest visibility.

A Little Care Will Help—Failure to use care, when only a little care is needed, is the cause of an increasing number of highway accidents.

SAN DIEGO—SAN DIEGO NO. 208 HAS been presented, by San Diego Council No. 1340 Knights of Columbus, with the following resolution of appreciation, signed by George W. Thompson, grand knight, and Frank W. Keller, secretary, of the council. The resolution requires no comment or explanation; it is self-enlightening:

Whereas, This council as a patriotic organization believes that at this time, the 160th anniversary of the founding of our City of San Diego, it is only fitting and proper that we should publicly and formally acknowledge our appreciation and gratitude to such persons and societies as rendered distinguished services in keeping fresh in the minds and hearts of our people the valient deeds of the founders of our community; and

Whereas, We are particularly desirous of expressing to San Diego Parlor No. 208 Native Daughters of the Golden West our thanks and gratitude for the splendid and unselfish services rendered in compiling and preserving historical landmarks of the early settlement of this community, and especially in marking in a most fitting manner the spot where Father Jayme, the martyred priest, was killed by savages while humbly but most courageously extolling to them the sacred doctrines of the fatherhood of God and the brotherhood of man, November 5, 1775; and

Whereas, The same splendid organization mentioned has planted a tree and placed a plaque to commemorate the time and place where Father Francisco Palou, biographer of the Serra expedition and lifelong friend of the illustrious Father Junipero Serra, performed his noble work of perpetuating for a grateful posterity the records and incidents of the founders of our city; and

Whereas, The society mentioned has for years been engaged in the noteworthy task of raising funds for the magnificent purpose of restoring the old Mission of San Diego; therefore, be it

Resolved, By this council, that we hereby formally and publicly express our gratitude and appreciation, as loyal and patriotic citizens and as an organization having patriotism written boldly on its cornerstone, to San Diego Parlor No. 208 Native Daughters of the Golden West for the splendid and unselfish work it has done in compiling and preserving the history mentioned, and particularly in marking, in such a fitting manner, the spot where beloved Father Jayme so bravely gave his life in the service of our common God; and be it resolved, that we likewise express our appreciation and gratitude to said Parlor for its magnanimous work in planting the tree and placing the plaque mentioned to honor Father Francisco Palou for the valiant services rendered by him in preserving for our generation the record of the brave deeds and noble acts of the Serra expedition; and be it further resolved, that said Parlor is particularly entitled to the gratitude and thanks of this council and all loyal residents of California for the most generous and intelligent work it is doing to restore the old mission; and be it further resolved, that this resolution be spread upon the permanent records of our council, that a copy hereof, duly engrossed, be delivered by a committee of this council to the Parlor named, and that a copy hereof be sent to the press of San Diego.

Officers of the Parlor were installed July 23 by District Deputy Nellie Cline, who was accompanied by several members of Grace No. 242 (Fullerton), Mabel Burgert becoming president. Visitors and acting grand officers were presented with corsages, tied with silver ribbons, President Burgert was presented with flowers, and District Deputy Cline and Past President Alice H. Damarus were presented with beautiful gifts. A social hour and refreshments, arranged by chairman Martha Klindt and a committee, followed the ceremonies. Decorations of the ball were artistic, seasonal flowers and ferns being employed.

Grand Secretary and Brides Honor Guests.

Oakland—August 13, Grand Secretary Sallie Thaler was guest of honor at a reception sponsored by her home-Parlor, Aloha No. 106. Two recent brides—one the president of the Parlor, Marie Roberts, and Thelma Dobyne—were also honored, and all were recipients of gifts presented by Chairman Hilda Hawkinson on behalf of the Parlor. Initiation was held, and among the visitors were Supervising Deputy Gertrude Morrison, and delegations from Califa No. 22 and Sutter No. 111 of Sacramento.

For the benefit of the Parlor's Admission Day fund a whist party was given August 17 at the home of Past President Myrtle Stiff, and a dance in charge of Third Vice-president Irma Murray was held August 27.

Entertained at Bridge.

Chico—In honor of Frances Germaine of Caliz de Oro No. 206 (Stockton), Annie K. Bidwell No. 168 was entertained July 31 at bridge at the home of Hazel Long, who was assisted by Myrtle Barnado. Quantities of flowers were used in the lovely decorations. Mrs. A. E. Warren made high score, and Mattie Kesselring was low. Refreshments were served.

Under the supervision of President Annie Skelly, the Parlor had its second summer picnic supper at Sycamore pool July 16, about thirty attending.

Continued Success Anticipated.

San Bernardino—With a new corps of officers installed and many plans perfected, Lugonia No. 241 anticipates continued success. The officers were publicly installed by Daisy Hansen, former district deputy, July 24, Lois D. Poling becoming president. Presentations were made to Past Presidents Lily Tompkins and Lois Aldredge Johnson, Daisy Hansen and President Poling. A dance, to which the general public were invited, followed the ceremonies and was well attended.

July 27 a large group of members attended a cleverly-arranged baby shower, a surprise to Marguerite Bell, mother of a lovely little girl. A delegation attended August 1 the installation of Grace No. 242 at Fullerton. Members of the Parlor and their husbands were special guests of Arrowhead No. 110 N.S.G.W. at a picnic at Fairwont Park, Riverside, August 8. A plunge party at Colton Municipal Park was featured August 23.

President Lois Poling has inaugurated officers' meetings to be held every six weeks. The first was held at her home August 7, and following the discussion of several projects a social hour was enjoyed. During September the Parlor hopes to entertain the Arrowhead "boys" at Camp Cajon.

Memorable Event.

Alturas—August 6, Alturas No. 159 had the privilege of entertaining the largest group of grand officers in its history—Grand President Esther R. Sullivan, Grand Vice-president Estelle M. Evans, Grand Secretary Sallie R. Thaler, Grand Trustee Irma Laird and Past Grand President Catherine E. Gloster. The guests were entertained at a banquet previous to the meeting and at that time a musical and literary program was presented. The business session was held at the Civic Club, converted into a veritable bower of blossoms. One candidate was initiated, President Josephine Fitzpatrick and her corps of officers giving a faultless rendition of the ritual.

Grand President Sullivan, in a splendid address, stressed the aims and objects of the Order and outlined the progressive projects being fostered. Grand Vice-president Evans added to the evening's pleasure with several beautiful vocal solos. Gifts of silver and flowers were presented the honor-guests. This visit of so many grand officers was a memorable event in the life of the Parlor.

Alturas has been requested to assist in staging, about September 15, a celebration commemorating the formal opening of the Alturas-Klamath Falls railroad, the last link in the Southern Pacific's new transcontinental line. The Parlor will observe Admission Day, September 9, with a reception and banquet for the Pioneers.

Retiring President Surprised.

Sacramento—La Bandera No. 110 honored Lucie Roberts, retiring president, with a surprise party. Games provided entertainment, and the refreshments table was attractively decorated in yellow and green. The hostesses included Mms. Lottie Cummings, Sadie Murphy, Flora A. Schmittgen and Grand Outside Sentinel Edna B. Briggs.

The annual card party of the Parlor will be held October 5, and November 15 will initiate a large class of candidates, to be known as the "Edna B. Briggs" class. The Parlor will be represented in the Santa Cruz Admission Day parade by a decorated auto in which will ride President Thelma Derr, Past President Lucie Roberts, First Vice-president Sadie Murphy and Grand Outside Sentinel Edna B. Briggs.

Will Present State Flags.

Fullerton—In the presence of a large assemblage of members and friends officers of Grace No. 242 were installed August 1 by District Deputy Lily May Tompkins, Mrs. Lucana McFadden becoming president. Past Grand President Grace S. Stoerner, after whom the Parlor was named, was an honor-guest. Ferns and baskets of yellow and red flowers were used in the attractive decorations. Past President Helen Anderson was presented with an emblematic ring.

Speakers of the evening were Past Grand President Stoerner and District Deputies Tompkins and Marvel Thomas. A program of dances, readings and whistling and piano numbers was presented. A luncheon was served at the conclusion of the ceremonies.

A committee consisting of Marguerite Bruce, Evelyn Hawkins, Carrie Sheppard and Mary Rothaermel has been appointed to purchase two California State (Bear) Flags, to be presented to the '49ers Club of the Boys and Girls library and to the Fullerton Union high-school.

retary Sallie Thaler and Carmelita Lahr (Aloha No. 106) arrived August 9 at Pine View, the country home of Past Grand President Emma Lou Humphrey, where they were luncheon guests.

That afternoon the party, reinforced by Mrs.
Humphrey, paid a visit to Imogen No. 134 at Sierraville, which is very active. A turkey supper, to which the families of the Parlor's members were invited, lasted until 7 p. m., when the visitors departed for Truckee, for an evening visit with Snow Peak No. 176.

Electrically Lighted Cross Proposed.

San Juan—San Juan Bautista No. 179 has undertaken a worthy project—to have a local landmark, a wooden cross erected by the Franciscan fathers who built San Juan Bautista Mission, replaced by a large concrete cross lighted by electricity. The estimated cost of the new cross, which will be twenty-nine feet high with nineteen-foot crossarms, is $1,000, and the Parlor is meeting with great success in accumulating the amount.

200 Witness Installations.

Sausalito—At joint public ceremonies, the first in many years, officers of Sea Point No. 196 and Sea Point No. 158 N.S.G.W. were installed

ucci becoming president of No. 158.

Gifts were presented Leona Nauert and An-tone Viera, retiring presidents of the respective Parlors, District Deputy Shea and Past Grand President Foley. At the ceremonies' conclusion refreshments were served and dancing was in order until past midnight. All joined in declaring the affair a most successful one.

Feminine World's Fads and Fancies

PREPARED ESPECIALLY FOR THE GRIZZLY BEAR BY ANNA STOERMER

WITH THE RISE AND FALL OF coat lengths in dipping, dripping and floor-sweeping panels, for several seasons we have been concerned chiefly with the width of the silhouette. It has been a story of wide, wider, widest. The degree of flare in all fashions, from street types to evening modes, has balanced between the conservative and the extreme, until now the leading designers more or less agree on a silhouette of length, the final outcome of several seasons in which longer skirts appear. This fact will give the most definite new style quality.

The skirt is acquiring inches at the top as well as at the hem, by the adding of from three to five inches to daytime skirts. Higher waistlines are suggested by belts, groups of shirrings, fine tucks or stitched bands, beginning at the high waist and continuing to the low hipline.

Longer skirts are now definitely settled in the smart mode for street wear. The length varies from two inches below the knees to twelve inches from the floor. For evening, skirts have added a longer in-front line. Skirts are, as a rule, shorter somewhere; if not in front, then at the sides.

Both day and evening dresses are cut and fitted to reveal the lines of the figure. The flat boyish figure is out, and the curved feminine figure is in. This change swings fashion into the princess lines.

The low placing of skirt fullness introduces an entirely new silhouette. Circular, gathered and plaited flounces interrupt the long, tight, slender line of the figure, and just above the knees spiral flounces, plaitings and peplums are important to the construction of the new fall fashions.

Flat crepe, thick canton crepe and crepe satin are new. Novelty linings are introduced in fall coats.

One of the newest features in jacket linings is light-weight wool. For instance, an elaborate suit of black broadcloth is made with a short, extremely dressy jacket and has a blouse of light-weight wool crepe in a light shade of blue. The lining of the jacket is made of the same.

Transparent velvets are slated for activity, used alone or with canton or satin face crepe. Ensembles of transparent velvet are also with us, printed or plain, with contrasting blouses of metallic cloth, satin or crepe.

Many of the blouses are in tunic style. Panned velvet, printed with large flowers set far apart on black grounds, are new for matrons' dinner gowns.

The small all-over velvet prints show more ground than formerly, and constitute the really smart velvet novelties this season. They may be made either straight or on the diagonal, and are nearly always employed with plain velvet. These are most attractive in brown, dark green, blue or black.

Moire shows signs of increasing, rather than diminishing, its prestige. Black is as smart as ever, and black with white, often in lingerie touches, goes on.

Velvet and lace are the afternoon fabrics. Velvet, broadcloth and velvety woolens are the afternoon coat materials. Broadcloth is dull. Velvety woolens have a thick nap.

Soft, luxurious tweeds, chevrons and broadcloths are used for top coats, furled with lynx, lapin, ermine, shaved goat, caracul, persian lamb or fox in all colors.

One may make her own sweaters without knitting them, as we have bordered jerseys in blouse lengths. These have the horizontal stripes or motifs associated with the most interesting and most expensive hand-knitted sweaters. Other wools, also, are made in blouse lengths for sweater-type blouses, to wear with all-woolen ensembles. Another new fabric is bordered velvet combinations of checks and polkadots.

It seems unnecessary to say that tweed is important, since every type tweed is seen at sports events; in fact, found everywhere. We would mention that tweeds with colored nubs are worthy your consideration. The weave of the indefinite tweed is small, and the color approaches a monotone.

There are tweeds, bordered with selvages to be used for trimming, and there are "oatmeal" mixtures. The dress tweeds are light in weight. Some are sheer and some are very supple. The most used colors in all tweeds are the beiges, browns, yellows, dark blues and blacks.

With a diagonal weave as well as actual tweed, all rough woolens, such as homespun, basket weaves, herringbone and chevron woolens, are grouped under the name of tweed. Wool street frocks are most popular in one-piece styles, although a number of jumper frocks are shown.

The normal waistline is usually emphasized, sometimes by a self or leather belt and sometimes by seaming a fitted hip treatment. This is accomplished by either molding the bodice about the hips or by inserting a tight hip yoke.

Trimmings are introduced on almost all hats, but a great variety of self trimming, or the reverse of the body trimming, is used. Tiny touches of feathers are always kept close to the hat. Small metal rhinestone or novelty ornaments, and quite a good percentage of bow trim-

While black seems to overrule every color, we notice the contrasts that are used with the black, such as soft Nile green, capucine, brown, and even red. The combination of black and white is very important in off-the-face flaring slide trims.

BOOK REVIEWS

"WHERE CALIFORNIA BEGAN."

By Whitford Davidson; McIntyre Publishing Company, San Diego, Publishers; Price, $1.50.

"Where California Began," the result of several years of careful investigation and research, presents historic facts, along with romance, concerning early California. Apparently the author's chief concern is, that Point Loma should be accorded by historians and others its rightful "place in the sun" of California history. Quoting from the preface:

"It matters not greatly that the world in general does not remember, has never known perhaps, that the place where the West began was the place where California began; and that the place where California began was the promontory of Point Loma. . . .

"Part of a great and growing city [San Diego], the residential district on Point Loma may seem as conventionally correct and uninteresting as any other pretentious suburb of an enterprising town; but the residential district is not all of Loma. It is within the United States Government Military Reservation of Fort Rosecrans that lie the sun-drenched, unspoiled areas where he [Juan Rodriguez] whom we incorrectly name Juan Cabrillo in 1542 first walked; where in 1602 Sebastian Vizcaino built on smooth sands a temporary house of prayer; where the first Spanish graves were heaped; where in 1769 the first California coast beacon was lighted; off which early in the nineteenth century the first and only California naval battle was fought; where unofficially and with insolence to the government under whose laws its makers were living, the stars and stripes, the American flag, first welcomed into California waters ships from Yankee-land; where the first international elopement took place; where in the middle years of the nineteenth century coal was sought by a company of Mormon soldiers, and a shaft sunk. These and other beginnings take old Loma out of the class of the accustomed and the expected. Its history is actually world lore."

"Where California Began" is interesting and informative, and should appeal to all Californians, young and old, and particularly to those interested in promulgating the state's glorious history.—C. M. H.

WRITE IT CALIFORNIA—

NOT "CALIF." OR "CAL."

"Not long ago," said the "Ukiah Republican Press" of August 2, "Marie Hinton Rea in 'The Press' had an editorial pleading for the use of the name of our state [California] in full, instead of abbreviating it. The article has since met a lot of approval, and this week there came to 'The Press' the following argument in rhyme from Al Utter":

I'm moved now to ask, is there any good reason
Why "Calif." and "Cal." shouldn't rest for a season?
And while these are resting let all good scribes try "California" to write. And do you ask "Why?"
"Calif." (of Bagdad)! One thinks of a harem, Ankle-length panties and no place to wear 'em;
These days of short skirts, eke stockings, if any,
Panties like that would look swell on—not many.
If you use "Cal."—somewhat better reminder—
("Keep cool with 'Cal.'") and we did, that is, kind'er;
But, even at that, Cal is now quite passe;
California is not, age can't make her that way.

NATIVES LENDING SUPPORT.

Sacramento—Sub-committees of the Trails of '49 Committee are being organized in the twenty-one counties included in the Sacramento Region Citizens' Council. They are preparing to place markers along historic roads directing travelers to famous places of the gold-rush days.

In most of the counties the Native Sons and the Native Daughters are giving their hearty support to the movement.

Assessors To Gather—California's county assessors will have their annual convention, September 12, 13 and 14, at Susanville, Lassen County.

Thirty Parlors were represented, and among the 210 in attendance were: Grand Vice-president Estelle Evans, Grand Secretary Sallie R. Thaler, Grand Inside Sentinel Millie Rock, Past Grand Presidents Margaret G. Hill, Addie L. Mosher, May C. Boldemann and Emma G. Eleven past presidents of Orinda were decorated with past president medals, each bearing the name and the year of service of the recipient: Emma G. Foley 1897, Anna G. She stressed the need of increased membership, and said the Parlors must stimulate interest and give service to their communities. "We must be sisters, not alone in name, but in service, thought and action," she said.

FROM MESSENGER TO PRESIDENT.

Herbert D. Ivey, for more than a quarter of a century with the Citizens National Trust and Savings Bank, has been elected president of the institution to succeed the late J. Dabney Day. He is an outstanding Los Angeles banker, having actively sponsored the American Institute of Banking and having served with distinction on executive bodies of the Los Angeles Clearing-house Association for a number of years.

The new president was born near San Antonio, Texas, in 1885, and came to Los Angeles in 1902. January 2, 1903, he secured his first position with the Citizens National Bank as messenger. ## TO OBSERVE CITY'S ANNIVERSARY.

Under the joint auspices of the Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce and the Plaza de Los Angeles Corporation, the one hundred and forty-eighth anniversary of the beginning of Los Angeles will be observed September 4 with a fiesta centering about the historic Avila adobe.

At 7 p. m. the La Mesa Club will hold an open dinner meeting in its clubrooms. Forty-eighth and Loma Vista streets, to which all native and adopted sons and daughters of California are invited.

Burrell D. Neighbours will be master of ceremonies at the dinner. Isidore B. Dockweiler will review the history of Los Angeles, Mrs. Florence Dodson-Schoneman will recount early-day reminiscences, and there will be a general relation of incidents and anecdotes associated with the pueblo days. California songs and musical numbers will intersperse the speaking.

SURPRISES WERE SHOWN.

Roland F. Nichols, chairman good of the order committee Los Angeles Parlor No. 45 N.S.G.W., announced a surprise for August 22 and said all who failed to show up would be sorry, but declined to give even an advance hint of what would be pulled off. The "gang" came, and saw, and were not disappointed. The next time a surprise is announced, there probably will be no absentees.

Los Angeles' September program includes: Basket picnic for members and families at Point Fermin Park and Cabrillo Beach, San Pedro, the 1st; caravan to Long Beach Parlor No. 239 N.S.G.W., the 12th; initiation, the 19th; stag outing, place and details to be announced, the 21st; open meeting, with entertainment, the 26th.

POLICE PROTECTION COMES HIGH.

A study of the expenditures of the Los Angeles police department, recently completed by the California Taxpayers' Association, reveals that expenditures increased from $1,000,000 in 1917 to $7,000,000 in the proposed budget for 1930. The per capita cost in 1917 was $1.80, and for 1930 it is figured at $4.66.

"This is an increase of 600 percent. The increase is far in excess of the growth in population or assessed valuation," says the association.

GOING UP.

Los Angeles County has an assessed valuation of $4,669,408,056, according to figures made public by County Assessor Ed. W. Hopkins. This is $972,752,375 in excess of the valuation for 1928, which had climbed to $3,696,655,681.

WHOOPEE FOR OOM PAUL.

Ramona Parlor No. 109 N.S.G.W. has passed a resolution requesting all Native Son and Native Daughter Parlors in Los Angeles County to appoint committees to co-operate, under the guidance of the Interparlor Committee, with committees from all other organizations in arranging for a celebration, in September of 1931, of the one hundred and fiftieth anniversary of the founding of Los Angeles. Ramona's representatives will include A. G. Rivera, Past Grand President H. C. Lichtenberger, B. D. Neighbours, I. B. Dockweiler, E. A. Meserve, J. G. Mott, A. Schwamm, Senator R. F. Del Valle, Judge B. R. Schauer, United States Marshal A. C. Sittel, L. V. Youngworth, F. N. Hauser, Judge L. P. Russell, Judge W. T. Aggeler, Judge R. S. Schmidt, Judge W. J. Wood, Judge J. W. Hanby, Judge F. Bowron, Judge W. S. Gates and Judge J. L. Fleming.

Ramona is arranging for a big time September 13—a whoopee, as it were, in celebration of the return of Past Grand President Herman C. (Oom Paul) Lichtenberger from a tour of Europe. Supper, prepared under the supervision of "Chef" Charles Gassagne, will be served in the dining-room of Patriotic Hall, 1816 South Figueroa, and following the food-fest the assemblage will proceed to the auditorium, where there will be a talk-fest, interspersed with vaudeville numbers. The arrangements committee is composed of Ray Howard, Bertram Northrup and Fred Staebler. Reservations may be made

BOY SCOUTS PRESENTED FLAG.

Los Angeles Parlor No. 124 N.D.G.W. presented a troop flag to the Boy Scouts of America, Troop No. 143, July 26. The presentation was made by Harriet W. Martin, chairman of the Parlor's americanization committee, and was accepted by Scoutmaster Floria. The scouts in this troop represent many nationalities of the East Side, and they are very proud of the flag. August 28 the Parlor was entertained by the Women's Benefit Association. A delightful program was presented, and delicious refreshments were served.

September 18, Los Angeles will have initiation, and a beach party is scheduled for September 25. A committee composed of Grace Norton, Esther Murphy, Roherta Kessner and Edith Douglas is in charge of a pot-luck dinner for October 2. Grace T. Haven is chairman of the annual bazaar, which will be held October 23.

JOINT PUBLIC INSTALLATION.

Ocean Park—A very large crowd attended the joint public installation of officers of Santa Monica Bay Parlor No. 245 N.D.G.W. and Santa Monica Bay Parlor No. 267 N.S.G.W. July 29. The hall was artistically decorated with palms and flowers, and refreshments were served.

GREAT FUTURE PREDICTED.

"The University of California at Los Angeles is destined to become one of the greatest teaching centers in the world, favorably comparable to the famous institutions of learning at Paris, London and Berlin," declared Dr. Ernest C. Moore, director of the university, in the course of a recent address at the City Club.

"A real university does not consist of buildings, hut of a competent faculty, devoted students and an interested cultured community," said Dr. Moore. Tracing the history of U.C.L.A. since its establishment in 1919 with 978 students, he said the students this year will number more than 6,500. "We shall move to our new buildings at Westwood, September 20, with 300 teachers. We have the best professor of mathematics and the best psychologist on the coast. We also have one of the best professors of political science, and we have a right to be proud of our departments of physics and of history and other divisions."

STUDY CLASSES.

Members of Californiana Parlor No. 247 N.D.G.W. are to have a course in the study of history, and alternating with California's colorful history will be classes in parliamentary law under the guidance of Mrs. Charles S. McKelvey.

Two candidates were initiated. President Julia Arborn and a committee composed of Lillian Lasater, Lucretia Coates and Mabel Emery was authorized to investigate the proposal for the Parlor to adopt a disabled war veteran.

August 8 the California thimble club, an auxiliary of No. 154, had a basket picnic at Bixby Park and discussed plans for a bazaar, of which Daisy Hansen is general chairman, early in November. August 22 the club had a covered-dish luncheon at the home of chairman Fannie McPherson. August 15 a card party was sponsored, the hostesses being Eleanor Martin, Lena Hansen and Lucretia Coates. A waffle supper August 29 was in charge of Charlotte Wharton. At the dedication of the bird sanctuary by the Humane Society, the Parlor presented a bird cage, which won the silver cup.

THE HAND OF MAN-- A STORY OF THE FORESTS

Southard M. Modry

CHAPTER IX.

HAVING BECOME SOMEWHAT FAMILIAR with the marvelous strides made in the redwood belt by the members of the Humboldt Redwood Reforestation Association and kindred operators, we now turn to that vast district stretching from the Oregon boundary line southward into Inyo County—the heavily wooded slopes of the Sierra, the home of the California sugar and ponderosa pine, cedar and sequoia gigantea.

The sequoia gigantea is no longer cut commercially, and the few remaining and scattered groves are showplaces which tourists may visit and marvel at the trees' immensity. Many of these trees are several thousand years old, and were fullgrown long before the commencement of the Christian era. The "big tree" does not grow from the stump like its coastal relative, and the promiscuous lumbering in this region has all but desolated the districts where it once grew in profusion.

As the principal rivers of California have their sources in the Sierra, and as the ever-increasing agricultural development in the valleys of the Sacramento and the San Joaquin makes the necessity of flood control an ever-important problem, the need for continued preservation of forest watersheds is without question a paramount issue which, in the very near future, will compel legislative action, unless the mountain lumbermen themselves voluntarily follow in the footsteps of their more-enlightened associates in the redwood belt.

We are indebted to the Michigan California Lumber Company of Camano, El Dorado County, for the policy which is now being followed by many of the lumbermen in that district: "Observations have shown that natural reproduction in this locality takes place readily after cutting, when a seed supply is available, and that seed is scattered for considerable distances by the wind. It is therefore the practice of the company to leave sugar and ponderosa pine trees up to and Including twenty or twenty-two inches in diameter on each setting, except immediately around the spar tree, where they can be damaged by logging. Trees of this size, and less, cost considerably more than the average to log, and thus little or no investment is involved in leaving them. Due to the opening of the stand by logging, trees of this size, and smaller, begin to grow rapidly and soon produce seed in quantity to restock the openings occurring in logging trails and about spar trees.

"It is also the practice of the company to leave uncut trees of species of lesser value, such as cedar, which cannot be marketed at a profit and are not needed to make lumber for construction material. These trees aid in maintaining a forest cover on the cut-over area and protect advance growth during logging. It is likely that many of them will remain to add a value to the second crop. They also produce a seed crop to supplement that of the pines left for seed trees."

In addition to this policy the company, in cooperation with the Federal Forest Service, maintains a forest patrol for protection against fire in not only its actual operating area, but also on cut-over lands. The disposal of slash after logging is done in the fall by burning in strips and spots, rather than by broadcast burning, with its usual damage to advance reproduction and seed trees.

In the past there have been spasmodic efforts on the part of lumbermen in this district to restock cut-over lands, but these efforts have not been attended with the same success as those in the redwood belt, and no real sincere reforestation policy has been adopted. The distribution of seed left on the ground to sprout, and usually to be carried away by the squirrels and the chipmunks, has contributed nothing to the reproduction of cut-over areas, and the only result seems to be the fattening of the winter larder of the rodents in this region.

Though the Michigan California Lumber Company and some other companies in this district have adopted the foregoing or similar policies, there are still many companies that continue the old-fashioned destructive policy which has so contributed to the destruction of the forest life in other parts of the country.

The cutting of forests under present-day conditions not being a natural condition, Nature cannot overcome the damage wrought by the hand of man and, in order to restore cut-over lands and return them to their former productive state, man must assist Nature. Where there are seed trees in profusion, the question of reproduction is not encountered, and Nature takes care of the forest life.

She haud picks, as it were, the forest region, here thinning out the trees where they grow too thickly, and here growing young saplings where there is not sufficient forest cover. The great giants mother the infants, and in the battle for existence the fittest survive and the weaklings die. If man fails in his duty to Nature—fails to assist her to reconstruct the territory he has denuded—only man will be the sufferer.

It is time all Californians familiarized themselves with the forestry problem. It is time the lumbermen of the state took the people into their confidence. It is time a united effort be made by the full co-operation of all the people of this commonwealth to maintain California's forests in as near their natural condition as is humanly possible.

Not quite a year ago, in keeping with the advance of the automotive motor, the General Petroleum Corporation of California offered the motoring public a new motor fuel—General Violet Ray Anti-Knock Gasoline. Answering every demand of the high compression engine, Violet Ray gives superlative performance in any motor. Its anti-knock qualities are derived through application of the General Petroleum Corporation's methods of scientific refining,—not by addition of dopes or compounds.

GRIZZLY GROWLS

(CLARENCE M. HUNT.)

SEPTEMBER 9, 1850, MILLARD FILLMORE, President of the United States of America, attached his signature to "An Act for the Admission of California into the Union," passed by the Senate and the House of Representatives during the first session of the Thirty-first Congress, and California became one of the Sisterhood of States. And so, Monday, September 9, 1929, will be the seventy-ninth anniversary of that momentous event in the history of the State of California.

In California, the date, September 9, is known, and in the state statutes is referred to, as Admission Day. In 1888, the State Legislature declared the day one of holiday, when all public schools and all offices under state jurisdiction must close. It is a day when, in memory of those sturdy American Pioneers who made possible the California of today, every place of business should close and every building should be adorned with the Flag of the United States of America and the California (State) Bear Flag.

In the history of California, Admission Day occupies a like position to that of Independence Day in the history of these United States. It is associated, exclusively, with the America era in the romantic and resourceful history of California, and not with either the Spanish or the Mexican eras. In any and every observance of the day true to history, the American Pioneers—their customs, songs and dances—alone will be featured.

The California that should be honored on Admission Day—the California of the American era—had its beginning in the town of Sonoma, in old Sonoma County, where, June 14, 1846, a small band of American Pioneers, known as the Bear Flag Party, raised the Flag of the "California Republic," later known as the Bear Flag, and still later designated as the State Flag of California by the Legislature. Those sturdy American Pioneers had reason to believe that their revolt against Mexican rule—Spanish domination having previously been cast aside by the Mexicans—would force the United States to take possession of the much-coveted California. And subsequent events proved their surmise correct, for, July 7, 1846, Commodore John Drake Sloat of the United States Navy raised the Flag of the United States of America at Monterey, in the County of Monterey, California, and, in the name of the United States, took possession of this Land of Gold.

In time, a state government was organized and California was admitted into the Family of the Nation as a full-fledged state. And, other than the original Thirteen Colonies, it is the only state admitted without a previous ennobling act or territorial apprenticeship.

The history-story of American California has been related time and time again, but it never grows old nor loses any of its interest. It is a story that should be familiar to not only every native Californian, but to the adopted sons and daughters as well,—a story, the teaching of which should be compulsory in every public school of the state. And, that the story, which is but a record of the achievements of the American Pioneers, may never be forgotten, California has Admission Day, September 9.

The question naturally arises in the minds of those citizens not familiar with the State of California's early history, why so much is made of Admission Day, and until they appreciate its full significance they give little heed to the day's observance. Many imagine that Admission Day is purely a festive occasion originated and fostered by the Orders of Native Sons and Native Daughters of the Golden West when, as a matter of fact, history is responsible for the day, and love for that history perpetuates it as one of holiday.

In 1881 the people of the State of California, by common consent, delegated to the Order of Native Sons of the Golden West—conceived in Loyalty to the nation and the state, and born under the Flag of the United States of America—the privilege of naming the place for holding a state-wide celebration of Admission Day, and Santa Cruz City was selected for this year's festivities. Other celebrations will, as a matter of course, be held in various parts of the state.

One has but to understand the meaning of the symbols in the Great Seal of the State of California (an enlarged facsimile of which appears upon the cover page of this issue) to fully appreciate the significance of Admission Day, and with that knowledge must come a patriotic desire, horn of loyalty, to pay homage to California and the American Pioneers—such a feeling of patriotism as inspires, or should inspire, every loyal American on Independence Day, the birthday anniversary of the United States of America.

To those who look upon the Great Seal and have some knowledge of California's early history, every symbol has historic significance:

The thirty-one stars indicate that California was the thirty-first state admitted into the union.

The goddess tells how, Minerva-like, California was horn a state, without having gone through the prostration of a territory.

The grizzly bear feeding on a grapevine, typifies peculiar characteristics of California; the miner, with his rocker, its golden wealth; the shipping, its commercial greatness, and the mountains, its beauty.

The "Eureka" (I have found it) indicates that the American Pioneers, after traversing a continent, found in California the wealth and the beauty of all the world.

Just as the State of California was formed without the consent of the National Congress, so the Great Seal of State was adopted before California had a legal right to adopt such a seal. But it was the custom of those American Pioneers who had come here to build an empire to make, not to be guided by past, history, and it is because of their courage and determination that California's early history is so unique, so different from that of any other state.

Oh, California! May thy sons and daughters ever be true to thee, true to the spirit of thy great destiny. Under thy night stars and in thy glorious golden day, may thy temples be their place of worship, thy name their guardian care.

Referring to the ever-mounting increase in local government costs, the "August News Letter" of the National City Bank of New York commented as follows: "... Thus in the space of thirteen years, expenditures of state governments increased 120 percent and of local governments 82 percent. If the comparisons were expressed on the basis of current prices the rates of increase would be 231 and 174 percent respectively. . . .

"This mounting cost of government must not be allowed to proceed too rapidly lest it exert a retarding influence on the country's prosperity. Every community desires to be progressive, and everyone is enthusiastic when public improvements are projected, but the farmers who at a mass meeting vote for expensive roads, or the townfolks who approve a fine school building, should bear in mind that they are also setting up bond interest and sinking funds that will be a charge upon their income for many years to come. Government officials as a rule are prone to increase public activities and expenditures rather freely unless held in check by the citizens who must pay the bills, and new sources of revenue are continually being devised, as evidenced by the rather general adoption of state income taxes in recent years, the process of alternately raising the realty tax rates and property assessments, and the placing of taxes on gasoline sales, stock transfers, etc." The overburdened taxpayers of California should give the matter of taxation, direct and indirect, thoughtful attention.

With a view to correcting the impression apparently prevailing that a large construction force is to be organized immediately in connection with the construction of the proposed Boulder Canyon Dam project, the Federal Employment Service publicly announced July 12 that construction probably will not begin before 1930.

Should the present policy of the Federal Interior Department be followed, all construction will, it is expected, be done by contract, and the large number of men engaged will be employed directly by the contractors. In the event the dam is constructed by the Federal Government, all employment will be in strict accordance with civil service rules and regulations.

Dr. Elwood Mead of the Federal Interior Department's bureau of reclamation has stated time and again that it will be a year or more before contracts can be let for the construction of the dam.

Congressman John E. Rankin of Mississippi, in an appeal to stop the influx of aliens entering the United States in violation of law, issued the following statement:

"According to estimates of the Department of Labor, more than 200,000 aliens are coming in every year unlawfully. They are being smuggled in in various and sundry ways. It was stated at Geneva recently by the president of the International Seamen's Union that between 60,000 and 70,000 are bootlegged into this country every year as seamen from the ports of Bremen, Hamburg, Antwerp and Amsterdam, and there is no telling the number coming in in the same way from other places.

"A member of Congress visiting Europe some years ago was told that one government had pardoned 600 criminals on condition that they come to the United States. He said that while in Sicily he asked some of the authorities what had become of their bandits. The reply was that they had gone to America.

"Those who come in violation of our laws are from the criminal elements as a rule. They come with the intention of violating our laws to get here, and many of them show the same disrespect for all other laws after they arrive.

"From this class of aliens are recruited our hooligans, our gunmen, our gangsters, who are today defying constituted authority in every conceivable way.

"If we are to save America for Americans, and pass down to our children's children the glorious heritages of which we have been the beneficiaries, we must begin now. We should have begun forty years ago."

Indicative of the versatility of California soil, forest rangers report the recent discovery of seventeen species of trees within an area not over an acre in extent in the Lassen National Forest. The trees include incense cedar, white fir, Douglas fir, western yellow pine, digger pine, California nutmeg, Sierra maple, white alder, black cottonwood, sycamore, red bud, California huckleberry, valley oak, black oak, blue oak, canyon oak and willow.

These trees were found at an elevation of 1,750 feet, on a small mountain bench with fairly shallow, but good moist soil. The unusual variety of trees in this small space is accredited to evidence that the creeks had at one time flooded the area and, in all probability, deposited seeds of such species as are not common to the site or elevation.

"If we could first know where we are and whither we are tending, we could better judge what to do and how to do it."—Abraham Lincoln.

THE HAND OF MAN-- A STORY OF THE FORESTS

Southard M. Modry

CHAPTER X.

LAWS FOR PROTECTION OF FORESTS are not matters of recent development. Before the dawn of history, the Druids had their sacred groves of oak, many of the temples of ancient Greece were surrounded by sacred groves, and death was decreed to those who had the temerity to violate their sanctity. During the Medieval age the kings and nobility of the European states were very jealous of their forests and forest rights, and the common people were barred, in most instances, from even trespassing upon forest lands. It is true, however, that forests were then maintained for hunting, but the necessity of an adequate timber and fuel supply was also importantly considered. Wardens patrolled the forests, much in the same manner as our modern forest rangers, and their duties were somewhat similar. The central European nations, particularly Germany and France, were long ago forced by the exhaustion of accessible timber to take steps to conserve and perpetuate their forest lands, and in those countries we today find the most advanced forestry legislation.

The Federal Government and the forestry divisions of the various states can profit by a study of those regulations, and the adoption of them, in a somewhat modified form, would not be amiss. It is admitted by the California State Board of Forestry that our laws are entirely inadequate. For many years the board has endeavored to procure forestry legislation to somewhat remedy the deplorable conditions now existing in California. To date, the opposition of private interests has blocked the enactment of such legislation. The Forestry Act of 1905 has entirely outlived its usefulness. At best, it was a fair start toward better conditions which have not, thus far, materialized.

In 333 B. C. at Gordium, on the River Saugarius in Asia Minor, was preserved the ancient wagon of Gordius, the mythical Phrygian king. The legend reads that whosoever could untie the curiously twisted fibres of the cornel tree, which fastened its pole to the yoke, would be lord of Asia. Alexander the Great, as much at a loss as others to unlouse it, cut it with his sword, but the prophecy, nonetheless, was held to be fulfilled. We need an Alexander, here in California, to cut the knot of red-tape and political entanglements, and thus free our legislators from the hands of steel which prevent them from fulfilling their duty to their constituents, the People of California, in order that, sometime in the near future, our forest may obtain the protection they are entitled to. The defects of the state's present system of forest legislation are so glaring and palpable, but a slight knowledge of forestry conditions is necessary to point them out.

A reforestation program by the state is noticeable by its absence, and any number of wise, protective and beneficial progressive provisions at present in effect in the advanced European states are foreign to our idea of forest regulation. The sublime ignorance of our people on the one hand, and the criminal indifference and selfishness of the lumber interests on the other, have constituted a barrier which seems insurmountable to the few who are at present laboring for proper legislation.

Both Michigan and Pennsylvania are far ahead of California in their forestry policies and regulations. The almost-total exhaustion of the timber supply there stimulated the enactment of the regulations. Why should we wait until our resources are exhausted before we come to the realization that something drastic must be done to replace them? Michigan and Pennsylvania are paying the price for physical exhaustion of natural resources. Fortunately, the lack of transportation facilities and adjacent markets have protected, to a large extent, the forest life of the Pacific Slope, but today the same ruinous policies and practices of lumber companies threaten California with the selfsame calamity. If we can profit by lessons of the past when in position to reap the greatest benefit, now is the time for action.

The general public is misled by the agitation concerning state parks, in the belief that large tracts of forest lands and natural watersheds are the property of the State of California. This is not true! The state owns but a little over one-tenth of one percent of the present virgin timber stand; the Federal Government, in the national forest reserves and national parks, 41 percent; 58 percent is in the hands of private parties. In the immature forest area, watershed area and other lands requiring forest protection, the state has NO ACREAGE, the Federal Government 3,750,000 acres, and private parties 11,650,000 acres.

The weak link in the chain of forestry development in California is forestry legislation or, rather, the absence of it. If the public-spirited citizens should call on their representatives for an accounting on the forestry question, it is possible they would no longer heed the voice of the lumbermen's lobby at Sacramento. Meanwhile, the Rip Van Winkles of the Legislature sleep, as they have slept for the past twenty years, while the magnificent forests of California go the way of the mammoth sabre-tooth tiger and pterodactyl. It is possible, a few hundred years from now, men of the University of California may find a few fossilized stumps up in the Sierra Nevada and exclaim, in amazement, "My goodness, trees used to grow here!"

If you want to preserve the natural resources of your native state, if you enjoy the beauty and the benefits of the health-giving forests, if you desire to preserve for posterity the advantages you enjoy today, write to the men and women who take their hi-yearly jaunt to Sacramento for the purpose, usually, of putting more restraints on personal liberty, and ask them what they are doing in the cause of forestry. California needs you, do your bit!

GRIZZLY GROWLS

(CLARENCE M. HUNT.)

September 17 was the one hundred and forty-second anniversary of the adoption of the Constitution of the United States. And that same day, in San Francisco, an executive committee representing 7,000 clubwomen of California adopted this resolution:

"Whereas, President Hoover declares that the laws of this country depend on the moral support of its citizens, and that no greater national service can be given by men and women of goodwill than by assisting in stamping out crime and outlawry by refusing to participate in and condemning all transactions with illegal liquor; therefore, he it

"Resolved, That we pledge our moral support and call upon American women to observe the law, and to decline to take part in social functions where the law will be broken."

The foundation-stone of practically every fraternal and civic organization is Loyalty to Country, and if loyalty means anything at all, it means respect for and obedience to the Constitution—not any particular provision which the individual may heartily approve of, but every provision. If every man and woman who has, through membership in some such organization, pledged loyalty to country would be loyal in fact, there would be a great improvement in conditions in these United States. These clubwomen have pointed the way; let others follow, for the betterment of the state and the nation.

"The tendency in local tax rates during the past twenty years has been to increase," says "The Tax Digest," publication of the California Taxpayers' Association. In 1911, it cost $39,000,000 to operate all the counties of the state; in 1928, $274,000,000, an increase of 599 percent. In 1911, it cost $44,000,000 to operate all the cities of the state; in 1928, $230,000,000, an increase of 424 percent. There has also been tremendous increase in the bonded indebtedness of the state and local governments—from $94,000,000 in 1911 to $756,000,000 in 1928.

"It costs the taxpayer money to mortgage the future in the way we are doing it in California. Taxation is the people's business. The first requisite to a reduction in taxation in California is an economy-minded public opinion which will not tolerate waste, extravagance or unnecessary expenditures in government, and which will make only the necessary demands for governmental services."

Youths of California, declares State Superintendent of Public Instruction Vierling Kersey,

"are being educated before they grow up," and are turned out of schoolrooms into a matter-of-fact world unable to apply the knowledge they have acquired. "Fact centered" instruction employed in California public schools in the education of children will, in time, give way to "child centered" methods of instruction, he predicts.

There will come a day when report cards recording the fact-assimilation grade of the student is passe, says Kersey. Pupils will be educated in life experiences—those they must face when they have left their teacher in the classroom, and the schools will endeavor to develop qualities of manhood and of womanhood in children.

Something must be done to lessen the ever-increasing number of fatalities in California chargeable to drunken auto drivers. And from the record, it would appear that the only course is for the law-enforcing agencies to put the culprits behind prison bars. Suspension of license, fine, and probation have failed to bring about the desired result.

Too much leniency has been shown drunken auto drivers, men and women,—leniency which is, in itself, nothing short of criminal. Let it become the established procedure in California to send every drunken auto driver, regardless of influence or wealth, to the penitentiary, and the highways and streets will become much safer.

Of the 1,209,137 minors in California, 102,405 are listed as Mexican, according to figures announced by Chief Walter E. Morgan of the State Bureau of Statistics. Absorbing 10 percent of the public-school costs, they add to the White man's financial burden, and create a new social problem detrimental to the state.

The state's juvenile population-map deepens from practically pure white in the northern border counties to a perceptible tan in the south. Los Angeles with 11.13 percent, San Diego with 11.97 percent, San Bernardino with 21.41 percent, and Ventura with nearly 24 percent, have the largest ratio of Mexican children to offspring of Caucasians of all the counties of the state.

People who object to present-day regulations of the national forests in California, and to the enforcement of federal and state laws, should have lived in the days of Napoleon, says the United States Forest Service. Read this letter, which he wrote to the prefect of a department in which there had been a number of forest fires:

"Monsieur Le Prefect: I am informed that a number of fires have broken out in the department the administration of which I have confided in you. You will please have the individuals, convicted of having set them, shot immediately. Also, if fires break out again, I shall see to giving you a successor."

CALIFORNIA'S NATAL DAY OBSERVED AT NOTEWORTHY GATHERINGS

SANTA CRUZ—THE STATE-WIDE CELEBRATION of the seventy-ninth anniversary of California's admission to statehood, under the auspices of the Orders of Native Sons and Native Daughters of the Golden West, drew an immense crowd to this city September 7, 8 and 9. Various entertainment features were provided, among them a display of fireworks, which was exceptionally noteworthy. Dancing at the "open house" headquarters maintained by several of the Native Son Parlors drew huge crowds.

The chief attraction was the Admission Day, September 9, parade, in charge of Arthur J. Cleu, Grand Marshal N.S.G.W., and Evelyn I. Carlson, Grand Marshal N.D.G.W. It was most colorful, and splendidly handled.

The music of the seven bands, the rhythm of the twenty-six drum and hugh corps, and the costumes of the marchers who constituted the ten divisions won the commendatory plaudits of the thousands of onlookers. One of the latter, Admiral L. M. Nulton of the United States Navy, declared the parade was the greatest spectacle he had ever witnessed, and he highly commended the Natives for their state pride and loyalty.

One particularly interesting section of the parade was that devoted to the Covered Wagon Babies Club of California—men and women horn in covered wagons while their parents were enroute across the plains to the Land of Promise—many of them garbed as in the days of '49. During the march, several of the drill teams and drum corps executed intricate maneuvers. The following awards were made:

Best playing and marching Native Son drum corps—Alcalde Parlor No. 154, San Francisco; Utopia Parlor No. 270, San Francisco.

Best playing and marching Native Daughter drum corps—Guadalupe Parlor No. 153, San Francisco; Genevieve Parlor No. 132, San Francisco.

Best Native Daughter drill team—El Carmelo Parlor No. 181, Daly City; Twin Peaks Parlor No. 185, San Francisco.

Best playing Native Son band—Piedmont Parlor No. 120, Oakland.

Largest marching Native Son unit—Rincon Parlor No. 72, San Francisco; Stanford Parlor No. 76, San Francisco.

Best decorated float—City of Santa Cruz; Sacramento City Native Daughters.

Among the San Francisco Native Daughter units, Orinda Parlor No. 56 was judged to have the best appearing drill team, and because there was no float entered in the classification "best historical portrayal," that award went to the marching unit of Palo Alto Parlor No. 216 N.S.G.W. and Palo Alto Parlor No. 229 N.D.G.W.

Special prizes were awarded Alameda County Native Daughters as follows: Best appearing drill team, Brooklyn No. 157, Oakland; Argonaut No. 166, Berkeley. Best playing and marching drum corps, Bear Flag Parlor No. 151, Berkeley. Largest unit, Aloha Parlor No. 106, Oakland.

THERE IS NO DEAD PAST; TODAY

INSEPARABLE FROM YESTERDAY.

Santa Barbara—A practical expression of the aims and objectives of the Orders of Native Sons and Native Daughters of the Golden West was beautifully staged the birthday of California, September 9, when old-timers of Santa Barbara County were gathered together for their annual reception and talkfest. Beneath the ancient oak trees which shade the veranda of Rockwood clubhouse in Mission Canyon, gray heads nodded and stories of struggle and excitement, too intimate for recording upon the pages of history, were exchanged as pioneer met pioneer and relived the days of the covered wagon.

Dr. William H. Ellison, vice-president of the California Historical Association and head of the social science department at Santa Barbara State College, greeted the pioneers and complimented the Native Sons and the Native Daughters on the fittingness of their program and the honor which they bestowed on those who have given them their native state.

"As one who, after twenty-five years of residence in California, am more Californian than many natives of the state," said Dr. Ellison, "I commend you highly for the appropriateness of your celebration today and for your efforts to keep alive the traditions and promoting the continuity of California history. There is no dead past. Today is inseparable from yesterday, and except for the brave men and the courageous women of yesterday who sailed uncharted seas and crossed the trackless prairies through untold hardships, the things of which we are inordinately proud today would not have been established. Men of character and vision, women of patience and courage gave life and spirit to the State of California."

Miss Vera Pacheco of Reina del Mar Parlor No. 126 N.D.G.W. arranged the musical program, which included vocal numbers by Rollin C. Wheeler, Roderick Show, Josephine Selover and Meta Stone, violin numbers by Gertrude Van Genaeck and piano numbers by Anita Cochran. Mark Bradley of Santa Barbara Parlor No. 116 N.S.G.W. led the talkfest, introducing a number of the pioneers, who shared their recollections with those of their own period and their descendants. I. M. Clark, who came to Santa Barbara in 1865, recalled the dangers of the sea trip to California.

C. A. Storke, pioneer editor of the state, related the history of the lima bean production of California. Henry Lewis, a Carpinteria man, extended hospitality to an Australian wayfarer, who repaid his host with a quart of lima beans, which were then unknown in the country. From that quart of beans, he said, have sprung all the lima beans now shipped from the state. Mrs. Alice Foxen-Tripp told of a ten-day trip to Los Angeles by oxcart made with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Reyes Foxen, when she was but six years old. The reception was prolonged while the guests of honor, reluctant to part from those who had lived through those same days of pioneering, entertained themselves with reminiscences.

Boutonniers were presented by the Native Daughters to all the pioneers present. Flowers and greetings were also sent to those too infirm to take active part in the reception. Presiding at the tea tables were Miss Grace Ruth Southwick, Mms. Paul Sweetser, Charles W. Ealand, Charles Sherman, C. E. Herhert, George Edwards, Harry Sweetser and John T. Stewart. Miss Anna McCaughey headed the reception committee.

Descendants of the pioneers and members of the two Parlors enjoyed a dance in the evening, as a conclusion to the day's festivities. Those in charge were Mms. M. C. Harrison, Richard Feliz and Patrick Hendry, Misses Frances Bonn, Elizabeth Hollow, Marian Arroqui, Marjorie Hester, Cora Senkenberg, Lena Dardi and Ynez Sharpe.

MONUMENT TO EARLY-DAY

EXPRESS MESSENGERS DEDICATED.

Jackson (Amador County)—Amador County observed California's natal day by dedicating, September 8, a monument, made possible by the efforts of the Amador County Native Sons and Native Daughters Landmarks Committee, commemorating the early-day stage drivers and guards of the state. Supervisor D. V. Ramazzotti introduced Clarence E. Jarvis, Past Grand President N.S.G.W., as chairman of the day.

Following a prayer by Rev. Father Michael, Joseph R. Knowland, Past Grand President N.S.G.W., delivered an address, in the course of which he said: "We are not here just to honor one Michael Tovey, but to pay honor to the hundreds of loyal stage drivers and messengers who figured in the growth and prosperity of our commonwealth, California, to those who received the hullion of the Mother Lode in those early days and with their sawed-off shotguns guarded their precious treasure." Other speakers were State Director Public Works Bert Meek, G. W. Wickman, Robert Pierce, Harry Peterson, George Woolsey, and William P. Cauhu, Past Grand President N.S.G.W. Miss Betty Read recited a poem, "Pards," and George F. Bush and Bahe Raggio, stage drivers, were introduced. During the program the Preston school band rendered selections. Rev. Father M. O'Connor delivered the benediction.

The monument, midway between Jackson and Ione, is constructed of native marble. It bears an engraving of a Concord coach, in common evidence in the early days of California, and the following inscription:

"Michael (Mike) Tovey, Wells Fargo messenger, was killed, and De Witt Clinton Radcliff, stage driver, injured on this spot, June 15, 1893, by a lone handit, who attempted to hold up the regular six-horse stage on the old Ione-Jackson stage road.

"A line of stages was established in 1850, running between Sacramento and Sonora via Q Ranch (near Ione), Jackson, Mokelumne Hill, Angels Camp and Columbia. Over $265,000,000 in gold hullion is said to have been carried in the early days over this, the main artery to the Mother Lode and Southern Mines.

"In memory of these and other brave, intrepid, self-sacrificing and loyal Wells Fargo messengers and stage drivers of California this tablet is dedicated.

"Tablet placed by the Historic Landmarks Committee of the Native Sons of the Golden West and Native Sons and Native Daughters of Amador County, September 8, 1929."

NATION'S AND STATE'S FLAGS NOW

FLY O'ER HALLOWED SITE.

San Diego—The outstanding feature of the observance of Admission Day, September 9, was the presentation to the city, by San Diego Parlor No. 108 N.S.G.W. of a Flag of the United States of America and a California (State) Bear Flag, to float from the flagstaff at the site of Old Fort Stockton, overlooking the spot where California began.

Albert V. Mayrhofer was master of ceremonies, and Judge Eugene Daney Jr. was the principal speaker. He referred to the Pioneers, said it was the sacred duty of their descendants to keep their memory alive, and concluded with the plea that California be forever kept a paradise for the White race. Brief remarks were made by Mrs. Mahel H. Burgett, president San Diego Parlor No. 208 N.D.G.W., Colonel E. N. Jones of the San Diego Park Board, and Allen H. Wright, secretary State Historical Society.

Formal presentation of the flags was made by Councilman E. H. Dowell, and they were accepted by Mayor Clark, who briefly described the original Bear Flag and said "it is most appropriate the gift of the Native Sons should be made on the spot where the first pueblo was established." While the marine band played "The Star Spangled Banner" the flags were raised to the top of the tall flagstaff.

SHAFT DEDICATED TO MEMORY

NOTABLE CALIFORNIA PIONEERS.

Santa Maria (Santa Barbara County)—In a canyon of the San Rafael Mountains, almost within shadow of Lookout Peak, a group of early American Pioneers and their descendants gathered Admission Day, September 9, to dedicate a shaft—a ten-ton granite boulder bearing a bronze plaque—to the memory of Colonel John C. Fremont, the Pathfinder, and Benjamin Foxen, the Pioneer.

The ceremony was staged under a live oak where, long ago, American soldiers of Fremont camped while he conferred with Foxen relative to the ambush in Gaviota Pass. Fremont planned to, and did, circumvent the trap set by the Mexican forces, by reaching Santa Barbara through the Foxen and San Marcos Passes. The shaft is a gift of the Minerva Club of Santa Maria to Santa Barbara County.

Frank J. McCoy was chairman of the day, and an invocation was pronounced by Rev. I. T. Raab. Brief remarks were made by Supervisor C. L. Preisker and Benton Fremont, grandson of the Pathfinder. The principal address was delivered by Michael J. Phillips, who began his splendid tribute to Pathfinder Fremont and Pioneer Foxen thusly:

"When I visited Boston for the first time and noted how the windows of Charlestown high school overlooked Bunker Hill monument, only a short distance away, the thought came to me: 'What a wonderful place for children to learn their American history—here, on the very ground where history was made!'

"Some years later I came to California, and immediately saw that here history is not confined to a few small areas. It is inscribed in a scroll a thousand miles long—on El Camino Real, the King's Highway. Before the Pilgrims landed at Plymouth Rock in 1620, this very coast was familiar to Spanish navigators. . . . Before the Revolutionary War, California was a going concern."

The shaft is inscribed as follows: "Santa Barbara County. JOHN C. FREMONT, the Pathfinder. BENJAMIN FOXEN, the Pioneer. Near this site on the Foxen Rancho in 1846 encamped an American force under Lt. Col. Fremont. Warned by Foxen of an ambush in Gaviota Pass, and guided by him on Christmas Day over the San Marcos Pass, the Americans took Santa Barbara without bloodshed. Three weeks later, January 13, 1847, California was ceded to the United States. Erected by the Pioneer Section of the Minerva Library Club, Santa Maria, California, 1929."

During the ceremonies of dedication County Tnx Collector Harry C. Sweetser, on behalf of Santa Barbara Parlor No. 116 N.S.G.W., presented a California (State) Bear Flag to the Minerva Club, and Mrs. John Stewart, for Reina del Mar Parlor No. 126 N.D.G.W., presented the Flag of the United States of America. For the club, the flags were accepted, respectively, by Mrs. Susan E. Lincoln, chairman of the pioneer section, and Mrs. M. O. Winters.

MARKER WHERE CAPITAL CITY'S FOUNDER LANDED DEDICATED.

Sacramento—The exact spot where, in 1839, Captain John A. Sutter first landed in this city, is now indicated by a marker, provided by the Southern Pacific Company, which was dedicated Admission Day, September 9. The spot is at Twenty-eighth and "A" streets. Captain Sutter landed at Sacramento, where he established his historic fort, after a two-weeks' journey from San Francisco with two small sloops, the "Isabella" and the "Nicolaus," and his own four-oared boat.

The dedicatory ceremonies were presided over by Harry C. Peterson, curator of Sutter Fort, which was purchased by the Order of Native Sons of the Golden West and presented to the State of California. Speakers included Mayor Martin I. Welsh, Assemblyman Percy G. West, Arthur S. Dudley, Joseph R. Knowland, Past Grand President N.S.G.W., W. L. Hack, Simon J. Lubin, and D. R. Owen, Southern Pacific district passenger agent.

The marker, which not only calls attention to Captain Sutter's landing at Sacramento, but also to the famous gold discovery at Coloma, El Dorado County, is inscribed: "CAPTAIN JOHN A. SUTTER, Founder of Sacramento, landed here August 12, 1839. Nine years later GOLD was discovered on his property at Coloma by JAMES W. MARSHALL."

The Southern Pacific has declared its intention to place a series of markers in California North to point out places of historic interests to transcontinental tourists.

WATERFALL MORE INSPIRING THAN AMUSEMENT DEVICES.

Berkeley (Alameda County)—The Mariposa Club, made up of former residents of Mariposa County, observed Admission Day, September 9, with unusual zest and enthusiasm. Present were California families from first to even fifth generation. The program was arranged by President Frank A. Bondshu and Secretary Mary Maloney. In his opening address the president referred to those who had gone on during the past year. W. E. Bunker gave a rousing talk on the fact that Mariposa takes no trouble to claim the Jewel, Yosemite, for which it is the chalice.

Mrs. Lydia Peck-Bunker asked the club to go on record as believing the amount of money being expended on the floor of the valley could be used to better advantage in damming the water above—a waterfall being more inspiring than a merry-go-round. May Corcoran seconded the suggestion, stating it was necessary to conserve the waters of the High Sierra to preserve from utter devastation the falls of Yosemite and the lands below.

Frank A. Cavnagaro gave a sketch of the life of General John Charles Fremont, a name dear to every Mariposan. Other speakers were Frank T. Maguire and Ben M. Maddux. Mrs. Daisy Lind and Dan Gilson were the soloists.

ALAMEDA COUNTY NATIVES SPONSORING HISTORY ESSAY CONTEST.

Oakland—The Alameda County Extension of the Order Committee N.S.G.W. is sponsoring a California history essay contest which opened September 10 and closes October 21. Two hundred dollars in cash prizes will be awarded. George H. Oakes, 920 1/2 "A" street, Hayward, is chairman.

Contestants must be enrolled students in Alameda County high schools, junior high schools, or other schools of high school standing. Any phase of California history may be discussed. Only original essays will be considered, and references and sources of material used must be given. Essays must not exceed, approximately, 2,000 words.

Apple Show—Boonville, Mendocino County, will stage an apple show and fair, October 11, 12 and 13.

THE HOME BEAUTIFUL

Dr. Mariana Bertola
(PAST GRAND PRESIDENT AND CHAIRMAN N.D.G.W. HOME.)

AS MONTHS GO BY THE GARDENS ARE becoming more and more lovely, and the shrubs and the trees are growing well, doing their part to beautify the stately Native Daughter Home at 555 Baker street, San Francisco. The palms brought by Mrs. Florence Schenemann from Los Angeles continue to grow and grace the place. The interior is well kept, and the Home is well patronized. The older members of the Order are congregating here more than ever, and the younger members are not to be outdone. The latter are forming a glee club, under the able instruction of Miss Laura Anna Cotton of Orinda Parlor No. 56. They will provide vocal numbers for many programs to come. There are some very good voices among them. The young people expect to carry on their dances during the winter months. Miss Dorothy Barry is chairman, assisted by a number of young members from each Parlor.

The second Sunday of each month breakfasts, presided over by various members of the Home Committee, are proving a great success. These breakfasts, provided for fifty cents, are a suggestion of Miss Grace Norton of Los Angeles Parlor. From forty-five to one hundred twenty Native Daughters, their husbands, sons and daughters have attended them. Some of the gatherings have been very unique. The next one, October 13, is to be conducted by Grand Secretary Sallie R. Thaler and Miss Minnie Tietjen. On this occasion the fine-looking iron gates will be formally presented by the Order of Native Sons of the Golden West, which raised $350 for them at the San Francisco Grand Parlor in May. We expect to have Grand President Esther R. Sullivan and Past Grand President Dr. Louise C. Hellbronn present on that occasion. Please make reservations early, with Mrs. Laura Hawkins, director at the Home. Many private lunches and dinners continue to be given also, increasing the income; all express themselves pleased with the cuisine.

Many rooms have been dedicated in honor of various Parlors, which have contributed from $153 to $203, according to location and size; the extra $3 is for the name-plate. In addition to those heretofore mentioned are Buena Vista No. 68, which is refurbishing a room furnished long ago in the old home; this is the ward-room, for the sick and convalescent, but when not thus occupied it is reserved for transients, who find it very commodious with its private bathroom; Californiana No. 247 room, named in honor of Past Grand President Grace S. Stoerner; La Junta No. 203; Bonita No. 10; Oneonta No. 71; Marinita No. 198; Orinda No. 56 which, in addition to the room, dedicated the dining-room fireplace and stone mantel to Past Grand President Emma Gruher-Foley; Joaquin No. 5; Dolores No. 169; Vendome No. 100; Past Grand Presidents Association; General Assembly Past Presidents; San Diego No. 108; Alta No. 3 will refurbish the room furnished long ago in the old home. Donations continue to come in, the following having been presented since the last account:

A beautiful chair, Miss Zita Ferris, Aloha Parlor; shells, Past Grand President Mamie G. Peyton; luncheon set, Miss Woodworth, Eschool Parlor; jelly, jams, vegetables, six dozen dish towels, Grand Trustee Eldora McCarty; one dozen napkins, Mrs. Augusta Huxsol, Piedmont Parlor; statuette, Grand President Esther R. Sullivan; waifle iron and book, Mrs. Osborn, Buena Vista Parlor; one dozen meat pie dishes and vegetable shredders, Mrs. Northey, Sacramento; two velvet scarfs, Mrs. McDonald, Alta Parlor; sixteen napkins and eight table runners, Miss Douglas, Alta Parlor; plate, Mary Meade, Marysville Parlor; two pictures, Emma Delwig, Buena Vista Parlor; books, Past Grand President Dr. Mariana Bertola; $20 cash, Mrs. Harriet Cate; death benefit, $150, a bequest from our late sister, Mrs. Isabella Nielsen, Buena Vista Parlor;—(many others may do likewise, and change their death benefit certificates in favor of the Home);—sack of pine cones, Past Grand President Emma Lou Humphrey; bird's nest fern, Grand Trustee, Eldora McCarty; $100 cash, A. B. C. Dohrmann, San Francisco; three home-made quilts, Imogene Parlor; one dozen hooks, Miss E. Both, Dolores Parlor; mirror, Miss M. Blacklock, Dolores Parlor; parlor lamp, Past Presidents Association No. 2, Oakland.

Through the Loyalty Pledge, the mortgage has been reduced to $29,000—certainly a wonderful record! No other organization has approached it. If all Native Daughters earn their $5 for the pledge, this coming year we will be able to wipe out the mortgage. The many ways employed in earning the amount would make an interesting story: making doughnuts; selling jams, jellies, cakes, old clothes, newspapers, etc.; sewing garments; blacking hoots; abstaining from candy and ice cream; two benefits have been derived from the last—in addition to money saved, a girlish figure has been obtained.

Past Grand President Dr. Louise C. Hellbronn conceived the idea of the Loyalty Pledge, which is $5 from every Native Daughter, to pay off the mortgage. Grand President Esther R. Sullivan is keeping up the enthusiasm by speaking of the Home and the necessity of fulfilling the pledge at all her official visits. Past Grand President Grace S. Stoerner of Los Angeles heads the Finance committee for the Home, and is assisted in San Francisco by Grand Marshal Evelyn Carlson.

Before Christmas, the Home Committee hopes to issue a folder, with pictures of the building and of its interior. It has been suggested, too, that we have postal-cards of Home scenes for sale; this will be done, if the expense is not prohibitive. The folder will be one that can be sent to friends, and will be fine publicity. We take this occasion of thanking The Grizzly Bear for publicity given the Native Daughter Home.

The Native Daughters have achieved more in these few months than many organizations in a

Feminine World's Fads and Fancies

PREPARED ESPECIALLY FOR THE GRIZZLY BEAR BY ANNA STOERMER

FRIVOLOUS FRILLS AND FURBELOWS are the songs that evening wraps are singing now. "Let us be gay," seems to be the keynote of the latest theme, and who could he anything else but festive when enveloped in piquant ruffles or tiers of dainty chiffon or georgette? A more exotic note is struck by the bright orange velvet or metallic evening wraps now being shown, with the bows coquettishly posed on the back of the collarless coats.

Furs have ever been a flattering frame for lady's dainty features, but this season sees some new and lovely designs in the fashioning of scarfs. Of course, many things must be taken into consideration when planning a scarf. For instance, a scarf that will look stunning with a close-fitting hat sometimes seems utterly lacking in chic and charm with a brimmed chapeau. Therefore, it behooves one to match her scarf with a complementing hat, or vice-versa.

The scarf of mink, formed of many skins and cluster of tails, is worn with a softly draped hat featuring the down in the back line. The sable scarf, which wraps around the throat in a careless manner, is worn with a panne velvet and black felt hat which is draped in a new and stunning fashion.

Flat scarfs seem to be more popular than the skins which have been worn. Of course, these are worn also, but not in the single skin. Several skins together make a long, graceful scarf and are much more flattering than the one skin sliding off the shoulder. Caracul is generally considered the most fashionable fur.

The new natural brown russian caracul is featured by most of the exclusive stores. Lapin is the sports fur for the woman who has plenty of furs. Lapin is usually in the very light beige, and is often trimmed with kasha. Other smart flat furs are broadtail, astrakan, beaver, mink and persian lamb.

Collars are varied, but all are rather large and unusual, and are generally set well back from the neck. Deep cape collars, huge high-standing shawl collars, scarf collars for sports, and wide johnny collars are the most important types.

Cuffs are of particular importance this year and, like the collars, are very unusual and often very elaborate.

Printed velvets continue to emphasize the flower motif enjoyed in such profusion this past summer. Never before has transparent velvet known such a festive summer. It is wrapping the season's beauties in flattering little wraps for formal and semi-formal affairs. It has developed three-quarters and finger-tip coats to lend a note of luxury to chiffon dresses, and is also used for jacket suits for street wear.

It may be because fashion has gone feminine again, that softness is such an important characteristic of the collars. They are gathered in a very flattering way on either side of the face, or crushed all around.

If the new mode can be described in a single word, that word is "individuality." There are so many delightful new developments in this fall's fashions that everyone can look a little bit different from everyone else without spending a great deal of money.

Sports and tailored coats show moderately fitted lines, sometimes slightly flared and often belted.

Tailored dresses are usually in one-piece styles, with the fitted bodice, and the high, belted waistline.

Skirts are longer—three inches below the knees. Hip-fitted flares are low placed. Blouses and tunics are smart.

Light-weight sheer woollens and tweeds take first place in the fabrics, followed by novelty jerseys, canton crepes, and silks in tweed prints. Nothing is smarter than tweed. The "tweedier" the better.

Suits, gowns and coats, with their clinging supple lines and their richly soft fabrics, indicate the unmistakable return of the feminine charm to garments.

Although winter is looming near, the blouse still refuses to add sleeves to its summery condition. However, it will be worn with the new woolly ensemble.

One of the most distinguished dresses for fall shows the new long tunic blouse. The woman who chooses this dress will find herself strictly in the mode this time.

In reporting what is new in the line of fall accessories, one must start at the top and work down. For instance, one may be first enlightened about the new scarfs that smart women will wear. Then, in turn, there will be given all the last-minute information on jewelry, gloves, handbags, hosiery and shoes. Some of the scarfs are accompanied by a bag of the matching fabrics. Checks, stripes and plaid designs seem to be the most in favor.

It is predicted that one will get much fun out of browsing around the new jewelry sections. There are all sorts of new ideas offered for the new season, and not the least among these are the semi-precious stones, set in marcasite, which are really very inexpensive. The rings in particular take the eye, and there are some pendant necklaces that are stunning.

Of course, it is in the evening that the new jewelry attains its most enticing forms. Larger bracelets, necklaces and earrings are shown for afternoon and evening wear.

The newer ensemble jewelry suggests the more ancient designs. Watches, both wrist and brooch, are to be smaller and daintier, emphasizing the feminine charm.

Much fancy stitching is seen in the new fall gloves, and the tailored cuff type is the important one, in combination with a pearl-blue button or a buckle trim. The well-dressed women will select gloves to match their stockings in color.

The early fall tones are somewhat deeper, and are divided into two groups—brown and yellow. Orange will be important for sports wear, ranging from light chestnut to tan. Dark green and black will be important for formal daytime. A glace glove, with decoration of applique, is very chic for formal wear.

Elaborate clasps feature handbags of suede, antelope or calf, and are shown with semi-precious stones and with striking ornaments of enamel with generous frames. The metal evening bags frequently match in color the dresses or wraps, and are beautifully embroidered in gold and silver or made entirely of metallic fabrics.

Slippers of a vivid color are seen in the new fall modes, but they require completeness to appear well. The color must be right, and the foot and leg very beautiful, in order to wear bright slippers easily.

Women who like color upon hats will find no end of smart buckle effects in bright colors. Some of the most important millinery colors for fall are golden, capucine, autumn glow, copper-sheen, patio brown, indian sun brown, madrona, aloha, hawaiian brown, all autumn greens, deep reds, navy and, of course, black.

VARIOUS STARCHES TESTED FOR STIFFENING FABRICS.

Fabrics are finished or sized in the course of the manufacturing process to give them stiffness, and in the laundering process to restore the original finish, as far as possible. Nevertheless, very little is known at present as to which of the various sizing materials used for this purpose may be the most desirable for different fabrics and effects, and why. Manufacturers judge a sized fabric by its "feel" or "handle" in respect to stiffness and pliability, but this is a vague term, dependent on many factors. The Federal Department of Agriculture's bureau of home economics started a series of studies in its textile laboratory to differentiate these various factors.

As stiffness has been considered an important property included in the term "feel," attention was first directed to methods of measuring the stiffness of materials and the comparative value of the more common agents in producing it. Starch was selected for study because it is widely used both in the manufacturing process and in laundering. A better knowledge of the different properties of starches will not only guide the manufacturer in his original sizing applications but will also aid in making recommendations for simple and effective means of restoring to the laundered cloth more of the appearance of new, unwashed fabrics.

Starches from different plants differ in their stiffening properties, and sometimes those from different varieties of the same species may differ. In commercial starches there are differences due to the method of preparation. The bureau thought it advisable to prepare the starch used for part of the experimental work and to compare it with different commercial products.

In general, considering wheat, rice, corn and potato starches, the wheat produced the stiffest fabric and the potato the least stiff. The corn and rice starches gave practically the same effect. Further work, however, is to be done with these and other starches to determine the factors, such as the time of heating, the amount of dilution and the addition of various substances, commonly borax, salt, paraffin and hydrogenated vegetable oils, which may affect the final stiffness of the fabric.

Federal Aid—Since 1917 California has been apportioned a total of $29,538,012 for federal-aid highways.

"There are just two things that break up most of the happy homes nowadays: woman's love for dry goods and man's love for wet goods."—Exchange.

CALIFORNIA HAPPENINGS OF FIFTY YEARS AGO

Thomas R. Jones

(COMPILED EXPRESSLY FOR THE GRIZZLY BEAR.)

GENERAL U. S. GRANT AND PARTY returned from the Yosemite Valley October 7, 1879, and the 22nd the general visited the Capital of California, Sacramento, where he was given the greatest ovation ever accorded a noted man by California North. Delegations came with brass bands by special trains from interior towns. In a parade to the Capitol, where the eloquent Henry Edgerton delivered an address of welcome, General Grant rode with Governor William Irwin in a harouche drawn by six white horses. The 25th the general left the state by special train, and enroute to Philadelphia from a two-year trip around the world was given enthusiastic receptions by cheering crowds in every city and town through which he passed.

The first rainfall of the season came October 12. It was of short duration, however, and gave only .84 inch of rain for the month and the season.

The Los Angeles Horticultural Fair opened for a week October 21. There were over 700 exhibitors.

This was the banner month for shipments of grain from California to Europe. Forty-eight vessels, whose cargoes totaled 1,972,312 cents valued at $3,834,000, passed out through the Golden Gate.

The first couple wedded in California after it became a state—C. H. Schnable and Doretta Barkhaus—celebrated their twenty-ninth wedding anniversary this month. They were married at San Francisco, October 21, 1850; they became residents of Newcastle, Placer County, and there reared a large family.

Tremendous excitement prevailed for several days in Los Angeles County during the disposing of settlers from Los Bolsas rancho. The courts had decided the Los Angeles and San Bernardino Land Company had title to the property and the United States marshal was ejecting more than 300 settlers.

October 1, San Francisco had its first demonstration of the new electric light for street illumination. Several blocks of Market street were lighted.

Anaheim, Orange County, vineyardists were up against a hard proposition, as predatory bees were ruining their crops by extracting the sweets from the grapes upon the vines, and no remedy for the situation could be found.

George Dockendorff, a San Francisco real estate man, disappeared March 8 and until this month, when he was heard from in Bremen, no trace of him could be found. He had been drugged and shanghaied, and put aboard a Spanish ship sailing from San Francisco for Europe; the ship was wrecked off the coast of Chili, and he with three other survivors were picked up by a Holland clipper and taken to Bremen.

STAGE ROBBER HAS BUSY TIME.

Chinese had gone to hop raising in Santa Clara County and were selling their product at 8 cents a pound. Unable to compete with them at that price, the White hop raisers were forced to put their acreage into other crops.

Free letter delivery service was started in Sacramento City October 1, five carriers being employed.

General John Bidwell, at his Rancho Chico in Butte County, was specializing in a new variety of melon called the casaba, and was selling all he produced at a dollar each.

Santa Ana, Orange County, claimed a farmer near there had raised the biggest sweet-potato vine in the state. It produced four sweets that had a combined weight of 38 pounds.

The steamer leaving San Francisco for China October 1 took away 630 Chinks, also $340,000 in treasure.

In Yolo County was a mercantile firm named Hugg & Smiles. It was very popular with feminine shoppers.

An agent of Thomas Edison made his advent into Oroville, Butte County, in search of platinum. It was known that the placers in that district carried a large amount of the metal, which was then not considered valuable enough to save.

The Southern Pacific began construction of a solid embankment to replace Long Wharf at Oakland, Alameda County. A quarry was established at Niles, twenty-five miles distant, and trainloads of rock and earth were being hauled. Seven hundred Chinamen and a few White men were employed in the work which, it was expected, would require three years to complete.

W. S. Bodie, who discovered the Bodie mine and gave his name to the Mono County town of that name, perished in a snowstorm in November of 1859. His skeleton was found this month, nearly twenty years later, about a mile from the town.

A lone highwayman stopped the stage near Ukiah, Mendocino County, October 11 and got $1,000 from the express box. His next appearance was near Redding, Shasta County, where he robbed the Shasta stage. He finished the month by holding up the Alturas, Modoc County, stage and taking the mail bags.

Fire at Willows, Glenn County, October 27 burned four buildings and cremated twenty-three horses. The loss was $20,000.

The Chinatown and a large portion of the business section of Colfax, Placer County, were destroyed by fire October 28 with a $50,000 loss.

Sho Tong, Chinese consul in San Francisco, spent $10,000 celebrating his fifty-first birthday anniversary October 1. The feast began at 11 a. m. and lasted until midnight.

"MADAME MUSTACHE" SUICIDES.

John Lawrence, attempting to attach new guy ropes to a lofty flagstaff at Vallejo, Solano County, October 14 fell seventy feet and was killed.

J. R. Alsip, a San Francisco hookkeeper, absconded with $4,000 of his employer's funds. Arrested in Callao, he was being returned aboard the "Valparaíso," and just as the ship was coming through the Golden Gate jumped overboard and was drowned.

Dominic Temple, a Stockton, San Joaquin County, farmer, carried a bottle of wine inside his shirt when he went to work October 25. Stepping into a squirrel hole, the bottle broke, a piece of the glass pierced his abdomen, and he died.

Miss Fannie Wright, in San Francisco October 1, was applying liniment, containing turpentine, to relieve the rheumatic pains of a friend. The bottle exploded from the heat of a near-by coal-oil stove, and she was fatally burned.

"Madame Mustache," a professional gambler of the days of '49, ended her career by suicide at Bodie, Mono County, October 21, when her bank was husted. She was a French woman of masculine appearance and got her cognomen from a fringe that adorned her upper lip. Throughout the mining towns she had the reputation of dealing a square game.

The engine of the Tloga mine at Bodie, Mono County, getting out of control, the cage dropped 520 feet and three of the nine miners aboard were killed outright.

Mrs. Sarah Norton, widow of the locator of the Mount Diablo coal mine and founder of Nortonville, Contra Costa County, was thrown from a buggy October 5 and killed.

Professor Colgrove and C. H. Williams, attempting to make a balloon ascension October 5 from Woodwards Gardens, San Francisco, were thrown from the gas-bag and killed.

Five ex-convicts were raiding ranch houses in Mendocino County. On a foray October 16 they shot and killed William Wright and Thomas Dollard. At last accounts they had passed through Trinity County and were rendezvoused in Tehama County, with two sheriffs and posses in pursuit.

Incensed because the comely daughter of Conrad Stein married another suitor, George Alfeter of San Francisco laid in wait for Stein, on whom he had showered presents, and shot him dead.

An Indian named Salvator was hanged in the San Rafael, Marin County, jail yard October 2 for the murder of a San Francisco merchant on a Marin County trout stream.

A porcupine captured near Lake Tahoe had 1,428 quills, so its captor reported.

Henry Smyth, boring a well at San Lorenzo, Alameda County, at a depth of 200 feet struck a gravel bed, ten feet thick, that prospected 3 cents to the pan.

MONUMENT MARKS WORKSHOP

SITE OF NOTED PIONEER INVENTOR.

Camptonville (Yuba County)—A monument marking the spot where Lester Allen Pelton, California Pioneer, invented the water wheel bearing his name while a resident of this historic mining town, was dedicated August 31 by the Masonic Grand Lodge.

Pelton was born in Ohio, in 1830, and crossed the plains to California in 1850. He engaged in the early-day activities of the state and in 1864 began building stamp mills. Being in direct touch with mill equipment about the mines and the crude types of water wheels then in use, he soon concluded a great improvement could be made.

In 1880 he was granted first patents for the Pelton water wheel, now in use throughout the world. In recognition of his achievement he was awarded the Elliott Cressen medal by the Franklin Institute of Philadelphia in 1895.

FEDERAL CONGRESS WILL CONSIDER MATTERS IMPORTANT TO MOTORISTS.

The present session of the Federal Congress, which got under way when the Senate convened August 19, will be an important one from the standpoint of auto owners, and many matters vitally affecting their interests will be up for attention. Among the more important are:

Increase in federal-aid appropriations from the present $75,000,000 annually to at least $125,000,000. In order that the construction of important interstate highways may be pushed forward at a more rapid pace.

Opposition to the proposal to levy a tariff on petroleum and petroleum products, which would, it is contended, mean an increase in the price of gasoline at least two cents per gallon. It is estimated that this proposal would cost car owners approximately $240,000,000 annually.

Continuation of the campaign to have the Federal Government assume the obligation of building highways through the public lands of the West, as a means of connecting up important interstate highways and also of protecting valuable timber lands from the ravages of forest fires.

Increase in the annual appropriations for forest roads and trails from $7,500,000 to $12,500,000 a year.

Continuation of the warfare on an unnecessary number of toll-bridge franchises, where the bridges are to be operated indefinitely by private interests at a heavy cost to the motoring public.

In addition to these, attention will be given to numerous other moves which threaten to undermine the long-standing national policy of free highways and seek to end federal-aid.

STATE CONTRACTS FOR CONSTRUCTION OF NEW SCENIC HIGHWAY.

Actual construction of the first segment of the new $3,733,889 scenic highway from the Arroyo Seco in Pasadena to Azusa via Pine Flats will soon be under way, the state having let a contract for the work.

This highway will open a large scenic area to motorists, as it extends 17.3 miles from La Canada, northwest of Pasadena, to the saddle between the Arroyo Seco watershed and the West Fork of the San Gabriel River just north of Mount Wilson. The section of the highway to be constructed immediately is 2.5 miles long and extends from La Canada into the Arroyo Seco watershed.

DON'T ARGUE WITH STREET CARS.

It takes three times as great a distance to bring a street car to a stop as it does an automobile. Consequently, when it comes to a dispute between a motorist and a street car, the former can always figure that he is going to come out second best, for in an argument of this kind the victory always goes to the largest vehicle.

Drivers have the opportunity to maneuver, while the street car is confined to the straight and narrow path defined by two steel rails. If for no other reason than for your own protection, therefore, recognize the rights of street cars and do not dispute the right of way with them, advises the California Committee on Public Safety.

Rust Removal—If rusty spots appear upon the nicked parts of a car take a piece of emery cloth, cut the rust off, and put a good coat of lacquer over the spot from which the rust has been removed. This will protect it against further depreciation from the air.

Oil Hinges—If it becomes necessary to slam a car door to close it, oil the lock and lock guide.

FIVE KINDS OF SKIDS:

BRAKING THE MOST COMMON.

To the average motorist a skid is a skid, but avoiding skidding is often a matter of appreciating that there are five distinct kinds, points out the free emergency road service of the California State Automobile Association. The braking skid is the most common.

Next, and often in combination with the first, is the steering skid. The driver steers so carelessly or so incompetently as to cause the hack of the car to slue around to the front.

A power skid results when too much engine speed is applied to the car, the wheels spinning around without normal traction. Then there is the traction skid, which results when tires are too smooth or when roads are icy or oily.

A skid usually overlooked is that produced by misalignment of the front wheels. Many cars considered "skidders" could be made safe and comfortable through a half-hour's careful adjustment of the front-wheel toe-in.

CAMPAIGN FOR ATTRACTIVE

HIGHWAYS GIVEN STATE AID.

Cleaning up and improving the appearance of highways is being made more effective by the State of California through a law, now effective, prohibiting fruit, vegetables and other peddlers from using state highways for the sale of their wares. The enactment, designed to provide for the care and protection of the highways, represents a tremendous advance in the campaign to clean up and beautify the highways.

Section 7 1/2 of the Motor Vehicle Act, added by the last Legislature, stipulates that "any person who sells, displays for sale or offers to sell any merchandise, fruit, vegetables, produce, food or any other goods from any vehicle, motor trailer, semi-trailer, wagon, push cart, stand, structure or building standing or situated wholly or in part on the right-of-way of any state highway or any part thereof, is guilty of a misdemeanor." All peace and state traffic officers are required to enforce the provisions of the section.

DEADLINE NEARS FOR RENEWAL

OPERATORS' LICENSE CARDS.

With the deadline date for renewal of operators' license cards rapidly approaching, an intensive drive is under way to round up motorists whose licenses must be renewed. These include all cards issued prior to January 1927, and it is estimated that there are several hundred thousand such still out.

Since all licenses issued before January 1927 are now void, motorists having them are urged to make application for renewal at once, if they have not already done so. A reasonable length of time for renewals is being allowed, but a deadline will soon be set, after which drivers with void licenses will be subject to arrest.

Replacements—The automotive replacement market will this year handle in excess of 3,000,000 cars.

Delay Costly—Deferring the necessary repairs on an auto usually multiplies the repair bill.

California motorists who have secured operators' cards issued on the new folder forms have been warned by the State Division of Motor Vehicles that the spaces on the folder are intended for use of the courts in entering records of convictions and for no other purpose.

The new form of license was adopted August 14 in compliance with the new state law, which requires that convictions of speeding and reckless driving, driving while intoxicated and other major violations be placed upon the operator's card. This does not refer to convictions prior to August 14.

"Do not write on your card or mutilate it in any way," the division's warning says. "Keep it in your pocket or in the car at all times while driving."

WESTERN MOTOR CLUBS TO MEET FOR DISCUSSION COMMON PROBLEMS.

Representing thousands of organized motorists of the West, the Western Motor Clubs Association will hold its annual meeting in Seattle, October 3 and 4. This will be the fifth year that officials and executives of the motoring organizations of Western states have met in conference for discussion of common problems and furtherance of exchange of courtesies to visiting members.

Among the motor organizations which will be represented at the gathering are the State Automobile Association, San Francisco, and the Automobile Club of Southern California, Los Angeles.

TRAFFIC DEATH TOLL INCREASES.

That auto deaths in the United States are steadily increasing is indicated in recent reports, which estimate a total of 15,900 for the first seven months of 1929, an increase of about six percent compared with the 14,900 casualties during a similar period in 1928.

America's motor-vehicle fatality record for this year, if the number of deaths during the second half are proportionate to those of the first half, will exceed 29,000.

Conscience Needs Developing—Despite state laws prohibiting the throwing of lighted cigarettes, matches, etc., from an auto or other moving vehicle, and federal regulations prohibiting smoking in national forests of the state, the number of "smoker's fires" steadily increases. Californians need to develop a "smoker's conscience."White Warnings—White traffic lines, to remind the motorist to keep on his own side of the road and in his own traffic lane, will be painted upon some 1,400 miles of state highways, according to plans under way by the State Division of Motor Vehicles.

"In trouble?" asked a passing motorist of a couple in a coupe beside the road on a moonlight night. "Nope," came the reply, "In love." "Well, it's the same thing," and the interrupting motorist drove on.—Exchange.

LAWN RING WORM.

Occasionally there will appear rings of dead grass in the lawn, gradually enlarging, the centers recovering as the diameter grows. The trouble is caused by a worm, which for some reason chooses to work in a circle, and thus has gained the name of lawn ring worm. The treatment is not difficult. A pound of powdered arsenate of lead to a thousand square feet of grass should be scattered as evenly as possible, and then soaked into the soil by irrigation, not too heavy. The poison will get the worms.

Native Daughters of the Golden West

ALTURAS—ADMISSION DAY, SEPTEMBER 9, was celebrated by a reception and banquet for the Pioneers at which Alturas No. 159 was hostess. At noon about sixty guests had assembled in the beautiful flower-bedecked banquet hall of the Civic Club, and were seated at tables, the decorations upon which suggested different eras of progress in the methods of transportation—sailing vessel, steamship, covered wagon, pony express, stagecoach, train, automobile and aeroplane. After dinner a literary and musical program suggesting the "days of old" was presented by members of the Parlor in old-time costume. The feature that especially delighted the elderly guests was a musical reading entitled "An Old Family Album".

Responding to a request for Pioneer reminiscences, many of the guests related their first experiences in Modoc County. Mrs. Salishury told of finding only two log cabins upon the site of the present City of Alturas. W. J. Dorris, for whose father and uncle Alturas was first called "Dorris Bridge," told of attending school in a log cabin just across the street from the Civic Club, and that the text book from which he learned to read was "McGuffey's Reader." C. A. Estes told of snowshoeing upon the crust of five feet of snow from the Lava Beds to Alturas the first day of May 1874. Members of the Parlor provided cars to transport those Pioneers who had no other conveyance to and from the reception. Well-filled plates from the banquet table were carried to those Pioneers too ill or too infirm to be present.

September 14 a large delegation from the Parlor joined the immense throng that journeyed to Hackamore to participate in the ceremonies of breaking the last harrier on the new transcontinental railroad. Headed by a group of Pioneers and Indian war veterans and followed in turn, by Indians in war dress, cowboys, officials and the Klamath band, the delegation passed in review up the right-of-way to the improvised "last harrier" while motion-picture cameras registered the unique scene.

Mrs. G. H. Caldwell, Pioneer of Canby who had witnessed the driving of the golden spike at Promontory Point, Utah, sixty years ago, was given special recognition at this celebration, as were also Colonel Thompson of Alturas and Captain Applegate of Klamath Falls, both veterans of the Modoc War. Pete Sconchin, son of Captain Jack's accomplice and sole survivor of his war-like hand, was present, leading a band of Piutes and Pits. The day will never be forgotten by those whose privilege it was to be present and participate in the history making ceremonies.

Oakland Gets 1930 Grand Parlor.

Santa Cruz—At a meeting of the grand officers following the Admission Day, September 9, parade it was decided to hold the 1930 Grand Parlor in Oakland, and the Board of Grand Trustees was delegated to make the necessary arrangements. On this occasion the Grand Parlor itself will be the hostess.

Pioneer Garden Highly Commended.

Grass Valley—Grand President Esther R. Sullivan officially visited Manzanita No. 29 September 3. At a supper preceding the meeting Alynne McGagin responded to the toast, "Our Order," in the course of which she introduced Miss Sullivan to the many in attendance. District Deputy Margaret Fortier spoke for "Manzanita Parlor," and Past Grand President Alison F. Watt for "The Pioneers."

At the Parlor session two candidates were initiated, and a program was presented by Rosalie Carlson, Janet Sampson and Anthea Locklin. Grand President Sullivan delivered an inspirational address on the work of the Order, and there were remarks by Past Grand Watt, District Deputy Fortier and District Deputy Olive Vincent.

While in Grass Valley, Grand President Sullivan, accompanied by Mrs. Vinita Jones, viewed the pioneer garden in Memorial Park, dedicated some time ago by Manzanita, and declared it the prettiest of the twenty-seven similar projects in the state.

Old Timers Admission Day Guests.

Chico—Annie K. Bidwell No. 168 had its second summer picnic supper at the Hooker Oak pool August 30, special guests being those members who had birthdays during the summer—Mms. Josephine Alexander, Mattie Kesselring, Irene Henry, Eleanor Carlson and H. A. Hintz.

Admission Day, September 9, entertained forty-five guests, including those born in California prior to 1860 and those who came to the state before 1869. A program was presented and a delicious banquet was served at tables decorated in red, gold and white. President Annie Skelly was the toastmistress, and there were several brief talks. Mrs. Katherine Murray, the oldest woman in attendance, was presented with a lovely basket of dahlias.

The main decoration in the dining-room was a miniature covered wagon, drawn by two small wooden oxen, yoked together as in the days of old. A birthday cake, baked by Mrs. H. Estes, was decorated with gold holders containing red candles in the shape of the numbers 7 and 9, representing the number of years California has been one of the United States. The Parlor's reception committee included President Annie Skelly, Mms. H. Estes (general chairman), Anna Stockstill, H. A. Hintz and B. J. Hudspeth. Those who served in the banquet-room were Mms. Mahel Foss, Lois Heherlie, Edna Boyd, Josephine Alexander, Ruie Lyle, Irene Henry and Alice Bass.

Liberal Contribution.

Hollister—At the first meeting of Copa de Oro No. 105 following the summer recess, one candidate was initiated September 12. $25 was contributed to San Juan Bautista No. 179, which is sponsoring the erection of a concrete cross, to be lighted by electricity, upon a hill overlooking the mission town, at a spot where, in early days, the Indians were wont to worship the sun.

September 26 District Deputy Josephine Winn installed the officers of the Parlor, card playing following the ceremonies.

Three Generations Affiliated.

Pescadero—Grand President Esther R. Sullivan paid an official visit to Ano Nuevo No. 180 August 17. A banquet preceded the meeting. Lizzie Frey presided at the Parlor session, but during the ritual exemplification Ida N. Mesquite was given the honor of initiating her niece and cousin, also another candidate. Three generations now belong to the Parlor. Past Grand Sue J. Irwin delivered the congratulatory charge, and Past Grand Dr. Victory A. Derrick presented Harriet Williamson with an emblematic pin from her grandmother, Frances H. Moore. Dainty refreshments were served at the meeting's conclusion.

Among those present were Past Grand Presidents Addie L. Mosher, Dr. Victory A. Derrick and Sue J. Irwin, Grand Secretary Sallie R. Thaler, Grand Trustee Eldora McCarty, Supervising Deputy Anna Thuesen, District Deputies Marion Miramontes, Alice Mattei, Genevieve Commerford, Millie Brandt, Ann Saxon, Emily Taylor and Ida Mesquite, also delegations from Alta, El Monte, Palo Alto, Linda Rosa, Berkeley, Mission, Vista del Mar, Aloha and Piedmont Parlors. All enjoyed the remarks of Grand President Sullivan and the other grand officers, and all voiced their thanks for the efforts of the splendid committee of arrangements, Mrs. Mamie Dias, chairman.

Thirty-fifth Anniversary.

Tracy—El Pescadero No. 82 celebrated September 6 the thirty-fifth anniversary of its institution. The charter members—Emma Cox, Emma Frerichs, Claire Ludwig, Alice Murrell, Lena Steinmetz, Emma Von Sostien, Susie Frerichs and Anna Frerichs—were escorted by Marshal Bess Jackson to seats of honor and each was presented with a beautiful fern. To them Past Grand President Pearl Lamb extended the Parlor's good wishes.

The charter members, in turn, related many interesting reminiscences of the early days of No. 82. Group singing did much to promote the general sociability. Delicious refreshments were served.

Unusually Good Times.

San Bernardino—Lugonia No. 241 now devotes the first meeting of each month entirely to business matters, and the last meeting to social affairs. August 28 delicious refreshments were enjoyed. First Vice-President Eva Mae Bemis told of her experiences in Hawaii, where she spent her summer vacation, and three sisters, Viola, Dorothy and Evelyn Ahler, playing the piano, the violin and the cello, presented several instrumental numbers.

Admission Day, September 9, Arrowhead No. 110 N.S.G.W. entertained the members of No. 241 at Harlem Springs with a swim and lunch, and on the 12th Lugonia invited the Native Sons and the Pioneers to a weiner bake at the same place. Those who attended the two events had unusually good times.

September 25, Lugonia sponsored a "mity nice" dinner, at which Arrowhead was represented by more than one hundred members. October 9 the Parlor will have initiation, and arrangements are being made for a Halloween party, October 23.

Brilliant Affair.

Palo Alto—One of the most brilliant affairs in the records of Palo Alto No. 229 was the official visit August 19 of Grand President Esther R. Sullivan. Sixteen Parlors were represented at the gathering, and among the number in attendance were Grand Marshal Evelyn I. Carlson, Grand Trustee Sadie Brainard, Gladys Noce and Eldora McCarty, Grand Outside Sentinel Edna Briggs, Past Grand Presidents Eliza D. Keith, Margaret Grote-Hill and Dr. Louise C. Heilbron, Supervising Deputy Anna Thuesen and eleven district deputies.

Amid a hower of pink amarillas, made lovelier by the costumes of the officers, four candidates were initiated. Little June Rayner, as she artistically interpreted the flower song, presented each grand officer with a corsage. At the meeting's close a light supper was served in the banquet hall, and Grand President Sullivan cut the birthday cake signaling the Parlor's fifth institution anniversary. Gifts were presented Miss Sullivan, Past Grand Heilbron, Grand Trustee McCarty and District Deputy Anna Leu. The arrangements committee for the evening was composed of Grand Trustee McCarty (chairman), Rena Trimble, Mary Commerford, Helena Hansen, Genevieve Commerford and Corine Ray-

Collecting Loyalty Pledge.

Stockton—Joaquin No. 5 is preparing for a food sale October 5, and also for a monster whist party in November at which many turkeys will be given away. An active committee is collecting the Loyalty Pledge from the membership, and at the 1930 Grand Parlor the Parlor will, it is expected, report its quota fully paid.

Past Grand President Carrie Roesch-Durham has been spending a great deal of her time in and about her old home-town, Durham, Butte County.

Bon Voyage for Past Grand.

Oakland—Aloha No. 106 had a bon voyage party in honor of Past Grand Dr. Victory A. Derrick September 19, prior to her departure for Australia. The centerpiece for the banquet table was a steamer laden with flowers, and at each place was a miniature traveling bag containing candies and nuts. Pink was the color used in the decorations. Many gifts were presented Dr. Derrick, and four candidates were initiated.

Among other honored guests of the evening were Past Grand Presidents Ariana W. Stirling, Addie L. Mosher and Sne J. Irwin, Grand Secretary Sallie R. Thaler, Supervising Deputy Gertrude Morrison, District Deputy Mildren Brant and Miss Dorothy Derrick.

Sewing for Homeless.

Petaluma—Petaluma No. 222 perfected plans September 3 for several social functions, including a public whist party the 17th. A social time and refreshments were enjoyed after the meeting. In October a whist party for the benefit of the homeless children will be featured.

Members of the Parlor are also sewing for the homeless children, and just previous to the Santa Cruz Grand Parlor in June sent two boxes of clothes to the Central Committee. An invitation to join Sonoma No. 209 in entertaining Grand President Esther R. Sullivan on the occasion of her official visit has been accepted.

Early History Interesting.

Vallejo—Grand President Esther R. Sullivan was the honored dinner guest of Vallejo No. 195 August 25, the occasion being her official visit to the Parlor. Accompanying her were Grand Secretary Sallie R. Thaler, Past Grand President Margaret Grote-Hill and District Deputy Vina Heinz; delegations from Napa, Bakersfield and Georgetown also attended.

The business session was exceptionally well attended, and the grand officers spoke on subjects pertaining to the Order. The address of Miss Sullivan, with its reference to early California history, was particularly interesting. A charming gift was presented the Grand President, and honors were bestowed on the "mother" of the Parlor, Mrs. Jennie Ostello.

Native Sons of the Golden West

DOWNIEVILLE—DOWNIEVILLE No. 92 and Golden Nugget No. 94 (Sierra City) were hosts, September 7 and 8, to a Sierra County gathering of members of Parlors in Marysville, Oroville, Colusa, Lincoln, Nevada City, Grass Valley and Sacramento arranged in recognition of Admission Day.

The afternoon of the 8th a meeting of Fred H. Greely Assembly No. 6 Past Presidents Association was held in the beautiful pine forest at the base of the Sierra Buttes, and the ritual was exemplified by a team of past presidents with Walter H. McLeod of Hydraulic No. 56 (Nevada City) as president. Native Daughters served a chicken supper, following the ceremonies, in an adjoining apple orchard. Arthur Pride of Golden Nugget was the toastmaster, and among the speakers were Past Grand President Fred H. Greely, L. T. Sinnott and Peter J. Delay of Marysville, Dr. C. W. Chapman, R. H. P. Bigelow and G. H. Callinan of Nevada City, J. Emory Sutherland of Oroville, and Herman Fuller of Grass Valley. A dance in the evening was largely attended.

The following day the visitors went to Sierra City, where a picnic was featured. The many places of historic interest both in Downieville and Sierra City were visited, and the outing was unanimously declared a most enjoyable one.

Mission Restoration Funds Accumulating.

San Diego—San Diego No. 108 has adopted the following resolution of appreciation, presented by District Deputy Albert V. Mayrhofer, Past President Eugene Daney Jr. and Recording Secretary Dan E. Shaffer:

"Whereas, This Parlor, as a patriotic organization whose aims and purposes are the restoration and preservation of historical landmarks, feels at this time that it is fitting and proper that we should acknowledge our appreciation and gratitude to one citizen of our city who has rendered distinguished service in keeping fresh in the minds and hearts of our people the valiant deeds of the founders of San Diego; and whereas, we are particularly desirous of expressing to George W. Marston our thanks and gratitude for the splendid and unselfish interest and service he has displayed in preserving historical landmarks, dedicating to the city and its people one of our most beautiful parks surrounding a magnificent museum, wherein may soon be found relics and data depicting the early history of our enchanting and romantic city; and whereas we, the members of San Diego Parlor No. 108 Native Sons of the Golden West, deeply appreciate and realize the future importance of this most worthy and laudable undertaking, creating in our hearts the sincere gratitude which we desire to express by these premises; be it

"Resolved, That George W. Marston, our most illustrious and patriotic citizen, receive our thanks and gratitude for this most generous gift which he has given to our city; and he it further resolved, that this resolution be delivered by a committee of this Parlor to George W. Marston, that a copy be spread upon the minutes of this Parlor and that a copy hereof be handed to the press of San Diego."

District Deputy Mayrhofer reports the outlook most encouraging for raising the necessary funds to restore San Diego Mission, the first mission erected in California, in 1769. The San Diego Advertising Club has unanimously sponsored a campaign to raise $25,000, and the local newspapers have contributed $1,000 to the fund of $65,000 which will be required to restore the landmark. Other pledges include: Sisters of Nazareth, sent by the mother house in Europe, $25,000; Bishop Cantrell, $5,000; San Diego Native Sons and Native Daughters, $2,000; Grand Parlor N.S.G.W., $2,500. No work will be done, says Mayrhofer, until the full amount has been subscribed.

Annual Whiskerino Big Success.

Arcata—The annual whiskerino hall of Arcata No. 20 September 7 in recognition of Admission Day was attended by over 1,000. Joe Batich, among a field of ten, was awarded the prize for the best crop of whiskers. The judges were Wm. McLelland, W. J. Harp and Grand Outside Sentinel Horace J. Leavitt, the latter coming over from Weaverville, Trinity County, to attend the hall.

Previous to the dance there was a '49er parade, marshaled by John Sands, mounted upon a beautifully decorated black mare. Morris Nelson and George Hale, as cowboys, carried the Flag of the United States of America and the California State (Bear) Flag. In the parade were a stagecoach, a covered wagon, an open-faced phaeton and other relics of the days of old, as well as numerous marches appropriately costumed. A comic program followed the parade.

Arrangements for the whiskerino were made by the following committees: General—Dr. Noah Stromberg (chairman), Boh Titlow, Curtis Monroe, H. Spellenberg and Paul Kjer. Parade—Curtis Monroe (chairman), Irvin Fleckenstein and George Liscom. Dance—Robert Titlow (chairman), E. Spellenberg and Ed Byard. Decoration—Paul Kjer (chairman), Stanley Bonniksen and Ernest Henry. Other active workers were Jack Hamilton, Wm. Peters and Len Yacom.

Ritual Contest For Trophy.

San Rafael—The third and final competition of a series of ritualistic contests between Mount Tamalpais No. 64 and Sea Point No. 158 of Sausalito is scheduled to take place in the hall of Mount Tamalpais November 18. The trophy, a beautiful silver plaque now in possession of No. 64, will be awarded to the winning team on that occasion. An invitation has been extended to Grand President Charles L. Dodge to be present. A large class of candidates will be initiated, and elaborate preparations are being made for a banquet to be served in honor of the occasion.

Grand Trustee A. W. Garcelon and District Deputy J. S. Rosa Jr. visited the Parlor September 16, and witnessed the exemplification of the ritual by the officers; they pronounced it most satisfactory. Grand Trustee Garcelon also expressed great satisfaction with the condition of the Parlor, both as to membership and finances, due, he said, to the "Big Five" spirit in Mount Tamalpais.

Must, and Will.

San Bernardino—Arrowhead No. 110 is hushing over with enthusiasm and the members are kept busy attending the functions arranged in their behalf. There's plenty to amuse, and work also, for Arrowhead has determined to become prominently identified with the more-than-500 class of Parlors. The September bulletin of the Parlor, issued by Recording Secretary R. W. Brazelton, wound up with this:

"Listen, good members! We must have 500 members before October 1st in order to have our Worthy Grand President Dodge visit us in October. Sure we can do it! But not by wishing. You get one, I get one, we all get one—and 500." So, Grand President Charles L. Dodge will undoubtedly visit Arrowhead in October, as the Parlor can and will have the necessary membership by the first of the month. [What this Parlor is accomplishing, every other Parlor can accomplish, through determination and co-operation.—Editor.]

Arrowhead and Lugonia No. 241 N.D.G.W. have joined with other local organizations in arranging for an historical pageant, to be presented October 20, in honor of the Pioneers who settled the San Bernardino Valley. It is planned to make the pageant an annual event.

add $2.50 to the $2.50 offered by Grand President Charles L. Dodge for new members. All candidates must be initiated prior to November 1.

Past President J. J. Niebur, now residing in San Francisco, was present September 16 and gave an interesting talk on the early history of the Parlor, in which he formerly was a "live wire." Refreshments were served by a committee composed of C. R. Kistner, G. W. Kausen and Jos. Shissman.

Spirit High.

Palo Alto—Palo Alto No. 216 and Palo Alto No. 229 N.D.G.W. appeared in the Admission Day, September 9, parade in Santa Cruz in Spanish attire and took home as a prize a handsome gold cup. This is the second cup in possession of these two Parlor, and the spirit is high among the members. "Los Angeles in 1931" is now the watchword.

Order's History Traced.

Stockton—Grand Trustee Frank M. Laue officially visited Stockton No. 7 August 26 and in the course of an address traced the history of the Order. Other speakers were Past Grand President Hubert R. McNoble, District Deputy Walter Soloman, G. M. Steele and Arthur Adams of Lodi, M. V. Wilson of Modesto and C. J. Frerichs of Tracy. With W. A. Strong as president, the Parlor's ritual team initiated a class of ten candidates.

Law T. Freitas, chairman of a committee of No. 7 engaged in constructing a swimming pool for children at the preventorium in Murphys, Calaveras County, reported the work practically completed.

Deer Supper Attracts.

Fort Bragg—Alder Glen No. 200 received an official visit from Grand Trustee A. W. Garcelon September 13, and initiated a class of candidates. A deer supper was an attraction, Clarence Simpson and Nick Cox having been successful in their Humboldt County hunting trip.

The Admission Day ball sponsored by the Parlor September 7 was a success in every particular.

All Night Dance for Kiddies.

Weaverville—October 19, Mount Bally No. 87 and Eltapome No. 55 N.D.G.W. will sponsor an all-night dance for the benefit of the homeless children. A good time is assured, and "peppy" music will be provided.

WELL-KNOWN NATIVE SONS PASS TO THE GRAND PARLOR ON HIGH.

Chiles Valley (Napa County)—Henry L. Chiles, son of James B. Chiles, who came to California in 1841 and seven years later settled in that part of Napa County now designated as Chiles Valley, died August 28 survived by a wife and three children. He was born at Rutherford in 1865, and was affiliated with Saint Helena Parlor No. 53 N.S.G.W.

Jackson (Amador County)—John Rience Huberty, for twenty-two years clerk and auditor of this county, died August 29 survived by a wife and seven children. He was born at San Andreas, Calaveras County, in 1867, and was affiliated with, and long the recording secretary of, Excelsior Parlor No. 31 N.S.G.W.

San Francisco—Judge Bernard J. Flood, born in this city in 1879, died September 9 survived by a wife. He was affiliated with Stanford Parlor No. 76 N.S.G.W., and represented that Parlor at several sessions of the Grand Parlor.

CALIFORNIA'S 1928 MINERAL PRO- DUCTION MUCH BELOW 1927.

Compilation of final returns from mineral producers of California for 1928 by the statistical section of the State Division of Mines, under the direction of Walter W. Bradley, state mineralogist, shows the total value for the year to have been $332,224,233, a decrease of $34,557,161 from the 1927 total of $366,781,394. There were fifty-four different mineral substances, exclusive of a segregation of the various stones grouped under gems; and all of the fifty-eight counties of the state contributed to the list.

Los Angeles County led in total production, being credited with $144,835,988; then follow Kern County, $43,064,781; Orange County, $39,655,177; Ventura County, $31,116,675. Production of oil, "black gold," accounts for the leadership of these counties in mineral valuations.

NATIVE DAUGHTER NEWS

At the conclusion of the Parlor ceremonies refreshments were served, the tables being decorated in gold and white, matching the golden satin capes and the white gowns of the officers, Anita McKenzie and Agnes Hunter were hostesses of the evening, and the banquet committee consisted of Elvina Woodard (chairman), Viola Claus and Minerva Gold.

Past Grand Honored.

Renio (Nevada State)—Past Grand President Emma Lou Humphrey was a visitor last month to Welsler, Idaho, where she was the speaker for the General Federation of Women's Clubs at the Idaho State Convention of Women's Clubs, September 17-20.

Tuesday, at a luncheon, she spoke on "What Volunteer Agencies Can Contribute to the State's Public Welfare," and Wednesday she presented the public welfare program of the General Federation, stressing especially the work of the division of which she is the chairman, child welfare.

Past Presidents Guests.

Sonoma—Past presidents were honor-guests of Sonoma No. 209 at a recent social function. President Gertrude Groskopf presided, and District Deputy Mary Vogt was also a guest. As their names were called each past president was presented with a favor and a dainty handkerchief. Refreshments were served at tables decorated with yellow candles and gold-toned flowers. At the plates were cards giving hints on etiquette, and the reading of these caused much merriment.

Annual Get-Together.

Asilomar—The annual get-together session and over-night party of the Parlor of Santa Cruz, Monterey and San Benito Counties will be held here October 26 and 27, opening with a 6 o'clock dinner Saturday evening. Candidates from the various Parlor will be initiated by a select team. A program of stunts, musical numbers and brief talks will follow, and the evening will be concluded with a midnight frolic. Sunday will be devoted to beach sports.

All members of the Order will be welcomed with pleasure. Reservations should be made, however, several days preceding the gathering.

Pleas for Landmarks Preservation.

San Jose—The hall of San Jose No. 81 was lavishly decorated with cut flowers on the occasion of the official visit of Grand President Esther R. Sullivan, August 15. Six candidates were initiated. Among the many guests of the evening were Past Grand President Dr. Louise C. Heilhorn, Grand Secretary Sallie R. Thaler, Grand Trustees Sadie Brainard and Eldora McCarty, and District Deputy Hulda Buehren.

A novel idea was carried out in the presentation of the gift to the Grand President. While Mrs. Marjorie Ganong sang an original song, "Esther Rose," Miss Sullivan was handed a beautiful basket of flowers in which was hidden a piece of silver of her favorite design. Mrs. Nettie Richmond, on behalf of Past Presidents Association No. 3, also extended greetings to the honored guest and presented her with a silver gift. An interesting address was given by Grand President Sullivan, in which she spoke of the aims and projects of the Order and briefly re-

Resolved: That it is a tender privilege to pay loving tribute to the memory of our departed sister, who was a charter member of Plumas Pioneer Parlor, an honored Pioneer of California, a devoted mother and a beloved sister, whose passing we deeply mourn; we miss her sadly from her accustomed place, but bow reverently in humble submission to the will of our Heavenly Father, "He who doeth all things well," be it also resolved, that a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family of our departed sister, also that a copy be sent to The Grizzly Bear Magazine for publication, and a copy spread upon the minutes of our Parlor.

That she is dead,—she is just away.

Valdemar C. Iverson, master mariner, a loyal Native of California and a citizen whose life was an inspiration to those who knew him, has crossed the bar into the haven whence he will not return.

His was a life of the sea, which had its beginning at the Port of San Francisco and came to a close at San Pedro, the Harbor of Los Angeles. Many voyages to distant lands failed to alienate his love for his Golden State, his family and his host of friends ashore. His passing was the first to occur among the members of our Parlor. Be it therefore

PREPARED EXPRESSLY FOR THE GRIZZLY BEAR BY M. H. ELLIS

THE FARM RELIEF BOARD IS FUNCTIONING. What will be the result of its operations, only time can tell, but present indications are that the huge credit supplied it by Congress is not going to be wasted. Out here in California, relief has been supplied by a short yield of the specialty crops; prices are higher than usual, and those farmers with good crops are going to make real money. Whether the Farm Relief Board would have lifted the raisin growers from the slough of despond this year without a short crop, is a question. That prices are going to be about double those of last year, is a fact—and it is the fact that is particularly interesting to the growers. Wheat prices have gone up; that may be a result of natural causes. Other crop prices have advanced; it seems almost too much of a general increase all along the line to be a coincidence.

However, with a group of the best minds in business and agriculture working on the problems of the farmer, some results must surely come. The trouble in California has been over-production, or call it under-consumption if you will; the fact remains that the crops have been too large for the markets on which they have been sold. Now, it appears, a serious effort is to be made to spread crops over a larger buying territory.

And the State of California is not depending alone upon the federal activity. Right now the University of California has one of its best men looking into market possibilities in the Orient; the Giannini Foundation in the College of Agriculture has secured Asher Hobson to do a similar job in Europe—as soon as the Federal Farm Board returns him.

There has come a general recognition of the problem of agriculture; that prosperity cannot be legislated into it. Consequently, the rational thing is being done, that of helping the farmer to help himself, of finding ways and means of disposing of the crop that has been planted, in some instances not wisely but too well.

USING FERTILIZER.

Don't spend too much time and money fertilizing the orchard from now until spring. When the leaves are pretty well off the trees or are dropping, the sap flow upward has stopped. Food for trees must be made available in the leaves, which are the real stomachs of the trees, and when there are no leaves there is little use in putting on fertilizer. It may not be entirely wasted, but it will be found more efficient and more economical to use fertilizers, particularly commercial fertilizers, in the spring.

This does not mean that barnyard manure should not be hauled out and spread on the ground this winter, for that is a good practice; the rains carry much of the plant food into the soil. Preferably, though, it should be turned under at once to conserve the most of it. Fertilization of trees is a good practice, one that must be adopted and rigidly followed if the best results are to be obtained. Soil won't give forever without receiving something in return.

PLANTING COVER CROPS.

There's no advice regarding cover crops that will apply in all parts of the state, except to plant them. When, what kind and how must depend upon the soil, climate and other local conditions. This much may be said, however: plant a cover crop in time that the first rains will bring it along; plant the kind that has proved best in the community, a legume by all means; and let it grow just as long in the spring as it can without jeopardizing the moisture supply. If irrigation is possible, planting can be done earlier with profit to the crop.

The more nearly mature the crop when it is turned under, the better the results. Disc it under, if possible; that's a better practice than plowing it under in a mat. Cover crops are invaluable in keeping up soil fertility and adding to the tilth of an orchard. They may be supplemented by commercial fertilizers, in many cases they should be, but they give nitrogen cheaply and add the humus that inorganic fertilizers cannot supply.

NUTRITIONAL ROUP DANGEROUS.

Nutritional roup has proved a dangerous malady in the laying flock. At this time of the year, when green feed is not plentiful, it may appear as a result of lack of the green in the ration. Nutritional roup is evidenced by sore eyes, the lids being stuck together with a cheesy sort of discharge within the lids. There will be no scab, which differentiates the disease easily from chickenpox. See that the fowls have plenty of succulent green feed, five pounds a day to a hundred birds. If this is not available, feed two or three pounds of codliver or fish oil in a hundred pounds of mash until green feed comes. Nutritional roup will decimate a flock very quickly.

FROST INSURANCE.

Just now it appears as if the revenue from this year's fruit crop, short because of frost damage last spring, might be greater than that from the full crop last year. That's good news for the state; it is not so good for the orchardist who lost his crop as a result of the unprecedented and freakily cold weather early this year. Those who have fruit are getting good prices; those who have no fruit are getting nothing. Most of those who have a good crop are getting it as a result of being favored when the frost hit; some are selling a good crop, however, with neighbors all around almost without fruit. They had orchard heaters.

Now, orchard heaters are not an absolute protection, but in most instances they will save a crop in most districts. The farmer who lost his crop last spring can figure now whether he can afford them. With radio warnings, telephone service from cities and towns, the orchardist known pretty well when to expect a frost. A thermostat connected to an alarm clock will always give plenty of warning. It is in the years when frost comes that prices are best. It is then the heaters return money invested in them. And now is the time to get ready, for there is pretty sure to be a heavy demand for some sort of orchard protection this winter, before next blossom time.

GET PEACH BORERS NOW.

Before the soil gets too cool, preferably before irrigation starts, get after the peach borers with paradichlorobenzene, or P.D.B. as it is commonly called. Level the ground around the tree, and using about an ounce of the crystals per tree, spread them in a narrow ring about two inches from the bark, clear around the trunk. Heap the soil in a mound around the tree, about six to ten inches, firming it fairly well. Don't let the material come into contact with the bark. The warmer the soil the better the fuming will be; the soil should be dry, too. Better not irrigate until about two weeks after applying P.D.B., and if irrigation has already moistened the soil, let it dry for about two weeks. The fumes will play havoc with the young borers in the root crown and in bark crevices ready to begin their depredations.

WORMY DRIED FRUIT.

Hot water kills worms in dried fruit and doesn't hurt the fruit, if the practice is properly carried out. There should be no trouble with wormy dried fruit, if it is well cared for; if the worms do appear, the hot water treatment will get them. In the first place, see that there is no old dried fruit around in which moths and beetles have bred. If the premises have been kept clean of these insect pests, of course there will be no trouble.

To be safe, after the dried fruit has been taken from the trays and sweated for a couple of weeks, dip it in boiling water for three minutes, then let it dry a short time and pack it in bug-tight containers. Resulphuring during the season, or fumigating with carbon bisulphide will keep out the worms, if there is reason to suspect they may have gained entry, or the hot water treatment may be repeated. If dipped and packed correctly, however, there need be no fear of infestation during the winter or spring.

BLACK END ROT INARCHING.

The discovery that black end rot of pears is due mainly to the use of Japanese roots, has led to a rush to change the rootstocks by inarching. Before the pear grower decides upon this course, however, he will do well to consider several factors. First, three or four or more seedlings must be used for inarching. Their cost, and that of the work of inarching, is considerable. If the land is not irrigated, tanking will be required two or three times during the summer for two or three seasons. What is to become of the old root? Will it decay and carry the rot into the heart of the tree? Shall it be cut off, girdled or left to carry on? None of these questions has been satisfactorily answered, and several growers incline to the belief that interplanting with trees budded on the desired roots will prove cheaper and more satisfactory.

AIR IN HEN HOUSES.

No one has as yet devised an automatic system of ventilation in laying houses, so that the hens will get just the amount of fresh air they need. The poultryman more than likely raises and lowers the windows in his house; he must do the same for his hens. Roof insulation will not care for the ventilation, nor will any arrangement of dropping board or roosts. Ventilation must be cared for carefully, if best results are to be obtained.

Electric heating will help, although it may cost money for installation and some for operation. There will be a reduction in labor costs of cleaning the dropping board less often, however, if there is a heating system, and it may pay for itself easily. Roof insulation, an effectively installed and controlled ventilation system, augmented if possible by heating, will give the best results.

EARLY PRUNING INADVISABLE.

With the fruit off the trees, many orchardists are prone to begin pruning, even before the leaves are off. The practice accomplishes no good purpose, other than to remove dead wood or that infected by disease. The leaves are busy manufacturing food for the tree, digesting it for the winter and spring use. Until they fall, they should be left there. And there is no reason for hurrying the pruning operations. December and January are the months in which this work is best done; even early February is better than before the middle of November. The trees should be pruned, by all means; they should be pruned, however, when they are dormant.

FAILURE IN BUDDING ORANGES.

When budding mature orange trees, care must be taken if the operation is to be a success. In the first place, don't get buds from wood that is too old. True, the buds should be large, but they may be taken from water shoots or suckers. Pare down the bark where the bud is to be inserted, so that it will not be smothered by the thick bark growing over it. Make the spot scraped down small, about half an inch across.

THE HOME GARDEN.

With the spread of the idea that the farm is a factory and that the farmer should specialize in turning out one crop, has come the attendant evil of neglect of the home garden. One real cause for the need of farm relief is the passing of the old-time diversified farm, where the farmer raised nearly everything he needed to eat. The home garden, even the home orchard, is sadly neglected these days for the specialty crop. Not only does it furnish a real complement to the diet with green vegetables so necessary; it also teaches the value of intensified and diversified farming, better tillage methods, better farm practices all around. A small garden, well planned and cared for, will furnish necessary vitamins all year in most parts of California; a few berry vines and a well-balanced family orchard will pay better dividends than the trees of the commercial orchard they replace.

HARVESTING WALNUTS.

Proper harvesting methods will go a long way toward keeping quality where it should be; careless handling of the nuts at this time is bound to result in inferior quality and consequent low returns. Early maturing nuts should be shaken from the trees before they hang too long in the hull; frequent pickings on the ground during the harvest season should be made. Get the nuts from the tree or ground as soon as they mature, and out of their hulls. A little extra cost in harvesting will be more than repaid by increased revenue through quality.

CLEAN UP THE TRASH.

Trash, litter and refuse have no place about the orchard, or anywhere about the farm. The crop is all off the trees now; mummies should be picked just as religiously as the good fruit, and destroyed so that any infestation may be avoided. Rubbish piles, trash in corners, dead weeds about tree trunks and similar places furnish refuge and breeding places for important enemies of the orchard and the pocketbook. Such places should not be overlooked; now is the time to get rid of them before any breeding occurs and larvae migrate to cause damage. This is one farm chore that may be done in the lull between harvesting and winter pruning and spraying.

CONTROL OF BEAN WEEVIL.

The bean weevil has become a serious pest in California, not only to the plant from which it gets its name, but as well to all those legumes that bear seeds large enough for the development of the insect. Breeding continues in storage and generation follows generation until the entire seed may be eaten up. Warm, damp storage places favor the development of the pest; dry places, either hot or cold, retard development. Control measures include these: early harvest to preclude infestation in the fields; clean, light, dry storage; fumigation in airtight container with from five to ten pounds of carbon disulphide to 1,000 cubic feet of space, or heating to 145 degrees for two hours where the infestation is known to be present. If beans are heated or fumigated, it will be necessary, of course, to keep them from weevils to prevent reinfestation.

OIL IN FALL SPRAY.

Fall spray of lime-sulphur for the pear leaf blister mite can be made more effective by the addition of from two to four percent of high-grade winter oil emulsion. Lime-sulphur alone will control this pest, but the addition of the oil makes the spray less caustic and consequently the sprayers are encouraged to do a better job, as their hands and faces are less affected. If scale are present, this mixture becomes even more effective and kills two birds at once. About seven percent lime-sulphur with five percent oil emulsion will do a better job on blister mite than lime-sulphur alone; the added protection against scale makes the added cost worth while.

THE BIG CITY THAT KNOWS HOW

SEPTEMBER 8, PAST GRAND PRESIDENT Mamie G. Peyton of Stockton acted as hostess at the monthly breakfast at the Native Daughters Home in San Francisco. It was with regret, she said, that she announced the absence of Past Grand President Carrie Roesch-Durham, who had also been appointed to serve, and had sent her loving greetings. The breakfast began with Past Grand President Eliza D. Keith asking the blessing. Then followed the introductions of the grand officers, members of the Home Committee and others.

Mrs. Peyton opened with: "Mid pleasures and palaces, through which we may roam, be it ever so humble there's no place like home; a charm from the skies seems to hallow us there, which, seek through the world, is ne'er met with elsewhere." She told of the need of a home for Native Daughters—how much it meant to the young and the elderly members—and said the Native Daughters Home was dearer to her than other projects of the Order and it would ever be her aim to assist in making of it a haven of refuge for the stranger and a loving abode for those who might some day seek to call it home.

Dr. Mariana Bertola was then introduced, the hostess saying: "To our pioneer members, the Order of Native Daughters meant something more than a fraternal organization. They were young and energetic and looked into the future; they had high ideals. Some, perhaps, called them dreams, but those dreams have brought us zeal, and loyalty to our Order, state and country. Today we have with us one of those members, one of the most widely known and best beloved members, Past Grand President Bertola, the able chairman of the Home Committee, who has ever been the leader to show the members of the Order the way to make possible the building of this monument."

Dr. Bertola then told how so much had been accomplished, how much good publicity the Order had received from the Home and the monthly breakfasts; and especially were the gentlemen invited, many of whom were present. She spoke of the needs of the Home and urged all members to pay their Loyalty Pledge and thereby meet the indebtedness. The week before, she said, she had received a check from a well-known businessman of San Francisco for $100, and would perhaps hear from him again with another check. As Dr. Bertola closed, the hostess, in thanking her, said: "May the future bring you gifts that are lasting and blest; contentment and joy; hope, love and heart's rest."

Mrs. Peyton then said that one of the objects of this breakfast was so that the members of Joaquin Parlor No. 5 of Stockton might make a pilgrimage to the Home to dedicate a room for its members. In the lobby of the Home stands a beautiful silken flag, presented to the Grand Parlor held in Stockton in 1903 by the Parlor at the suggestion of Emma Hilke. The organizer of Joaquin was then introduced, Miss Hannah Gray, a dearly beloved member, and in responding she wished the Home every success, and said the Parlor had grown to be one of the largest and richest in the Order. In selecting a room it was deemed a privilege and pleasure to choose one adjoining Alta Parlor No. 3 of San Francisco, as these two of the oldest Parlors had always had so much work together in the past. The charming young president of Joaquin, Miss Theresa Costa, then dedicated the room.

Mrs. Mary Merrill, a member of the Home family who has been spending some months in San Francisco, expressed pleasure in assisting at the dedication, and presented a plaque, to be hung in the room, bearing these lines: "Sleep Daughter of the Golden West, sleep well beneath these Western skies, and Joaquin Parlor's blessings, dear, will gather round you when you rise. May all your hopes be realized, and all your fondest dreams come true; and now we say good night, sweet maid, good night with love, good night to you." She also paid a glowing tribute to Mrs. Hawkins, a member of Santa Cruz Parlor No. 26, matron of the Home. For the Home Committee, Past Grand President Addie L. Mosher, head of the room unit, accepted the room.

Among those in attendance were thirty members of Joaquin Parlor, many with their husbands; Grand Trustees May Givens, Irma Laird and Eldora McCarty; Past Grand Presidents Dr. Mariana Bertola, Margaret Grote-Hill, Eliza D. Keith and Addie L. Mosher; Clair Ludwig, Elizabeth Douglass and Millie Tietjen, members Home Committee. All responded with charming remarks. Mrs. Peyton then thanked all present for making the breakfast such a success, and closed with this toast: "Here's to the Home, for you and for me; here's to the Home, the haven to be; here's to the Home, where the weary shall rest; here's to the Home the Native Daughters have blessed; here's to the Home for the strong and the weak; here's to the Home the Native Daughters shall seek; here's to the Home made nappy and free; here's to the Home for you and for me."

NEW TRAFFIC SYSTEM IN VOGUE.

San Francisco's new traffic signal system along Market street was officially placed in operation September 11 at a celebration arranged by a committee of officials and citizens.

Under the new system pedestrians follow signals for their exclusive guidance set upon green posts, and pay no attention to the vehicular signals.

ATTRACTIVE PICTURE.

Dolores Parlor No. 169 N.D.G.W. already has under way plans for participation in the Thanksgiving Eve masquerade ball for the benefit of the homeless children. The Parlor is striving to comply with Grand President Esther R. Sullivan's request for an increase of membership, and October 6 will initiate a class of six candidates. The Parlor participated with Dolores Parlor No. 208 N.S.G.W. in the Santa Cruz Admission Day parade. Thirty-eight members of No. 169 and twenty-four of No. 208 presented an attractive picture of yellow and white and received much applause.

Miss Ellen Painter, a member of Dolores, was united in marriage August 17 to L. Raymond Rahill at the N.D.G.W. Home. The hall was attractively decorated with greens and flowers, and many friends of the couple were present to wish them good fortune. The gowns of the bridal party were extremely smart. Following a honeymoon in the south, the couple are residing in San Francisco.

ENGAGED IN SPLENDID WORK.

The child welfare committee of Twin Peaks Parlor No. 185 N.D.G.W. made its fifth visit of the year to the children in the tubercular ward of the San Francisco hospital September 7. Grizzly bears made of brown cardboard and holding bags of candy were presented the children, also child life magazines and scrapbooks made from comic papers. The children had decorated their wards and prepared a program in honor of the committee, who were told their visits were greatly appreciated, as most frequently the children are remembered at Christmas time and then forgotten for the balance of the year. Much credit is due Hannah Sandell, chairwoman of this committee, for her splendid work. The veteran welfare committee presented a program at the Letterman hospital September 28, Kay Jensen being in charge.

The homeless children sewing club of the Parlor had its first meeting of the term at the home of Merle Sandell, and it is certain another box of fine clothes will be presented the Central Committee. Five candidates have been initiated this term. Twin Peaks is very proud of its drill team, Connie Siberian captain, which won second prize at the Santa Cruz Admission Day celebration.

AUTO ASSOCIATION'S ANNUAL MEET.

The annual meeting of the California State Automobile Association, with headquarters in San Francisco, will be held October 19. At that time the officers will render to the 88,000 members reports for the past fiscal year.

STATE N.S. PAST PRESIDENTS

TO GATHER IN OROVILLE.

Oakland—San Francisco Assembly No. 1 Past Presidents Association N.S.G.W. came over from San Francisco September 23 and initiated eight candidates for East Bay Counties Assembly No. 3. The ritual team included: Frank C. Welheim, Ben Orengo, W. Stobing, A. Gudehus, Fred Amark, H. Rickliffs, J. Silvester and Fred Kane.

The General Assembly of the Past Presidents Association convenes at 2:30 p. m. of October 19 at Oroville, Butte County. Fred H. Greely Assembly No. 6 will be the host, and Frank W. Boyle and L. Sinnott are making the arrangements. Several of the grand officers of the Order of Native Sons will be in attendance.

East Bay Counties Assembly will be represented by the following delegates: Richard M. Hamh, Tom Palmer, James J. Dignan, Frank Roemer, L. Bruck and Walter Hayes.

PRESIDENT ENTERTAINS.

Willows (Glenn County)—Supervising Deputy Anna Nixon-Armstrong, accompanied by Mms. Richter and Hefner, visited Berryessa Parlor No. 192 N.D.G.W. September 16 and installed the officers. At the close of the meeting President Mae Houston entertained at her home. Games were played and refreshments were served.

HOME BEAUTIFUL

chiliad of years. This has been accomplished by co-operation—everyone for the "cause," no one for herself. Envy, jealousy, self-aggrandizement must disappear when everyone gives her best to a magnificent project—a home for young women, a home for older women, where quiet, beauty of environment and a cultured atmosphere prevail. Our Home contributes to the economic value of California; it increases the social position of the entire Order in the state, and will thus enhance the standing of our membership. From Margaret A. Kelley of El Dorado Parlor No. 186, Georgetown, the following letter, under date of Kelsey, El Dorado County, July 30, has been received:

"Dr. Mariana Bertola—Dear Friend: I visited the Home, as I promised, to give myself pleasure on my return from Santa Cruz (Grand Parlor) on Friday. I found about twenty-five other delegates bent on the same mission. I knew that I should find a good-looking, well-furnished building, with the gates open, which permitted me to walk in, unattended, as many delegates were being shown through the upper doors at the time.

"However, I was not prepared to find such luxury, such beauty, such quiet elegance, with a private home atmosphere. From the moment my eyes rested on the beautiful hand-carved oaken hall seat, the rich carpets, the splendid mantels, the mirrors, fixtures, tapestries, most appropriate pictures, a dining-room so unlike 'the institution one,' the restful homey living-room, the plump inviting beds—all were entrancing to me.

"These words came to me: 'the half has never been told.' How could a committee report on such perfection when each had so much interest at heart? A modest appreciation of their efforts and ability kept them from going into raptures over the whole. How did you do it all in such a short time? I think you must have worked almost to prostration. Then the strain of keeping a harmony of color, as well as of action.

"The court garden and the ground garden off the low floor are entrancing. It is all so lovely. I am sure everyone felt just as I did. We loitered just as long as we possibly could, such repose and delightful atmosphere pervades every inch of it. We were not disappointed in receiving lunch, for we all had a good social meeting while lounging in those elegant chairs. We all agreed that we would have to stand on tip-toes to add anything to the already harmoniously furnished Home. It should be called 'Home and Club House.' I cannot imagine anything more beautiful than a dais for the young people in such a beautiful setting. Then the meeting-hall—we were surprised in that. No one reported on it adequately. Then the matron and boarders whom we met were charming in their hospitality.

"I have reported to my Parlor and am sure we will 'come through' with all of our pledges. Our Parlor was delighted to receive six percent interest on the loan to the Native Daughter Home fund. I think if $2.50 the first year had been set as our goal, everyone would have 'come through.' 'One dollar down and a dollar a week' has gotten into our blood, even though it costs more in the end. If every delegate had gone to see the Home, I am sure she would return to her Parlor just as enthusiastic as we. I have sent two of our members to visit the Home, as they were going to Oakland for vacations. Then the location is so open, and those lights for a block, all tend to make it an ideal spot to live in.

"The indebtedness on that building will be cleared in two years. That will be a good record. That magnificent club house will give a tone and prestige to the Native Daughter organization, not only in San Francisco, but throughout the state. I know you are a busy woman, but I felt I must write you my impression of our beautiful Home and club house."

HISTORIC SPOT SHOULD BE #### INCLUDED STATE PARK SYSTEM.

"Last month the Grand Parlor of the Native Sons of the Golden West," says the San Juan, San Benito County, "Mission News," "placed a plaque at Santa Barbara on the spot where General John C. Fremont in the early days of California history raised the American flag. Many of the newspapers of the state carried stories of the affair, because the people of the state are interested in preserving California's history. Here in our little city of history, where can be found more of California's romantic history than anywhere else in our Golden State, we have the spot where General John C. Fremont first raised the American flag on this Western coast.

"This historic spot, at the top of the highest peak of the Gabilan Range, has been marked by the Native Sons and Daughters of San Benito County. It was from this peak, now known as Fremont's Peak, that General Fremont defied the orders of General Castro when he was ordered by the later to leave this section of the country. From the top of this historical peak the scenic views are so majestic that words cannot explain them. Fremont's Peak of late has been visited by many of the members of the State Park Commission, and each visitor has marveled at the scenic beauty.

"It is the hope of many hundreds of California's history lovers, as well as the people of this county, to some day see this historical spot made one of California's state parks."

Santa Cruz's Anniversary—The one hundred and nineteenth anniversary of the founding of the City of Santa Cruz will be celebrated October 19.

State Bar To Meet—The California Bar Association will have its annual meeting at Del Monte, Monterey County, October 10, 11 and 12.

CALIFORNIA'S WONDERLAND

CITY AND COUNTY

ADMISSION DAY IN LOS ANGELES was observed by the Native Sons and the Native Daughters, co-operating with La Mesa Club, at the site of the battle of La Mesa, near Vernon avenue and Downey road. It was here, January 9, 1847, an American force under command of Commodore Robert Stockton defeated the Mexican forces, and a splendid monument now marks the site.

J. A. McNaughton, vice-president and general manager of the Los Angeles Union Stock Yards, welcomed the 1,200 who participated in the festivities, which consisted of addresses, musical numbers, a barbecue and dancing as outlined in The Grizzly Bear for September. The main feature was the planting and the dedication of a sequoia tree, presented by La Mesa Club.

Senator George J. Burns who, while not a native of California, is in hearty accord with the aims and purposes of the Order of Native Sons of the Golden West and has rendered invaluable services in the campaign against the yellow peril, made the presentation address, in the course of which he said:

"At a time so remote that the sounding line of history is insufficient to plumb its depth the branch of the human family of which we are the descendant, overflowing from the womb of its nativity on the Asian plateau, began its trek toward the setting sun. . . . We are standing upon the confines of the White man's migration, upon the site of the battlefield which ended his long trek. It is eternally fitting that we commemorate the event and the day this great state came into the union. . . .

"The earth is sanctified, not by its commercial productiveness alone, but rather to the extent that it has been the arena in which man has fought that the world may be a better place in which to live. A battlefield is not a shrine because of the number killed upon its soil, but because of the issues there accepted in the conflict; not to the extent that it was a military achievement, but because of the inspiration of its page in history. In this commonwealth on this far shore which has honored me, as California has honored you by permitting you to be born within its confines, there stands a granite shaft which commemorates a military defeat, but a moral victory so great that it causes the blood of every patriot to tingle. . . .

"Before the actors in ancient history had been gathered to their fathers, there thrived in the ravines of California the oldest living thing now upon the earth, the sequoia tree, a symbol of majesty, strength, solidity, beauty and endurance. It is the symbol of all we can wish for our state and nation. I am honored by the great privilege of committing to your care, in the name of La Mesa Club, this tree, a member of the family whose genealogy makes that of the proudest human seem but a thing of yesterday. May its sight strengthen our resolution to emulate the virtues for which it stands; may its sight make us more worthy citizens of California."

"THEY HAD TO SEE PARIS."

Five love affairs and sex situations galore are features of Will Rogers' comedy-romance of youth, "They Had To See Paris," now showing at the Fox Carthay Circle Theater. There's an Oklahoma boy-and-girl romance; a French society marriage arrangement in Paris; papa-mama love between Will Rogers and his screen wife, Irene Rich. Oh, yes, and one must not forget the "wild oats" mesalliance between a millionaire American of twenty who wants to be real Bohemian in Paris and sets up a Latin-quarter establishment with a pretty petite "amie."

Even Rogers "goes Paris" when his boy chides him with being "puritanical." Fifi Dorsay was especially imported from Paris as Rogers' playmate in "They Had To See Paris." Fifi and her Persian kitty inveigle Rogers into their apartment—and from then on the talking pictures, it is said, have never witnessed such continuous gales of merriment, innocent laughter and hilarious situations.

Carli Elinor, managing director of the Circle Theatre, declares that never in the theatre's history has a long-run feature had such start-to-finish comedy. He is particularly enthusiastic over the fact that Will Rogers sings "I Could Do It For You" to Fifi.

BIG GATHERING NATIVE DAUGHTERS.

Much interest has been aroused in Native Daughter circles from Santa Barbara to San Diego by the announcement of Past Grand President Grace S. Stoermer that there will be a joint meeting of all the Parlors in California South at the Elk Clubhouse, Los Angeles, November 23. The gathering will be preceded by a banquet.

A ritual team has been formed of all the district deputies, augmented by the officers of Parlors, and a large class of candidates presented by all the Parlors will be initiated. To the Parlor having the largest number of members in attendance, Miss Stoermer will present a silver trophy.

This is the first time an attempt has been made to bring the southern Parlor together in one group, and the occasion is anticipated with much enthusiasm. All visiting members of the Order will be welcome.

GOOD NEWS.

Barrel D. Neighbours, chairman of the N.S.G.W. and N.D.G.W. Interparlor Committee, announces that the net financial returns from the recent Santa Monica dance and the September 9 barbeque were such that the deficit from the 1928 Admission Day festivities at San Pedro will be wiped out.

OLD-TIMERS' NIGHT.

Los Angeles Parlor No. 45 N.S.G.W. will stage an old-timers' night October 10. The good of the order committee will present a program—and chairman Roland Nichols says it will be an attractive one—and refreshments will be served. October 24, the officers of the Parlor will journey to Long Beach and initiate a class of candidates for Long Beach Parlor No. 239.

GRAND OPERA SEASON.

The sixth annual season of the Los Angeles Grand Opera Association, Merle Armitage, manager, opens at the Shrine Auditorium, Tuesday evening, October 1, and anticipation runs high for a season of unusual brilliance artistically, as indicated by the repertoire and casts, and also of financial prosperity, as evidenced by the remarkably heavy advance sale.

The opening performance will be "Aida," to be followed by: October 2, "L'Elisir D'Amore;" October 4, a double bill of "Gianni Schicchi," followed by "La Boheme;" October 5, "Martha;" October 7, "Rigoletto;" October 9, "Haensel und Gretel," followed by "I Pagliacci;" October 10, "Il Barbiere di Siviglia;" October 12, "Il Trovatore;" October 14, "Manon."

Supporting the galaxy of stars, an orchestra composed of members of the Philharmonic orchestra will preside with conductors Merola, Cimini, Riedel and Pelletier. A chorus of mixed voices carefully selected and finely trained by Dr. Karl Riedel, and a ballet of lovely dancers assembled by Paveley-Onkrainksy will furnish that delightful atmosphere which makes grand opera so attractive.

Amando Agnini of the Metropolitan Opera Company is again acting as stage director, and much newly-constructed modern scenery will be in evidence this season, forecasting the greatest offering of grand opera the southland has yet enjoyed.

GOOD CAUSE—RESPOND!

Glendale—Glendale Parlor No. 264 N.S.G.W. will sponsor a vaudeville entertainment at the Thursday Afternoon Clubhouse, 206 West Cypress street, the evening of Tuesday, October 1. * All Natives and the public generally are invited, and as the purpose of the show is to raise funds to "carry on," the clubhouse should be overcrowded. Admission is but 50 cents. Glendale has always presented first-class entertainments, and this one will prove no exception.

ANNUAL N.D.G.W. BAZAAR.

At the September 14 meeting of Los Angeles Parlor No. 124 N.D.G.W. September 4, Mrs. Esther Murphy gave a fine talk on the unveiling of the Mark Twain bust, which she attended while on vacation, at Mono August 4 and showed pictures of the bronze bust and the old mining camp of Bodie.

Three candidates were initiated September 18, at an enthusiastic meeting. Among the many visitors were a delegation from Verdugo Parlor No. 240 of Glendale, including District Deputy Doria Phillips. Gladys Sieber and Pearl K. Dwinell favored with violin and piano duets, and Past Grand President Grace S. Stoermer spoke of the events scheduled for the balance of the year. Several members of the Parlor had a swim, followed by dinner, at the Women's Athletic Club September 25 and spent a most enjoyable evening. The party was sponsored by Miss Stoermer, assisted by Flora M. Holy and Grace J. Norton.

October 23, Los Angeles will have its annual bazaar, under the supervision of Grace T. Hav-

DANCE, WITH THE CABALLEROS.

There was a big outpouring of members from all the Los Angeles County Parlors at the September 13 whoopee arranged by Ramona Parlor No. 109 N.S.G.W. to celebrate the return from a European trip of Past Grand President Herman C. Lichtenherger. "Chef" Charles Gassagne provided a good feed, several attractive entertainment features were presented, and there were addresses by Past Grand President William I. Traeger, Frank G. Tyrrell, Grand First Vice-president John T. Newell and "Oom Paul." During the month Dr. John A. Schwamm, past president, received an emblematic ring from the Parlor, Joseph A. Adair Sr. making the presentation address.

October 30, the "Caballeros" of Ramona are giving a Halloween dance at Patriotic Hall, 1816 South Figueroa. These boys have taken an active interest in all affairs of the Order, and they should be encouraged by a large attendance. Admission is 50 cents. Many valuable awards will be made, and a good time is assured. October 18, the Parlor will have initiation, and on the 25th the good of the order committee, Superior Judge B. Rey Schauer chairman, promises an extra-good entertainment, with refreshments.

LEGAL AID CLINIC.

Assuring free legal assistance to those in difficulty and in need of help, a legal aid clinic became a permanent part of the law school of the University of Southern California with the opening of the September semester, according to announcement of President R. B. von Klein Smid.

Cases may readily be referred to the legal clinic by attorneys, public officials, social service workers and the public, with the assurance that each will be examined and steps will be taken to effect a prompt and practical settlement. A client will not be accepted, however, who is able to pay a practicing attorney a regulation fee for services. Types of cases to be handled include loan and other money claims, breach of contract, workmen's compensation, personal injury, settlement of estates, landlord and tenant relationships, domestic difficulties, and libel and slander cases.

INTERESTING HISTORY PAPERS.

The committee authorized to raise funds for the statue of Governor Felipe De Neve, founder of Los Angeles, which Californiana Parlor No. 247 N.D.G.W. will present to the city on the occasion of the one hundred and fiftieth anniversary of its founding, has established headquarters in the Chamber of Commerce building. Mrs. Arthur Wright, president, is the chairman, and Miss Florence Steinicke the secretary. Other members include Miss Mary E. Foye, Mms. Leland Atherton Irish, Lorraine H. Bentley, Ora May Evans, Katherine H. O'Brien, Charles Burt and Eliza Quinn.

The first class in California history arranged for the members of the Parlor was well attended. Mrs. Katherine O'Brien presided, and interesting papers were presented by Miss Virginia Calhoun and Mrs. Ora May Evans, their respective subjects being "Las Sergas de Esplandian" and "The California Indian." The history class will meet again October 8 at 11 a. m., and the parliamentary law class meets the fourth Tuesday of each month at the same hour.

MONSTER SHOW.

Hollywood Parlor No. 196 N.S.G.W. presented emblematic rings to Past Presidents Fred Lovie and Harold Thomas, the presentation addresses being made by Leland Owen and M. U. Rosenthal. October 14, the Parlor will initiate a class of candidates, and all Native Sons are invited to be Hollywood's guests at a monster show, followed by refreshments, October 21.

RADIO PROGRAM SPONSORED.

Long Beach—In recognition of Admission Day, September 9, Long Beach Parlor No. 154 N.D.G.W. sponsored a radio program which was participated in by Clyde Doyle, Mrs. Zelma Palestine, President Julia E. Arborn and Mrs. Catherine Page. August 30 Mrs. Arborn presented a bird-cage to the bird sanctuary in Recreation Park, and it won first prize. The cage was made by Alice Palestine, whose mother is a member of the Parlor.

The public card party of September 19, under the chairmanship of Lillian Lasater, was well attended. These parties are held the third Thursday of each month and all Natives and their friends are invited. Worth-while prizes are awarded and refreshments are served.

MOONLIGHT BOAT RIDE.

San Pedro—Rudecinda Parlor No. 230 N.D.G.W. was very active socially during August and September. Two card parties, both well attended, were given during August under the supervision of Mrs. Margaret Kreider. September 17 a moonlight boat ride was featured, and a wonderful crowd enjoyed dancing to hawaiian music. Santa Monica, Maywood and Los Angeles were well represented. Mrs. Victoria Adler was chairman of the affair.

October 4, Rudecinda will entertain the members of Santa Monica Bay Parlor No. 245.

SMOKER, FOR NATIVE SONS ONLY.

Ocean Park—The dinner-dance of Santa Monica Bay Parlor No. 267 N.S.G.W., in charge of First Vice-president Phil Romero, was greatly enjoyed by the large number in attendance. Several candidates were initiated during September, and President Eldred L. Meyer and his corps of officers are planning visits to other Parlors to exemplify the ritual. Among others, a visit to Sacramento is contemplated.

October 19, Santa Monica Bay will have a smoker, for Native Sons only, for the benefit of its social fund. Various attractions will be presented, and a feast will be spread in the commodious new banquet-room. October 27 the Parlor will be three years old, and a committee has been appointed to arrange for a suitable observance of the anniversary.

Mrs. Mary E. Wilson-Boylson, affiliated with Californiana Parlor No. 247 N.D.G.W., passed away September 12, survived by a husband and a son. She was born at the southeast corner of First and Spring streets, the site of the Wilson block.

MEMBERSHIP DISCUSSED.

Long Beach—Long Beach Parlor No. 239 N.S.G.W. had a lively meeting September 12, when a delegation from Los Angeles Parlor No. 45, headed by President Walter Fisher, paid a fraternal visit. The main discussion was membership, and Long Beach named a committee to supervise a drive consisting of President Paul McFadyen, Superior Judge Percy Hight, Clyde Doyle, Francis Gentry, William F. Kroeger and Frank B. Hart. The Parlor had a "California night" August 22, and the prizes were products of the state—seven Alberta peaches, combined weight nine pounds, grown by Treasurer E. C. Crowell at his North Long Beach home.

With the approval of Grand President Charles L. Dodge, Grand First Vice-President John T. Newell has appointed Past President Frank B. Hart of No. 239 special organizer for Santa Ana, San Pedro and Long Beach.

WILMINGTON NIGHT.

San Pedro—Sepulveda Parlor No. 263 N.S.G.W. is planning "Wilmington night" for October 18. About fifty of its members reside there. Past President William A. Reuter, the new financial secretary of the Parlor, is in charge of the program. All neighboring Parlors will be invited to participate. September 20, Grand First Vice-president John T. Newell and District Deputy E. C. Crowell were visitors, and urged the Parlor to increase its membership.

Past President Stanley A. Wheeler plans to sail for the Panama Canal October 14 as a member of a small party of newspapermen who will make the trip. Four days will be spent in the Canal Zone, the return to San Pedro to be made November 2.

NATIVE SON MAKES FAST TRIP.

A very remarkable example of the durability of the De Soto six was brought out in a severe test by L. T. Sollender of Ramona No. 109 N.S.G.W., who took delivery of his standard sedan at the factory August 31. After sight-seeing about Detroit that afternoon and the following day, putting the first 88 miles on his speedometer, he left Detroit, driving at 35 to 40 miles an hour for the first 200 miles, then increased to 50 and 55 miles an hour for the remainder of the trip—that is, where roads and weather conditions permitted.

While going over the Raton Pass in Colorado he ran into a severe cloudburst. The same condition existed in New Mexico, between Grant and Albuquerque, with bridges and roads washed out. From Williams, Arizona, to Needles, California, the roads were in very bad condition, owing to heavy rains. The total distance traveled was 2,915 miles, with a gas average of 19½ miles to the gallon. Changed oil at 1,000 miles and again at 2,000, but did not add any oil between changes. Had absolutely no trouble with motor on the entire trip, and arrived in Los Angeles with Detroit air in all tires.

Sollender states that he has been driving cars of different makes for the past seventeen years and has never had a car that gave so much comfort, flexibility and ease of handling as the De Soto. He claims this is what made it possible for him to drive this distance in 39 hours elapsed time with hardly no sleep, driving night and day. He claims his De Soto is not only the best car he ever owned, but thinks there is no better car built.

BE HAPPY.

You can't be always sunny
If there isn't any sun;
You can't always be funny
If there isn't any fun.
But you can be always happy
If you let the clouds go by
In the faith you'll find somewhere
Little patches of blue sky.

—RILEY.

GRIZZLY GROWLS

The eighth annual observance of Navy Day will be held October 28. The idea of the occasion is to foster a proper understanding by the public of the purpose and the state of the navy. Secretary of the Navy C. F. Adams, addressing the Navy League of the United States regarding the day, says:

"The navy will welcome the interest of the American people in what the navy has been in the past and what it is today. On Navy Day the public will be welcome on board naval vessels in port and in naval establishments ashore, and the Navy Department will be glad to do anything it properly can to acquaint our citizens with their sea service."

"The Native Sons and Native Daughters of the Golden West—virile California organizations—deserve much commendation for their effective efforts in marking historic spots and in preserving memorials of pioneer days and achievements in the early years of this commonwealth," said the Grass Valley "Union" of September 13.

"This species of state loyalty is praiseworthy. Children should be reared to love California; to be familiar with its history; to exult in the great achievement of its pioneers; and to preserve the memory of the days of glory which are gone."

Addressing the Immigration section of the San Francisco Commonwealth Club recently, V. S. McClatchy declared: "The immigration section has not devoted sufficient attention to the most important phase of the immigration question before the country today—the enforcement of the existing laws regulating the handling of aliens illegally entering the United States."

"During the years immediately preceding the world war, 800,000 to 1,000,000 aliens came to this country annually. In an effort to improve the quality and assimilability, legislation has since been enacted restricting legal entries from quota countries to 165,000 annually."

"However, since 1921, 5,000,000 aliens have arrived, of which, it is conservatively estimated, 2,000,000 are illegally entered. At the present time approximately 500,000 are lawfully entering the country each year; 165,000 under the quota, and 335,000 from non-quota countries, principally from Mexico and Canada."

"In addition to the lawful entries, it is estimated that 200,000 are illegally crossing our borders every year, the majority of which are of the undesirable, unassimilable and criminal type."

"Industrial cities in New England are practically controlled by foreign elements, and the policies of cities such as New York, Chicago and Detroit are largely influenced by these people. Even national affairs feel the weight of their influence through the control of certain congressional districts by foreign blocs."

"Public apathy and the incessant activity of these foreign groups have defeated all efforts to incorporate in the act provisions for the apprehension, deportation and adequate punishment of aliens illegally in this country."

"Our asylums and charitable institutions are full of feeble-minded and indigent aliens, and their maintenance by the respective states costs a tremendous amount of money."

"If the amounts thus expended could be applied towards deportation, some impression might be made in weeding out the vast horde of undesirables now in this country."
